Chasing after someone else's women really did happen quite frequently. With Linley's group in the Black Dragon Tribe, there really were people who came to get into Delia's good graces. However, Delia herself shouted at them, while Linley in particular transformed into three clones and began to trample on them as Bebe would add a few flying kicks.

Quickly, nobody in the Black Dragon Tribe dared to have any further designs on Delia.

They had already been in the Black Dragon Tribe for two months. Linley and the other two had slowly grown accustomed to this place.

"Two fighting over a single woman. The two men are both Demigods. Neither of them know how to use spiritual attacks. All they can do is use material attacks." Linley raised his head up to stare in the air above the Black Dragon Tribe. Two muscular figures were engaging in a battle.

Not just Linley and Bebe were watching. There were thousands of people present, watching this battle, nearly a quarter of the total population of the Black Dragon Tribe.

"What's going on with those two? Why do they have to fight? Can't they just ask what that girl named Catelyn [Ka'te'lin'] wants?" Delia was somewhat puzzled. At this time, a figure wearing a grass hat flew over at high speed. Bebe laughed repeatedly, "Boss, I already know the inside details on their battle."

"Tell." Linley said with curiosity.

"That golden-haired man is named Kendita [Kan'di'ta]. Kendita and that Catelyn come from the same material plane. Their relationship is quite good. But of course, they haven't reached the stage of sleeping on the same bed yet." Bebe rubbed his nose, raising his head as he spoke. "That black-haired man is Kimpton [Jin'pu'dun]. He used to be a Gerrard Black Dragon!"

Linley was somewhat surprised. "Did you just say that Kimpton was one of the Gerrard Black Dragons they raised?" The Black Dragon Tribe raised Gerrard Black Dragons to earn inkstone. Linley's group knew this.

The Black Dragon Tribe had a rule. If a Gerrard Black Dragon was able to reach the Deity level and transform into human form, then they could join the Black Dragon Tribe. Because of this rule, the Gerrard Black Dragons all had a hint of a hope for the future.

"Right." Bebe nodded hurriedly. "That Kimpton was originally a Gerrard Black Dragon that had been raised here. After a long period of time, the Gerrard Black Dragon actually reached the Deity level. That's Kimpton."

Linley grew curious.

"Perhaps because of how long she had been raising him for, Catelyn treated Kimpton very well. When Kimpton transformed into human form, he actually began to pursue Catelyn. This Black Dragon has fallen for Catelyn." Bebe began to snicker. "Naturally, this makes Kendita unhappy. How can he allow the woman he likes to be together with a Black Dragon, even if the Black Dragon is now in human form? Thus, the two began to fight. Only, they are just Demigods, and they only have insights into very basic mysteries. Their attacks are essentially nonlethal, which is why their battle has gone on for so long. This isn't the first or second time this has happened."

Linley couldn't help but feel speechless.

But right at this moment.

From afar, a black robed shadow flew over in the air above the mountain ranges. The two battling Demigods, upon seeing the newcomer, were immediately frightened and flew down at high speed. Upon seeing the medallion this black-robed man wore on his chest, a sharper-eyed onlooker was shocked as well and cried out in alarm, "Ah, a Fiend!"

The other onlookers of the Black Dragon Tribe who had been watching the battle all raised their head, and their faces instantly changed from fear. They immediately scattered in every direction.

"Fiend?" Linley raised his head in confusion.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 5, Fiend Medallion

The highest mountain peak in the mountain ranges where the Black Dragon Tribe lived pierced towards the heavens like a sharp sword. Atop the mountain peak, there was an ancient black castle, which was completely made out of adamantite. According to legend, the owner of this black castle dearly loved adamantite.

“Whoosh!” The black-robed figure who had been termed a ‘Fiend’ swept the terrified members of the Black Dragon Tribe with his gaze, then flew directly into that black castle. The gates to the black castle swung open, and immediately, people came to respectfully take this Fiend in.

The many other members of the Black Dragon Tribe, upon seeing this, couldn’t help but begin chatting amongst themselves.

“The Fiend actually went to visit the chief. He isn’t going to go kill the chief, is he?”

“Your original body was that of a Six-Eared Donkey. Even as a Deity, you are an idiot. Think about it. If the Fiend truly came to kill the chief, would the chief send people to open the castle gates and respectfully escort the Fiend inside? As I see it, the chief definitely has something important to carry out, which is why he invited a Fiend to come.”

The members of the Black Dragon Tribe continued to discuss this amongst each other.

Halfway up the mountain, Linley sat atop a boulder, listening to these conversations. He couldn't help but frown. Raising his head high, he looked towards that black castle located atop the mountain peak. That black castle had dozens of enormous black dragons coiling around it.

"The master of Black Dragon Castle is the chief of the Black Dragon Tribe, Stirton [Si'te'dun], the most powerful figure of the Black Dragon Tribe!" Linley murmured to himself.

Having spent two months in the Black Dragon Tribe, Linley had learned a few things about it. The Black Dragon Tribe, despite just being one of many unremarkable, small tribes in the Infernal Realm, had a very strict hierarchy.

The lowest class included the Demigods like Linley. They had no income, nor did they have any uniforms.

The middle class included the Gods who were in charge of rearing the Gerrard Black Dragons. After all, the entire Black Dragon Tribe only had so many black dragons, so only a small number of people could raise black dragons. Although more than half of the income from rearing these black dragons had to be given to the clan chief, rearing Gerrard Black Dragons was still an extremely fast way of accumulating wealth.

The upper class was made up of the tribe's army!

The soldiers of the army were all Gods, and were trained and drilled by Chief Stirton. If one became a member of the tribe's army, the chief would gift some money once every ten thousand years or so.

Halfway up the mountain, at Linley's residence, only Linley, Delia, and Bebe were present.

"That Fiend is so powerful." Bebe sighed in praise.

"The chief's power won't be low either." Linley said as though thinking about something.

Delia glanced at Linley, then said, "Forget about the entire Infernal Realm; even in the Nightblaze Prefecture of the Redbud Continent, there are countless numbers of tribes that have taken over some of the mountains in this prefecture which has a circumference of over a billion kilometers.

Whenever he thought about the terrifying size of the Nightblaze Prefecture, he could imagine how many other Black Dragon Tribe sized powers were present.

In the Infernal Realm, 'powers' like the Black Dragon Tribe were indeed like weak, unremarkable ants. There were far too many of them.

"However, even in the Black Dragon Tribe, there were so many Gods. Although I've never seen Lord Chief Stirton, I imagine that for him to be able to become the chief of the Black Dragon Tribe and have more than half of the tribe's wealth delivered to him, he should be a Highgod!"

Linley suddenly understood.

In the Infernal Realm...

Deities were nothing more than commoners. Probably one out of every ten Deities were Gods, while only one out of every ten thousand Deities were Highgods. But although the chances were very low, when one thought about how enormous the Infernal Realm was, one would understand how many Highgods there were as well!

"This is what it means to be in the Infernal Realm. The place where experts are as common as clouds!" Linley's heart trembled.

"Boss." Bebe gnawed on a straw, saying casually, "My Grandpa said that in a place like the Infernal Realm, those who became Deities through fusing with divine sparks can't possibly gain a high status. Only those who became Deities on their own, and also have fused profound mysteries, have that chance. Only by being strong will one have a high status!"

Linley agreed with this in his heart.

"Linley, I won't slow you down." The nearby Delia suddenly said.

Linley turned to look at Delia. Naturally, he understood what Delia was thinking. Delia was that sort of very strong-willed woman. Linley couldn't help but laugh as he took Delia into his arms. "Delia, you? Slow me down? If you think about it, in our group here, I'm the only Demigod. It's me slowing you down."

Delia felt a warm feeling in her heart. How could she not know that in truth, Linley, who was in possession of a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, was the one amongst the three of them with the most variables in play? Once he truly went all out, if Linley were to encounter for instance those enemies that were most proficient in soul-based attacks, he would be able to counter them perfectly!

"It's broad daylight, you guys! Get a room! Argh, I can't watch anymore." Seeing this, Bebe called out while covering his eyes.

"Little rascal." Delia couldn't help but laugh while scolding him.

At this time, that silver-haired elder, Buffett, flew over from afar. Seeing Linley and the other two, he laughed loudly. "Linley, you've been in our Black Dragon Tribe for a while now. How do you feel?"

"Not bad." Linley immediately rose to his feet with a smile. "At least, we haven't encountered any dangers yet."

Buffett said with a sigh, "Right. If you were outside, you would learn... that there are simply too many bandit groups that ambush and slaughter travelers in the Infernal Realm. Generally speaking, Gods and Demigods don't dare to travel the Infernal Realm alone."

"Even Gods don't dare?" Bebe stared.

Buffett went to a nearby stone chair and sat down, then nodded. "Right. Not even Gods. The bandit groups of the Infernal Realm are generally formed by Demigods and Gods. Do you think an entire group of bandit Gods and Demigods wouldn't be able to deal with you, a single God? They have the advantage of numbers!"

“Haha.” Buffett laughed. “Highgods, even in the Infernal Realm, can be considered upper class individuals. Why would they engage in something as dangerous as banditry? Whether through cultivating Highgod artifacts, by refining divine jewels, or by joining a large clan and becoming a strong supporter, they are easily able to live carefree lives.

Linley nodded slightly.

It was the same as the Yulan Plane, actually. True experts, such as those experts of the ninth rank, disdained banditry. However, in the Yulan continent, there were still some famous bandit groups which had a few powerful experts in them.

“But of course, the Infernal Realm has a few exceedingly powerful bandit groups. Only bandit groups like these will have Highgods. However, even if they have Highgods, they generally won’t act against another Highgod. After all, how would they know how powerful that other Highgod is? There are great gaps in power between Highgods as well.” Buffett sighed.

Linley agreed completely.

For example, Sadista had been killed by Bluefire with one blow.

Adkins, when facing Beirut, had both his Highgod bodies destroyed in just two blows.

"In our Infernal Realm, although there are many bandits who ambush and attack people, there are three powers that they don't dare to offend. The first is the Redbud Army!" In a warm manner, Buffett continued to provide Linley's group with some things that were common knowledge, while Linley and the other two listened carefully.

Linley's group was planning to head towards the Bloodridge Continent, after all.

Only, right now they were too weak. They had to endure for now.

"Redbud Army. Got it." Linley and the other two nodded. That was an army under the control of a Sovereign, an extremely powerful army. Who would dare antagonize them?

"The second power is the prefectural army!" Buffett sighed.

"Prefectural army?" Linley and the other two were puzzled.

"What's a prefectural army, old man?" Bebe asked, not understanding.

Buffett said, "The entire Infernal Realm has 108 prefectures, and our Redbud Continent has nearly twenty as well. Every single prefecture has its own army! For example, our Nightblaze Prefecture naturally has the Nightblaze Army. These armies are known as 'prefectural armies'! Within their own prefecture, everyone is glad if the army doesn't make trouble for them; who would dare go antagonize the army? Once the army has their sights on you, even if you are a Highgod, you'll be in for trouble!"

Linley understood now.

"The Redbud Army and the prefectural army, I can both understand. They are both giant armies. Then what is that third force which you said bandits are unwilling to antagonize?" Linley asked.

Buffett's eyes revealed a hint of anticipation. "Fiends!"

"Fiends?"

Linley, Delia, and Bebe's hearts trembled. At the same time, they grew curious.

"Mr. Buffett, what are Fiends?" Delia asked.

Linley was extremely curious as well. Just now, they had watched that black-robed man fly into the chief's adamantine castle. The people of the Black Dragon Tribe, upon seeing that man, referred to him as a 'Fiend'.

"Fiend is a type of title!" Buffett said with a sigh. "They are the valiant warriors of the Infernal Realm, a group of experts that fear no danger! Anyone capable of becoming a Fiend, even when roaming throughout the entire Infernal Realm, won't encounter many bandit groups willing to act against them."

Linley's heart was stirred. He thought to himself, "I'm going to the Bloodridge Continent. The journey there will be an extremely long one. If I can become a 'Fiend', then I will encounter many fewer difficulties on the way over."

Bebe and Delia had the same thought as well.

"What sort of a title is 'Fiend', old man? How does one become a Fiend?" Bebe asked.

Buffett said, "To become a Fiend isn't too hard. You can go to any city, such as our closest Royalwing City. At Royalwing City, if you spend ten thousand inkstones, you can apply for a testing mission. Once you pass the testing mission, you will become a Fiend! Um, that is, you will become a One Star Fiend."

"Ten thousand inkstones, just for a testing mission?" Bebe couldn't help but stare.

Linley felt that this was too extravagant as well.

Ten thousand inkstones weren't so easily earned.

"Just now, you said One Star Fiend?"

Buffett nodded. "Fiends have ranks, going from One Star Fiends to the terrifying Seven Star Fiends. This has to do with the level of missions they can accept. Those who are capable of accomplishing seven star missions are known as Seven Star Fiends!"

"However, it is generally only possible for Gods to accomplish even the simpler testing missions!" Buffett said with a sigh. "And that's just a possibility!"

"The work which Fiends engage in is dangerous. They are all valiant. Even robbers aren't willing to antagonize them. The most important thing is...you can't tell the star rank of a Fiend by looking at them. From the surface, one can't tell the difference between a One Star Fiend and a Seven Star Fiend." Buffett said.

"From the surface? What do you mean?"

Buffett smiled as he pointed at the black castle atop the mountain peak. "Didn't you notice? That Fiend who came just now had a Fiend medallion attached to the clothes over his chest! These are issued after a person completes the testing mission. Every single Fiend has the same 'Fiend' emblem!"

"Regardless of whether you are a One Star Fiend or a Seven Star Fiend, from the surface, you look the same. Only through using some very special methods can one judge a Fiend's star rank."

Bebe frowned. "Oh? How powerful is that Fiend?"

"I'm not sure either. However, even the weakest Fiends are Gods. Generally speaking, above-average Fiends are all of the Highgod level!" Buffett said. "Thus, bandits don't dare to antagonize Fiends. After all, many Fiends are Highgods! If you encounter a Six Star Fiend or a terrifying Seven Star Fiend, no matter how powerful your bandit group is, you will be finished."

Linley's heart shook.

The majority of Fiends were Highgods? The weakest were Gods? It seemed that the quality of Fiends wasn't lower than that of the Redbud Army at all.

Bebe's eyes were shining. "You say more than half of Fiends are Highgods. How powerful are those powerful Seven Star Fiends?"

"Seven Star Fiends are amongst the most powerful experts of the Infernal Realm!" Buffett's eyes had a hint of veneration in them. "Ordinary Highgods are unable to fight back against them at all. Once you reach the rank of Seven Star Fiend, you will have your own unique title. For example, in our Redbud Continent, based on what I know, we have produced figures like the 'Silvermoon Fiend' and the 'Bloodviolet Fiend', ultimate experts whose fame has spread throughout the entire Infernal Realm!"

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 6, Red-Eyed With Greed

“That powerful?”

In his heart, Linley was astonished and trembling at the might of these Seven Star Fiends. “Based on what he is saying, the power of these Seven Star Fiends should be amongst the most powerful of Highgods. I wonder if Bluefire has the power of a Seven Star Fiend or not.” Linley wondered to himself.

“Uh oh, I came to discuss something else. How’d we get sidetracked onto Fiends?” Buffett said hurriedly. “Linley, the reason I came here today was because I want to ask the three of you something.”

“Oh, Mr. Buffett, please ask away.” Linley said.

“Ask the three of us?” Bebe rubbed his jaw, staring at Buffett.

Smiling, Buffett said, “Precisely speaking, it’s the two of you.” And he pointed at Bebe and Delia.

“Oh?” Delia was somewhat puzzled as well.

“What is it, old man? Speak, hurry.” Bebe urged.

Buffett said, “In our Black Dragon Tribe, the vast majority of those at the rank of God will become a member of our guardian army. The two of you have already become Gods. I wonder if you’d be interested in joining the Black Dragon Tribe's army? If you join the army, every ten thousand years, the chief will gift you with your salary. This is a much better life than rearing those Gerrard Black Dragons. If you rear those dragons, you always have to be by their side. It is quite tiring."

"This...?" Bebe hesitated, looking towards Linley.

Delia laughed and spoke. "Mr. Buffett, we just arrived at the Black Dragon Tribe. There's many things we aren't familiar with yet, so we aren't in a rush to join the tribe's army either."

"You won't be able to make money as fast through doing other things as through the army." Buffett said hurriedly. "I urge you to reconsider."

"Mr. Buffett, let's discuss this again in the future." Linley said.

He had planned long ago that when the chance arose, they would go to the Bloodridge Continent. How could they always stay here at the Black Dragon Tribe? Receive a salary every ten thousand years? To other Deities, ten thousand years truly wasn't a long period of time, but to Linley, there was no way he could wait that long.

"I just came to let you know." Buffett didn't mind.

"Mr. Buffett." Linley hurriedly asked, "I would like to ask you, how often do people of the tribe go to Royalwing City?" Comparatively speaking, Royalwing City had to have more powerful forces present. He might be able to find a way to travel to the Bloodridge Continent there.

"Go to Royalwing City?" Buffett was startled. "Oh, our tribe doesn't go there on any set schedules. We have to ride metallic creatures to get there. It can range from a short wait of a few years, or perhaps thousands of a years between trips."

Linley's heart couldn't help but lurch.

Thousands of years? He had to wait that long?

Buffett suddenly laughed and said, "Oh, I just remembered, in half a year, it seems the tribe will make a trip to Royalwing City."

"However, the members of the tribe have to pay five inkstones each if they want to ride on that metallic creature." Buffett warned Linley and the other two. He could tell that Linley's group truly wanted to head to that Royalwing City.

Actually, every single person who had just arrived in the Infernal Realm would be very interested in visiting the large cities in the Infernal Realm.

"Thank you, Mr. Buffett." Linley felt a surge of joy in his heart. Just half a year.

After Buffett left, Linley's group began to drink and celebrate happily in their living room. In the Infernal Realm, wine was quite a luxury. Of course, Royalwing City had some extremely excellent wine, but the price was astoundingly high. The price of some fine wine could compare to that of a God spark.

"Each of us have to pay five inkstones to ride on that metallic creature!" Bebe cursed softly. "How black-hearted."

"Three of us. That means fifteen inkstones." Delia looked at Linley. "It seems we need to sell off some divine artifacts."

Linley was currently in possession of Highgod artifacts, God artifacts, and Demigod artifacts. Even more astonishingly, he had a Highgod spark. That Highgod spark alone would be enough to allow Linley become a rich man in the Infernal Realm. However...Linley's group knew that they couldn't reveal how much wealth they had.

In the Black Dragon Tribe, if others learned that they had Highgod sparks, most likely they wouldn't live to see the next day!

"How about this. I still have four Demigod artifacts on me. I'll go to the chief's castle first and sell off those four Demigod artifacts." Linley made his decision. "Although I'll suffer a bit of a loss, there's no other option."

Here in the tribe, a Demigod artifact would only sell for five inkstones. But if he went to Royalwing City, he would be able to sell it for seven inkstones, while the shops of Royalwing City, in turn, would sell it for ten inkstones. Demigod artifacts were cheap, not worth much at all.

Since he made up his mind, he did it right away.

After drinking, Linley's group headed directly for that black castle atop the tall mountain peak. On the walls of this black castle, there were over ten Gods standing guard. They stared down at Linley's group but didn't say anything.

The entire Black Dragon Tribe only had twenty thousand people. Everyone knew each other.

"Linley, you came?" Someone came out from the side door to the castle. It was Buffett.

"Mr. Buffett, we came to sell a few Demigod artifacts." Linley said. Buffett nodded in understanding. "Oh, then come with me." As he spoke, Buffett let them forward into the castle through a side door.

Within the castle, there was actually another small castle.

"The inner castle is the place where his lordship lives. The outer castle is where the warriors of the tribe live." Buffett explained. "In the future, if you want to sell something, just head in directly from the side door and go to that shop. Generally speaking, members of the tribe can come into the outer city whenever they want. The guards won't stop you."

Within the black castle, the warriors of the tribe could be seen everywhere.

"Indeed, all of them are Highgods." Bebe sighed in praise.

Linley swept those people with his gaze as well. He knew that these people were all warriors of the Black Dragon Tribe. If other tribes were to invade, they would have to rely on these warriors to counterattack and defend.

"Go on in." Buffett pointed towards the shop in front of them.

Linley and the other two entered the tribe's shop. Within the shop, there was just a single black-haired middle-aged man seated cross-legged on the floor. When Linley's group entered, the black-haired man opened his eyes, sweeping them with an icy gaze. He said calmly, "What is it?"

Linley was startled. Was this the attitude a shopkeeper had towards his customers?

"They came to sell artifacts." Buffett walked in from outside as well.

"Oh. Take out the artifacts." The black-haired middle-aged man said.

With a flip of his hand, Linley removed four Demigod artifacts. These four Demigod artifacts were useless to him anyhow. The black-haired middle-aged man glanced at them, then said calmly, "Four Demigod artifacts, all weapons, nothing special. Five inkstones each, twenty inkstones total!"

With a flip of his hand, the black-haired man retrieved two long inkstone that were ten centimeters long. "Take the inkstones, leave the artifacts."

"Huh?" Linley was somewhat surprised. There were actually long inkstones? However, in terms of size, it did indeed appear that a long inkstone was equivalent to ten inkstones. Although he was surprised, Linley still placed the four divine artifacts down while accepting the two long inkstones which the man tossed over.

After exchanging for the twenty inkstones, Linley's group continued living quietly within the Black Dragon Tribe. Usually, they spent their time training quietly, peacefully awaiting the trip in half a year to Royalwing City.

The mountain ranges of the Black Dragon Tribe had a circumference of a thousand kilometers. Thousands of black dragons could be seen flying about at all times, heading in and out of the mountains. All of the members of the Black Dragon Tribe lived quietly here. However, over a thousand kilometers away from the mountains...

A savage black tiger that was the size of a mountain, along with a similarly sized vicious golden wolf, was moving together towards the Black Dragon Tribe. Those two astonishingly vast creatures also flew at a shockingly fast speed, creating terrifying sonic booms as they flew.

"Rumble..."

A thousand kilometers was quickly travelled.

Halfway up their mountain, in Linley's residence, Linley was seated in the meditative position, quietly training in the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Essence of the Earth, working on fusing these profound mysteries. By now, both his original body as well as his divine earth clone were focusing on the Laws of the Earth, hoping to be able to reach the level of completely fusing these two profound elemental mysteries more quickly.

"Enemies attacking!"

"Enemies attacking!"

An ear-piercing voice echoed throughout the Black Dragon Tribe. Even Linley, in the middle of his training, was frightened into wakefulness.

"What's going on?" Delia came out from her room, while Bebe flew in from outside, clearly very excited. "Wow, Boss, outside, two enormous aberrations came. Afterwards, I realized that behind those two monsters were a large number of Deities, at least thousands of people."

"Enemies attacking?" Linley frowned. "They should be enemies of the tribe."

Linley began to feel a bit worried. He didn't know anything about the attackers. What he feared was...the enemies defeating the Black Dragon Tribe, then engaging in a massacre. That would make things dangerous. This wasn't impossible; after all, divine sparks were a form of wealth.

Perhaps the enemy would truly massacre the entire Black Dragon Tribe!

"Let's go out and take a look!" Linley immediately said. "If the situation looks bad, we will immediately leave." Linley knew the limits of his own ability.

Linley and the other two immediately flew out. After flying out of their residence, they discovered that the skies above the mountains were filled with people. Virtually all of the members of the Black Dragon Tribe had flown out. Right now, the Black Dragon Army had also appeared, facing off with the enemy forces.

Linley and the other two flew over, joining the masses.

"Linley, you came." Linley's neighbor, Krate, greeted them when he saw them flying over.

"This is the army of our Black Dragon Tribe. They seem very formidable." Linley let out a breath of praise. Up ahead of them, there were over a thousand warriors dressed in the same black battle outfit who were standing together. The murderous aura which a thousand Gods emitted simultaneously was enough to cause Linley's heart to shudder.

Krate said proudly, "Indeed. Look over there, that gold-haired person. That's my big brother!"

"Raschell [Le'qie'er], I didn't expect that even you would join forces with that vicious wolf. I, Stirton, seem to recollect that I treated you quite well!" In the center of the Black Dragon Army, a powerful figure at least two meters tall roared out loudly. "Can it be that you don't know what sort of person this vicious wolf is? If today, you abandon your course, I am willing to gift you a million inkstones, what do you say?"

Linley raised an eyebrow. "Chief Stirton?"

Linley immediately looked over. Stirton was exceedingly powerfully built, and he wore a black robe on his body. He stood in mid-air as though he were a mountain, utterly unshakable.

"Haha, what a joke! Klotman's [Ke'lao'te'man] character is better than yours, at least. In addition, a million inkstones? If you were willing to give me half of your Gerrard Black Dragons, that wouldn't be bad." In the opposing army, there was a person at least three meters tall whose face was covered with whiskers and a face that looked like a tiger's. The tiger-headed man didn't give the chief of the Black Dragon Tribe, Stirton, any face at all.

The other person, a skinny man dressed in a long golden robe, laughed evilly. "Stirton, you've taken sole possession of those thousands of Gerrard Black Dragons for so long. Don't you feel you are a bit too black-hearted? If you are willing to divide those thousands of Gerrard Black Dragons into three parts, allowing the three of us to split them equally, then today, the people that I brought will immediately leave, along with Raschell. What do you say?"

"Hmph!" A cold snort rang out. Stirton swept them with a cold gaze. "I acquired these Gerrard Dragons in the past when I risked my life for them. Why should I give them to you?"

Linley, in the midst of the other members of the Black Dragon Tribe, felt his heart grow cold. "It seems the enemy is composed of an alliance of two other tribes. This will be troublesome."

"Haha..." The tiger-headed warrior, Raschell, laughed loudly. "Klotman, let's not waste any more words with this Stirton. Let's just kill him. We'll split those Gerrard Black Dragons evenly."

The skinny, golden-robed man laughed coldly as well. "Big brother Raschell, well spoken."

"Motherf*cker!" Stirton's face became ferocious. He immediately sent out his divine sense. "First regiment, launch a group spiritual attack!"

Nearly eight hundred members of the Black Dragon Army suddenly, simultaneously brandished the weapons in their hands. Countless illusory images shot out from their weapons in a dense barrage.

"Kill!" The two leaders of the enemy forces shouted as well, and one thousand of the three thousand members of the enemy forces also launched spiritual attacks in a very practiced manner.

Large amounts of illusory images instantly clashed throughout the air in between the two armies, either dissipating after clashing into each other, or continuing to shoot towards the enemy forces.

"Good heavens! If tens of thousands of people used a combination soul attack at the same time, most likely even a Highgod would be doomed." Linley stared, slackjawed.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 7, A Bloody Battle

At a distance of several kilometers, the forces of the Black Dragon Tribe and the forces of the two combined enemy armies began to rain down attacks upon each other.

A distance of several kilometers, given the speed of soul attacks, was instantly crossed. Linley and the other ordinary members of the Black Dragon Tribe could clearly see that in mid-air, a large number of semi-translucent illusions pierced through the sky, attacking the opponents.

“Boom!” A portion of the soul attacks collided in mid-air, but the majority of the soul attacks passed through to attack the opponents.

The warriors of the two sides wanted to dodge and avoid these soul attacks. However, the soul attacks covered the entire sky, and so quite a few unlucky God-level warriors were still struck by those soul attacks. Upon being struck...even if they didn't die, their souls would still be affected.

“Boom!” “Boom!”

Corpses of the warriors of the two sides began to fall down from the skies.

“Semih [Sen'mi]!”

“Third Brother!”

Those God-level warriors all began to feel grief and rage.

"This battle fought by armies that are completely composed of Gods..."
Linley and the other members of the tribe were behind the army.
Watching this scene, he felt extremely stunned. "In an instant, dozens of Gods perished. This sort of organized battle is truly terrifying!"

The nearby Bebe said quietly, "Uh, if an army of hundreds of thousands of Deities joined forces in an attack, even a Highgod would be finished."

Delia's face changed as well.

How could they possibly see a battle like this in the Yulan continent?
But in the Infernal Realm, this was nothing more than a battle between tribes.

Linley couldn't help but think back to what he had experienced in the Necropolis of the Gods.

That time, at the eleventh floor of the Necropolis of the Gods, he had encountered a million Abyssal Blade Demons. At that time, those millions of Abyssal Blade Demons had dove down while brandishing their blades en masse, resulting in nearly a million energy blows raining down upon them. Linley's group had nearly been done for.

"Whoosh!" Suddenly, several rays of soul attacks shot out towards Linley's group.

“Quick, dodge!” Linley immediately shouted through his divine sense.

Not just them. Many of the other members of the Black Dragon Tribe dodged as well.

Many soul attacks, after being deflected by the God-level warriors of one side, actually flew towards Linley’s group. These were God-level soul attacks, while the majority of those below the army were Demigods. Generally speaking, if they got hit they would most likely die.

“Let’s not stay behind the army.” Bebe’s face was sour. “It’s too easy to get hit by the remnant attacks.”

Linley took a close glance at the unfolding battle between the tribes. “The battle is growing more and more vicious!”

“Physical attacks!” Stirton howled angrily. He was utterly enraged that two tribes were joining forces against him. Under Stirton’s command, the Black Dragon Army’s warriors all began to unleash their physical attacks.

The battle was being raised to a new level!

“Whoosh!” Rays of blue sword energy pierced through the sky. Wherever the sword energy passed, space itself began to ripple.

The Infernal Realm was far more stable than the material planes. In the Yulan Plane, Linley could easily cut open the walls of reality, but this was the Infernal Realm. It would be impressive if Linley was able to create even spatial ripples.

"Groooowl." An enormous elemental beast appeared out of nowhere. One enormous beast after another appeared in mid-air, biting and tearing at each other.

"Boom!" A thick blast of lightning slashed through the air, attacking the enemies.

"Riiiiip!"

The warriors of the two sides wildly attacked each other in mid-air. When a God was struck by several material attacks at once, he would be disintegrated! In but a single exchange of blows, dozens of God sparks fell down from mid-air.

"The situation looks bad!" Linley frowned. "The Black Dragon Army numbers less than two thousand, while the opponent's forces have three thousand."

If they kept on fighting head on like this, the Black Dragon Tribe would be at a great disadvantage.

"Haha, Stirton, today, you will definitely die!" The skinny, gold-robed man's shrill voice rang out, while the other, tiger-headed warrior also bellowed, "Brothers, kill them! Kill them all! Spare no one!"

Stirton's face was savage.

"All members of the Black Dragon Tribe, annihilate the enemies!" Stirton roared furiously.

Instantly...

The nearly twenty thousand members of the Black Dragon Tribe that had been located behind the army all simultaneously drew their weapons and released their most powerful attacks. The entire sky was filled with illusory sword shadows, massive elemental beasts, and all sorts of shadows...

Over ten thousand attacks instantly filled the skies, attacking the opponents.

"Kill them!" The members of the Black Dragon Tribe no longer held back.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe couldn't help but feel astonished.

"Linley, quick, help attack." An explosive shout sounded out from nearby, causing Linley to be startled.

Turning, Linley saw that Krate, normally so friendly and so fragile looking, now had a savage look on his face. Looking like an enraged lion, he shouted towards Linley's group, "We're at the final stages now. If the army is finished, we are also finished. Those people will exterminate us. Kill them all, kill them!"

Bebe was the first to react. He immediately howled loudly, "Kill!" At the same time, that black dagger appeared in his hands and created rays of black light which shot towards the opponents. This black dagger was the dagger which Beirut had given him.

Everyone had gone mad. They were struggling for survival!

"Kill!" Linley and Delia withdrew their weapons as well.

Not caring about picking out a specific enemy, they swung their weapons towards the direction of their enemies. Linley was wielding his adamantine heavy sword. Dozens of enormous earthen swords appeared and swung outwards. Although superficially, these enormous earthen swords looked like physical elemental attacks, in reality, they had been infused with the Throbbing Pulse of the World.

"Charge over there and kill those Black Dragon tribesmen!" The enemy leader, that tiger-headed warrior, bellowed out.

"Charge over and kill them!" Stirton howled as well.

Previously, everyone had been exchanging long range blows. By now, however, everyone had lost friends or family, and their eyes had become red with bloodlust. The two sides instantly traversed the distance between them, engaging in a slaughter in mid-air. Hundreds of full Gods directly charged towards the group of Demigods.

There was a large difference between Demigods and Gods, especially now when hundreds of Gods were charging over.

“What is Stirton doing!” Linley was extremely unhappy. “The Black Dragon Tribe’s warriors clearly are inferior to the opponents in strength, and yet he still ignores everything else in favor of battle. By now, he should strike out by himself and destroy the enemy commanders. This is the only option!”

When your forces were inferior to your opponent’s forces, the fastest way to achieve victory was to kill the leaders of your opponents.

However, Linley wasn’t Stirton.

Linley had no way of knowing what Stirton was thinking.

Next to Linley, Krate suddenly stared at a large, tall figure who was falling from mid-air. His eyes instantly turned red, and he let out a fierce cry: “Big brother!” His big brother had taken care of him when they were in the material planes, and had continued to do so up to this very day. But today, his big brother had died!

“Krate!” Linley shouted explosively at him through divine sense, and this sound caused him to wake up slightly.

“Quick, retreat, go back. If you die here, there’s no point to it at all.” Linley said frantically. At this point, the armies were engaged in wide-scale warfare. Linley wasn’t able to do anything right now. All he could do was try to protect their lives as best as possible.

In addition, Linley's group was located towards the rear. The enemies Gods had yet to reach their position yet.

"Haha..." A loud laugh rang out from nearby.

Only a few dozen meters away from Linley, six Demigods of the Black Dragon Tribe suddenly exploded, and their six Demigod sparks were seized by three hands. It was three enemy God warriors, who had instantly killed those six Demigods. Clearly, they had now noticed Linley's group.

"There's Gods here who were too cowardly to join the army?" One of them, a savage-faced, bald man shouted wildly. "Brothers, kill them all."

"Kill them all!"

The enemy side had three God-level warriors. Like starving wolves, they charged towards Linley's group. The eyes of those God-level warriors were flashing with red light, a bloodthirsty look in them.

"Delia, protect yourself!" Linley shouted with his divine sense.

"You are looking for death!" Bebe shouted explosively. He was the first to charge the attackers.

"Hmph!" The sinister bald man charged towards Linley; clearly, he had noticed that Linley was just a Demigod. "Die, punk!" The spear in the bald man's hands, covered with yellow dots, pierced straight towards Linley. With a flip of his hand, Linley thrust out with his adamantine heavy sword.

The yellow mottled spear clashed with the adamantine heavy sword. During that instant, Linley's adamantine heavy sword suddenly swayed strangely, not blocking the attack of that spear, allowing it to pierce towards himself...

"Huh?" The bald man stared, astonished.

"Clang!"

In Linley's left hand, Bloodviolet suddenly appeared, and it blocked the tip of that mottled yellow spear.

"Hmph!" The bald man sneered, "Punk, you have no idea at all that my ultimate attack is a soul attack!" An illusory spear shadow pierced straight into Linley's body, charging towards Linley's consciousness. However, as the bald man executed his ultimate attack...

Linley's adamantine heavy sword landed on the bald man's body as well.

"So what if you are skilled at soul attacks? A Demigod is far too weak to do anything." The bald man wasn't worried. But suddenly, his face changed dramatically as Linley's Voidwave Sword easily pierced through his soul defense.

The bald man couldn't help but stare in Linley at astonishment. "Ah, you..." But instantly, his eyes turned dim.

"The power of my Voidwave Sword is already three times that of twenty or so years ago!" Linley's gaze was cold and remorseless.

When he had been at Mount Copper Gong, Linley had just begun to fuse the Throbbing Pulse of the World with the 'Essence of the Earth', resulting in its power increasing by several times. Now that twenty years had passed, the Essence of the Earth had already become more than halfway fused with the Throbbing Pulse of the World. At this level of being more than halfway fused, the 'Voidwave Sword' was now at a level of power that was three times that of the past.

How could this bald man possibly block it?

And as for the bald man's attack?

Anyone who specialized in soul attacks would be in for a world of trouble upon meeting Linley!

"Delia, she..." Linley hurriedly turned to look. He saw eight Delias in mid-air, while the God who wanted to pursue and kill Delia was moving very slowly. Bebe suddenly charged right in front of him...

"Die!" Bebe looked like a delicate, fragile youth, but right now, he was completely merciless.

"Crunch!"

The black dagger pierced through that God's head!

"Aaaah!" Even up till now, that God stared at Delia, unwilling to accept this outcome. He had never imagined that Delia, a God, had actually gained insights into the most bizarre profound mystery of the Elemental Laws of the Wind; the 'Dimensional Wind'!

The three Gods had died!

At this time, Linley collected the divine artifact, divine spark, and interspatial ring of the bald man.

"Whew." The eight 'Delias' transformed back into one, then flew over, laughing towards Linley. "Linley, what do you think of my teamwork with Bebe?"

Bebe said in surprised joy as well, "Boss, that technique of Delia's just now was very powerful. Those two Gods were both affected by it, and their speed lowered dramatically, as though their hands and feet were tied. I seized the opportunity to kill both of them. It was simply too easy."

Linley stared at Delia in astonishment.

"Linley, didn't I tell you in the past? That year when we wed, I absorbed that Demigod-level wind-style divine spark which had profound mysteries that were similar to the 'Void Extermination' spell, right? This is known as the Profound Mysteries of the 'Dimensional Wind'." Delia explained.

Linley nodded.

"I've discovered that those three profound mysteries contained within that Nieff's divine spark aren't as useful as that single profound mystery." Delia sighed.

Linley let out a relieved breath as well.

The Elemental Laws of Wind did indeed have to do with space and dimensions.

"This Profound Mysteries of the 'Dimensional Wind' should be a very powerful type of profound mystery. Most likely, Lord Beirut had spent quite some effort in selecting this divine spark for her." Linley felt gratitude in his heart. Turning to look, he saw that the battle around them was extremely bloody, and many people in the tribe had died.

Linley suddenly had a surge of emotion...

This sort of battle between tribes was a microcosm of the Infernal Realm as a whole. Even life in a tribe was so dangerous; what about the entire Infernal Realm then?

"We have to survive here in the Infernal Realm!" Linley looked at Delia and Bebe as he murmured to himself.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 8, Survival of the Fittest

Stirton stood there in mid-air. Although the battle around him was fierce, he was like a rock amidst the waves. Nobody was able to budge him at all.

Stirton watched everything coldly.

The warriors and members of the tribe died, but he didn't care at all.

"It is about time!" Stirton muttered softly.

"Let's do it!" A hoarse voice suddenly rang out. Three people suddenly charged out from within those black uniformed warriors of the Black Dragon Army. These three black robed figures moved almost at the same time that Stirton did, charging towards the two enemy leaders.

The tiger-headed warrior and the skinny, gold-robed man both laughed.

"Stirton really did have something up his sleeve. Only, I didn't expect he'd actually have three of them." The gold-robed man, Klotman, said in a low voice.

"Fortunately, we made preparations as well." The tiger-headed man said coldly.

The gold-robed Klotman narrowed his eyes, a freezing aura shooting forth from them. With a low growl, he said, "Kill!" As his voice rang out, two gray-robed men suddenly charged out from within their troops. These two gray-robed men and the two leaders simultaneously charged towards their enemies.

The three black-robed men and Stirton!

The two gray-robed men, Klotman, and Raschell!

Four on four!

"You invited Fiends as well?!" Stirton said in a cold voice.

"You really are rich. You invited three." Klayton let out a sneering laugh.

The two sides immediately dispensed with words. Four on each side. Eight in total. These eight people were all Highgods, and Highgods who had become Deities through their own power. Every single one of them had their own special abilities, and they began to wildly fight against each other.

"Boom!"

Space itself shook, and terrifying waves of energy blasted out in every direction.

"What?!" Many people stared over in astonishment.

Fighting one on one, the four pairs of people fought wildly in mid-air, causing those terrifying spatial tremors to spread out in every direction constantly.

One's body transformed into nothingness...

Another's transformed into an enormous elemental beast...

Still another transformed into the shape of a sword...

A battle between Highgods was exceedingly vicious. The four pairs of combatants fought against each other, and no one dared to draw near. Even those God-level warriors of the two sides which had been fighting all out against each other earlier now came to a halt as if by mutual agreement, and the fierceness of the battle dropped dramatically.

"Everyone really is pragmatic." Linley watched this scene unfold.

Just now, the leaders of both sides had only been watching as those warriors fought against each other. But now that the leaders of the two sides were fighting, the warriors came to a halt as though by taciturn understanding.

Delia laughed calmly, "It's normal. Nobody wants to die! Right now, the leaders are fighting each other. Whichever side's leader survives will be the side which obtains victory. To these warriors, it doesn't make much of a difference as to who their leader is."

Linley watched those four pairs of Highgods battle it out in mid-air.

He had to admit that the power of a Highgod vastly outstripped that of a God!

"At the very least, a Highgod has mastered every single profound mystery in an Elemental Law." Linley sighed to himself. "Only, there's differences in the level of fusion."

Weak Highgods might not have fused any profound mysteries at all.

Stronger Highgods, by contrast, might have fused two profound mysteries, or three or more for the powerful ones.

"Two died." Linley raised his head, watching the battle as he spoke softly.

The eight Highgods that had been battling each other had already suffered two casualties; it was the golden-robed Klotman and a black-robed man. Just then, during the four-on-four battle, the golden-robed Klotman had been fighting against that black-robed man.

Klotman, suffering a severe injury in turn, managed to kill the black-robed man.

But just at that moment, Stirton suddenly transformed into two clones and attacked, killing the heavily wounded Klotman. Although Klotman also had a clone of his own, his clone was only a God. It was destroyed as well.

"Stirton!" The tiger-headed warrior's face changed. "I didn't expect that your wind-style clone has reached the Highgod level as well."

"Hmph!" Stirton sneered. "First, Klotman. Next, you."

To people like them, they usually wouldn't choose to utilize fusing divine sparks. They would only become Deities through training.

"Is that so?"

A cold look flashed through the eyes of the tiger-headed man. Suddenly, a figure flew out of his own as well. This figure pounced towards his opponent, another black-robed man. This essentially meant that the tiger-headed warrior and that shadowy figure were joining forces against their opponent.

"A Highgod clone!" The black-robed man was frightened into an immediate retreat.

Stirton's face changed. Looking at the tiger-headed warrior, he said, "Raschell, you hid it really well!"

"Not as well as you." The shadow solidified. It was the darkness-type clone of the tiger-headed warrior, Raschell.

Watching in the distance, Linley had to sigh in amazement. "That seemingly rash and foolish tiger-headed warrior, Raschell, isn't one whit less sinister than Stirton." Linley now understood that perhaps Stirton and Raschell had some secret, ulterior motives for allowing their subordinates to do battle against each other.

Right at this moment...

"Lord Bertie [Bo'di], how much longer are you planning to wait?" Stirton sent a message with his divine sense.

Suddenly, in mid-air, a black light solidified, transforming into a silver-haired, silver-robed elder. This silver-robed elder was wielding a long black whip in his hands, and he charged leisurely towards the tiger-headed warrior and those two gray-robed men.

"Whoosh!" The long whip danced out, causing space to distort.

One of the gray-robed men let out a cold sneer. The spear in his hands lengthened, and wherever it passed, black flames appeared out of nowhere.

The long whip and the long spear collided.

"Hmph." The silver-robed elder sneered.

"Ah!!!" The gray-robed man's entire body began to convulse. He let out a few agonized cries, and then he stopped moving, falling down from the skies.

This scene terrified many of the onlookers. Everyone had witnessed the power of that gray-robed man; he definitely was a fairly powerful Highgod. But in front of that silver-robed elder, he had been defeated within a single exchange.

"It is Bertie of Castle Greensnake!" The face of the tiger-headed warrior, Raschell, changed dramatically. He glanced disbelievingly at Stirton. "Stirton, you..." He didn't imagine that the chief of the Black Dragon Tribe, Stirton, would actually ask for help from Castle Greensnake."

"Bertie?" The other lucky survivor, the gray-robed man, was greatly shocked.

Bertie's fame was fairly well known throughout the Nightblaze Prefecture, and he was a fairly powerful expert. At the very least, he wasn't someone whom the likes of them could stand against.

"Flee!"

Without hesitating at all, the tiger-headed warrior and the gray-robed man transformed into multiple shadows, fleeing at high speed.

If a powerful Highgod wished to flee, other Highgods generally wouldn't be able to kill them.

"Hmph." The silver-robed elder sneered, then glanced sideways at Stirton.

Stirton immediately revealed a smile on his face.

"You handle affairs here. I'm going back now." Bertie said, and then he exploded, transforming into a large amount of black light which then disappeared.

Stirton looked at the surrounding, astonished people. In a bright voice, he said, "Warriors of the Golden Wolf Tribe and the Snow Tiger Tribe, you now have the choice of joining our Black Dragon Tribe. But of course, you can resist as well. If you choose resistance..." Stirton let out a cold laugh.

The warriors of the two tribes looked at each other.

Now that Klotman was dead, the Golden Wolf Tribe was finished. The Snow Tiger Tribe's power had dropped greatly as well.

"Now of course, your family and friends can join our Black Dragon Tribe as well." Stirton laughed brightly. "Our Black Dragon Tribe will definitely bring you more wealth and security than you previously had. If you agree to join our tribe, then sheath your weapons."

Those God-level warriors looked at each other. Some of the Gods of the Golden Wolf Tribe sheathed their weapons. Their leader was dead. Naturally, they had to surrender.

After all, without the protection of a tribe, their lives would be very difficult.

After the first few people began to surrender, the others began to surrender and choose to join the Black Dragon Tribe as well. To them, the identity of their leader didn't make much of a difference.

"He was the one that killed my big brother!" Krate growled softly as he stared at a distant person.

Those surrendered warriors had some enmities now with many of the survivors of the Black Dragon Tribe. Only Stirton's presence in the Black Dragon Tribe was too intimidating, so no one dared to say anything. But one could imagine that in the future, the Black Dragon Tribe would have quite a few internal struggles.

"Hmph." Stirton glanced out of the corner of his eyes, seeing the hatred in some of the eyes of his tribesmen. He just let out a soft laugh.

He didn't care about the deaths of a few tribesmen.

This was the Infernal Realm. Survival of the fittest was the natural law of this place!

In the blink of an eye, nearly half a year passed. The battle of half a year ago had actually caused the population of the Black Dragon Tribe to increase greatly. In particular, a majority of the Golden Wolf Tribe's tribesmen had joined in. The Black Dragon Tribe's population reached nearly thirty thousand.

In particular, the number of God-level warriors had increased to nearly three thousand.

Stirton had wanted to annihilate the Snow Tiger Tribe, but afterwards, he discovered that the Snow Tiger Tribe had already moved away from their original location. Clearly, the tiger-headed leader, Raschall had predicted long ago that Stirton would come for revenge. Knowing he wouldn't be able to resist, he had immediately led his people elsewhere.

At Linley's residence.

"Krate, if you want revenge now, your only choice is to endure. Your current power is far inferior to your enemy's. Right now, he doesn't know that you are his enemy. You can calmly train. There will come the day when you will have a chance to take revenge." Linley advised.

This entire time, Krate had wanted to get revenge for his big brother. But his enemy was a God, after all. Krate's power was far inferior to his opponent's.

"I know, Linley." Krate's face was sunken, but he nodded.

"Boom!"

A vibration came from outside.

Linley mused, "It seems there's a battle outside again."

The nearby Delia sighed as well and said, "Thousands of members of the Black Dragon Tribe died half a year ago during that battle. Many of their family and friends are still alive. Of course they want revenge! Fortunately, that battle was so chaotic that the vast majority don't know who the killers of their loved ones were. Otherwise, the tribe would be in a state of chaos."

Linley nodded in agreement.

"Who cares if it is in chaos or not?!" Bebe laughed coldly. "As long as they don't cause trouble for us. If they do, we'll kill any who come!"

"Krate, if you don't mind, I can help you get revenge." Bebe said quite magnanimously.

"No need." Krate's gaze was cold. "There will come a day when I personally get revenge. Linley, Bebe, I won't disturb you any further. I'm going back now." After this experience, Krate was no longer as cheerful as he had been in the past.

Soon after Krate's departure, someone else came. It was a familiar figure; Buffett.

"Linley, didn't you want to go to Royalwing City? Tomorrow, our Black Dragon Tribe will send a group of people on a metallic creature to head out. If you want to go, each of you needs to prepare five inkstones." Buffett reminded them with a laugh.

"Truly?" Bebe was the first to stand up.

Linley and Delia were greatly overjoyed as well.

They had already waited quite a long while for this day.

"Mr. Buffett, thank you so much, truly." Linley felt great gratitude in his heart. He would finally be able to leave the Black Dragon Tribe.

Buffett let out a long sigh, then laughed, "Linley, actually, when last time you refused to join the army, I knew that you didn't want to stay at the Black Dragon Tribe. Actually, leaving is fine." Buffett instructed, "But Linley, Royalwing City isn't a place where just anyone can stay. You need to make some preparations."

"Right. I understand." Linley's mood was excellent right now.

Early next dawn, Linley, Delia, and Bebe first went to bid farewell to some of the friends they had made in the Black Dragon Tribe.

"Krate, no matter what, don't be hasty." Linley instructed.

"Linley, the Infernal Realm is vast and boundless. Royalwing City is one of the ten cities of the Nightblaze Prefecture. The Black Dragon tribe is just a small place. That place is a large city! You have to work hard to stabilize your footing in Royalwing City. That won't be an easy task." Krate actually encouraged Linley rather than vice versa.

Linley chuckled.

"Don't worry. A small affair like this can't possibly stop me." Bebe rubbed his nose, laughing delightedly.

"The metallic creature has come." Delia suddenly spoke.

Raising his head, Linley saw that in the air above Stirton's black castle, a metallic creature was there, having transformed into a black dragon while hovering in mid-air. A number of people, spread throughout the Black Dragon Tribe, began to fly towards it. Linley, Delia, and Bebe bid farewell to their friends, then flew towards the metallic creature as well.

"Farewell, Black Dragon Tribe." Linley lowered his head, looking down at the slowly disappearing Black Dragon Tribe and its mountains.

This was the first place where Linley had settled down in upon arriving at the Infernal Realm. In the future, he would most likely never return to this place again.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 9, Omnipresent Danger

The metallic creature that had transformed into an enormous black dragon coiled in the air mid-way up the mountain. All of the members of the Black Dragon who wished to head to Royalwing City all flew over, while a young, muscular man stood at the flank of the metallic creature, opening the doorway.

“All of you, come. Everyone who wishes to go to Royalwing City, five inkstones each!” The young, muscular warrior called out loudly in a disdainful manner.

Those who wanted to go Royalwing City numbered over a hundred. Linley’s group naturally was amongst them.

Five inkstones each. The three of them needed to pay fifteen inkstones. Originally, when selling off those four Demigod artifacts, they had acquired twenty inkstones. More than half was now being used up, just like that.

“It really is expensive!” Bebe muttered in a low voice.

“Didn’t you hear what Buffett said?” Linley said softly. “This metallic creature is reserved for the members of the tribe only, and only members of the tribe are qualified to pay five inkstones for passage in a group. The members of other tribes aren’t even qualified to enter this metallic creature.”

As they spoke, it now came to Linley’s turn.

“Three of us.” Linley indicated, then withdrew two of the long inkstones, each one equivalent to ten inkstones.

The muscular young man accepted them, then gave Linley five smaller inkstones. Impatiently, he said, “Hurry up. Next.” Linley’s group immediately entered the metallic creature’s interior.

The inside of the metallic creature was extremely large. It was separated into a forward cabin and a rear cabin. Those who paid five inkstones like Linley’s group were all placed in the rear cabin, which had a large number of seats automatically created by the metallic creature itself.

The seats were created in rows of four each. Linley’s group of three naturally selected the same row.

“I want the window.” Bebe immediately sat on the inside, which allowed him to see through the metallic creature’s translucent sides towards the outside. Delia sat next to Linley on the outside.

“Finally, we’re leaving the Black Dragon Tribe.” Linley and Delia exchanged a laugh, their hands coming together. As one tribesman after another entered, the spaces in the rear cabin began to fill up. A tousled, jade-haired youngster laughed as he greeted Linley, then sat down next to him.

“Hi there. My name is Daebra [Dai’bo’la]!” The jade-haired youth said in a very friendly manner towards Linley, seated next to him.

"I am Linley." Linley nodded in a friendly manner.

In the Infernal Realm, one's status was primarily determined by one's power. This Daeбра was only a Demigod...Daeбра had the sense that the woman (Delia) and the youngster (Bebe) had auras that caused him to feel fear. He felt that Linley, however, should be a Demigod.

"Linley, why are you headed to Royalwing City?" Daeбра asked curiously.

"Me? This is my first time in the Infernal Realm. I want to take a look in Royalwing City. I've never gone there before. You?" Linley asked with a calm laugh.

Daeбра lowered his voice. "I want to sell a divine artifact, but selling it in the tribe is too disadvantageous. Thus I decided to go sell it at Royalwing City. This was my good fortune; half a year ago, during that big battle, I was lucky enough to snatch up a God artifact.

During that battle, many Gods had fallen.

At that time, Linley and the other two had killed three Gods, then seized their divine artifacts, sparks, and interspatial rings. During battles, tribesmen who acquired any ordinary items didn't need to offer it to the chief; the items went to whoever acquired them. This was the rule of the tribe.

"Your luck really isn't bad." Linley laughed calmly and said a few words of praise.

"Rumble..."

The metallic creature moved, and a wild surge of energy was released as it instantly transformed into a blur, disappearing from the air above the mountain and departing from the Black Dragon Tribe.

"It's begun." Linley murmured to himself.

"From here to Royalwing City will take half a month or so. This half a month will be very boring." The jade-haired youth next to Linley, 'Daeбра', said in a somewhat resigned manner.

"Half a month?" Linley had a thought.

He remembered back to what Krate had said; the city closest to the Black Dragon Tribe, 'Royalwing City', was over ten million kilometers away from Black Dragon Tribe. Since they would arrive in half a month, that meant that this metallic creature was capable of moving roughly a million kilometers a day.

"Pipe down!" Suddenly, an icy shout rang out from up front. Linley and the others turned to look, and saw that at the corridor between the rear cabin and the front cabin, a golden-haired elder entered the rear cabin, followed by several Gods.

"Lord Edmond [Ai'de'meng] has come as well." The jade-haired Daeбра said softly in surprise.

"Who is Edmond?" Linley lowered his voice as well.

Daebra explained, "Lord Edmond is the chief steward for Lord Chief Stirton. I didn't expect that Lord Edmond is going on this trip to Royalwing City as well. For even Lord Edmond to be sent...it seems there is a major deal to be made this time in Royalwing City." Daebra's understanding of the Black Dragon Tribe was far greater than Linley's.

Linley looked in surprise towards the distant Edmond as well.

Chief steward?

"This Edmond should be a Highgod." Bebe's voice rang out in Linley's mind.

Linley nodded to himself as well.

Edmond's gaze was cold and clear as he looked at everyone in the rear cabin. In a calm voice, he barked, "Is there anyone here who is going to Royalwing City for the first time? If this is your first time, stand up!"

Immediately, two people in the rear cabin stood up. Linley, Delia, and Bebe glanced at each other, then stood up as well.

Edmond swept them with his gaze, nodding calmly. "Five in total." And then, he walked towards Linley's group, which was closer. Walking next to them, he saw Daebra and then chuckled, "Daebra, you are going as well, young fellow? Go ahead and tell them some of the necessary information they need to be aware of in Royalwing City. If they cause a disaster, they will die, but more importantly, I don't want the three of them to cause any problems for the tribe."

"Yes, milord. Don't worry. I will definitely tell them everything they need to be aware of." The jade-haired youth, Daebra, said hurriedly.

Edmond nodded calmly. "If there are any problems, I'll come looking for you. The three of you, sit down."

After speaking, Edmond walked towards the back, similarly ordering the people next to the other two newcomers to tell them what they needed to be aware of. After finishing speaking, Edmond led his people out of the rear cabin and returned to the front cabin.

The front cabin was where the forces who directly served Chief Stirton stayed.

"What do I need to be aware of when heading to Royalwing City?" Linley looked at Daebra.

Daebra laughed and nodded. "There are indeed a few things. First of all, when you enter any city in the Infernal Realm, you have to pay the city entrance fee. The entrance fee is one inkstone per person!"

"So greedy." Linley said to himself.

Daebra continued, "After entering the city, it is best for you to follow with the tribe's people and not run about rashly. This is because after finishing up, everyone is going to immediately leave Royalwing City on that very same day and return back to the tribe."

"Return on the same day?" Linley was somewhat surprised.

But as Linley saw it, this didn't matter much to him, as he didn't have any plans to return to the Black Dragon Tribe at all.

"Right. Return on the same day. This is because Royalwing City...actually, not just Royalwing City, but every city in the Infernal Realm...has a 'night curfew'. From midnight until five in the morning, nobody is permitted to be on the streets or alleyways of the city. If you are caught...if you are a citizen of Royalwing City, it isn't as severe; after some punishment, you'll be released. But if you aren't a citizen of Royalwing City, then, you will never be able to return to the Black Dragon Tribe." Daeбра said solemnly.

Linley was startled.

"Are you saying that if you are caught at night, you are finished?" Linley stared at Daeбра in astonishment.

Daeбра nodded solemnly. "Thus, we usually return to the Black Dragon Tribe that same day. We definitely won't stay the night at Royalwing City. This is because staying a single time at some of the hotels in Royalwing City will cost more than a hundred inkstones. Who is willing to pay that sort of price?"

"Over a hundred inkstones?" The nearby Bebe turned his head.

"Right." Daeбра nodded with certainty.

Linley's group was astonished. The cost of living in Royalwing City was simply too terrifying. No wonder...Krate had once said that it was very hard for a person to establish himself in Royalwing City!

"Black Dragon, hurry up and come to a halt. When passing through our Mount Petar [Fu'te'er], you need to leave behind some valuables!" A loud, clear voice rang out, shaking through the entire metallic creature. Both the passengers in the front and rear cabins were astonished. Everyone understood...

Not good. They had encountered bandits!

"We just headed out a short while ago, and we already encountered bandits?" Linley was surprised.

It must be understood that Royalwing City was nearly half a month away from them. According to this sort of frequency, how many bandits would they encounter on the way?

Linley looked at Delia and Bebe, saying to himself, "No wonder that Buffett had previously said that if the three of us roamed the Infernal Realm by ourselves, we wouldn't survive more than a day or two. There are simply too many bandit groups in the Infernal Realm." Linley and the other two peered through the translucent 'glass' and saw a large group of people hovering in mid-air, their leader dressed in a deep blue robe, his blue hair unbound, and with a single horn in his forehead.

"A single horn?"

Linley understood that many other races had different aesthetic standards than humans. Even in human form, they would keep some traces of what they themselves considered most beautiful, such as a horn! This was most likely the case for this bandit leader. There were seventy or eighty people here. They had summoned an enormous elemental beast to block this metallic creature.

The jade-haired youth 'Daebra', by Linley's side, laughed. "Don't worry, Linley. There won't be any problems."

"Hmph! When did you take over Mount Petar? Can it be that you don't even recognize our Black Dragon Tribe?" The voice of the chief steward, Edmond, rang out. At the same time, Edmond and those two black-robed men flew out of the metallic creature as well.

Linley saw those two black-robed people through the translucent glass. He was immediately surprised. "These are the two black-robed men who helped Lord Stirton in that battle half a year ago."

At that time, there were a total of three black robed men. One of them had died. These two were the ones who had survived.

In the air above Mount Petar, the metallic lifeform had come to a halt. When the nearly eighty or so Deities saw those three people come out, they were all terrified. They couldn't sense the power level of these three people...clearly, all three of them were Highgods.

Those two black-robed men in particular, even had a Fiend medallion on their chest!

"Fiends!" Those bandits were terrified.

They had run into a brick wall!

Three Highgods, two of which were Fiends. More than enough to wipe them all out.

"Milords, my truest apologies. We, we made a mistake." The horned man said in terror.

"Hmph. Bastard. Disappear from my sight!" Edmond shouted coldly.

"Yes, yes!" The horned man was overjoyed. Not hesitating at all, he led his subordinates back downwards, instantly disappearing into the depths of Mount Petar below.

This scene caused Linley to sigh to himself that these bandits truly were weak. However, that was only in comparison to Highgods. If Linley and the other two had encountered these bandits, then it would be very problematic...after all, the enemy had an entire group of Deities, including thirty four Gods.

The metallic creature continued forward.

"The Infernal Realm really is dangerous." Linley sighed.

"Right. All we can do is follow the forces of the tribe. That's the only chance we have of entering Royalwing City.” Daeбра sighed as well. “But Linley, the Infernal Realm does have some safe zones with no danger, where no one dares to fight. In those places, you can live a very safe life!”

“Oh?” Linley was greatly shocked.

During this period of time in the Infernal Realm, all he had seen was vicious battles. The feeling the Infernal Realm had given him was that any place was ripe for battle and for plunder, with danger everywhere. But from Daeбра’s words, it seemed there were some safe zones after all.

“Right. In the Infernal Realm, every single prefecture has around ten cities. The cities are safe.” Daeбра said solemnly. “Linley, this is something I have to warn you about. You absolutely cannot fight or kill within the borders of Royalwing City. If you are captured, then in the future, the repercussions will be even worse than if you are caught violating curfew. Not only will you be finished; our entire tribe will most likely face trouble!”

“Not allowed to engage in battle?” Linley actually felt relieved.

Since that was the case, then nobody else would act against them in Royalwing City either.

It seemed...

Royalwing City truly was a safe haven.

“Sadly, the entire Nightblaze Prefecture has a circumference of a billion kilometers, but each of the ten cities only has a circumference of roughly a thousand kilometers. They are too small. Living in Royalwing City is far too expensive as well." Daeбра shook his head, letting out a sigh.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 10, The Three Castles of Royalwing City

Hearing these two numbers, Linley ran some mental calculations. His heart couldn't help but tremble.

A circumference of a billion kilometers meant that in size, it was over a trillion times the size of an area with a circumference of a thousand kilometers! Even the ten cities combined, in terms of size, were just a hundred billionth of the total size of the Nightblaze Prefecture! A hundred billionth! This contrast was simply too shocking.

"Only the elites of the Infernal Realm should be able to establish themselves in Royalwing City!" Linley said to himself.

The jade-haired youth, Daeбра, sighed. "If in my lifetime, I am able to become a citizen of Royalwing City, I would feel contentment. Unfortunately, it is too hard." Daeбра didn't have enough confidence in himself.

To become a citizen of a city in the Infernal Realm was something that was worthy of being proud over.

Linley had just entered the Infernal Realm. Although he could sense some things from the 'one in a trillion' number, he hadn't lived here long enough, so his feelings weren't as strong.

Upon departing the Black Dragon Tribe, the number of bandit attacks they had encountered actually wasn't that high. This was because all of the bandit forces that had been established in this area for some time knew about the local tribes...and they knew what the metallic creature serving the Black Dragon Tribe usually transformed into.

Despite that, however, they still encountered some bandits who wanted to stop them.

The chief steward, Edmond, and those two Fiends couldn't be bothered to lower themselves to deal with those bandits. All they did was show their faces to frighten them.

The sixteenth day after they departed from the Black Dragon Tribe, the people in the rear cabin of the metallic creature grew excited. Through the translucent metal, they were able to see an enormous city formed from giant slabs of violet stones.

The violet city was a city which emanated an ancient, noble aura.

Royalwing City! One of the ten great cities of the Nightblaze Prefecture!

"This is Royalwing City?" Bebe's eyes were shining.

Linley and Delia both excitedly looked at the enormous city as well, a city with circumference of a thousand kilometers. This was something which did not exist in the Yulan continent. In particular, the stones which the cities of the Infernal Realm were made out of shared the same hardness as adamantite.

"We finally arrived!" Linley murmured to himself.

And then, the many people within the metallic creature flew out. The people of the Black Dragon Tribe gathered together in mid-air, and the chief steward, Edmond, swept everyone with his gaze while saying loudly, "Everyone, remember, our tribe's metallic creature will return to the Black Dragon Tribe after the Blood Sun lowers and the Violet Moon rises. As for our gathering spot, it will be right here. If there is anyone who is missing by the time we leave, we won't wait for you."

Everyone understood this principle.

"Alright. Everyone, prepare to pay the city entrance fee." Edmond spoke, then led the group flying towards the gates of Royalwing City.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were seeing a city of the Infernal Realm for the first time. They felt it was very new and interesting. While following the tribesmen in flying over, they also stared at the ancient, majestic, violet-stoned city.

"So many people!" Bebe exhaled in amazement as he stared around himself.

There were too many people who wanted to enter the city. They came from every direction, and had formed a long queue outside the city. Nobody dared to rashly charge in at this place. Even the chief steward, Edmond, lined up in an ordinary fashion, waiting to pay the entrance fee.

"Huh?" Bebe suddenly stared in shock at the city gates. "Those two black-robed men entered without paying the fee."

"Fiends!" Linley discovered this as well.

The two Fiends who had travelled alongside them didn't line up to pay the entrance fee. They headed directly into Royalwing City, and the guards at the gates of Royalwing City didn't stop them either.

"Redbud Army soldiers, the prefecture army soldiers, and Fiends. These three types of people don't need to pay any fees when entering the city." The jade-haired youth, Daebra, explained from behind Linley. "They all have some special privileges. Thus, there are many people who want to join the Redbud Army, become Fiends, or become prefecture army soldiers. Unfortunately, the Redbud Army, the Fiends, and the prefectural army all have extremely strict entrance requirements."

Soon, it was Linley's group's turn.

Each of them paid an inkstone, and then Linley's group entered Royalwing City.

During that battle half a year ago, Linley had killed three Gods, who each had nearly a thousand inkstones within their interspatial ring, as well as some other items. However, there was something which Linley didn't recognize; it was an azurish stone.

It was roughly the same in form as inkstone. However, the special aura it contained within it was far stronger than an inkstone's.

Linley was guessing...that this azure stone which was the size as inkstone should also be some sort of currency. Only, this was just a guess. Linley wasn't in a hurry to ask anyone else. After all, those three interspatial rings of those three Gods, all combined, only had a few dozen of those azurish stones.

Royalwing City.

Daebra and Linley's group of three walked into Royalwing City together. While walking on the wide streets, they stared at the surrounding, large structures. Those buildings all emanated a luxurious, ancient aura. Every single structure was built in a way that they could almost be described as sculptures.

"Although they aren't at the grandmaster level, they aren't too far off either." Linley naturally was qualified to make this judgment.

Given his increasingly deeper insights into the Elemental Laws, the Straight Chisel School's Linley could be considered to have reached true mastery in sculpting.

"These sculptures are so strange. They are so pleasing to the eye." Bebe's eyes lit up.

"Of course." Linley sighed. "I didn't expect that the sculpting of these giant structures would have been done in such a careful, detailed manner. These buildings must be extremely valuable."

Daebra snickered, "Hmph, valuable? Extremely, extremely expensive! A single inch of land in Royalwing City is extremely expensive. The price of these structures is naturally even more astonishing. When building them, they invited a number of specialized Deity-level experts to construct them. The price of every single structure...I can't imagine how many years it would take for me to have enough inkstones to buy one."

Linley glanced at the look in the nearby Daeбра's eyes.

Linley understood that the terrifying price of these structures had already exceeded the limits of Daeбра's imagination. He didn't even dare to think about that price; all he could do was say a few grumbling words.

As they continued forward, Linley began to get an understanding of how bustling Royalwing City was.

"Royalwing City has existed for countless billions of years." Daeбра explained towards Linley. "Although these buildings aren't damaged, I think you have probably sensed that ancient aura coming from them, as well as a few of the small cracks and signs of the passage of many years."

Linley nodded slightly.

Indeed, he could sense it. The number of years which Royalwing City had existed for was definitely an astonishing figure.

"Perhaps only the mineral ores of the Infernal Realm can allow a city to last for so long." Linley said to himself. The ores that were used to build this city were originally meant to be used to forge weapons! Naturally, they could last nearly forever.

However, divine artifacts, especially newly made ones, were very cheap in the Infernal Realm.

"There are clothing stores here as well?" Delia's eyes lit up. She saw a beautiful, extravagant storefront that was completely made from cream-white stones. Linley turned to look as well. He saw that this store was completely carved out from a single giant milk-white stone.

Given the toughness of the stones of the Infernal Realm, one could imagine how costly a building such as this must be.

"What beautiful clothes!" Delia looked through the translucent glass and saw some clothes. She couldn't help but grow interested. Women always had a special fondness for clothes.

Daebra chuckled, "The costs and expenditures here in Royalwing City are quite terrifyingly high. Ordinary Deities like us who live in tribes are completely unable to afford them. For example, those clothes over there.." Daebra pointed at a violet set of clothes that was on display.

"It is very possible that the materials used to make this set of clothes came from other continents, such as the Bloodridge Continent! It might even have come from the Life Realm, or the Netherworld, or perhaps the Celestial Realm." Daebra sighed.

Linley, hearing this, stared, slack-jawed.

A single set of clothes might have materials coming from other planes?

“Based on the value of the materials...ordinary clothes are at least a hundred inkstones, while those made from slightly more valuable materials might cost a thousand inkstones. If those materials came from other planes which are extremely rare and precious, a set of clothes could cost millions of inkstones!”

Delia was shocked as well!

Linley's heart shuddered.

How could this be described as 'clothes'? A set of clothes was comparable in value to a Highgod spark! This indeed wasn't something which ordinary people were able to afford.

“But of course, these clothes will have some special effects as well. For example, in terms of defensiveness, they are definitely comparable to most divine artifacts.” Daebra then added with a laugh, “But of course, I've only heard others speak of clothes that cost millions of inkstones. I've never personally seen any.”

Everyone who entered the city had roughly the same goals; buying and selling items. After all, could it be that the members of the poor tribes had come for the purpose of spending money on services here in Royalwing City? They didn't have the capital.

Continuing to move forward, Linley's group was introduced by Daebra to all sorts of entertainment venues in the Infernal Realm.

For example, wine; to make fine wine, one might invite some wine masters who had analyzed wine for hundreds of millions of years, who would use some special methods to create wine using some extremely valuable materials, some of which might only be acquired in dangerous locations.

Actually, the saliva of the Black Dragon Tribe's Gerrard Black Dragons, after being refined, could produce some valuable materials which could be used to create delicacies.

These delicacies and wines far exceeded their counterparts in the material planes in taste and flavor.

Eating the finest cuisines of the Infernal Realm was a form of utter luxury. However...the price was similarly extravagant. Even ordinary food would cost up to a hundred inkstones. It must be understood that a Demigod spark would only be sold for a hundred inkstones or so. So, there were plenty of entertainment venues, but the price in those venues scared off the vast majority of people.

Linley's group followed the other tribe members, arriving in the most bustling, crowded area of Royalwing city.

"Those three castles!" Linley's eyes were filled with shock. From the left, in the distance, he could see an enormous castle that was completely formed from black sand. Deities possessed extremely good vision; it was clear that this castle was made from countless grains of black sand. The strangest thing was...the black sand was continually flowing about.

But the castle itself didn't budge.

On Linley's right, in the distance, there was an ancient castle made from violet rocks. At the top of the castle, there was a beautifully carved flower. This flower was a very familiar one; it was the insignia of the Redbud Army. A redbud flower!

There was an ancient violet castle, more than a hundred meters high. Only, the violet color of this castle was so deep, it was nearly black! This castle had an enormous carving, a carving of a face! The face seemed very blurry, but the single devilish red eye on the face was extremely eye-catching.

"That is Blacksand Castle!" Daebra pointed at the ancient castle formed from black sand. "Any sort of trade can be carried out there, most of which is large-scale. However, that place is a very secretive place with many competing interests. Little people like us had best not go there."

Daebra then pointed towards the castle with the redbud. "That place is a Redbud Castle. It is the most noble of trading places. They will accept our items at a price of 70% their selling price. When we sell things there, although we still lose a bit, it won't be very troublesome."

"And that castle?" Linley pointed at the very devilish-looking castle that was straight in front of them.

For some reason, that sole, devilish red eye in that blurry carved face made Linley's heartrate speed up, even though it was just a carving.

“That is the Fiend Castle!” Daebra said. “If you want to be a Fiend, you can go there, pay the fee, then participate in the exam. Fiends generally will go to Fiend Castle. Alright, Linley, let’s go to Redbud Castle. It’s best to sell our things there. Blacksand Castle is a very complicated place. Look. The chief steward, Edmond, is entering Redbud Castle.”

This was Linley’s first trip to Royalwing City. Naturally, he didn’t want to go to Blacksand Castle.

After all, even a Highgod like Edmond was going to the safer Redbud Castle.

“Let’s go.” Linley led Bebe and Delia to follow the others, heading towards Redbud Castle as well.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 11, The Third Floor

In the Redbud Castle, there was a sea of people.

The main gate of Redbud Castle was at least a hundred meters wide, with the dense masses of people entering and leaving it. One could imagine how excellent business was doing in Redbud Castle.

Linley's group of people saw Redbud Castle from afar.

"Hrm, the Redbud Army?" Linley noticed them right away. At the gates of Redbud Castle, there were over ten soldiers dressed in violet uniforms, with a long violet cloak on the outside as well. The warriors all had those unique violet seals in the center of their forehead. It was the Redbud Army!

The nearby Daebra laughed, "There are Redbud Castles throughout the entire Redbud Continent. The master of these castles is the mighty Sovereign, the Redbud Ruler. Naturally, they are guarded by the Redbud Army. Actually, the Redbud Army soldiers here are nothing more than a display of force. After all, within Royalwing City, who would dare to cause trouble? Only someone tired of living."

"Hey, that chief steward named Edmond. Why are they going to the back?" Bebe's eyes were quite sharp. He discovered that Edmond's group of people had headed towards the back of Redbud Castle, and didn't go to the main gates.

Linley had noticed this as well.

Actually, although many people entered the main gates of Redbud Castle, there were quite a few people who were entering Redbud Castle through the rear gates as well. The number was not any lower than those going through the main gates, in fact.

“Linley, Redbud Castle is divided into the main gate and the rear gate. Those who go in through the main gates are all going to Redbud Castle for shopping, while those who enter through the rear gates do so because they are going to sell their own items to Redbud Castle!” The jade-haired youth, Daebra, explained with a chuckle.

Linley understood.

So Redbud Castle didn't just sell items; it also purchased them.

“Let's hurry.” Daebra urged.

Holding Delia by the hand, Linley headed forward with Bebe by his side, following the flow of people through to the rear of Redbud Castle. After walking for several kilometers, Linley's group finally reached the rear gates of Redbud Castle.

Indeed...

The rear gates were over a hundred meters wide as well, and a dense mass of people passed through them.

Delia laughed, "Most of those who are coming to sell items belong to the tribes and clans located outside Royalwing City. There really are quite a few people here. Redbud Castle buys at 70% while sells at 100%. They earn a profit of 30%...this Redbud Castle is a place which devours gold."

"There isn't a chance for others to engage in this business." Linley chuckled. Behind the Redbud Castle was an almighty Sovereign!

And then, Linley's group followed the other members of the Black Dragon Tribe into Redbud Castle. Although there were nearly two hundred people in the Black Dragon Tribe's group, upon entering Redbud Castle, they only made up an extremely small number of the total guests.

"This place is huge!" Linley exhaled in shock.

Linley's group, upon entering the first floor of Redbud Castle, discovered that the main hall of this first floor was one or two thousand meters wide. This sort of width was an extremely extravagant sum. More than ten thousand people could pass through it without feeling cramped.

"There are quite a few Deities who have come to sell their items." Bebe was clearly quite excited.

"The main hall of the first floor is for those who have come to sell Demigod sparks, Demigod artifacts, and other items worth a hundred inkstones or less." Daeбра said in a very practiced manner as he explained to Linley's group. "For example, I've come to sell a God spark this time, so I will go to the second floor. In the main hall of the second floor, items like God sparks or God artifacts which are worth around or less than ten thousand inkstones or so can be sold. As for the third floor, that's the floor for selling Highgod artifacts, Highgod sparks, and other precious items that can be worth up to a million inkstones, or even more.”

Linley’s group followed the Black Dragon Tribe’s men up to the main hall of the second floor.

But of course, more than half of the Black Dragon Tribe’s people stayed at the first floor’s main hall. Clearly, these people had all come to sell fairly cheap items.

“Linley, look. There are many sales counters over there in the main hall, with many people seated there. Those people are the purchasers for Redbud Castle. Haha, have a good look. I’ll go sell some things first.” Daebra waved towards Linley’s group, then headed directly to one of the sales counters in the main hall of the second floor.”

After Daebra left, Linley and the other two exchanged glances.

“Let’s go to the third floor!” Linley said.

Linley’s group had quite a few treasures on them. Two Highgod artifacts, and a Highgod spark. These were all exceedingly valuable items.

The stairs going from the main hall of the first to second floor were all exceedingly large, but the stairs from the main hall of the second floor to the main hall of the third floor was much narrower. Even the gateway into the hall was a full size smaller, and the number of people was much lower as well.

Obviously, the number of people who were selling precious items was much lower than those selling items in the first and second floors.

"Edmond!" Linley saw that up above, Edmond had led his three subordinates directly into the gateway to the third floor. At the gateway to the third floor, an employee wearing a long violet robe seemed to chat with Edmond about something, and then Edmond took out a divine spark.

"Why did Edmond take out the divine spark?" Linley was somewhat puzzled.

And then, the violet-robed man let them through. Edmond led his three subordinates into the third floor.

When Linley's group reached the doorway to the third floor...

The violet-robed man stretched his hand out, stopping Linley's group from going through.

"Huh?" Linley's group looked curiously at the man.

"What have you come to sell? Let me take a look." The violet-robed said. Seeing the puzzled look on the faces of Linley's group, he laughed calmly, "Is this your first time? This third floor is different from the lower floors. Every person who enters has to present an item for inspection. Otherwise, no entry is permitted."

Linley now understood. Thinking back to what Edmond had just done, he now knew what that was all about.

But right at that moment, two youngsters walked past Linley, ignoring the violet-robed men as they headed directly into the third floor.

"Hey, how come they didn't have to show any items?" Bebe said in confusion.

The violet-robed man was fairly patient and good-tempered. With a calm laugh, he said, "Didn't you notice? They all had Fiend medallions on their chests. They are Fiends! As Fiends, we have faith in their reputation. When they come, they will definitely have brought quite a few valuable items. There's no need for them to be inspected."

Linley sighed to himself, "Fiends. They don't have to pay any fees when entering the city, and they don't have to be inspected when entering the third floor of Redbud Castle. Their status really is different."

While thinking this to himself, Linley retrieved the black dagger with a flip of his hands. This black dagger was the Highgod artifact which Adkins had left behind after his divine darkness clone had been slain.

"Go in." The violet-robed man nodded.

They entered the third floor of Redbud Castle. This main hall was clearly a size smaller, but it was still hundreds of meters wide. Only, the people here were clearly much sparser in number.

"That's the place where they buy items!" Bebe ran up ahead as the three of them headed towards a sales counter.

But right at this moment....

"Lord Edmond, look!" The chief steward of the Black Dragon Tribe, Edmond, and his three subordinates had noticed Linley's group. "Lord Edmond, aren't they members of our tribe? Those three who were amongst the five who were making their first trips to Royalwing City? They actually came to the third floor!"

Edmonds looked at the distant Linley and the other two.

There were only five people for whom this trip to Royalwing City with the Black Dragon Tribe truly was their first trip. Edmond had seen all of them. Naturally, he recognized and remembered Linley's group.

"I didn't expect that these three had a fortune on them." Edmond's eyes narrowed, and a cold light flashed through them. "It seems our tribe's internal supervisory abilities are insufficient."

In the Infernal Realm, when one's wealth reached a certain level, there would be others who would desire it.

If you wanted to peacefully enjoy your fortune of a million inkstones which you had spent hundreds of millions of years accumulating, you might just find that some other experts would take it all from you.

This wouldn't have been the first or second time for Edmond's group to have done such a thing.

“Don’t worry, milord. Since we already know now, the three of them won’t be able to escape you. When we leave Royalwing City, we can make our move then.” The nearby God said insidiously.

Edmond nodded.

Everyone allowed to enter the third floor had items that were worth at least a million inkstones. Even a Highgod such as Edmond would be desirous of such a fortune.

At a row of sales counter on the side of the third floor’s main hall, there were violet-robed employees seated at every counter. Linley’s group walked towards one of them, a silver-haired old man.

“Hrm?” The violet-robed, silver-haired old man raised his head and smiled calmly. “What are you selling? Take it out.”

Linley and the other two glanced at each other, and then with a flip of his hand, Linley withdrew that black dagger and gave it to the silver-haired old man. “This Highgod artifact.”

Although Linley’s group was still in possession of the Spear of Cortez and that Highgod spark, this was Linley’s group’s first trip into Royalwing City. There were many things they didn’t know about yet. Linley’s group wasn’t in a hurry either. After all...if they truly needed money desperately, they could come again.

In addition...

Redbud Castle wasn't the only place which purchased goods. There was also that Blacksand Castle. Only, there was a great deal of intrigue and competitive forces within Blacksand Castle. It was rather disorderly and chaotic. Without gaining a good understanding of the situation, Linley wouldn't be in a hurry to go there.

"This dagger really is quite fine." The violet-robed elder nodded in praise. "It is indeed a Highgod artifact, and its previous owner should have been a Highgod who trained in the Laws of Darkness who had used this dagger to kill quite a few experts. It has a very thick murderous aura. Not bad. We will buy this dagger for a price of 750,000 inkstones Are you willing to sell?" The violet-robed elder made his decision.

Linley nodded. "Fine."

Based on his calculations, Linley had been planning to sell this item for a price of 700,000 inkstones, which would have been a fine price. Thus, this price of 750,000 inkstones made Linley quite satisfied. Linley understood...that perhaps this dagger was an excellent Highgod artifact and that perhaps he had been taken slight advantage of.

But Linley didn't care too much about such a small sum.

"This is a hundred azurites, equivalent to a hundred thousand inkstones. Two hundred thousand, three hundred thousand..." As he spoke, the violet-robed elder brought out large pieces of azure stones out.

Linley immediately understood.

“As I thought!” When Linley’s group had killed those Gods, they had acquired a few azure colored stones. At that time, Linley had hypothesized that those azure stones were a form of currency, because their aura was identical to the aura of the inkstones. Only, the aura was far stronger.

A single azurite was shaped in a square which was one centimeter long.

The ones which this violet-robed elder brought out, however, were square slabs that were ten centimeters long and one centimeter wide. Indeed, this larger azurite slab was equivalent to a hundred smaller azurite stones. In other words, it was worth a hundred thousand inkstones!

Seven azurite slabs and five long azurite stones.

“Seven hundred and fifty thousand. Collect them.” The violet-robed elder handed them to Linley.

“Dare I ask, aside from using them to purchase items, do these inkstones and azurites have any other purpose?” Linley still had the feeling that the unique aura of these azurites and inkstones should have some special purpose.

The violet-robed elder’s eyes lit up. Glancing sideways at Linley, he laughed calmly, “It’s useless for you to know this information, so there’s no need for you to ask.”

Linley was curious, but since this person wasn't willing to tell, Linley didn't pursue this line of questioning.

"If you go through that gate in the main hall, you will arrive at the main hall on the other side. If you want to buy something, you can go to that main hall." The violet-robed elder said.

Linley had guessed this long ago.

This was because Redbud Castle's main gate was reserved for people buying things, while the rear gate was reserved for people selling things to the castle employees.

It was one structure with two sides.

"Let's go take a look." Delia was very curious.

"I wonder what the Infernal Realm has." Bebe was excited as well. Linley laughed and nodded, then followed through the third floor's corridor to the other main hall on the third floor.

From afar...

"Hrm? They are going to the main hall on the other side?" Edmond, noticing this, couldn't help but frown.

He immediately instructed his subordinates, "Go wait at the main gates.

And you, you go to the rear gates. Keep watch on those three."

"Yes, milord."

The two Gods immediately left.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 12, Instant Refining

After passing through the corridor, Linley's group arrived at the main hall on the other side of the third floor of Redbud Castle, where a large number of wares were on display. On this hall, there were clearly far more people present, most in groups of three to five people who walked along each of the sales counters, carefully inspecting each item.

"Boss, look." Bebe pointed at the stairway. "There's nobody at the stairway standing guard. Anyone who wants to come here can. It isn't like the other side, where those violet-robed men stand guard."

Delia laughed. "Bebe, they have their goods on display here. Naturally, they have to show them off to people. But as I see it...although there are many people here looking at the goods, there probably aren't many who are truly buying."

There were signs with words hanging off the walls behind all of the sales counters throughout the third floor.

Linley was very surprised. "Offensive artifacts, defensive artifacts, medicines, materials, training support items, divine sparks..." Clearly, the many different sales counters here in the third floor all had different products for sale.

"Linley, look. That one over there is selling houses." Delia pointed towards a corner of the main hall.

"I've always heard that establishing one's self in Royalwing City is very expensive. Let's take a look and see how expensive the houses here are." Linley was curious. He led Bebe and Delia over.

There were many Deities over here, watching.

"Everyone, you are very lucky. In Royalwing City, there are currently three houses left which have no owners! Everyone, seize your chance. If you miss this opportunity, there won't be another one." Within the sales counter, a violet-robed youth spoke calmly.

"The entire Royalwing City only has three empty houses?" Linley didn't dare believe it.

A nearby onlooker glanced at Linley. "My friend, the houses of Royalwing City were all snatched up and purchased hundreds of millions of years ago. The houses that can be bought now are all houses where the owners have died, resulting in Redbud Castle then selling the houses off again. That's why we don't need to be in a rush to buy. You must understand that Royalwing City has perhaps tens of millions of citizens. In a short period of time, perhaps others will die. Their houses would then be available for purchase, right? But alas, the prices are too expensive. I'll wait for a cheaper house first."

Hearing these words, Linley now understood.

The available houses in Royalwing City were only made available for sale after their original owner died. Houses without owners would return to the ownership of Redbud Castle, who would then continue to sell them!

“That makes sense. Royalwing City, despite banning fighting, has tens of millions of citizens who can’t always be within the city. For example, some Fiends...they have to go out to take missions. If they die, then the houses would return to Redbud City.” Linley only felt puzzled about one thing.

How did Redbud Castle know if a house’s owner was deceased?

“Perhaps they have some techniques akin to binding by blood.” Linley guessed to himself.

While considering this question, Linley, Delia, and Bebe drew near the sales counter to look at the price of these three houses. Upon seeing the listed price, the three of them were terrified!

“What a man-eating price!” Bebe breathed in shock. “Even the cheapest house requires sixty million inkstones!”

Linley was shocked as well. Of the three houses, the most expensive one was nearly three hundred million inkstones, while the second one was around 120 million inkstones. The cheapest one still cost sixty million inkstones.

“Indeed, it is too expensive. Why can’t some more of the original owners of the cheaper houses die?” A nearby Deity also grumbled angrily.

“The cheapest houses in Royalwing City can be bought for just eight million inkstones. However, as soon as those cheap houses appear, they will immediately be snatched up.” A nearby God sighed. “How long will it take before I am able to afford a sixty million inkstone house?"

Linley nodded to himself.

Not all houses were the same. Some were ridiculously expensive, but from the sound of it, the cheaper ones were only eight million or so. It was a matter of luck. After all, everyone wanted those cheap houses. As soon as one appeared, it might be instantly taken.

"Becoming a citizen of Royalwing City truly is difficult." Linley let out a sigh.

He had thought that he was now fairly wealthy, but upon seeing the housing prices, he realized that the Highgod spark he had which was worth seven million inkstones really was nothing at all.

Linley's group of three left the sales counter. After all, they didn't actually want to buy houses. Linley was planning to travel to the distant Bloodridge Continent. How could he settle down in this city?

"Offensive artifacts!"

Linley and the other two walked past the long row of counters on this side. Business here clearly was very brisk, and there were many onlookers as well. But Linley himself was greatly shocked.

"This is considered an offensive artifact?" Linley didn't pay attention to ordinary weapons.

But he had discovered a unique weapon; an arrow!

Linley wouldn't be surprised at the sale of a godly bow, but a single ordinary arrow...this couldn't help but cause Linley to be startled.

"And the price is set at fifty thousand inkstones. What? You have to buy them in units of ten?" Linley couldn't help but shake his head.

The violet-robed salesman, seeing Linley stare at the arrow on the counter while shaking his head, couldn't help but speak out. "This is a godslayer arrow. Generally speaking, if a full God is hit by this arrow, he will definitely die. Even a Highgod, upon being hit by ten arrows, will most likely have his soul dissipate and his spirit shatter!"

"How is that possible?" Bebe stared. "This arrow is just a material attack. How could it so easily kill someone?"

"Material attack?"

The violet-robed salesman snickered. "If it was just an ordinary arrow, how could it be sold here? This arrow has been dipped in a special soul poison developed by a Highgod of the Edicts of Death. Hmph, this is specially meant for dealing with souls."

Hearing this, Linley couldn't help but be intrigued.

Soul poison?

“When I was in the Yulan continent, when I encountered that Grand Warlock, didn’t he have Yale use soul poison to kill me?” Linley had drank that wine, then suffered the attack of the soulsilk poison.

Linley knew long ago that some of the experts who trained in the Edicts of Death were skilled in using soul poison to kill!

That Grand Warlock was only a Demigod.

But now, from the sound of it, this poison was made by a Highgod of the Edicts of Death. Then the power of this poison definitely couldn’t be underestimated. It most likely truly was capable of killing a God in a single strike, and ten for a Highgod was about right as well.

“But although it is powerful, you still have to be able to hit your enemy with it.” Linley understood this principle. Neither a God nor a Highgod would just stand there, letting you hit him at leisure.

However...

There were some people who were skilled in assassination.

In addition, when ten thousand people in an army shot out with bows, anyone, no matter how fast, would most likely be finished.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe continued to look at the various items. They discovered...that there truly were far too many ways to spend money.

Many of the items here had effects that were simply terrifying.

They continued to walk forward.

"Medicines!" Linley walked to a nearby counter. He was shocked. "No matter how badly injured one's soul is, as long as one's soul hasn't completely been shattered and dissipated, it will heal instantly and the spiritual energy will also be completely recovered. This was created with great care by a Highgod who was a master of the Edicts of Life."

Linley stared at the explanation placed atop the crystalline medicine jar. He couldn't help but interested.

When executing soul attacks, the greatest cost was to one's spiritual energy.

But as soon as he saw the price, Linley felt his heart ache in pain.

A single pill...cost a million inkstones!

"Let's go. Stop looking at these." Linley felt his heart clenching. Many items were good, but the prices were simply too terrifying.

After seeing many items, Linley's group left the third floor's main hall. The prices here were simply too terrifying. Linley's group thus returned to the second floor.

The second floor had many people and many items. It even had Golden Soul-Pearls. However, in the Infernal Realm, Golden Soul-Pearls couldn't be considered particularly valuable. Because...

In the Infernal Realm, although there were many Deities, there were even more Saints!

Many races in the Infernal Realm would naturally reach the Saint-level in adulthood. With so many Saints...quite a few of these Saints had their souls used for refining souls into Golden Soul-Pearls.

"A single Golden Soul-Pearl, roughly the same size as the one I previously acquired. The price...a hundred thousand inkstones. Whew. Still pretty expensive." Linley said to himself.

At this time, the violet-robed salesman behind the counter laughed and said, "This Golden Soul-Pearl can be used for strengthening the soul, and it is easily absorbable. It doesn't have to be refined."

"There's another type of gem here. That one over there. It is known as an 'amethyst'! If you absorb all of the energy within it, in terms of the amount of benefit it provides to your soul, it is roughly on par with that of a Golden Soul-Pearl. The price, however, is only ten thousand inkstones." The violet-robed salesman said.

Linley was somewhat startled.

The nearby Bebe spoke out. "Oh? You said the amount of benefit is about the same for nourishing the soul. So why is the difference in price nearly ten times? It's too much."

The violet-robed salesman laughed, "That's because this refining and purifying this amethyst is extremely difficult. A person who isn't an expert in refining will most likely lose 80% of the power the amethyst holds while refining it, leaving only 20% remaining...and the speed is very slow as well. It takes a lot of time. Thus, the price is only ten thousand inkstones."

"Refining and purifying?" Linley had a thought.

Actually, Deities of the Edicts of Death had to spend a great amount of spiritual energy in refining souls or in refining these 'amethysts'.

But Linley was different. He had the Coiling Dragon ring!

"I'll buy one and give it a try. Let's see if the Coiling Dragon ring is capable of refining an amethyst just like how it refines souls." Linley said to himself.

Linley immediately spend ten thousand inkstones to buy an amethyst.

The amethyst was semi-translucent, and it contained a blurry, violet fog within it. It seemed very beautiful. With a flip of his hand, Linley stored the amethyst into his Coiling Dragon ring.

"Crackle..."

In almost the blink of an eye, that amethyst was transformed into a pile of rubble, while at the same time, an enormous amount of golden fog began to swirl about within the Coiling Dragon ring.

The refining had already completed!

Linley's eyes lit up. "Doesn't that mean I can buy amethysts and refine them into Golden Soul-Pearls?" This meant that he buy an amethyst for ten thousand inkstones, and then sell them for seventy thousand inkstones.

This was a profit of 700% to 800%!

He currently had roughly a million inkstones. In but a few cycles, he would then have tens of millions of inkstones.

"Wait. The Coiling Dragon ring only refines it to a golden fog. How would I crystallize them into a golden pearl?" Linley didn't have any idea as to how to cause the golden fog to crystallize.

The golden fog was soul essence. Linley didn't have any means to compress it. There was no way his divine power could interact with this sort of soul essence. His spiritual energy could, but upon the spiritual energy drawing near, it would begin to absorb the golden fog and strengthen his soul.

"Unfortunately, although I have a good method of making money, I don't have any way of condensing the golden fog into a golden pearl." Linley sighed to himself.

The refining, purifying, and condensing of soul essences belonged to a technique of the Edicts of Death.

Linley also wanted to be able to fill the golden fog into a crystal ball.

He trusted that the golden fog stored within a crystal ball could be sold to someone. At worst, the price would be a bit lower than for the Golden Soul-Pearl. He would still be able to make a killing.

But...

"This golden aura...although I control it through the Coiling Dragon ring and I can make it leave the ring, as soon as it does so, it will begin to dissipate. After it leaves the Coiling Dragon ring, I don't have any way of controlling it. Naturally, I won't be able to make it enter a crystal ball." Linley felt very discouraged.

Linley was completely incapable of controlling this golden fog.

He didn't understand the Edicts of Death. Thus, his spiritual energy naturally devoured the soul essences as soon as they touched. Perhaps others might understand the Edicts of Death, but they couldn't possibly control something like the Coiling Dragon ring.

"Forget it. It is already good to be able to strengthen my own soul." Linley didn't care too much.

The purpose of him coming to the Infernal Realm was to grow and to break through.

As for money? He just needed enough to use.

"These amethysts, give me ten of them." Linley said. The more powerful the soul, the faster one would train, and the stronger one's spiritual attacks would be.

Linley naturally wouldn't be too stingy.

"Amethysts?" The violet-robed salesman was very puzzled. It was very hard to refine amethysts. One was enough. Why ten more?

But the violet-robed salesman didn't really care. "Perhaps he's too poor. He'd rather spend time to slowly absorb amethysts rather than buy a Golden Soul-Pearl." But how could he have known that Linley had a Sovereign artifact that was able to instantly refine amethysts and purify the soul essences within?

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 13, Planning to Commit Violence?

After Linley purchased ten amethysts, he left the sales counter, heading towards a distant sales counter. This sales counter was very large, and it had all sorts of items on display. The viewers of the sales counter were quite numerous as well. Many were spending money to buy things.

This place was where defensive artifacts were being sold.

“Linley, you want to buy a defensive artifact?” Delia looked at Linley, puzzled.

“I don’t need it.” Linley laughed as he looked at Delia. “Delia, your defensive armor is only Demigod level. It is too weak. Let’s buy a God-level armor.” Since they were preparing to join the Fiend examination, they had to increase everyone’s strength.

Strength, aside from personal power, also included their divine artifacts.

If they were to participate in the Fiend examination, Linley was worried most about Delia. As for Bebe...when they had left the Yulan Plane, Lord Beirut had given Bebe quite a few treasures. As for himself, he already had a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, albeit slightly damaged.

“Alright.” Delia didn’t refuse. She understood that when she grew stronger, Linley wouldn’t be as worried about her, and she would be able to help him more.

"The prices of these defensive artifacts truly do exceed the prices of offensive artifacts." Linley chuckled, then sighed.

God-level offensive artifacts were just roughly a thousand inkstones, while God-level defensive artifacts were generally five or six thousand inkstones. To Linley's team, this wasn't much at all.

People continually entered and left the main gates of Redbud Castle, but there was one person who stayed right there by the sides of the steps, always watching the main gate.

"Those three really are slow. Isn't it just shopping?" The God cursed softly. "They've never come to Royalwing City. They'll most likely wander about for a long time. They are enjoying themselves inside, while I'm slowly waiting here."

Indeed, Linley's team was very curious.

This Redbud City had many items that expanded Linley's horizons. Naturally, they had to have a good stroll and gain some experience.

The God suddenly saw a human figure. He immediately headed over and said respectfully, "Lord Edmond."

Edmond nodded slightly, then said calmly, "The three still haven't come out?"

"Right. Not yet." The God nodded.

Edmond frowned, then turned to look at the gate. "They've already sold what they came to sell. I imagine they should be coming out from this front main gate." Edmond was in no hurry. He just waited quietly outside.

"It is Lord Edmond."

The other members of the Black Dragon Tribe, when departing Redbud Castle, saw Edmond standing there. Many of them assembled up behind Edmond.

"Mm, here they are." Edmond's eyes lit up.

"That metallic lifeform really is expensive." Delia was sighing.

Linley nodded as well. "Ordinary metallic lifeforms cost millions already, but high level, powerful ones cost tens of millions...those large ones actually cost over a hundred million inkstones. Bebe, your grandpa really is powerful." Linley sighed in praise as he looked towards the nearby Bebe.

"Naturally!" Bebe puffed his chest out proudly.

Lord Beirut's metallic castle was a high level metallic lifeform. The price of such a creature in Redbud Castle was more than a hundred million inkstones.

As they spoke, the three of them walked out of the first main hall, following the tide of people outwards.

"Linley." Suddenly, someone called out at the gateway.

Linley turned to look. It was Daebra.

"Daebra." Linley laughed as he spoke out. "Oh, you sold your things?" Linley said. He noticed that next to Daebra was a large group of people, all of whom belonged to the Black Dragon Tribe.

Daebra laughed. "I was just selling a single God artifact. I heard you went to the third floor. You really are amazing." Daebra's words caused the nearby members of the Black Dragon Tribe to stare jealously at Linley.

In the Infernal Realm, making a fortune was simply too hard.

"Oh?" Linley laughed calmly, carefully inspecting the looks on the faces of the Black Dragon Tribe's members.

Actually, when he went to the third floor to sell items, Linley had already anticipated that he wouldn't be able to avoid the attention of all the members of the Black Dragon Tribe. It was possible that he would be discovered...but so what if he was? After all, he didn't have any plans to return to the Black Dragon Tribe.

"Alright, let's head out." Edmond, standing in front, spoke out as he led his subordinates away.

Edmond didn't even look at Linley.

The group walked a few dozen meters towards the direction of the pillars, moving in a direction that would bring them back out of Royalwing City. But Linley's team took a curved route, heading towards a different direction.

"Linley, where are you going?" Daebra said with surprise.

At the same time, Edmond and many others halted, turning to look.

"Oh, I'm not going back to the Black Dragon Tribe." Linley laughed as he said.

"Not returning to the Black Dragon Tribe?" A gentle voice rang out. Edmond led his subordinates and walked over.

Linley, seeing that it was Edmond who had come, couldn't help but sneer coldly in his heart. "This old fellow. I'm not going to the Black Dragon Tribe, so he, the chief steward of Stirton and a Highgod, immediately came over? Does he think I don't know what he is scheming?"

The distance from here to the front main gate of Redbud Castle was less than a hundred meters. There were many people here. Linley's group, standing there, wasn't noticeable at all.

"Lord Edmond." Linley smiled as he spoke.

"Your name is Linley, right?" Edmond laughed calmly. "Your two friends are both Gods. In our Black Dragon Tribe, they can be considered elite members. It is truly a pity that you are planning to leave the Black Dragon Tribe. Right. I actually have taken a liking to you. I recently lack for subordinates. Would you be willing to follow me?"

Linley remained very modest and courteous. "Thank you, Lord Edmond, for your kindness. Only, it truly isn't necessary. Myself, my wife, and my brother here came to the Black Dragon Tribe only because we had just arrived in the Infernal Realm. However, I still feel gratitude for the care the Black Dragon Tribe has shown me in this period of time."

Edmond couldn't help but be startled.

But seeing the meek smile on Linley's face, he felt a stirring of anger in his heart. "This guy!"

He knew that Linley was carrying a fortune on himself. Even he, Edmond, wouldn't find it so easy to accumulate such wealth. After all, he, Edmond, had fused with a divine spark to become a Highgod. This was why he had always followed Stirton. Stirton made most of the money, while he only made do with leftovers.

"We're leaving now." Linley said with a smile, then turned.

"Swoosh!"

Very suddenly, six Gods appeared in front of Linley.

"You want to leave?" One of the Gods said coldly.

Linley was startled, and then his gaze turned icy.

"F*ck, what, you want to fight?" Bebe's voice suddenly raised in pitch and volume, spreading in every direction. Many of the nearby people who had been moving about turned to look in their direction. Bebe jumped up and shouted out, "Milords of the Redbud Army, these people want to beat us, they want to fight!"

The distance from here to Redbud Castle's gates was less than a hundred meters.

At such a close distance, those bored Redbud Army soldiers milling about at the gates to Redbud Castle naturally could hear Bebe's shout. Although they were sent here to maintain order, normally who would dare cause trouble here? Naturally, they were always very bored. Now, hearing someone call out for them, they actually grew excited.

"Hey, something's happening?" A black-cloaked, muscular man called out hurriedly. "I'll go take a look."

"Brothers, let's all go check it out."

Ten or so Redbud Army soldiers all walked over curiously.

Seeing the Redbud Army soldiers come over, Edmond's face instantly grew ugly to behold.

He was a Highgod, true! But he had only become one through fusing with a divine spark. In the Infernal Realm...there were far too many people that were more powerful than him. The steward of a tribe could perhaps show off his power and authority in that tribe...but in Royalwing City, he wasn't even worth a fart!

"What's going on?" The ten-plus Redbud Army soldiers walked over, their leader shouting, "I heard someone say that someone wants to fight? This is Royalwing City. Who dares to fight!"

The shouts of the oncoming Redbud Army soldiers caused the men of Edmond, who had been so wild and arrogant just moments ago, to instantly no longer dare to act brashly.

"Milords of the Redbud Army, these people belong to my tribe, while I am the leader of this expedition of my tribe to the city. I was just lecturing them. There's nothing else." Edmond explained, while the violet-robed warrior frowned and said, "Oh, all one tribe?"

"Right. They belong to our Black Dragon Tribe." Someone near Edmond hurriedly said.

"Shit, when we joined the tribe, it was said that we can leave whenever we want. What right do you have to forcibly make us go back with you?" Bebe shouted.

"Edmond!" Linley looked straight at him. "I was respectful to you just now, and even addressed you as Lord Edmond. You should have known your place, though. This is Royalwing City, not the Black Dragon Tribe. I'm telling you right now, the three of us are formally withdrawing from your Black Dragon Tribe."

Edmond's face was exceedingly ugly right now.

But with the Redbud Army soldiers nearby, he didn't dare to be arrogant.

"Oh, how interesting." A very handsome, silver-haired, violet-cloaked youth with a single horn laughed. "In the Infernal Realm, although slaughter and warfare is common, everyone has their own freedom. Your tribe can't force someone else to do something, right?"

Edmond's group didn't dare to make a sound.

Bebe bowed deeply towards the Redbud Army soldiers, chortling, "Thank you, milords. Otherwise, this old guy was preparing to use force."

"Don't worry." The violet-robed, silver-haired youth laughed as he spoke. "This is Royalwing City. Royalwing City has Royalwing City's rules. No matter if you are a Demigod or a Highgod, you are not permitted to commit violence. Whoever dares to commit violence...haha, we brothers have been quite bored."

The Redbud Army soldiers looked towards Edmond and the others.

Cold sweat was beading on Edmond's forehead. How could a small tribe like theirs dare to offend the terrifying Redbud Army!

“Milords of the Redbud Army, that isn’t the case. Just now, I simply was unwilling to part from them, so I said a few words to them. I wasn’t planning to stop them. If they want to leave, I’ll naturally accept that. Everyone knows this. Nobody will stop them from leaving.” Edmond said hurriedly.

Hearing this, Linley had to admit; this Edmond really was thick-skinned and shameless!

“Oh, so that’s the case. Good. You can all leave, then.” The silver-haired, violet-robed youth said with a calm laugh.

Edmond and the others let out secret sighs of relief. After bowing, they left after glancing at Linley.

“Threatening me?” Linley glanced sideways at Edmond as well.

This was Royalwing City. Linley had never been concerned about Edmond.

“That old guy. When I think of how terrified that old guy looked just now when the Redbud Army came, I want to laugh. Haha...” Bebe was clearly very self-delighted. Linley and Delia, seeing how Bebe was acting, couldn’t help but begin to laugh as well.

“Let’s go find a residence first.” Linley said.

Delia frowned. "Linley, do you remember? Daeбра said that each stay in Royalwing City cost hundreds of inkstones."

"Let's go take a look first." Linley felt very puzzled as well. If a single night was so expensive, then the situation really was a bit too terrifying.

Linley's group first came to the waiting room of a seemingly luxurious hotel that was fairly close to Redbud Castle. The hotel's waiting room had some decorations which forced even Linley to sigh in praise. The quality of the sculptures here weren't lower than his at all.

"How are the living costs here calculated?" Bebe chattered.

The violet-robed, long-haired, sharp-eared beauty laughed, "Here, each stay costs eight hundred inkstones."

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were shocked upon hearing this.

"As long as you stay here for a year or less, no matter how long you stay, the price for the stay is the same. If, however, you were to stay for a year and a day, you would need to pay 1600 inkstones." The violet-robed, long-haired beauty said with a laugh.

Linley's group let out sighs of relief.

This place was different from the Yulan continent. Hotel fees weren't calculated by the day, they were calculated by the year.

It made sense...

When Deities were training and meditating, they would spend months in seclusion each time.

"Despite that being the case, if the cost for a year is eight hundred inkstones, then ten thousand years would mean they would earn eight million inkstones? And that's just for a single room. This hotel has many rooms in it." Linley was secretly shocked. "The hotel business here really is profitable."

The 'rooms' in every hotel in Royalwing City consisted of a stand-alone residence and courtyard. After all, Deities preferred quiet when training.

"Do the three of you plan to take up residence?" The violet-haired woman said, looking expectantly at Linley's group.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 14, Fiend Castle

Linley, although not a miser, wasn't a spendthrift either. Linley's group left the hotel, then wandered about Royalwing City for quite some time, visiting over ten hotels before choosing a quiet, elegantly designed hotel.

The price of staying here for a year was 210 inkstones.

After paying 210 inkstones, he received a black talisman. Linley's group entered their residence, pushing open the door to their courtyard. In front of them was an elegant residence, with a flower garden taking up a third of the space of their residence.

In the rear was a simple, unadorned, two story building.

Linley and Delia looked at the building, and they couldn't help but feel satisfied.

"Boss, this courtyard is pretty quiet." Bebe chortled. "Boss, I'm going to live upstairs." Bebe hopped directly onto the second floor. Moments later, Bebe flew back down, his lips pursed. "This hotel is so stingy. Aside from the bed and chairs, there's nothing inside."

"This environment is already quite good."

Linley nodded in satisfaction, and then withdrew four azurite slabs, handing two to Delia and two to Bebe. "Bebe, Delia, each of you take two hundred thousand inkstones. In the future, if you need to buy anything, make your own decisions.”

“Heh heh.” Bebe winked, accepting them.

Delia nodded and accepted them as well.

Linley raised his head, looking at the sky. It was currently the afternoon. The blood-red sun still hung high in the air.

“It is still early. It isn’t even dark yet. Royalwing City’s curfew forbids others from being on the streets at midnight. Let’s go out and have a look around.” Linley’s first thought was of the Fiend Castle. “Let’s head straight to the Fiend Castle and see what the Fiend test is all about.”

“Fiend Castle?” Delia and Bebe were both excited.

Without wasting any time, the three of them immediately headed out towards the Fiend Castle!

The ancient Fiend Castle was completely black, especially that enormous carved symbol of the Fiend Castle; that blurry face with that devilish red cyclopean eye. Anyone who saw it would never be able to forget it.

The people who headed to Fiend Castle clearly weren’t as many in number as those who went to Redbud Castle or Blacksand Castle.

However, although the people heading to Fiend Castle were fairly low in number, when they strode on the streets, these people exuded a sort of confidence. The majority of them had Fiend medallions on their chest. Clearly...

They were all Fiends!

The elites of the Infernal Realm!

Linley's group climbed up the stairs, striding into the main hall of the first floor of the Fiend Castle.

"So quiet." Bebe said softly.

The main hall on the first floor of the Fiend Castle was very wide. There were very few people here in the main hall, only a few hundred or so. The few hundred people were spaced out in the wide hall, giving a very sparse feeling. Linley's group immediately saw the 'Fiend Application' counter.

That counter had a jade-haired beauty seated behind it. On the shelf behind her, there were many bottles of wine.

"Yuna [You'na], one cup of Olay [Ou'lei] wine, the red bottle!" A bald, black-armored man placed a piece of azurite on the table.

"Hey, can't you see I'm busy? Wait a second." The jade-haired beauty ignored him, continuing to chat with the black-haired youth in front of her."

"Anji, what do I have to say in order to convince you? Last time, over a thousand people participated in the Fiend trials, and only fifty three succeeded. There were twenty eight others who managed to survive, although they didn't pass the trials. The others, more than nine hundred people, all died! You've participated in two trials, and you were lucky enough to survive twice despite failing. You were lucky twice, but are you going to be so lucky a third time?" The jade-haired women urged frantically.

Linley's group walked over as well.

The black-haired youth said in a low voice, "Yuna, although I know I was lucky the last two times, I don't want to give up. I almost succeeded the last two times. This time, I will definitely succeed."

"Can't you just train for a while longer, increase your strength, then try again?"

Yuna let out a sigh. "I'm responsible for the Fiend applications. I don't know how many people like you I've seen, who want to become Fiends. The chance of death in the Fiend trials is however very high. Generally speaking, only a few dozen in a thousand will succeed, while the total number survivors never number more than a hundred!"

"Anji, go back and train some more. When your power rises to a new level, come again. At that time, I will definitely agree to your registration." Yuna urged.

"Raise my power?" The black haired youth shook his head. "I'm already a God. I have gained insights into three different profound mysteries of the Laws. But I know...if I continue to train, the amount of time it would take me to gain insight into a fourth mystery will be unthinkably long. And so what if I do gain insights? My power won't improve greatly. Only when I become a Highgod will it improve! But that is too far away."

"Can it be that I will be forced to fuse with a divine spark? I am not willing. What's more, I don't have enough money to buy a Highgod spark."

The black-haired youth looked at the jade-haired woman. "Yuna, don't stop me."

"Haha..."

Suddenly, the nearby bald, black-armored man started to laugh loudly, his laughter immediately echoing throughout the quiet main hall. Many Fiends looked towards him, who turned his head to look at his friends. "Brothers, come and take a look. This little fellow managed to stay alive in two Fiend trials in a row. He truly is lucky. But now, he is going to take the trials for a third time. Haha..."

"Oh, he survived twice in a row?" Quite a few people came over, all of whom had Fiend medallions on their chest.

"Lucky enough to survive twice, and he wants to try again? Is he tired of living?"

These Fiends all laughed calmly as they walked over.

The black-haired man lowered his head, frowning. His entire body quivered slightly.

This was an insult!

"Yuna." The bald, black-armored warrior laughed loudly. "This little fellow wants to die, so let him. Why urge him otherwise? Let him attend the trials and die."

"Shut your mouth, Crompton [Ke'lang'pu'dun]!" Yuna stared at him while barking.

The bald, black-armored warrior was startled, and then enraged. "Yuna, how dare you speak to me in such a way!"

"What? Can't I?" Yuna's chin lifted up slightly, and she stared coldly at the bald black-armored warrior. "Crompton, I insist on talking to you in such a way. What about it?"

"Motherf*cker!" Crompton, enraged, slapped the table, staring at Yuna with a pair of utterly reddened eyes.

Yuna was frightened, but then she summoned her courage and said strongly, "Crompton, what do you think you are doing? This is the Fiend Castle!" Yuna knew that Crompton was a fairly powerful Fiend who was at a Highgod level of power.

"Crompton!" Instantly, some other Fiends walked over and rebuked him, "Stop making trouble."

These Fiends whom Crompton had called over were all Crompton's friends.

"Hmph." Crompton snorted coldly, but he also knew that in Royalwing City, he couldn't commit acts of violence. All he could do was vent.

"Yuna, Crompton is just hot-tempered. Right, let's get a bottle of Olay. Hurry." A nearby man with long red hair handed the piece of azurite on the counter to Yuna, who accepted the chance to back down from this confrontation. Accepting the azurite, she withdrew a bottle of wine and handed it to them.

At this time, the black-haired youth, Anji, said softly, "Yuna, sorry."

Yuna looked at him, shaking her head and smiling.

"I know my training speed." The black-haired youth looked at Yuna. "It took me a hundred thousand years to master these three types of profound mysteries. In the next hundred thousand years, there is no way my power will increase significantly. My remaining money is only enough to permit me to stay in Royalwing City for a few more decades only. I don't have any more time!"

Yuna glanced at him.

"Fine." In the end, Yuna acquiesced.

"Might I ask, what are the requirements to apply to be a Fiend?" A voice rang out. Linley and the other two walked to the counter.

Yuna glanced at him, and then immediately held her head in her hands. "Good heavens. First we have this God who failed twice but was lucky enough to survive, yet still wants to take the trials again. That was already crazy enough. Don't tell me that we now have a Demigod who wants to participate the Fiend trials."

"Hey, my Boss asked you a question." Bebe stared at her.

Yuna looked at Bebe. She couldn't help but feel puzzled, saying in surprise, "He...is your Boss?" Yuna could tell that Bebe was a God, while Linley was only a Demigod.

"What, something wrong with that?" Bebe asked her in response.

Yuna couldn't help but feel stunned.

The nearby Delia laughed and continued, "Miss Yuna, can you tell us what requirements there are for the Fiend trials?"

Yuna said, "The Fiend trials application doesn't have any other requirements; as long as you pay ten thousand inkstones, you can participate in the trials. Once you pass, you will be a One Star Fiend. However...although there aren't any hard and fast rules for participating in the Fiend trials...sir, I recommend you come participate after reaching the God level. The Demigod level, it is...it is too dangerous." Looking at Linley, Yuna could only laugh awkwardly.

Yuna spoke the truth.

Linley understood this, because he had heard their earlier conversation.

A thousand people participated in the trials, but only fifty three had succeeded, while less than a hundred had survived in total. This death rate was terrifying. In addition, those who participated should all have been at the God level. One could imagine how terrifyingly dangerous it was.

Crompton had gone to another corner of the main hall with his friends to drink wine. He was currently still extremely angry.

"Motherf*cking filthy whore!" Crompton's heart was filled with rage, and he would occasionally glare at Yuna.

"Huh?" Crompton suddenly paused. "Brothers, look...that brown-haired youth is just a Demigod, right?"

The others were startled as well, all taking a closer look."

"Hey, it really is a Demigod." Those people were all astonished.

"You aren't planning to apply for the Fiend trials now, are you?" Yuna looked at Linley's group.

"No rush. In a while, I'll return." Linley said with a calm laugh. Linley now knew how dangerous the Fiend trials were. Even if it was just for Delia and Bebe's sakes, he couldn't put himself in danger. In addition, he was more than halfway through gaining insights into the Profound Mysteries of the Essence of the Earth.

Even if he only slowly completed the fusion process, it would only take a few dozen years.

No rush.

As Linley's group was preparing to leave, suddenly, a voice rang out...

"In a while? Haha..." This sound was extremely ear-piercing.

Linley turned and saw that the leader of a group walking over was that Crompton. Crompton snickered, a contemptuous look in his eyes as he looked at Linley. "Haha, you, a Demigod, want to take the Fiend trials?" Crompton's voice was extremely loud.

The hundreds of people in the main hall all turned to look, and quite a few walked over.

"A Demigod is taking the Fiend trials? Have I heard wrongly?" Some people were puzzled as to what was going on.

"I've heard of Demigods wanting to take the Fiend trials, but that was something from I don't know how many years ago. I've never personally witnessed it." A red-haired man, carrying a cup of wine, walked over.

These people all turned to look at Linley.

"Is it him? The one who is taking the Fiend trials?" They could tell that the only person present at the Demigod level was Linley.

"Right, it's this little fellow." Crompton immediately laughed.

Linley's face became exceedingly ugly to behold. Delia and Bebe were also enraged.

"Not just this little brown-haired kid. This black-haired kid. He failed twice in a row in the Fiend trials, but he was incredibly lucky and managed to survive. Now, he wants to try again." Crompton laughed. "There are an extraordinary number of fools here today. Do they think... that with their power, they can become Fiends? What do they take Fiends for? What a joke!"

The black-haired man was so angry, he clenched his hands into fists as he stared at Crompton.

Linley's face was sunken as well.

"F*ck your mother, you bastard!" Bebe bellowed, but Linley immediately grabbed Bebe. "Bebe, don't be rash. Don't get angry with trash like this. It isn't worth it!" Linley said. Linley knew that he couldn't let Bebe commit any acts of violence; if he committed any acts of violence in Royalwing City, he would be finished.

The face of Crompton, who had been laughing heartily, suddenly froze. He turned to look at Linley.

"Hey, Crompton, did you hear that? That Demigod called you trash." Some people nearby fanned the flames.

"What did you say?" Crompton's face was sinister.

"You want me to say it again?" Linley had a look on his face, as though he didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. "I really didn't expect that there were people in this world who wanted to be cursed out. Fine then, I'll say it again. I said that you..." Linley's face grew cold as he stared at Crompton. "Are trash!"

"Let's go!" Linley pulled Bebe and Delia by the hands, completely ignoring Crompton as he began heading for the outside.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 15, Royalwing Fiend

“Stop right there!” An explosive shout.

But Linley’s group completely ignored him, continuing to move forward.

“There are overbearing jerks everywhere. It’s best not to get involved with this sort of person.” Delia used her divine sense to speak to Linley.

“I understand.” Linley didn’t want to keep getting involved with this Crompton either. He wanted to leave the Fiend Castle immediately.

He wanted to leave, but the man wouldn’t let him.

“Swish!”

Crompton’s figure suddenly appeared in front of Linley, blocking Linley’s path.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe all had unpleasant looks on their faces, especially Bebe. If it hadn’t been for the fact that Linley had used their spiritual link to yell at him, Bebe would have exploded already.

“Crompton, they just called you trash. How come you aren’t doing anything about it?” The people nearby delighted in causing some chaos. While some spoke and laughed on one side, others mocked and satirized on the other, causing Crompton’s face to become even uglier.

"These guys!" Behind the counter, Yuna felt a hint of worry.

The nearby Fiends were either toying with their wineglasses or snickering to each other. They were all watching this like it was great sport...Crompton, within their circle of friends, actually had a rather low status. This was because Crompton had become a Highgod through fusing with a divine spark.

Although he was a Highgod, as he had fused with a divine spark, he hadn't fused any of the profound mysteries, and so was the weakest type of Highgod possible.

After all these years, he remained a mere Three Star Fiend.

Generally speaking, Highgods were capable of becoming Four Star Fiends. He was a Three Star Fiend...and this alone made him a target of mockery. Crompton was weak in power; naturally he didn't dare to be arrogant in front of his friends. Thus, his long-suppressed anger would naturally occasionally be let loose and vented on some people weaker than him.

Mocking the weak was something Crompton often did.

"You called me trash!"

Crompton stared at Linley, his eyes faintly red. His breathing was harsh and ragged, as though he was an explosively angry bull.

His own friends mocking him was one thing, but just because he said a few words, this Demigod, this Demigod actually trash-talked him back! Of course Crompton was furious!

"You, a Demigod, a despicable little fellow, dare to insult me." Crompton was so furious, he wanted to attack, but as he thought of the prohibitions of Royalwing City, he remembered how terrifying those penalties were...if he were to attack, the repercussions would be beyond his ability to tolerate.

"Enough."

Suddenly, the long silver-haired Fiend who had been seated in the distance said calmly, "Crompton, forget it. You acted incorrectly as well. Stop obsessing over this matter."

"Me, incorrectly?!" Crompton stared, pointing at Linley, then at the black-haired youth. "Look at the two of them. One is just a Demigod, while the other...he failed the Fiend trials twice, but was lucky enough to survive. This sort of spineless wimp still wants to try to take the Fiend trial. You tell me, why can't I say a few things about them?"

The black-haired youth, Anji, had been suppressing his anger this entire time.

He had thought that Crompton would just say a word or two then stop. Who would have imagined that Crompton would continue nonstop, and even pointed at him while calling him a 'spineless wimp'?

"This is Royalwing City. What have I to fear?" The black-haired youth ground his teeth.

"Spineless wimp?" The black-haired youth raised his head, staring at Crompton. "You called me a spineless wimp?"

"If you aren't a spineless wimp, who is?" Crompton didn't give a damn about Anji, his eyes filled with disdain.

The black-haired youth, Anji, growled in a voice that was somewhat shaking, "You call me a spineless wimp? Then I would like to ask you, if you failed the Fiend trials twice and nearly died twice, would you have the courage to participate in a third Fiend trial? Would you dare?"

Crompton was stunned.

Would he dare?

He wouldn't dare!

"That isn't courage, that's idiocy." Crompton was very unhappy with the way this black-haired youth was looking at him. "And this fellow, this idiot. He's a Demigod, but he wants to take part in the Fiend trials." Crompton turned to look at Linley again.

"Bebe, Delia, let's go."

Linley frowned, but he didn't want to continue wasting time with this sort of person. He knew...that right now, Crompton had a belly full of anger, yet couldn't attack. All he could do was vent through his words.

"My friends, just watch. I am willing to bet that if this guy takes part in the Fiend trials, he will definitely die." Crompton continued to talk, while the friends next to him snorted, "Why bet? If a Demigod takes part in the Fiend trials, of course he will die. Everyone knows this."

"Boss, one day, I will make that damn baldy pay." Bebe said mentally.

"Don't pay him any mind." Linley said calmly. Suddenly, Linley stared in shock towards the outside of the Fiend Castle. From the distant horizon, he saw several blurs flash through the sky towards the gates of the Fiend Castle, at a speed that was so fast that people would be astonished to even hear of it. The most important thing was...

They dared to fly!

"Flying in Royalwing City? How is it that they dare to do this?" Linley was stunned.

After having been in Royalwing City for some time, they had seen many people in Royalwing City and many Highgods as well. However, no one dared to fly. Everyone walked on the ground. They might use some techniques to allow themselves to walk faster, but...everyone still walked on the ground.

The four figures who flew down to the gates of the castle entered the main hall of the Fiend Castle, one person walking in front, three people coming from behind.

The leader had slightly curly, long golden hair. He wore a long, golden cloak. The strange thing was, his eyebrows were white, while his pupils were golden.

White eyebrows, golden pupils!

Just by standing there, he gave off a sort of fierce aura. After striding into the main hall of the Fiend Castle, the golden-haired middle-aged man swept everyone with his gaze. Everyone whose gaze he fell across felt their souls shudder. An absolute expert!

Crompton was facing Linley and Anji, so he naturally didn't notice the newcomer. He was still self-delightedly chattering, "Not just this brown-haired boy; that Anji as well. If they participate in the Fiend trials, they will definitely die."

Many people in the Fiend Castle, however, had noticed the newcomers. Immediately, ten of them, Yuna included, immediately bowed and said respectfully, "Lord Governor!"

Lord Governor?

Hearing this, Linley and the other two were shocked as well.

The laughing Crompton, hearing these words, was greatly shocked. He immediately turned. Seeing that white-eyebrowed, golden-pupiled man, he had no idea who this person was. But he had heard others call out

‘Lord Governor’.

“My respects to the Lord Governor.” Everyone who had understood immediately bowed.

“My respects to the Lord Governor.” Only now did Crompton understand as well, and he hurriedly bowed.

At the same time, the eyes of these Fiends were shining. They snuck glances out of the corner of their eyes at this middle-aged man with white eyebrows and golden pupils. Was this person the legendary Governor of Royalwing City?

The pride of the entire Royalwing City, the Seven Star Fiend, Lord Royalwing?

Fiends were divided into seven levels. The highest level ‘Seven Star Fiends’ were, without question, amongst the most powerful experts in all of the Infernal Realm. Every single Seven Star Fiend had their own unique moniker. This one was the Royalwing Fiend; his moniker was ‘Royalwing’.

The fame of the Fiend known as ‘Royalwing’ had long ago spread across the entire Infernal Realm. Perhaps he wasn’t as famous as the likes of ‘Bloodviolet’ and ‘Silvermoon’, who had become famous through slaughter, but in terms of power, as Seven Star Fiends, there wasn’t a big difference between them.

“Seven Star Fiend!”

Anji looked excitedly at this person in front of him. He dreamed of one day also becoming an exalted Seven Star Fiend.

"How terrifying. Definitely not any weaker than Bluefire." When Linley saw Royalwing, in his heart, for some reason, he had a feeling that he never had before...that a person could, just with a glance, cause his soul to shudder. Such power was utterly breathtaking.

The white-eyebrowed, golden-pupiled Royalwing glanced sideways at Crompton. "You said just now that others who participate in the Fiend trials would definitely die?"

Crompton's entire body was trembling.

None of the surrounding Fiends dared to make a sound. Crompton, terrified, hurriedly said, "Lord Governor, I, I was just saying that this brown-haired kid and that black-haired kid at the counter, if they participate, they will definitely die." As he said this, Crompton didn't have any conviction in his voice.

"Oh? Why do you say that?" Royalwing seemed to be intrigued.

"This, this brown-haired kid is just a Demigod. If a Demigod takes part in the Fiend trials, he will definitely die." Crompton had no idea that Seven Star Fiends were so terrifying. Royalwing's gaze alone was causing his heart to quaver.

They were both Highgods, but the difference between them was enormous.

"Oh, a Demigod is going to participate in the Fiend trials?" Royalwing nodded slightly. "And the other one?"

"The black-haired kid has already tried twice, twice in a row to take the Fiend trials, but failed both times. He was lucky enough to preserve his life, but he wants to participate in the Fiend trials again..." Crompton said, then no longer dared to make a sound.

But Royalwing only gave the black-haired kid, 'Anji', an approving glance.

And then, he turned his gaze to Crompton. "What is your name?"

"Crompton." Crompton stuttered.

"You are a Highgod, but you became one through fusing with a divine spark." Royalwing laughed calmly.

"Yes." Crompton hurriedly nodded.

Royalwing continued, "If my senses are correct, you should only be a Three Star Fiend!" From the surface, the medallions of all Fiends, be they one star or seven star, were identical and generally couldn't be distinguished from one another. One could only tell the difference through using certain special appraisal methods.

Royalwing could tell at a single glance. This was indeed astonishing.

"Yes, yes I'm a Three Star Fiend." Crompton nodded.

"A Highgod who is only a Three Star Fiend. Low ranked." Royalwing said calmly.

Crompton felt incredibly ashamed. It was indeed very embarrassing for a Highgod to be a Three Star Fiend. How could he not be ashamed, with Lord Royalwing pointing it out?

"This black-haired kid has failed twice, but still doesn't give up. Although he's a bit rash, his spirit and vigor is quite admirable...if you were able to learn to have that sort of mindset, you would have reached the four star level long ago." Royalwing said calmly. Crompton could only make a sound of acknowledgment.

Even if Lord Royalwing was to curse him out, all he would be able to do was accept it.

Royalwing then turned and walked towards Linley. Laughing calmly, he said, "You plan to participate in the Fiend trials?"

Linley hadn't expected that this Royalwing could come speak to him. The man was a Seven Star Fiend, the governor of Royalwing City!

"I just came to take a look today. I plan to participate in the Fiend trials a few decades from now." Linley replied respectfully.

"A few decades?" Royalwing laughed calmly, then said, "Young fellow, it isn't a shameful thing for a Demigod to want to participate in the Fiend trials. In the past, when I was a Demigod, I participated in the Fiend trials myself."

Many of the nearby Fiends immediately perked up and began to listen carefully. They had never heard that Lord Royalwing had done such a thing.

However...Royalwing City had been built countless years ago. One could imagine how long Royalwing had been training for.

Surprised, Linley raised his head to glance towards Royalwing.

"But of course, I failed. Fortunately, I was able to stay alive, and then after I reached the God level, I tried the Fiend trials again." Royalwing said with a calm laugh. "Young fellow, it's best if you wait to reach the God level first before taking part in the Fiend trials. The Fiend trials are at the difficulty of a one star mission. Generally speaking, even full Gods have to expend a tremendous amount of effort to complete such missions. A Demigod...the chances of completing such a mission is too low, too low!"

Linley felt gratitude in his heart for this Lord Royalwing who stood in front of him.

At least he was giving him advice.

Lord Royalwing, despite possessing a noble, lofty status, was smiling and gently remonstrating with him. How could Linley not feel grateful?

Royalwing then took a long look at Linley, before turning and leading his three subordinates towards the stairs. After Lord Royalwing left, the entire main hall of the Fiend Castle exploded into a hubbub of noise. All of the Fiends were incredibly excited.

“That was Lord Royalwing! The expert I worship!”

Many Fiends were extremely excited as they discussed Lord Royalwing. They no longer discussed Linley and Anji. After all, Linley and Anji were small matters to begin with.

At the top of the Fiend Castle.

“Today was truly intriguing. That brown-haired kid actually had a hint of the aura of the Four Divine Beast clans about him.” Royalwing sighed.

“The Four Divine Beast clans? Milord, don’t they come from the Indigo Prefecture of the Bloodridge Continent? How is it that they have appeared in our place?” One of Royalwing’s three subordinates said.

Royalwing laughed calmly, “The Four Divine Beast clans are a very widespread clan. Their descendants are extremely numerous. It isn’t a big deal for one of their members to appear here.” Royalwing only felt somewhat intrigued. After all, a mere descendant of the Four Divine Beast clans wasn’t worthy of his actual concern.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 16, The Full God Level!

Linley's group of three left the Fiend Castle, returning to their own residence.

"Hmph!" Bebe threw his grass hat onto the table, furiously saying, "I really have to hold my temper here in the Infernal Realm. That foul baldy doesn't dare to offend powerful people, so he comes to mock us instead. If we were outside the city, even if it cost me my life, I'd take him on."

Delia pursed her lips with a laugh. "Take him on? Bebe, that baldy is a Highgod. Will you be able to take him on?"

"So what if he's a Highgod?" Bebe raised his head, but then he lowered his head again. "Oh, um, a Highgod..."

Seeing Bebe act this way, Linley and Delia both began to laugh.

"Grandpa...ugh. He has Highgod sparks, but he forbade me from using them. He wants me to break through on my own. Otherwise, I would've become a Highgod long ago." Bebe looked towards Linley. "Enough about this. Boss, when we will take the Fiend trials? A few decades in the future?"

Linley nodded.

"I'm not confident right now in my ability to pass the Fiend trials. No rush. In a few decades, I will definitely be able to reach the God level in the Laws of the Earth. By then, our chances of success will be significant.” Linley couldn’t help but think of his Elemental Laws of the Wind.

Linley had never dared to slack off in his training of the Elemental Laws of the Wind.

However, up till now, Linley still had only a partial understanding of the ‘Fast’ and ‘Slow’ profound mysteries.

“I’ve mastered the Throbbing Pulse of the World long ago, and the Essence of the Earth is one of the simplest profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth. Naturally, the speed of fusing them is rather fast. But the Profound Truths of Velocity requires me to simultaneously gain insights into these two different profound mysteries while fusing them. The speed is much slower.”

Linley sighed to himself.

If he himself was able to reach the God level in both the Laws of the Wind and the Laws of the Earth, his power would naturally increase greatly.

“Just a few decades. No rush.” Bebe chortled. “There’s no danger in Royalwing City anyhow, and it is so huge. I have plenty of places to stroll about now. Oh, right. Boss. In the Black Dragon Tribe, I often heard people praise the delicacies of Royalwing City. Shall we go for a taste tomorrow?”

With regards to delicacies, Linley was somewhat eager as well.

The delicacies of the Infernal Realm were made using extremely precious ingredients and by genuine maestros. The quality naturally was high.

"Fine. We'll go for a taste tomorrow."

An occasional splurge was necessary.

Royalwing City. At the doorway to a restaurant.

"This place is pretty good." Linley's group looked at the exterior decorations of this restaurant. Satisfied, they pushed the door open and went in. When Linley's group entered, immediately the waiters of the hotel came in. Bebe glanced at the waiter, then used his divine sense to speak to Linley. "Boss, this waiter is a God."

In his heart, Linley felt this was ridiculous.

A God, waiting on him?

But in Royalwing City, Gods were indeed commonly seen. It wasn't too absurd for a waiter to be a God.

"Our three guests, please follow me." The waiter had a smile on his face as he led Linley's group forward.

"Drip, drip."

The restaurant had a miniature artificial mountain and spring waters. The spring water gurgled forward, its flows separating the restaurant into multiple areas.

Linley's group was taken to one part of the restaurant, where they sat down. With a flip of his hand, the waiter retrieved a menu containing a list of delicacies. Smiling, he put it on the table. "After you have ordered your dishes, please just call for me."

After speaking, the waiter retreated to another corner.

"I've never seen the prices of dishes in the Infernal Realm before." Bebe excitedly flipped open the menu.

Linley was somewhat curious as well.

"Wow, it really is expensive." Bebe continuously flipped through the pages of the menu. "Boss, the cheapest dish I've found still costs twenty inkstones." As he spoke, Bebe stared with wide eyes, still reading the menu. "The introductions to each dish are quite detailed. It clearly explains the uniqueness of every single dish. Oh, this dish actually costs seven hundred inkstones. So expensive."

After reading it all, Bebe handed it over to Linley and Delia, a mocking smile on his face.

Linley and Delia began to read the menu together and the dishes within.

"Hey, Linley, look. This dish is made from the liver of a Hellfire Phoenix. It costs thirty inkstones. The price isn't too extravagant." Delia pointed at a dish.

Linley flipped through the menu as well, and he couldn't help but sigh.

"As long as you have money, you can eat any sort of Saint-level magical beast or even Deity-level magical beasts, even those from other planes." Linley, seeing the detailed descriptions of each dish, couldn't help but sigh. "Delia, you and Bebe pick. I'll eat whatever."

They ended up ordering six dishes.

"Bebe, you only picked the expensive ones." Linley began to laugh.

The six dishes came to a total price of 215 inkstones. It must be understood that in the Infernal Realm, a Demigod artifact was worth less than ten inkstones, while a Demigod spark was less than a hundred inkstones. But these six dishes alone cost a total of 215 inkstones.

Fortunately, the total networth of the three of them was in excess of several million, so they naturally wouldn't care too much about this sum.

"These two dishes will definitely take a bit longer, especially this one. The slow roasting alone will take six hours." The waiter smiled as he explained.

"Understood." Linley nodded.

When ordering food, there were explanations beneath each of the dishes. After all, Linley's group wasn't in a rush. They could sit there and wait an entire day if necessary.

"Boss, life for people with money in the Infernal Realm is pretty good." Bebe sighed. "When we were back in our homeland, how could we possibly eat food like this?" Bebe currently felt that he was in a state of bliss. He loved to eat.

Linley looked outside the window.

The metallic window of the restaurant was translucent. One could see everything going on outside.

"These cities are the only safe zones in the entire Infernal Realm." Linley said to himself. "In Royalwing City, we can relax and sit here quietly while enjoying fine food. But if we were outside the city, every moment would be dangerous, and perhaps we might lose our lives."

The enormous Nightblaze Prefecture stretched to a circumference of a billion kilometers.

But there were only ten cities.

One could tell from this that in the Infernal Zone, almost all the experts lived a life of near-constant danger. Only an extremely small number were able to live lives of comfort.

“Even if you want to live a comfortable life, you still need an enormous sum of money to accomplish it.” Linley understood that while Royalwing City was very comfortable, the amount of money they were spending was astonishing as well.

The dishes came, and Linley’s group began to enjoy these wondrous delicacies.

“Mm!” As Bebe ate, his eyes began to grow lidded in enjoyment.

Delia and Linley also had the feeling that eating these delicacies was indeed a sort of absolute enjoyment.

“Whew.” Bebe said with a sour look on his face, “Boss, after eating this food, in the future, I won’t be able to swallow the food of our homeland. Man, this is simply too delicious. This is absolutely one of the best ways one can enjoy one’s self.” Bebe continued to eat as he spoke, while praising the food nonstop.

Linley couldn’t help but laugh.

“Linley.” Delia nudged Linley gently

“Huh?” Puzzled, Linley looked over. Delia said softly, “Linley, look outside the window.”

Linley immediately looked outside the window. He saw many people clustered outside on the streets, amongst which included some who were looking into the restaurant with a hint of envy in their eyes.

"This is very normal. There are many people there who just entered Royalwing City." Linley said softly. "Delia, this is much like how, when we first arrived at Royalwing City and saw these places for the first time, we also looked everywhere with curiosity and anticipation, right?"

The Infernal Realm was a very brutal place.

If you had money, you could enjoy all sorts of delicacies.

But in the Infernal Realm, most people were struggling to survive.

But of course, the worst off were the Saints. Many Saints had come from material planes to the Infernal Realm, but only after they arrived did they discover that they were the lowest rungs in this place. Their lives could be taken from them at any moment...what they wanted was to acquire a Demigod spark.

But a Demigod spark wasn't even as costly as the table of food in front of Linley.

"Big brother, congratulations on becoming a Fiend. Today, the two of us have to have a good celebration." From behind Linley, a voice rang out. Upon hearing the word 'Fiend', Linley's couldn't help but listen carefully.

"Haha, this time it was really dangerous. Fortunately, I'm skilled in the Elemental Laws of the Wind." The thick, deep voice rang out. "Only, several of my dear friends failed. Alas...before this, we were saying that we would all succeed and all celebrate together." As the man spoke, his voice lowered.

Upon hearing this, the mood at Linley's table dropped as well.

The Fiend trials were very brutal.

"Delia, in the next few decades, you need to focus on training in the Elemental Laws of the Wind. When the time comes, if anything dangerous appears, at least you'll have a better chance of staying alive." Linley was worried about Delia. Once he became a God, the weakest of the three would be Delia.

"Right." Delia nodded gently.

As for Bebe's power, Linley actually felt rather confident in his heart.

"Fortunately, Delia has learned the profound mysteries involving the 'doppelgangers'." Nieff, who had tried to assassinate Linley, utilized the doppelganger technique.

Time flowed on. Linley, Delia, and Bebe lived a quiet life in Royalwing City. In the blink of an eye, thirty two years passed. Linley's training had reached the final step long ago, and he was about to break through and reach mastery at any moment.

Within the inner courtyard.

Bebe was wearing his straw hat, a sour look on his face as he mumbled,

“Boss said he reached a bottleneck two years ago, and he’s been in closed-door training ever since, not coming out. It has been two years... didn’t he say that the Profound Mysteries of the Essence of the Earth is the simplest profound mystery of the Laws of the Earth? But he hasn’t broken through after spending two years.”

It actually wasn’t too hard to gain insights into the Profound Mysteries of the Essence of the Earth.

But what Linley was doing was simultaneously gaining insights into the Essence of the Earth while fusing it with another profound mystery.

“Boss being in training is one thing, but Delia is by his side training as well. I’m bored to death.” Bebe once again let out a long sigh. With a flip of his hand, Bebe retrieved a God spark, then tossed it into his mouth and swallowed it.

“As for Grandpa Beirut, ugh. He gave me a whole sack full of divine sparks and told me to eat them all. But digesting these divine sparks is so slow.”

Bebe let out another sigh.

“So many divine sparks. How many years will it take me to eat them all? Right, once Boss is out of money, I’ll sell some of them off,” Bebe mumbled to himself.

But suddenly...

"Rumble..."

A surge of unique energy ripples appeared, as the natural Laws descended upon the room where Linley was living in. This happened very commonly in the Infernal Realm, so nobody paid any attention. But this... was a huge source of joy for Bebe.

"Boss finally broke through?"

Bebe rejoiced as he charged towards Linley's room.

"Creak!" Bebe pushed the door open.

Delia, within the room, saw Bebe and immediately used her eyes to tell Bebe not to make any sound. Bebe hurriedly nodded. Holding his breath, he raised his head to look at Linley, who was enfolded by the unique natural Laws and hovering in mid-air already.

Linley's eyes were shut. Suddenly...

Linley's earth-type Demigod spark seemed to have become immaterial. It came out from Linley's forehead, then floated about Linley's head. A large amount of earth elemental essence swirled around that divine spark. Under the control of the natural Laws, Linley's divine spark slowly began to transform...

Transform from a Demigod spark to a God spark!

The earth elemental essences disappeared, and that divine spark which emanated an earthen light clearly had a much more powerful aura now.

"Rumble..."

The earthen yellow divine spark slowly revolved, then re-entered Linley's body.

Moments later...

"The natural Laws have vanished. Why hasn't the Boss opened his eyes yet? What's he doing?" Bebe was somewhat unable to wait any longer. He couldn't help but speak. Delia just stared at him, then said through her divine sense, "Bebe, don't make any sound."

Linley, hearing Bebe's words, opened his eyes and laughed as he looked at Bebe. "I just reached the God level, so I wanted to sense what about myself has changed, that's all."

At this moment, Linley had already completely fused the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Essence of the Earth, entering the full God level!

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 17, Profound Mysteries Fused, Power Greatly Strengthened

“When breaking through from the Demigod level to the God level, the descent of the natural Laws which surrounded my soul lasted only a short while, but the transformation of my soul was comparable in effect to me absorbing those eleven amethysts.” Linley was absolutely amazed.

Over the past thirty two years, those eleven amethysts that he had purchased had been completely absorbed long ago.

Linley’s spirit was now incomparably more powerful than it had been in the past. After becoming a God and having his soul transformed yet again, the effect was actually superior to absorbing soul essences.

“Delia, have you finished absorbing those two Golden Soul-Pearls?” Linley looked at Delia.

Linley had Delia go buy two Golden Soul-Pearls to strengthen her soul as well. That way, she would find it easier to resist the soul attacks of others. That time, Delia hadn’t just purchased two Golden Soul-Pearls; she had also purchased an amethyst.

“I’ve completely absorbed the Golden Soul-Pearls, but absorbing that amethyst truly is slow.” Delia sighed. “No wonder there are so many who are willing to buy Golden Soul-Pearls but so few who buy amethysts.”

“Boss, when are we going to the Fiend trials?” Bebe urged frantically.

Bebe had been waiting for this day for a long time.

"When?" Linley looked at the sky, then laughed. "No rush. It isn't even noon yet. Let's go have a meal at a restaurant to celebrate. After eating, we can go to the Fiend Castle."

"Restaurant?" Bebe's eyes lit up.

After Linley's group finished and left the restaurant, it was already near nightfall. However, the Fiend Castle was open at night as well. Linley's group immediately went to the Fiend Castle. Upon reaching the Fiend Castle, they saw that there were actually quite a few people here at the Fiend Castle.

They strode into the first floor's main hall of the Fiend Castle.

"A familiar face." Linley immediately saw Yuna behind the counter, and the three of them walked over.

"Miss Yuna, I want to participate in the Fiend trials." Linley said.

Yuna lifted her head up to look at them, and then her eyes suddenly widened as she started to laugh. "It is you three?" Linley had left a very deep impression in Yuna. After all, on that day, even the Lord Governor, Lord Royalwing, had made an appearance. Yuna naturally remembered that day very clearly.

"Oh, you reached the God level." Yuna glanced at Linley in surprise.

"Were you already at the verge of a breakthrough, the last time you came?" Yuna laughed.

She wasn't too surprised. As she saw it, last time Linley should have been stuck at the bottleneck for Demigods. From the Demigod level to the God level, a breakthrough could be very fast or very slow.

Linley only chuckled. "Help the three of us register for the Fiend trials, please."

Yuna looked at Linley's group then nodded. "Fine. You know the rules. Ten thousand inkstones per person. Thirty thousand for three." Yuna laughed as she stretched her hand out, and with a flip of his hand, Linley retrieved three of those long azurites.

Accepting the three long azurites, Yuna withdrew three medallions with a devilish cyclopean eye design, handing them to Linley's group.

"What are these?" Bebe looked curiously at the image as he asked.

"This is the proof that you are qualified to participate in the Fiend trials." Yuna laughed. "Right, tell me where you are living. I'll record it down."

"Miss Yuna, you haven't even told us what the mission is. Why do you want our address?" Linley didn't understand.

Yuna shook her head. "The mission for a Fiend trial will only be explained clearly when you actually participate in it. Right now...nobody knows. Even the exact time of the Fiend trial is uncertain. This is because generally speaking, only when the numbers are filled up will a Fiend trial begin."

"Fill up the numbers?" Linley began to understand.

Only when the number of participants reached a certain number would a Fiend trial begin.

They couldn't be certain of who would come to register, so naturally, there was no way to ascertain the exact time the trials would start.

"Still have to wait? We won't wait another few decades, will we?" Bebe said hurriedly.

"Of course not. Actually, just two days ago, a group of people went to take the Fiend trials. Only, the results were as cruel as ever. Less than a hundred succeeded. Too many died." Yuna let out a sigh. "Oh. Don't be in a hurry. Roughly in about a month or so, the numbers will be filled up."

One month? Linley's group was in no rush.

"After the numbers are filled up for the Fiend trials and the mission has been selected, the employees of the Fiend Castle will notify you at your residence. Thus, you need to leave behind your address." Yuna laughed.

Linley's group understood. They immediately recorded their address.

"Hey, beautiful Miss Yuna." Bebe chortled. "I'd like to ask, last time, that fellow named Anji, who failed twice in a row but still wanted to participate in a third Fiend trial. Did he succeed or fail in the last Fiend trial?"

Bebe's question caused Linley and Delia to look at Yuna as well.

"Anji?"

Yuna began to laugh. "His luck really is not bad at all. He succeeded on the third Fiend trial. After succeeding, he accepted a long-distance escort mission out of Royalwing City. Most likely, he has long since left the boundaries of Nightblaze Prefecture. But of course, it's also possible that he might have encountered danger during the escort mission and perished. Who knows?"

Linley's group rejoiced for Anji. No matter what, in the end, that stubborn fellow had finally succeeded.

Linley's group thus began to wait calmly. In the end, they waited more than twenty days.

Royalwing City. That quiet little courtyard where Linley's group was staying. The blood-red sun shone down upon the courtyard. Linley was seated meditatively at the floor of the courtyard, a layer of earthen light roiling about on his body.

"Boss's defensive power has far outstripped that of a God-level defensive artifact, and it's continuing to grow stronger."

Bebe sat there on the chair, clutching a bottle of fruit wine in his hands, continuously drinking. "This type of fruit wine is the fairly cheap sort in the Infernal Realm. A single inkstone can buy ten bottles. While drinking it is far better than those fruit wines which are acclaimed so highly in the Yulan continent."

Bebe wasn't like Linley.

Linley spent most of his time and effort in training, while Bebe spent most of his time eating and playing about, only occasionally training.

The roiling earthen yellow light on Linley's body stopped flowing about, transforming into an earthen yellow outfit.

Earth-style magic included the Sacred Earthguard Armor spell.

The Sacred Earthguard Armor, upon reaching the Deity level, could form armor on the level of adamantine, just by using powerful spiritual energy as well as divine power. But this sort of Sacred Earthguard Armor was the simplest, most primitive sort. Linley, after mastering the Essence of the Earth, was capable of forming an elemental armor over his body.

The power of this elemental armor was far greater than that of adamantine armor.

This elemental armor's defensive power was comparable to ordinary God-level defensive artifacts.

But due to his mastery of the Throbbing Pulse of the World, Linley also had the Pulseguard Defense, which was slightly more defensively formidable than even the elemental armor.

Fortunately, Linley had managed to fuse the Essence of the Earth and the Throbbing Pulse of the World together. Thus, after constant training and improvement, Linley had finally succeeded in being able to combine the constantly flowing, throbbing Pulseguard Defense with the static, immobile earth elemental armor.

The earthen set of clothes which Linley was wearing was in reality his Pulseguard Armor.

If one magnified it a hundredfold, one would discover this.

The extremely thin, minute strands of earthen yellow divine power were criss-crossed into a rippling lattice, moving in accordance to a particular rhythm to form a perfect whole. The countless rippling lattices of divine power in the end formed this set of clothes which Linley was wearing.

This Pulseguard Armor was the combination of his Pulseguard Defense and his elemental armor.

In terms of defensive power, it was nearly ten times greater than that of most God-level defensive artifacts!

“This is the power of fusing profound mysteries!” Linley felt a surge of delight. “If I hadn’t fused them, even though I have mastered both the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Essence of the Earth, the defensive power would be much lower.”

Linley finally began to understand why there could be such an enormous gap in power between Highgods.

“I have only fused two types of profound mysteries, but the power has multiplied tenfold. If I fused three? Four?” Linley sighed unceasingly. “No wonder that Crompton, who became a Deity through fusing with a divine spark, was so terrified in front of the Lord Governor!”

Indeed.

After fusing the profound mysteries of a Law, the power expanded exponentially.

“I mastered the Throbbing Pulse of the World, then developed the Voidwave Sword. But now...with two profound mysteries completely fused, the power of my Voidwave Sword has also increased tenfold. Not just that; if I primarily use my spiritual energy, then the attack is a spiritual attack! But if I use my divine power as the basis of the attack, then it will be a material attack.”

The Essence of the Earth was normally used for material attacks.

The Throbbing Pulse of the World was normally used for spiritual attacks.

With the two profound mysteries fused, the Voidwave Sword didn’t just grow more powerful in spiritual attacks, even the material attack components through his Essence of the Earth had increased greatly!

"Knock!" "Knock!"

Suddenly, a knocking sound could be heard. "I'll go open the door." Bebe leapt to the doorway.

Linley and Delia both walked over to the door as well. There was a black-haired youth outside. "The three of you are participating in the Fiend trials, right?"

"Have you come to alert us?" Bebe said in delight.

The black-haired youth nodded and laughed. "Right. The three of you, let me see your Fiend emblems. Don't worry; this is the only way I have to ascertain your identities."

Linley and the other two each withdrew their fiend emblems with a flip of their hands.

"Right. Tomorrow morning at dawn, go to the gates of Royalwing City and take part in the Fiend trials. You will find members of our Fiend Castle waiting for you there." The black-haired youth laughed as he spoke.

"Tomorrow at dawn?" Linley's group was filled with anticipation.

"What's the Fiend trial going to be?" Delia asked.

The black-haired youth shook his head. "I don't know. However, they will only tell you the details regarding your Fiend trial missions when you go to the meeting point."

"When the time comes and you go to the city gates, the people of the Fiend Castle probably won't recognize you. You only have to show off your Fiend emblems." The black-haired youth said, then he left.

Linley's group exchanged glances.

"Wow. Boss, we're about to become Fiends." Bebe was very excited.

"Fiend trials?"

Linley had already made up his mind. No matter what, protecting Delia and Bebe was what was important.

"Perhaps Bebe actually doesn't need my protection." Linley glanced at Bebe.

The next dawn, Linley's group headed to the city gates very early. When Linley's group arrived at the city gates, they discovered a large metallic lifeform hovering outside, which had the Fiend insignia atop it.

"It seems there's quite a few people." Linley looked through the translucent windows of the metallic lifeform and was able to see quite a few figures within.

Linley's group immediately flew over towards the metallic lifeform, where a silver-haired elder was standing at the entrance. He looked towards Linley's group. "Are you here for the Fiend trials?"

Linley nodded.

"Please show your Fiend emblems." The silver-haired elder didn't have any hint of a smile on his face.

Seeing the Fiend emblems in the hands of Linley and the other two, the silver-haired elder nodded slightly. "Go in."

Inside the metallic creature, there was a long corridor which was divided into two directions. There were people in the corridor. Upon seeing Linley's group, they called out, "Fiend trial participants, enter the rear cabin."

They entered the rear cabin.

"So many people!" Linley couldn't help but be shocked.

"Boss, there are at least several hundred people here." Bebe said in amazement.

Delia sighed as well, "And not everyone is here yet. Linley, let's sit towards the sides." As they spoke, Linley's group found seats and sat down. In the rear cabin, each row had twenty one seats, with each row divided up by four walkways.

Bebe looked through the translucent window towards the outside. "Right now, it seems there are quite a few people still coming. Hey, Boss, look, there are people coming who are wearing Fiend medallions. And quite a few of them."

"Why are a group of Fiends coming?" Linley looked as well.

But when he did, Linley's face changed.

He saw a familiar face!

Bebe was shocked as well. "Boss, that foul baldy is here as well!"

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 18, Moon Lake

“Linley, that bald guy named Crompton is here as well.” Delia also noticed that familiar figure.

Linley could clearly see Crompton and the other Fiends enter the metallic creature. Only, the Fiends went into the front cabin of the metallic lifeform.

“All the participants in the Fiend trials are in the rear cabin, while the Fiends are in the front cabin.” Linley was slightly relieved, but despite that, he still felt concern. “Why are these Fiends getting involved?”

Linley didn’t care about Fiends getting involved; what he cared about was that the Fiends travelling along with them included Crompton.

Linley had to admit that he disliked this Crompton. And Crompton, in turn, definitely would take advantage of any opportunity he had to kill Linley to vent his anger.

“If Crompton really were to go all out to kill us, the three of us do have a slight chance.”

Crompton only became a Highgod through fusing with a divine spark. He was the weakest type of Highgod.

Those who fused with divine sparks wouldn’t have their souls be ensconced by the natural Laws, nor be nourished and strengthened. Their souls would thus be somewhat weaker.

And Linley, while only a God, had fused two profound mysteries, the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Essence of the Earth. His soul attack was ten times stronger than that of a normal God. Linley's soul attack was more than enough to threaten Crompton's life.

However...

Linley wasn't completely confident either. After all, the opponent was a Highgod, meaning he had mastered all of the profound mysteries of an Elemental Law. Even if he hadn't fused any of them, he couldn't be underestimated.

"In dealing with Crompton, if Bebe and I were to go all out, we still have a chance. But...Crompton isn't alone. He has friends!" Linley frowned. This was what caused Linley the most worry. "We aren't in a city right now. We're outside the city. There're no prohibitions against combat. Once Crompton notices us, he might come for revenge!"

Linley thought back and forth, but he still couldn't come to a decision on what to do.

"Motherf*cker, there are so many Fiends. Why do I have to be so unlucky as to have that baldy be on this mission?" Linley couldn't help but mentally curse.

But although he was angry, he had to face reality!

"No matter what, all I can do right now is to hope that the baldy won't notice us." Linley quietly hoped.

This wasn't impossible.

After all, Linley's group was in the rear cabin, while Crompton was in the front cabin. As long as they didn't run into each other, there wouldn't be any problems.

"Linley." Delia looked at him, her eyes also holding a hint of worry.

"Don't worry." Linley said softly.

Bebe looked at Linley as well. Although Bebe liked to cause trouble, he wasn't a fool. He knew that with the baldy mixed into this group, things had just potentially become disastrous. Bebe immediately said mentally, "Boss, if we really run into trouble, I'll deal with the baldy! Although I won't be able to beat him, I am confident that I'll be able to tie him up for a time while staying alive."

Linley glanced at Bebe with some surprise.

Bebe had only reached the God level a few decades ago, but he was confident in being able to tie up a Highgod for a time? Even though this one had fused with a divine spark...

"Truly?" Linley's eyes held a hint of laughter in them.

"Hmph!" Bebe raised his head proudly, then said using his divine sense, "Boss, I'm the second Godeater Rat to ever exist in the countless planes of the multiverse! Don't underestimate me!" Bebe was capable of easily eating divine sparks. How could he not have some special abilities?

The metallic creature began to move!

"Whoosh!"

The enormous black shadow slashed through the air, disappearing from above Royalwing City and becoming a faint speck in the distant horizons. And then, in the blink of an eye, it was completely gone.

Within the metallic lifeform, the people all looked towards the outside.

"What's going on? Up till now, we still don't know what the mission is." Bebe muttered.

"Don't be impatient." Linley laughed calmly.

A woman seated next to Linley with short silver hair spoke out. "The Fiend trial mission has a set location. It must be very far away from Royalwing City. Most likely, this journey will be a very long one. The people of Fiend Castle naturally aren't in a hurry to tell us about the Fiend trial just yet."

Linley nodded to himself.

"My name is Linley." Linley laughed as he greeted the silver-haired woman.

This silver-haired woman was wearing a silver outfit as well. She looked very clean and sharp. She glanced at him, a hint of a smile at the corner of her lips. "My name is Regina [Rui'jin'na]. Mr. Linley, those two next to you are traveling with you, right?"

Regina knew very well that during a Fiend trial, several people joining forces together would have a much higher chance of success. If she were to encounter danger amidst the trials, if someone helped her out slightly, that might change her fate.

So she wanted to get on good terms with Linley's group.

"Right." Linley laughed and nodded. The nearby Bebe's eyes lit up, and he turned to look in this direction. "Miss Regina, your eyes are so enchanting. Ah, I forgot to introduce myself. You can call me Bebe."

Regina looked at Bebe, and his lively, playful eyes instantly captivated her. "Bebe. Your eyes are even more bewitching." Bebe's smile immediately became even brighter.

"Miss Regina, do you know why those Fiends are travelling along with us?" Linley gave voice to his confusion. "This is a Fiend trial. Those people are already Fiends, but they are coming along as well..."

Regina shook her head. "I'm not sure about this either."

Linley could only once more bury his suspicions deep in his heart.

The metallic lifeform flew for an entire day. At nightfall, the staff of the Fiend Castle finally came to the rear cabin.

"The Fiend Castle staff members are here." Regina said.

Linley's group immediately sat up straight. They raised their heads, staring towards the three figures standing at the very front of the cabin. These three were staff members sent over by the Fiend Castle, with the leader being that silver-haired old man.

"Everyone!" The silver-haired old man had a smile on his face. He said in a clear voice, "There are, in total, a thousand people taking part in this Fiend trial! I imagine everyone knows this already. The Fiend trial is extremely dangerous, and the death rate is extremely high! But everyone has come despite that...so in terms of courage, at least, you are all worthy of becoming Fiends."

The silver-haired old man's face grew solemn. "But courage alone is insufficient. You also need power!"

"This Fiend trial will take place in a place located roughly thirty million miles away from Royalwing City. This place is known as the Moon Lake! Given the flying speed of the metallic lifeform, I expect it will take roughly a month before we reach our destination." The silver-haired elder said.

At this moment, the rear cabin of the metallic lifeform was completely silent.

A thousand Fiend trial participants were all listening closely.

“There is something important which has to be made clear. The Fiend trial mission isn’t something which is designed or set up by the Fiend Castle.” The silver-haired elder’s voice echoed in the rear cabin. “Everyone who knows anything about Fiends should know that Fiends can accept missions at the Fiend Castle! Missions are divided into different levels!”

“As for your trial, it was selected from the many available missions, a one star mission which is suitable for you!”

The silver-haired elder said solemnly, “As long as you can complete this mission, you will thus become a One Star Fiend!”

“As for the details of the mission...Lauren [Lao’lin], you tell them.” The silver-haired elder stood off to one side while Lauren, a bewitchingly beautiful woman dressed in a long black cloak stepped forward.

Lauren’s voice was clear and bright. “The location of the mission is Moon Lake! Above Moon Lake, there is an ancient castle. The master of this ancient castle is extremely, terrifyingly powerful. He has one steward, eighteen black-robed guards, and hundreds of gold-robed guards!”

“Your mission is to kill one of the gold-robed guards. Remember...after killing the gold-robed guards, take their interspatial ring, that ‘moon ring’, and bring it back to the Fiend Castle. Only the possession of this moon ring will be accepted as proof that you completed the mission!

"But of course, you can take out and make use of the wealth and items contained within the moon rings." Lauren laughed as she spoke. "That's all. I'm done speaking."

Immediately, a hubbub arose in the rear cabin, as everyone began to discuss this.

"Quiet." The silver-haired elder's voice rang out.

Everyone's voices lowered.

"If you have any questions, speak." The silver-haired elder said.

Immediately, a powerfully built blue-robed man who was three meters tall stood up. In a sonorous voice, he said, "Milord, you say that the proof of completing this mission is the 'moon ring'. Can it be that every gold-robed guard has one?"

"According to our intelligence reports, all of them should have one. Even if their interspatial rings aren't actually moon rings, the moon rings should be stored within their interspatial rings." The silver-robed elder laughed calmly. "But of course, we can't rule out special circumstances."

"Therefore, if you kill a gold-robed guard but can't find a moon ring, that's bad luck for you. Without a moon ring, you won't be acknowledged by the Fiend Castle." The silver-haired elder pursed his lips. "However, it should be very rare for a gold-robed guard to not have a moon ring."

The man sat back down.

The silver-haired woman by Linley's side, Regina, stood up. "Milord. You said that the lord of that castle is very powerful, and that he has a steward and black-robed guards! You only want us to kill the gold-robed guards. Would the black-robed guards and the lord of the castle really just let us do as we please?"

Linley had a sudden thought.

Not just Linley. Many of the other people who had come on this Fiend trial with them had also guessed what the answer was.

"On this trip to Moon Lake, others are going as well. There are also some Three and Four Star Fiends, and even a Five Star Fiend squad." The silver-robed elder laughed calmly. "Most likely, when you get off the metallic creature, the group of Fiends will arrive as well."

"As I thought!" Linley was very certain about this response.

The silver-haired elder continued, "Their mission is to deal with the black-robed guards, the steward, and the lord of the castle!"

From what the Fiend Castle staff member had explained, Linley and the others could guess that the gold-robed guards should be at the God level of power, while the black-robed guards, the steward, and the lord of the castle were all Highgods.

They spent thirty two days in that metallic creature. Finally, they arrived at the destination.

"After you disembark, all you have to do is head south a few kilometers. Moon Lake is there."

The silver-haired elder said loudly in the rear cabin, "This place isn't Royalwing City. Life and death battles can happen at any moment. Everyone needs to be careful. We will quietly wait here for you return. If you successfully return with a moon ring, you can return to the metallic lifeform."

Everyone maintained their silence.

They all felt tremendous pressure!

A thousand people had come to take part in the Fiend trials. But how many of them would survive to return? The number of people who had come to take part in the Fiend trials was testament to how dangerous Fiend trials were.

Since the Fiend Castle had specially picked out this mission to test them, the difficulty level definitely wouldn't be low.

"Everyone in the front cabins has disembarked. Now all of you need to disembark!" The silver-haired elder said calmly. "Let me give you one parting advice; you don't need to just be on guard against the dwellers of Moon Lake. You also need to be on guard against the other Fiend trial participants. There are always many who don't die during the mission, but are killed by other Fiend trial participants. I've seen this far too many times."

Linley's heart shook slightly.

Indeed. If someone else didn't have a moon ring but you did, the other person might ambush you so as to kill you and seize your moon ring. This was very common.

After all, this wasn't Royalwing City!

"Let's go." Linley, Delia, and Bebe followed the flow of people outside, the densely packed group slowly disembarking the metallic lifeform.

At this moment, the metallic lifeform was on a broad, empty land. There were twenty three Fiends gathered there. Amongst them, the bald 'Crompton' was standing in front of his friends, glancing about casually. But then, his gaze suddenly turned.

"Hrm?" Crompton stared at the entrance to the metallic creature.

And then, Crompton's face immediately had a hint of a smile appear on it. "I didn't expect that the three of them would also be assigned to this Fiend trial. What a coincidence."

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 19, The Pink Mist

Linley didn't want to come face to face with Crompton, but no matter what, the three of them would have to exit the metallic creature. This was unavoidable. As soon as Linley's group exited through the opening, Crompton accidentally saw them.

Linley cautiously looked at Crompton out of the corner of his eyes as well.

At this moment, Linley was at the opening, while Crompton was currently standing amidst a tall patch of wild grass, but at that moment...

Their gazes crossed and locked!

"Not good!" Linley's face instantly changed.

Linley's face was now ugly to behold, but Crompton's face had a hint of a smile on it.

"I won't get involved with that baldy for now. If he insists on making trouble, all I can do is go all out." Linley didn't have any other choice for now either. All he could do was enter the group with the rest of the Fiend trial participants. All of them flew down from the metallic lifeform, landing on the patch of land with exuberant plant growth.

"Hey, bro, look." Crompton nudged someone nearby, and then gestured with his eyes towards the front. "It's that punk who made me lose face at Royalwing City.”

“Hey, it really is the three of them.” The Fiends next to Crompton also looked towards Linley, clearly surprised. One of them began to laugh. “Crompton, your luck is quite good. It seems you’ll have a chance to get revenge.”

Crompton let out a sinister laugh.

“I originally thought I wouldn’t have a chance, but who would have imagined that he would be delivered right to me?” Crompton naturally wouldn’t give up this opportunity.

Soon, the thousand participants of the Fiend trials had all finished disembarking.

Linley’s team was in the middle of this group.

“Linley?” That Regina greeted Linley’s group, but they only casually acknowledged her, not paying any extra attention. Regina frowned. She couldn’t help but feel puzzled, but how could she know that the three were currently worrying about Crompton?

“Boss, that Crompton is walking over.” Bebe suddenly said.

Linley looked over as well.

Crompton was sneering coldly while walking over.

"Retreat!" Linley and the other two immediately moved backwards. Seeing this, Crompton immediately snickered, "You want to flee?" Crompton's speed suddenly increased. No longer trying to disguise it, he charged straight towards Linley's group, his face ferocious.

"When you were a Demigod, you dared to curse at me!" The rage in Crompton's heart which had been suppressed for thirty plus years was now exploding forth.

If it hadn't been for the fact that they were within Royalwing City, he would've acted long ago.

"Delia, you immediately retreat off to a distance while using your 'Dimensional Wind' to restrict him and slow his movements." Linley said through his divine sense. "Bebe, the two of us will prepare to fight." Linley's gaze turned cold. Since Crompton was coming for trouble...

Then it was time for them to go all out!

"Kill that foul baldy!" Bebe's eyes had a vicious look flash through them as well.

"Hmph..." Crompton sneered coldly, and then suddenly moved to pursue, while of Linley's group, Delia retreated at high speed, but Linley and Bebe did not; instead slowing down as though waiting for Crompton to come over.

"What are you doing!" A cold shout shook in Crompton's mind.

At the same time, a figure appeared in front of Crompton.

Although Crompton's mind had been clouded by his fury, when he saw this person, he was immediately frightened into his senses. He immediately said respectfully, "Lord Loysius [Luo'yì'xiu'si], I, I..."

"Huh?"

Linley's group came together once more, watching with confusion. A Fiend had suddenly appeared in front of Crompton, blocking him. In front of this Fiend, Crompton appeared to be extremely frightened.

"Who is he?" Linley looked at the Fiend in confusion.

This Fiend had long, brownish-black hair which was unbound casually, but his gaze was cold and fierce.

"Crompton, you want to kill those three?" Loysius looked coldly at Crompton.

"I..." Crompton wanted to speak, but he didn't know how he should explain.

Loysius, a Five Star Fiend.

On this trip to Moon Lake, the leader of the Fiends was this Loysius as well as his two partners. Five Star Fiends, all three of them! This was an extremely powerful force amongst the Fiends.

"Hmph, I don't care what you think you were doing." Loysius said coldly. "However, the battle has yet to begin. If because you killed these three Gods, you created energy ripples that attracted the notice of the master of Moon Lake Castle, causing him to flee without engaging in battle, our mission would be a failure. If that happens, don't blame me for acting merciless!"

"Yes, yes, I understand!" Crompton's heart shuddered.

In his heart, he thought regretfully, "How could I have forgotten!" The energy ripples caused by battling Deities were very apparent, especially if a Highgod was to fight against three Gods...such a battle would definitely create energy ripples, and Moon Lake was only a few kilometers away from here.

Once the battle began, the master of Moon Lake would definitely take notice.

If the master of the castle fled, then this mission of Loysius and the other Fiends would have failed.

"Hmph." Loysius gave him a hard look, then left.

Crompton immediately gave Linley's group a hard look as well. He said to himself, "Count yourselves lucky. However, when the battle begins, I will definitely kill the three of you to vent my anger. Right now, I'll just let you live a bit longer!"

After having been rebuked by Loysius, the anger which Crompton felt naturally was transferred towards Linley's group.

"Everyone, we know that you are here to take part in the Fiend trials." A voice rang out in the minds of all one thousand test-takers, Linley included. "We are different from you; our mission is to kill that master of Moon Lake Castle. Thus, I hope you won't be impatient. Wait for us to kill the master of Moon Lake Castle before making your moves."

Linley and everyone else felt shocked.

"A divine sense which encapsulates everyone? It at least covers hundreds of meters."

In the Infernal Realm, using divine sense to speak was very difficult.

When Linley had been in the Necropolis of the Gods, as soon as he moved through the interdimensional gateway and into the Necropolis of the Gods, he had realized that his spiritual energy's maximum area had shrunk to just a few dozen meters, while in the Yulan continent, it had been over a thousand kilometers.

In the Infernal Realm, one of the Higher Planes, the restriction was even greater.

When Linley had first arrived in the Infernal Realm, he was only a Demigod. Although his soul was fairly powerful, his divine sense was still only able to encapsulate ten meters. After absorbing eleven amethysts and breaking through to the God level, Linley's divine sense was still only a hundred meters.

"A Highgod's divine sense should be able to cover a thousand kilometers." This was Linley's hypothesis.

That Loysius continued to speak using divine sense, "Right now, we are heading to Moon Lake. The thousand of you, follow us."

And then...

With Loysius and the other Three Star Fiends taking the lead, the twenty-plus Fiends simultaneously flew into the air, heading towards Moon Lake.

Immediately, the thousand-man army of Fiend trial participants flew into the air as well, with Linley's group naturally amongst them. They all flew towards Moon Lake.

"Crompton alone isn't that frightening. But I'm worried about those friends of his." Linley said to himself. "At Moon Lake, I expect those friends of his won't help him when the battle is going on."

Linley felt certain about this. Based on their behavior in the Fiend Castle, and how those friends had fanned the flames and egged him on, most likely none of them truly considered Crompton a close, lifelong friend.

Moon Lake was extremely wide and vast, nearly ten kilometers wide. A gentle wind blew, creating slight ripples and waves across the surface of Moon Lake. In the center of Moon Lake, there was an ancient castle. This castle was multiple kilometers wide as well, and could be considered a fairly large one.

Twenty plus Fiends and a thousand Gods were standing in the middle of Moon Lake.

Loysius and his two comrades, one of which was a violet-haired, black-robed man, the other one being a blue-haired, muscular man, moved at virtually the same moment. Flying into the air, they flew at high speed towards Moon Lake Castle, and right behind them...were the Fiends.

"Let's go." Linley and the rest of the thousand didn't hesitate, immediately flying into the air as well.

"Swish!"

Three figures suddenly appeared in the air above Moon Lake Castle. It was Loysius and the other two.

"They live up to being Five Star Fiends. Their speed is so fast." Crompton and the other Fiends sighed in amazement in their hearts.

Loysius hovered there in mid-air, staring down at the castle. "I don't want to fight inside the castle. Third Bro, split this castle in half."

"Yes, Big Brother." The blue-haired muscular youth flipped his hand over, and a long black saber appeared in it. The blade of this long saber was extremely broad, at least thirty centimeters. The entire thing radiated a bloody, murderous aura. Clearly, it had drank the blood of quite a few experts.

Wielding this long black saber, the blue-haired muscular youth's body suddenly moved, and he struck out with the weapon.

"BAM!"

An enormous black saber-shadow chopped straight down towards the castle. Wherever the saber shadow passed, space itself split apart, creating massive earthquake-like ripples which emanated downwards in the air below the saber-shadow. The part of the waters of Moon Lake which were affected by the ripples began to crackle, and then the water in that area completely vanished.

And then, the water elsewhere in Moon Lake rushed in to fill the gap.

"BOOM!"

The enormous blade-shadow chopped against the castle. The walls of the castle actually began to shine with all sorts of complicated magical runes that were black in color, flashing with enormous divine power. The magical runes continually to flash, weakening the strength of the attack. The attack, despite powerful, had been forcibly blocked head on by the castle.

The faces of Loysius and the other two changed.

"Who is the master of this castle? Did he himself set up this enormous defensive magic formation, or did he ask someone else to help him with it?" Loysius felt a hint of worry. His third brother's material attack was the strongest of the three.

Loysius knew exactly how powerful that saber chop was. To be able to block that saber...the magic formation of this castle was something which only a true master of magic formations was capable of setting up.

If he was able to invite a master to set it up, the lord of this castle was undoubtedly extremely wealthy.

If he himself set it up, then the insides of this castle definitely wouldn't be ordinary. There would be countless dangers within.

"No wonder it is a six star assignment!" Loysius frowned.

The Fiends behind them, as well as the thousand Gods, all stared in confusion.

"This castle seems to be extraordinary." Bebe said with pursed lips. "It is similar to the magic formation which previously protected the Radiant Temple."

"They are both magic formations, but this one is millions of times more powerful." Linley also sensed that this assignment wouldn't be as easily accomplished as they might hope. "It seems it's true that only a small number out of a thousand are likely to survive."

Right at this moment, a pink mist suddenly began to emanate from the castle. This pink mist expanded very quickly, covering virtually the entire surface of the water of Moon Lake, with all of the Fiends and the thousand Gods within it.

"Huh?" Linley frowned. This pink mist was very thick. Linley could only barely see within a few dozen meters of himself.

"Crunch!" The sound of a weapon piercing into someone's body.

"Bastard, die, die!"

From afar, energy ripples from combat suddenly appeared, causing Linley's group to be shocked.

Linley wanted to use his divine sense to take a look; after all, Linley's divine sense was able to spread to an area of nearly a hundred meters. But just as Linley spread out his divine sense a little bit...

He suddenly sensed a hint of a murderous intent grow in his heart, and his soul was affected as well. Only, that blue light within Linley's sea of consciousness lit up.

"Not right." Linley instantly grew clear-minded again.

"Everyone, don't use your divine sense, and don't breathe that mist into your body." The loud voice of Loysius rang out. "This pink mist is a type of poison mist created by a Highgod master who trains in the Edicts of Death. It is designed specifically to drawn out the murderous feelings in one's soul. No matter what, your spiritual energy and your soul cannot come into contact with that pink mist.

What was divine sense?

Divine sense was nothing more than spiritual energy which was spread out of the body. Once a person's spiritual energy came into contact with that pink mist, it would be impacted.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 20, Cannon Fodder

In the air above Moon Lake. That pink mist was everywhere.

Within the thick mist, everyone including Linley, without being told, released their Godrealms, causing the pink mist to stay away from them. The Godrealm of a Deity wasn't that large, but with over a thousand experts utilizing it at the same time...

Instantly, there wasn't a hint of that fog left in the air above the castle.

"We haven't even entered the castle yet, but people have started to die." Linley said to himself. Just then, when that pink fog had first come out, quite a few people had their souls contaminated by that poison fog. Those people who had been more murderous to begin with had instantly exploded into madness.

In the blink of an eye, nearly ten Gods had died.

"This fog truly is powerful." Bebe sighed in praise. "Fortunately, I didn't release my divine sense just now."

But Delia said, "Just now, when I heard the sounds of combat, I sent out my divine sense to see what was going on. But of course, once I heard the warning, I immediately withdrew it." Linley couldn't help but to turn and look at Delia. "Delia, are you alright?" Linley was frightened.

"Do I look like I'm in trouble?" Delia laughed.

"Just now, I just felt a bit grouchy. I felt only just a tiny hint of killing intent, well within my ability to control." Delia explained.

Linley suddenly frowned and he looked to the side. There were two Gods nearby him chatting.

"Aksu [A'ke'su], this time we're in trouble. This is a poison fog developed by a Highgod master of the Edicts of Death. Something like this is extremely precious, but the lord of Moon Lake Castle used it in such a casual manner. And that magic formation just now...this all indicates that the master of this castle is extremely wealthy."

"Right. This sort of poison fog that stirs up an urge to kill isn't that powerful; when I was in Blacksand Castle at Royalwing City, I once saw someone selling a poison which upon contact with one's soul, could cause the soul to spontaneously combust and then collapse. But of course, that price was sky-high."

The thousand Gods who were trial participants all began to discuss this amongst themselves while hovering in mid-air, waiting for the twenty-plus Fiends to come to a decision.

If the Fiends didn't go to deal with the master of the castle and those black-robed guards, they wouldn't dare go charging in.

Everyone, Linley included, understood that what the lord of the castle had put on display just now was most likely just a tiny little trick for him. He hadn't shown any of his true killing strokes. How would Gods like Linley dare to charge in and throw their lives away?

At the bottom of Moon Lake Castle. Within a wide main hall.

The steward, dressed in a violet uniform, was standing to one side, while a black-haired elder whose eyebrows drooped all the way down to his chest was sampling some wine. Casually, the elder said, "Belhomme [Be'luo'mu], have you completed your investigations regarding what is going on outside?"

"Milord, the leaders are a group of Fiends." The violet-robed steward frowned. "Milord, the situation seems to be bad. I'm afraid that some people intentionally sent out a mission for the Fiend Castle to attack us." An attack of Fiends would be troublesome for anyone.

The same was true for the master of this castle.

"Hm?" The black-haired elder's eyebrows furrowed. He was silent for a moment.

"Forget them. Any who enter the castle shall be killed!" The black-haired elder said in a low voice. "All of the gold-robed guards are under your control. Deploy Tursens and the others as well. Someone is intentionally acting against me? After dealing with this affair, I will definitely have to investigate this."

"Yes, milord!" The violet-robed steward bowed.

In the air above Moon Lake Castle, the group of people continued to hover, while their leader, Loysius, was vexed.

Loysius knew very well that with enough money and power, one could definitely go to Blacksand Castle to buy some forbidden items and turn this entire castle into a deathtrap. Even he didn't dare to charge in rashly.

"No other options." Loysius' face sank as he looked at the surrounding Fiends.

The surrounding Fiends exchanged glances.

It wasn't as though they had never encountered this sort of situation before. They all knew what they should do right now...

Let those Fiend trial participants be their cannon fodder! Let them lead the charge into the castle!

"Swoosh!" "Swoosh!"

The twenty-plus Fiends simultaneously floated over to the air above the large group of Gods including Linley, while a voice rang out. "This poison fog is everywhere, while the castle itself is unbreakable. All we can do now is go into the castle! Right now, the thousand of you will divide into ten squads and enter the castle through the windows and corridors. We Fiends will also divide into ten squads, following behind you. You will deal with ordinary gold-robed guards. If you encounter any black-robed guards, we Fiends will act!"

When this voice rang out, the nearly-thousand Gods who were participating in this trial all had changed looks on their faces.

"Bastards. They are making us into cannon fodder!" Linley cursed inwardly.

Everyone immediately understood. However, they didn't dare to refuse...because they all knew how astonishingly powerful a strong Highgod could be.

Perhaps, against the likes of Crompton, who only became a Highgod through fusing with a divine spark, a group of Gods would be able to kill when joining forces.

But a Five Star Fiend like Loysius was different.

Someone capable of becoming a Five Star Fiend was someone who had definitely fused profound mysteries. A Five Star Fiend wouldn't find it too hard to kill all thousand of them. And there were three of those Five Star Fiends! And a whole pile of Four Star Fiends as well! There was no way for them to resist at all.

"All of you, form a squad." Fiends immediately began to divide them up.

However, the Gods didn't respond.

"Hurry up. Or can it be that you want to die right now?" A cold voice rang out. The Gods looked at each other, finally complying.

They had no other options!

"There's no way we Gods can join forces to kill them all." Linley glanced sideways at Moon Lake Castle. "The corridors inside the castle aren't too wide. Only two or three people will be able to walk side by side at most. With a hundred people in each squad, there's no way we can simultaneously suddenly attack the Highgods behind."

There was no chance of resistance. All of the Gods could only choose to obey.

After all, the Fiends weren't trying to kill them, just have them go in first. They still had a chance at life.

"Hey, let's take charge of that squad." Crompton hurriedly called out.

The ordinary Two Star Fiends and Three Star Fiends were all responsible for staying behind the hundred-man squads.

"Haha, Crompton, jeeze." People immediately began to laugh. They all knew that because of Linley's group, Crompton decided to choose the responsibility of overseeing that squad. This was the squad Linley was in.

The main gates to the castle were tightly shut. There was no way to break through it forcibly at all.

The ten hundred-man squads could thus only slip in through the windows. Linley's team was mixed into one of the squads, and they too slipped into the room, then began to search for an enemy in the corridor behind them.

"This pink mist has filled the entire castle. There's no way to see what's going on up ahead at all. If we aren't careful, we might be ambushed." Linley held Delia's hand as he and Bebe carefully followed the rest of the squad in moving forwards.

Linley didn't dare to stay too close to the rear. Crompton and the other's were in the rear.

There was no fog in front of Linley, because all of the Gods were using their Godrealm, which was more than enough to make it so that there was no pink fog around them. However..in front of them, outside the area of the Godrealm, there was the boundless pink mist.

Everyone was careful and advanced slowly.

"Boss, how do you think that pink fog thing was developed?" Bebe chatted with Linley through divine sense. As there was no poison mist near them, they naturally were able to chat using divine sense. "It is able to directly affect the soul. I heard others say that there are even more terrifying poison mists that can cause the soul to spontaneously combust and collapse."

"Who knows? In the Yulan continent, I did suffer that attack from the Grand Warlock. Right, in Redbud Castle, didn't you see those Godslayer Arrows? The Godslayer Arrows had been dipped in poison, which is why they were so powerful." Linley messaged back through divine sense. "And I hear that many of the most terrifying poisons are only available in Blacksand Castle."

Bebe pursed his lips. "I wonder what's inside this castle."

"Linley. I keep on having a very bad feeling." Delia said through her divine sense. "Be careful. Don't get in over your head. In the Infernal Realm, there are many attacks which we have never encountered before. Have you ever encountered a poison mist like that, which can cause someone's soul to be filled with murderous urges? Be careful."

Seeing the concerned look in Delia's face, Linley couldn't help but feel a surge of warmth.

"Hurry up. You are moving too slow!" Crompton's angry bellow rang out from behind.

Although Linley's group of Gods were unhappy, nobody dared to say anything.

The castle had multiple layers. Linley's group searched everywhere in the corridors on the first floor without being able to find a single person. However, when they headed down the stairway leading down into the second floor, the second floor was clearly much larger than the first one, and its layout was much more complicated as well.

"How bizarre!" All the Gods felt a sense of pressure.

No matter where they went, that pink mist ahead of them continued to block them. This caused Linley's squad to feel that the world in front of them was utterly strange and mysterious. Their nerves were continuously taut, which was quite taxing.

"Whooooosh."

Suddenly, the sound of a gust of wind.

"Slash!" "Slash!" "Slash!" "Slash!"

Before Linley had a chance to react, an arrow suddenly appeared through an opening between the people in front of him, shooting towards him. The speed was simply too fast, and Linley wasn't able to dodge at all.

"Bang!" The arrow struck onto Linley's earthen robe.

This robe was the Pulseguard Armor created after the fusion of two types of profound mysteries. The arrow wasn't able to shoot through Linley's earthen robe.

However, in front of Linley, more than twenty people immediately collapsed to the floor, their bodies riddled with arrows. They had no more life in them. Because of their death, the unending pink fog around them quickly swirled forward.

"They all died?" Linley was momentarily stunned.

Linley previously had nearly thirty people in front, but now more than half had died.

Actually, those arrows had been shot out very densely from the end of the hallway. Virtually all of the Gods who had been struck were killed, with only one or two that didn't die. One was Linley, while the other, despite having been struck, had been able to take the hit. Clearly, his soul defense was excellent.

"Whew."

Many of the luckily surviving Gods up ahead immediately used their interspatial rings to collect the corpses. It must be known that those corpses all had divine sparks and interspatial rings on them. Those interspatial rings had large amounts of money within them.

"Boss, your reaction time was too slow." Linley, having been momentarily astonished, didn't react until all the corpses had been collected. Bebe, on the other hand, had collected two.

"Linley, are you alright?" Delia hurriedly looked at Linley.

"How could the Boss have any problems?" Bebe snickered. "The Boss's soul protection and his exterior layer of protection are both very powerful." Actually, Bebe had been very concerned about Linley as well, but because he and Linley were spiritually linked, if something had happened to Linley, Bebe would have known.

"Retreat, retreat!" The Gods up ahead immediately called out.

From behind, Crompton bellowed, "Keep moving forward. What are you afraid of? Keep moving forward!"

The Gods up ahead couldn't help but feel enraged, and they cursed in their hearts, "You aren't the one being killed. Of course you have nothing to fear!"

However, the people who had the courage to participate in the Fiend trials naturally weren't cowards. They wouldn't quit just because of this, but they all became even more cautious.

"Delia, stay behind me." Linley said. After having suffered that sudden arrow attack, Linley was now in the vanguard of the squad. There were only a few people ahead of him. With those people having just faced that dangerous event, their movement naturally became even slower.

Crompton, however, was leisurely walking behind them. He was sneering coldly in his heart, "I didn't expect you not to die this time. But next time, it will be your turn." Crompton was quite eager to see Linley die.

"Captain, that squad is continuing to advance."

Within the gloomy darkness, ten gold-robed warriors were silently, stealthily walking while hunched over, each of them wearing a moon-shaped interspatial ring on their fingers.

"Hmph. A group of them died, but the rest are continuing forward. They truly are daring. At the next chokepoint, we'll give them another round and kill a few dozen more of them."

"Killing people like this sure is easy."

"In normal circumstances, how can we so easily and blithely use Godslayer Arrows like this? These toys are quite expensive."

The gold-robed guards quickly reached the next chokepoint.

Linley's squad, however, continued to advance carefully. They didn't know that soon, yet another group of them would perish.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 21, Chaos

The corridor up ahead was filled with that thick pink fog, completely hiding what was ahead of them.

“Crackle...”

The earthen robe covering Linley was only covering most of his body. Right now, however, Linley’s hands were also covered with an earth-yellow membrane. His neck and even his face were all covered with a layer of this earth-yellow membrane as well.

This was all part of his ‘Pulseguard Armor’.

The only place that was revealed was his eyes.

Not just Linley. After having suffered that ambush of arrows, all of the Gods in Linley’s squad understood that when those dense arrows were shot out, they covered the entire area. In addition, they moved so quickly that there was no time to react at all.

Therefore, the only option was to protect the entire body!

Head, arms, legs, neck...the entire body had to be protected!

Although the squad had over eighty people, everyone crept forward silently through the corridor, not making any sound at all. The only sound which could occasionally be heard was Crompton’s irritating bark of,

"Forward, faster!" But his barks only echoed in the corridor, making the entire castle seem all the more deathly quiet.

"Ahhh!" Many miserable cries rang out together, while at the same time, from afar, the sound of angry shouts and cursing could be heard.

Linley's squad couldn't help but pause in their advance.

"Yet another squad has suffered an ambush." All of them understood.

"So this was the true purpose of the master of the castle releasing this poison fog." Linley now understood. Because the pink fog was everywhere, Linley and the others didn't dare to use their divine sense to search. After all, if the pink mist so much as slightly contaminated a soul, it would be affected.

Even if they didn't go crazy, their performance in battle would decrease.

Linley's group didn't dare to use their divine sense, and the enemies didn't either. However, the enemies were very familiar with this castle's layout, and it was possible they were lying in wait within certain hidden areas. This caused Linley's side to be at an absolute disadvantage.

"Those of you up front, hurry up!" A loud rebuking shout from a Fiend in the rear. "What's going on with all of you guys? So frightened that your legs have gone soft?"

The group of people at the front of the squad were extremely furious. The front of the squad was the most dangerous place, and they were supposed to hurry up? Wasn't this forcing them to their deaths? But they didn't dare to disobey these Fiends. After all, the Fiends on this mission were all Highgods.

"Time for a turn!"

The squad arrived at a turn in the corridor, and they all followed it towards a different corridor.

Hidden in the darkness, ten gold-robed guards were holding their bows at the ready.

"About time. They've already rounded the turn!" The captain of the gold-robed guards said softly. "Everyone, prepare to attack!"

"Got it, captain." The eyes of the gold-robed guards were all shining. They held their bows at the ready, five arrows in their hands. They would shoot out five arrows each time. To these gold-robed guards, although their accuracy would be impacted, however...

They were firing blindly to begin with, because the corridors were straight. All they had to do, therefore, was fire in straight lines.

"You lot really are wasteful." The captain was only using a single arrow.

"Whoever gets hit by your arrow, captain, will definitely die."

The captain laughed calmly.

Actually, the intelligence reports of the Fiend Castle weren't completely accurate. Indeed, Moon Lake Castle did have the 'black-robed guards' and the 'gold-robed guards', two different levels of guards, and all of the black-robed guards were fairly powerful Highgods, true. But the gold-robed guards...

They weren't all Gods.

To be more specific, the vast majority of them were Gods, while a very small number of them were Highgods. They didn't become black-robed guards because they had been sent to be the team captains of the gold-robed guards.

The gold-robed guards, in turn, only had two levels; the ordinary guard members, and the team captains. Generally speaking, the team captains would listen to the orders of the black-robed guards. Ten black-robed guards were responsible for managing all of the gold-robed guards. The captain of the team of gold-robed guards which was lying in ambush for Linley's squad was a Highgod!

However, he was one who had become a Deity through fusing with a divine spark.

"After I open up the screening wall, listen for my signal, then immediately fire!"

"Swish!" Very suddenly, in the darkness, a stone wall suddenly opened as fast as lightning, revealing the ten gold-robed guards behind.

But because of the pink fog's concealment, Linley's squad had no idea... that at the end of their corridor, there were ten gold-robed guards.

The gold-robed guards stared coldly at the pink mist in front of them.

"Fire!" The captain ordered with his divine sense to all of them simultaneously. Because he was the one who had opened the stone wall, he was the last one to fire.

"Swish!" "Swish!" "Swish!"

Instantly, like a rainstorm, forty six arrows covered every part of the corridor. In the instant after they finished firing, the stone wall immediately closed shut once more. From the outside, nobody would be able to tell that this stone wall was movable.

Linley's squad was currently making their way forward carefully.

Linley was staring forward carefully, but suddenly, Linley's pupils shrank and his face changed...

The dense rain of arrows instantly tore through the air, mercilessly shooting down upon Linley and the others in front, or through the cracks to the people in the rear. These arrows were simply too fast, and by the time Linley and the others saw the arrows, there was only a distance of a few dozen meters.

A few dozen meters distance simply wasn't enough for Linley and the others to react and dodge in time.

"Delia!"

In that short moment, Linley was only able to make a single movement. He stretched out his arms, striving to stand in front of Delia and use his body to completely block her from the arrows.

"Swish!" "Swish!"

Although Linley wasn't the very first person in front, two arrows landed on his body. The arrows struck Linley like a thunderbolt, but the earthen robe on Linley's body was made of countless ripples of divine power, instantly and completely counteracting the penetrative power of the arrows.

Bebe was struck by an arrow as well.

"Clang!" A metallic ringing sound could be heard, and the arrowhead actually exploded and shattered as the arrow fell to the floor.

"Too weak." Bebe laughed delighted.

"We're all fine." Linley immediately could tell that Delia and Bebe were both safe. He couldn't help but feel relieved.

But then, Linley's face suddenly changed. In his line of sight, he suddenly saw from afar a terrifying arrow!

"There's one more arrow coming!"

This was the arrow which had been fired last!

But this was also the most terrifying arrow, the arrow of a Highgod! The Godslayer Arrow glimmered with a sinister black light as it pierced through space, causing space to ripple. It gave Linley no chance to react at all as it collided directly with Linley's chest.

"Bang!"

The penetrative power of this arrow was simply too great. Although those countless ripples of divine force wildly attempted to reduce its penetrative power, in the end, the arrow just barely broke through.

"Ah!" Linley fell to one knee on the ground, powerless.

Bebe, who had been in the process of collecting corpses nearby, suddenly turned, his face changed. "Boss!" Delia, who had just been letting out a sigh of relief, was shocked as well.

"Hmph, he finally died?" At the back of the squad, the bald Crompton had been watching Linley this entire time. When he saw Linley fall to one knee, a hint of a smile appeared on his face. "I didn't kill you. Someone else killed you. Haha..."

He was extremely delighted.

The arrow itself wasn't terrifying. What was truly terrifying was the poison which the arrowhead had been dipped in.

A gray energy stream instantly attacked Linley's brain, viciously piercing towards Linley's soul!

"Bang!"

It struck violently against that translucent membrane. The translucent scaled membrane was a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. Aside from the breach in it, the other parts of it were as good as when it was undamaged. More than half of the energy of that gray energy stream dissipated upon colliding with it.

The remaining gray energy, as though it had a mind of its own which knew that the translucent membrane was hard to deal with, suddenly completely split apart, transforming into gray specks of light which covered the entire translucent membrane. Naturally, that included the breach. And that breach...was sealed by Linley using his spiritual energy into a 'bandage'.

"What is this?" Linley was shocked. He had the feeling that the gray dots had a mind!

"Swish!"

Instantly, all of the gray dots, as though having discovered that the 'bandage' was weak, immediately began to wildly attack the 'bandage'. The remaining part of the energy all flowed towards the breach, entering Linley's sea of consciousness.

At this moment...

The many gray dots divided into three. These three weaker surges of gray energy attacked Linley's divine spark, his wind-style divine clone, and his original body.

"It is actually attacking all of my souls at once!" Linley was greatly shocked.

But although he was shocked, Linley still controlled the spiritual energy in his sea of consciousness, creating a Pulseguard Defense! A large amount of spiritual energy ripples clashed with the gray dots of light. Moments later, all of the gray dots had been extinguished, while half of Linley's spiritual energy had been used up as well.

"That really was dangerous."

Only now did Linley let out a sigh of relief.

"Boss, Boss!"

"Linley! Linley!" Delia and Bebe were both by his side, calling out to him softly.

Although it took a fairly long time to describe the soul poison entering his body, it actually only happened over the course of one or two seconds, after which Linley opened his eyes.

"I'm fine." Linley revealed a hint of a smile towards them.

Only now did Delia and Bebe let out sighs of relief. Linley, however, was feeling rather somber. "That poison really is frightening. No wonder the staff member at Redbud Castle had said that this Godslayer Arrow is capable of killing almost any God. Too bizarre, too frightening."

As Linley saw it, this Godslayer Arrow's poison had a will of its own.

Although it didn't have the capacity to actually think, it had the ability to 'avoid strong points and seek out weak points'.

"However, to this poison, the 'soul' has a powerful draw to it." Linley knew this because if the poison was capable of thought, it would have focused its efforts on destroying a single soul. But the poison didn't; instead, it attacked Linley's three souls at the same time!"

"He didn't die?" Crompton, at the back of the squad, saw Linley stand up again. He couldn't help but stare with wide eyes, and then his face turned savage. "Hmph. He survived yet again. I want to see how many more times he will survive. Even if you managed to survive the soul attack of the Godslayer Arrow, I imagine you must have used up almost all of your spiritual power."

"Hurry up!" Crompton bellowed yet again.

This time, ten or so people had died in the squad. After having been ambushed twice, only sixty Gods were left. Linley's group of three were now at the very front of the squad.

"Boss, we can't let this continue." Bebe began to worry.

"I know." Linley understood this as well.

Who knew what other tricks the enemies were planning? If they were continuously in this sort of situation where they could only play defense, sooner or later, when their defense was no longer able to handle it, they would be finished.

"We're at the third floor!" Linley's group slowly began to make their way down the stairs.

"Everyone, be careful." A God called out. "The third floor is definitely going to be even more dangerous than the second floor!"

In a large, empty room on the third floor of the castle, ten gold-robed guards entered from above through a secret passageway.

"Our master really has gone wild this time. He has even brought out the Deathgod Golems." The gold-robed guards were very excited.

"But we only have twenty of these Deathgod Golems in total. Our squad is very lucky to have even one of them."

The gold-robed captain laughed calmly. "Eric [Ai'rui], you can be the one to control the Deathgod Golem we have been given. I don't need it!" The gold-robed captain was a Highgod, after all. Although the Deathgod Golem was powerful, it was only on par with him.

The third floor was extremely large, and the layout of the castle was so chaotic that as one walked, one might even forget which road they were traveling on. They could only choose to walk around randomly.

"We can't let this continue!" Linley walked slowly, but up ahead was that perpetual pink mist. Nobody knew what would appear from up ahead.

Suddenly...

"Halt!" An explosive shout rang out.

"Brothers, flee!"

Chaotic sounds suddenly could be heard from everywhere in the castle, and the sixty-plus people in Linley's squad all were stunned.

A look of delight appeared on Linley's face.

Linley immediately spread out his divine sense to cover the forty or fifty people towards the front. "Brothers, if this continues, we're all going to die. Let's all flee together and move separately. That way, we won't be caught and killed in one fell swoop by the people of the castle!"

"Brothers, flee!" Linley suddenly called out in a loud voice.

In virtually the same moment, all of the Gods, as though having been trained together, simultaneously scurried towards the nearby rooms, or deeper into the mist, or into the nearby passageways...

In the blink of an eye!

More than sixty Gods had all run off!

Crompton's group of three Fiends were stupefied.

"We...who should we chase?" Crompton turned to look at the two Fiends next to him.

"Chase my ass!" A Fiend cursed softly.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 22, Deathgod Golem

Sixty-plus people had fled.

Only three Fiends were overseeing them. How many could they catch?

One of them, a gold-haired Fiend, sent with his divine sense, "Right now, let's forget about trying to use those Fiend trial participants to block for us. Come, let's go find the black-robed guards!" These two Fiends immediately began to move forward quickly. Crompton, while in his heart unwilling to let the matter rest, still followed them.

"Linley, you better hope that I don't meet you in the future. Next time definitely won't be like this time."

Crompton regretted not having killed Linley earlier.

Actually, it wasn't that Crompton had been merciful; it was that he simply couldn't kill Linley!

At that time, the thousand Fiend trial participants had all been divided into groups of ten. If Crompton were to try and kill Linley, the other Fiends probably wouldn't have agreed. After all, if at a time like that, he was to suddenly kill Linley for no reason, most likely that would cause the rest of the thousand Fiend trial participants to flee and scatter.

Within the Moon Lake Castle, the scene was one of utter chaos.

Chaos, chaos, everywhere!

The members of the ten squads were wildly fleeing, and hundreds of them were dispersing throughout the third floor. Some of the gold-robed guards who had been hidden in some of the rooms discovered, to their shock, people charging within!

Although they were hidden quite well, with hundreds of people running around chaotically, naturally some would bump into each other.

The battle suddenly began!

"Bang!" "Bang!" Energy explosions, angry roars, and the sounds of battle constantly emanated from every part of the castle.

Within a hidden room.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were here.

"It sure is noisy outside." Bebe's face was covered in smiles, and he turned to look at Linley. "Boss, if we hide here and all of the gold-robed guards get killed, doesn't that mean we won't be able to get moon rings?"

Linley said with a frown, "There's quite a few of those gold-robed guards, and the strength of this castle is most likely more powerful than our side had predicted."

Linley still remembered that arrow just now!"

His 'Pulseguard Armor' was developed through the fusion of two profound mysteries, and was more than ten times stronger in defense than an ordinary God's! Despite such defensive strength, it was still pierced through. Linley was certain that the person who shot out that arrow was very likely a Highgod!

"In the castle, the most powerful 'black-robed guards' won't start ambushing people right away. It was definitely done by the gold-robed guards." Linley understood this logic. Petty actions like ambushes would definitely be done by those of lower status.

Linley couldn't help but sigh, "Delia, Bebe, beware the gold-robed guards. The gold-robed guards aren't all Gods as we thought!" Linley then immediately conveyed his thoughts to Delia and Bebe.

They had to be careful!

If they were overconfident in dealing with those gold-robed guards, they would most likely be finished.

"Killing God-level gold-robed guards and Highgod-level gold-robed guards will result in getting the same thing; a moon ring." Bebe pursed his lips as he spoke. "I hope our luck is good."

Although Linley's group was conversing, they were using their Godrealm to prevent sound from leaving their room to the outside.

"Boom!" The walls suddenly shook massively.

"There's a battle outside!" Linley, Delia, and Bebe all immediately stood up. Moving as fast as lightning, they moved to the side of the wall. If someone charged in through the door, Linley's group would be able to immediately attack them!

"Bang!" Yet another collision!

Although the wooden door was sturdy, it was smashed open, and a human figure fell down powerlessly from outside, smashing against the ground.

Linley's team didn't move.

"That's a corpse!" Linley's team was instantly able to tell. The corpse's head had already been utterly smashed apart, and a divine spark was rolling on the ground.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe all held their breaths.

"Whoosh!"

A human figure suddenly charged in!

"Kill!" Linley's team moved.

Delia immediately executed her Profound Mysteries of Dimensional Space, and that figure was instantly slowed down, his speed dropping. Meanwhile, the adamantite heavy sword in Linley's hand mercilessly smashed straight down on the figure. His most powerful attack...

Voidwave Sword!

"F*ck off and die!" Bebe laughed loudly as he gave the head a kick.

"Bang!" The figure smashed into the nearby wall, then landed heavily to the floor. A layer of magical patterns on the wall flashed slightly, but the wall itself wasn't damaged in the slightest.

The entire castle was supported by a magical formation. However, not all walls had it. Generally speaking, only the primary supporting walls or the prisons, while the other walls and doors didn't have any protection.

"Huh?" Linley's team's faces changed. "Not dead?"

The figure actually stood up.

Only, his head had become distorted by Bebe's tough kick. The flesh on his face had exploded, revealing the metallic skull within. The metallic skull's eyes were made of two rubies, and it stared bizarrely at Linley's team, emitting a mechanical chuckle. "Three Gods? Not bad!"

Divine power began to flow on the surface of the metallic skull, and it immediately healed.

"That isn't human, and it doesn't have a soul!" Linley was greatly shocked. His Voidwave Sword hadn't found a spirit to attack.

Linley had the feeling as though this 'person' in front of him was wearing the skin of a human, but on the inside was some sort of metallic monster that had no soul at all.

"What is it?" Linley, Delia, and Bebe were all puzzled.

Even if it was a metallic lifeform, it should have a soul. Any and all types of lifeforms had the soul as their base. But the creature in front of them had no soul at all! It definitely wasn't living. But this creature not only was conscious, it was even capable of speech!

"Some sort of strange clone?" This was Linley's guess.

"Boss, that freak's body is very hard. I delivered a full strength kick just now, but I didn't cause his head to explode! How bizarre." Bebe didn't understand it either. He knew exactly how powerful his own strength was. In terms of pure strength, not even Linley was a match for him.

This was one of the abilities which Godeater Rats had after they digested divine sparks.

"Since you have encountered me, hmph, all three of you will die." This freak with the glowing red eyes stared at Linley's team, then suddenly moved.

"Boom!"

Bebe charged to the front, fighting with the freak head on.

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

Bebe and that freak's method of battle was very bizarre. It was as though they were two barbarians, using their fists and feet to viciously attack the opponent. Over the course of this wild battle, the freak's entire outer layer of skin exploded out and blood flowed, revealing the metallic internal body.

This metallic body was extremely hard.

"How...how is that possible?" The freak was astonished.

"Motherf*cker, I want to see whose body is tougher, mine or yours!" Bebe shouted angrily. Bebe was extremely confident in his body's defensive power. In his heart, he said to himself, "After digesting so many divine sparks, if I still can't compete against a freak like this, I really would have lost all face for us Godeater Rats."

"Boss, this definitely isn't the real body. The real body should be outside!" Bebe said through divine sense.

"Swish!" Linley immediately flew out.

Indeed, in the corridor outside, there was a gold-robed guard who had a look of shock on his face. He wasn't shocked at Linley coming out; he was shocked by Bebe. "There...there's actually someone whose body is this tough. He dares to fight against a Deathgod Golem head on!" He couldn't believe it!

A Deathgod Golem!

In truth, this was a human-shaped weapon! Precisely speaking, it was a type of divine artifact. A special divine artifact!

The twenty Deathgod Golems in the possession of Moon Lake Castle were all high level ones, human-shaped divine artifacts of the Highgod level!

The energy source for these Deathgod Golems was the divine jewel within its body.

The person controlling a Deathgod Golem had to first bind it with blood, which would allow him to then control the Deathgod Golem to attack others. Although the Deathgod Golem's body was incomparably tough, it did have a flaw; it was incapable of spiritual attacks, because it had no spirit!

"I don't care who you are!" The gold-robed guard let out a cold laugh.

A warblade suddenly appeared in the hands of the Deathgod Golem that was battling Bebe. That warblade was stained with poison, the same poison used in Godslayer Arrows. Generally speaking, once this sort of poison entered a person's body, it would immediately begin attacking the opponent's soul.

Thus, it could only be used once. The second time, the warblade would no longer have any poison on it.

The gold-robed guardsman didn't want to waste it, but right now, he had no choice but to use it!

"Using a blade?" Bebe stared. "Hmph, then I won't waste any more time with you either." A dagger appeared in Bebe's hand as well. This was the black dagger which Beirut had given him.

For now, let us move away from the battle between Bebe and the Deathgod Golem.

On the outside, Linley and the gold-robed guard were beginning to battle.

When the gold-robed guard fought with Linley, he instantly split into two, now having two divine clones outside.

"Divine clones?" Linley couldn't help but feel surprised.

But despite that, Linley still mercilessly chopped over with his adamantine heavy sword.

"Clang!" Weapons collided.

The Voidwave Sword's attack passed out from the adamantine heavy sword, shooting straight towards one of the divine clones of the gold-robed guard. The other divine clone wanted to use this chance to stab towards Linley, but at this time, its speed suddenly slowed.

"Bonds of wind?" The gold-robed guard instantly understood.

Not far away, behind Linley, Delia was wielding the Spear of Cortez and sent it thrusting forward with a powerful stab. A ray of light flew out, and in virtually an instant, it pierced through the gold-robed guard's chest, passing straight through it.

The gold-robed guard's divine clone couldn't help but shudder.

"Not good!" The gold-robed guard's face changed as he looked towards Linley in shock. Just now, the divine clone of his which had been hit by the Voidwave Sword had already died. He was completely capable of sensing how terrifying Linley's Voidwave Sword was. "Such an astonishing soul attack is definitely the product of fused profound mysteries!"

Fused profound mysteries!

And a soul attack.

"Flee!" The gold-robed guard instantly came to this decision as he began to scurry towards the outside.

"You want to run?" Linley's speed instantly began to raise.

"Ah!" The gold-robed man discovered, to his agony, that his current speed was only half his normal speed. This was because his entire body was being pressured. "That detestable woman!" He knew that the pressure his body was under was the doing of Delia. He also understood...

There was no way for him to defeat Linley.

"Aaaah!" Faced with Linley's attack, the gold-robed guard counter-attacked in grief and fury.

"Boom!"

When faced with death, he naturally brought out his most powerful attack. But under the assault of the Voidwave Sword, the gold-robed guard slumped over. With a flip of the hand, Linley stored the two corpses of this gold-robed guard into his interspatial ring."

"Delia, thanks!" Linley walked over.

"What a pity that I don't know how to use soul attacks," Delia laughed.

Since they had decided to take part in the Fiend trials, naturally they had to increase their power as much as they could. Thus, although they had sold off one of their Highgod artifacts, Linley had given the other one, the Spear of Cortez, to Delia, having her fuse it and learn how to use it.

The 'Fast' profound mystery matched well with the spear, while Delia also applied the 'Dimensional Space' technique. When Delia's spear thrust forth, it definitely possessed great power.

"Why did it stop?!" From inside the room, Bebe's unhappy voice could be heard.

Linley and Delia exchanged a glance, both laughing.

The Deathgod Golem was slumped in a corner, completely unmoving. Bebe saw Linley and Delia walk in, and he hurriedly said, "Boss, that metallic monster isn't moving any more. Did you kill the main body?" Bebe was able to guess that perhaps this was caused by the death of the original body.

"Right." Linley nodded.

"What is this?" Delia looked puzzledly at the Deathgod Golem. Linley's group had never seen a Deathgod Golem before.

Deathgod Golems were an extremely valuable sort of human-shaped weapon. It was much more valuable than an ordinary Highgod artifact. A single Deathgod Golem's price was far beyond even a Highgod spark. Thus the entire Moon Lake Castle only had twenty of them.

"First, collect this thing." Linley said. "After we leave, I'll investigate and see what this metallic thing is."

Linley didn't understand that actually, all they had to do to use the Deathgod Golem was to bind it with blood.

With a flip of his hands, Bebe stored the metallic creature into his interspatial ring.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 23, Moon Ring

The sound of battling rang out unabated throughout Moon Lake Castle, and the battle was extremely fierce.

Within the room.

“Right now, we only have a single moon ring. We still are missing two.” Delia looked towards Linley and Bebe as she spoke. Bebe frowned. “It’s just two. Let’s go. We’ll go and kill two more of the gold-robed guards, that’s all.”

“Don’t be hasty.”

Linley retrieved the moon ring, first binding it with blood, and then removing the contents of the moon ring. “This gold-robed guard really is quite rich. His total networth is over a million inkstones. Right. There’s a few amethysts as well. What a coincidence.”

Before this, when Linley had been struck by the Godslayer Arrow’s soul poison, and then executed his Voidwave Sword, he had used up quite a bit of spiritual energy.

Linley immediately stored one of the amethysts into his Coiling Dragon ring, completely refining it, and then allowed his spiritual energy to begin to absorb the soul essences...Linley’s ‘sea of consciousness’ thus had its spiritual energy completely recover as a large amount of soul essences began to be absorbed.

"The Boss is the smartest. He first took out the treasures inside." Bebe spoke, and the nearby Delia laughed as well.

During this Fiend trial, they only needed to give up the moon ring. As for the wealth inside of it, one was permitted to take it for one's own use.

"Let's go out. Everyone, be careful." Linley instructed.

Linley was the first to walk into the corridor. Just as Linley walked out the door...

"Huh?" Linley's face suddenly changed dramatically. Right outside the door, a spear suddenly pierced towards Linley like a lightning-fast viper. Linley was caught completely off guard and wasn't able to react at all.

"Bang!" Linley was sent flying by that spear thrust, but in mid-air, Linley somersaulted lightning-fast, landing on the ground. Linley looked at the person who had ambushed him; it was a gold-robed guard who was wielding a silver spear, a look of utter shock on the guard's face!

"What powerful defense." The guard hadn't expected that Linley would be able to take this spear thrust of his head on, without even his clothes being damaged.

Bebe and Delia immediately came out, both shocked as well.

"Three Gods?" The face of the gold-robed guard changed dramatically. "Flee!" He knew well the limits of his own power; perhaps one against two, he had a chance, but one against three, he would be finished. He had no idea that actually, his comrade had already been killed by Linley.

In a flash, the gold-robed guard moved over a hundred meters, fleeing at a speed so fast that not even Delia had a chance to catch him.

"Shkreeeeeeee!" Bebe emitted that ear-piercing sound.

Suddenly, from behind Bebe appeared that illusion of a Godeater Rat. This time, the illusion was only five or six meters tall, the same as the height of the corridor.

"Ahh!!" The gold-robed guard suddenly discovered that he was unable to move.

"How is this possible?!" The gold-robed guard's eyes were filled with terror.

Bebe opened his mouth wide.

A strange energy surrounded the gold-robed guard, who stared back disbelievingly and in terror towards Bebe. He could sense his soul shudder and his divine spark shake. "No..." He had never heard of someone being capable of devouring another person's divine spark in battle!

Two divine sparks flew out from the gold-robed guard's head, landing into Bebe's mouth.

"Gulp!"

Bebe swallowed the two divine sparks, then snorted. "You dare to sneak attack us? You were looking for death!" As he spoke, Bebe's body flashed forward as he stored the corpse into his interspatial ring. The interspatial ring of the gold-robed guard was a moon ring as well.

"Boss, we now have another moon ring." Bebe snickered as he looked at Linley.

"Bebe, don't be in a hurry to use your Godeater ability." Linley said. "There are countless dangers in this castle. We need to be prepared for all possibilities."

Linley knew that executing the Godeater ability actually consumed a considerable amount of spiritual energy.

"It's fine. I don't know how to use soul attacks, or how to create a soul defense. It doesn't make a big difference if I use up a bit of spiritual energy." Bebe said openly, and Linley couldn't help but shake his head and laughed.

Linley's group wandered about on the third level of Moon Lake Castle for a long while without discovering a single person. From the fourth level beneath them, however, the faint sounds of slaughter could be heard.

"The third level has really been cleaned out!" Bebe cursed softly. "All I see on the floor is bloodstains, chunks of flesh, divine artifacts, and divine sparks. I haven't seen a single moon ring. Can't they leave a few behind? Why take everything away."

Linley and Delia, hearing Bebe say this, couldn't help but laugh.

"Linley, it seems there's nothing else to get on the third floor. Shall we advance to the fourth?" Delia looked at Linley.

"Alright." Linley didn't have any other ideas.

He had just acquired two moon rings. He was still missing one.

In the dark stone staircase, Linley's group moved down carefully, one step at a time, on guard against ambushes at all times. The fourth floor was naturally quite large. Linley's team selected a primary corridor, carefully advancing forward through it.

"Bang!"

"Haaargh!"

In a room in front of them, the sound of a battle could be heard, and from the sound of it, it seemed very chaotic. Most likely, quite a few people were battling each other.

Linley's group exchanged glances, then silently crept closer.

"Whoosh!" Three figures suddenly charged out of the room. The three of them were very cautious; when they saw it was Linley's team, they didn't attack. One of them said, "Oh, it's three of you. Best of luck." As they spoke, the three didn't waste any more time speaking, immediately departed.

"They came with us." Linley's team was certain about this.

There were a total of just a thousand people in the Fiend trials.

As a Deity, their memories were naturally excellent. When they had exited the metallic lifeform, with but a single glance, everyone had memorized every other person's appearance.

"Boom!" A corpse flew out of the room, fiercely smashing against the wall then falling to the floor.

"That's a Fiend trial participant!" Linley's team immediately recognized him. "Then...there are definitely gold-robed guards inside." Not hesitating at all, the three of them immediately flew in. However, before Linley's team even had a chance to draw near, a golden-haired youth charged out, collecting the corpse on the ground.

"Hmph." The gold-haired youth clearly was very delighted.

But he immediately saw Linley's team.

"He is also a Fiend trial participant." Linley's team was very surprised, but then they had the same thought.

"Can it be that for the sake of a moon ring, he went after his own side?" Linley couldn't help but think back to what the silver-haired old man of the Fiend Castle had said. The old man had told them to be careful and to avoid dying in the hands of their own people, rather than that of Moon Lake Castle's.

"That really is the case..." Linley's team's hearts grew cold.

The gold-haired youth glanced at Linley, then without wasting any time, immediately scurried towards a different direction.

"It seems we need to be careful." Linley's team continued to move forward. After that event, they didn't dare to be overconfident when encountering other members of the Fiend trials. Perhaps others would desire their moon rings and attempt to kill them.

"Huh?"

Linley's team reached a narrow corridor and discovered four people there, all familiar figures. It was four men who had been seated behind them in the metallic creature.

"Hey, Linley, it's you guys?" The leader, a muscular bald man, laughed.

"Fettes [Fei'di'si], it's you guys." A smile appeared on Linley's face as well. Only, Linley's team wasn't completely relaxed either.

After all, Linley's team had just seen people on the same side kill each other.

In truth, they weren't really on the same side. They were just all Fiend trial participants. They didn't have much of a relationship with each other.

Fettes and the other three walked over smiling, with the leader, Fettes, saying, "Well? How have you done? How many moon rings have you acquired?"

When the subject of moon rings came up, Linley immediately grew guarded while sending a message with divine sense to Bebe and Delia, "Be careful. These four fellows were on fairly good terms with us on the way over, true, but it's possible that they have designs on us."

"Got it, Boss. I hope they do, actually." Bebe messaged back.

Linley nodded to himself.

"Oh, how many can we possibly have gotten? If we had enough, we would've left the castle long ago and returned to the metallic lifeform." Linley laughed calmly as he spoke.

Fettes and the other three all had a thought.

Linley's words clearly suggested...although Linley didn't have enough moon rings, he should have at least acquired one or two moon rings.

"Right. We don't have enough either. Best of luck. The four of us are heading off now." Fettes laughed as he spoke.

Linley nodded in a friendly manner.

Although Fettes and the other three said they were leaving, they walked in Linley's direction. Although from the looks of it, they just intended to walk past Linley, Linley and his team, who had been on guard this entire time, were storing energy, preparing to unleash their most powerful attacks at any moment.

"Whoosh!"

Fettes and the other three suddenly attacked. Logically speaking, a sneak attack at such a short distance shouldn't have given Linley's side time to react. Unfortunately, Linley's team was already prepared. As though a natural reaction, at almost the same time the attack was launched...

"Haha..." Bebe suddenly let out an extremely excited, wild laugh.

"Hmph!" Linley's adamantine heavy sword struck out like lightning.

Two had joined forces against Linley, while another was dealing with Bebe and the last one with Delia.

Clearly, Fettes' group knew that Linley's group was led by Linley, and thus Linley should be the most powerful one. That's why this was how they divided themselves up this way.

Four on three.

"Bang!" A lightning-fast exchange of blows, but two people on Fettes' side directly fell down.

One was killed by Linley's Voidwave Sword, while the other was stabbed through the head by Bebe's dagger.

Linley's entire body was covered with that earthen yellow membrane. The enemy's blade smashed down on Linley's head, but Linley's Pulseguard Armor allowed him to take no damage at all. However, the 'Voidwave Sword' fell upon Fettes, causing him to collapse and die, then and there.

As for the person who wanted to kill Delia, he was entangled by Delia's 'Spatial Wind' while Delia herself dodged, causing him to be completely unable to draw close to her while instead being struck by Delia's 'Spear of Cortez'. Fortunately, he was able to dodge fast, and thus although stabbed in the chest, he escaped with his life.

"Flee!" The two lucky survivors, seeing that the situation was grim, immediately fled.

At the same time, a divine clone suddenly appeared out of Fettes' corpse on the ground. That divine clone naturally collected the interspatial ring while at the same time fleeing at high speed.

"Swish!" Linley's Bloodviolet suddenly appeared and delivered a backhanded blow.

Dimensional Decapitator!

The fusion of the 'Fast' and 'Slow' aspects...in the past, Linley perhaps had only gained 10% of the total insights into these two aspects, but after having spent over twenty years in the Yulan continent and thirty-plus years in the Infernal Realm, he had nearly mastered half of these two aspects.

The power was more than four or five times greater now!

Killing a Demigod with one sword strike was incomparably simple. Fettes' body was neatly cleaved in half.

"Hmph. His clone was a mere Demigod." Linley laughed calmly.

"This Fettes most likely wanted his divine clones to all be Deities through their own power rather than fusing with divine sparks." Delia glance sideways at the corpse on the floor.

Linley stretched his hand out, collecting the other corpse of Fettes into his interspatial ring as well.

"Bebe, Delia, let's go inside the room and see if there's any moon rings." Linley laughed as he spoke, and then the three of them took into a room that seemed to be a storage room.

As Linley saw it, since Fettes was the leader of the group, he should have moon rings in his own interspatial ring if they had them. However, without actually checking, there was no way to be sure.

The three entered the room, but were surprised when they did.

"Huh?" Linley's group discovered that one of the walls had been moved aside, revealing a tunnel within. The tunnel headed towards a downwards slope, most likely having some sort of connection to the fifth floor.

"A secret passage?" Linley's team exchanged glances.

"Let's not rush in." Linley said. "If Fettes' interspatial ring has a moon ring, there's no need for us to risk ourselves."

But right at that moment.

"Swoosh!"

A human figure blew in like a gust of wind through the tunnel. Linley's group was greatly shocked, while Bebe cried out in surprise, "Regina, it's you?"

Regina saw Linley's team and was instantly overjoyed. "Save me!" As she spoke, she immediately flew towards Linley's group as she let out a sigh of relief. Right at this moment, two more people flew out from the dark tunnel. Upon seeing Regina have helpers, and three of them, they were so frightened, they immediately flew back into the darkness.

"Linley, kill them! They have a Deathgod Golem!" Regina said hurriedly.

"What's a Deathgod Golem?" Bebe looked at Regina in confusion.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 24, Black-Robed Guards

At this moment, combat continued throughout the Moon Lake Castle. It was extremely chaotic.

Within the secret room in the fourth floor, Linley's group was with Regina.

Regina, seeing that Linley wasn't going to pursue those two person and instead asked her questions, couldn't help but feel helpless and frustrated. "You guys...you wasted a rare opportunity!" As Regina saw it, as soon as Linley's team heard the words 'Deathgod Golem', they should have immediately chased after him.

Who would have imagined that Linley's team wouldn't move at all?

That moment of hesitation meant that the two had definitely run far away by now.

"Miss Regina, you said a 'Deathgod Golem'? What exactly is that?" Linley asked.

Regina stared at the three in astonishment and puzzlement. After a long while, she responded, "Linley, do you truly not know, or are you just pretending? I'm beginning to think that you are intentionally making a fool out of me." Deathgod Golems were very famous in the Infernal Realm.

Anyone who had been here for a fairly long period of time would generally know about it.

"We told you to speak, so speak!" Bebe pursed his lips.

Regina glanced at Linley's team, then muttered quietly, "I really don't know if you guys truly don't know or are just pretending. Fine, I'll tell. Deathgod Golems are a type of unique human-shaped weapon. You can consider it a human-shaped divine artifact."

"Deathgod Golems are the same as divine artifacts. They are constructed from metal, and they have divine power; only, their divine power is provided by a 'divine jewel'." Regina continued to explain. "Deathgod Golems are incapable of soul attacks, but because they are weapons, they aren't afraid of soul attacks either. In addition, their entire bodies are extremely hard. They are generally very hard to deal with."

Linley, Delia, and Bebe exchanged glances.

"So that's a Deathgod Golem!" Bebe let out a sigh. Linley and Delia both laughed.

They finally understood that the metallic creature which had battled Bebe was a Deathgod Golem.

Deathgod Golems truly were very hard to deal with. Generally speaking, even Highgods who encountered Deathgod Golems would find them to be a headache. There was only one way to deal with a Deathgod Golem; kill the person controlling it! After its master was killed, the Deathgod

Golem would naturally become a masterless item.”

“If not for Bebe, the Deathgod Golem really would have been hard to deal with. No wonder the Deathgod Golem wasn’t damaged much despite taking those huge hits.” Linley sighed to himself, then looked at Bebe. “Only, when the Deathgod Golem ran into Bebe, there was nothing it could do either.”

Bebe was an absolute freak.

However, there were only two Godeater Rats in the entire multiverse.

“Based on my observations, that Deathgod Golem should have been a high level one.” Regina sighed. “A high-level Deathgod Golem is far more valuable than a Highgod artifact. Even a Highgod spark is far inferior to it.”

“How expensive is it?” Bebe’s eyes were gleaming.

Regina glanced at Bebe, then at Linley and Delia. Unhappily, she sighed, “A single Deathgod Golem is far more complicated to assemble than a divine artifact, and the price is ridiculously high as well. Generally speaking, you would need a hundred million inkstones.”

“A hundred million?”

Linley, Delia, and Bebe felt a surge of joy.

It seemed that their greatest treasure was not that Highgod spark; it was that Deathgod Golem.

"That's why I wanted you to kill those two people! If the four of us joined forces, we definitely would have succeeded. That was a Deathgod Golem!" Regina still felt extremely upset. "Those two bastards got it. I really am unhappy."

Linley's team only laughed.

"Boom!" Suddenly, a massive earthquake emanated from the direction of the tunnel.

Linley frowned. "That earthquake should have come from fairly deep in the tunnel. It probably came from the fifth floor."

"Come, let's take a look." Bebe was extremely excited.

Regina was also excited. "Let's go take a look." Without hesitating, they headed straight into the darkness of the tunnel. The tunnel clearly was very narrow, and at most two people could squeeze in side by side. It was much narrower than the normal walkways of the castle.

Linley's group of four immediately passed over a hundred meters.

"Right here!" Linley's team came to a halt.

"Bang!" The terrifying earthquake came from high up the walls of the tunnel, and there were quite a few cracks on the walls as well. Clearly, the tunnel walls here were not protected by the magical formation.

Bebe was kneeling there, peering through the cracks.

"Boss, hurry over." Bebe sent with his divine sense, and Linley's team immediately drew near.

What was on the other side of the cracks?

The tiny seams were enough for Linley to see the situation on the other side of the hidden passageway.

"It's that baldy, Crompton?" Linley was greatly shocked.

In a wide, dark hall, there were three figures that were fighting as fast as lightning.

"Boom!" Crompton was hit by a vicious kick and sent smashing into the wall, then slumped to the ground.

"Ugh!" Crompton stared viciously at the distant black-robed guard.
"This black-robed guard really isn't easy to deal with."

"Crompton, you idiot, just stand far away and use your 'Gravitational Field' to slow him down. Remember, don't affect me!" The Fiend who was battling the black-robed guard shouted angrily through divine sense.

Crompton knew that he was weak. "I got it."

After acknowledging, Crompton immediately stood up on the ground. The black-robed figure that was battling the Fiend suddenly trembled. The black-robed figure felt that a strange power was affecting him, as though making his body ten thousand times heavier in an instant.

"This is Geomagnetism!" The black-robed figure instantly understood.

The Profound Mysteries of the 'Gravitational Field' was also known as the Profound Mysteries of Geomagnetism. It was also one of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth.

"Bang!" The black-robed guard's body suddenly shuddered, transforming into a blurry illusion. Sometimes the Fiend's sword would pierce through the blurry body, but be unable to harm the black-robed guard at all. That black warblade in the black-robed guard's hands, on the other hand, fluttered about with no fixed rhythm.

The Fiend instantly transformed into lightning, then instantly reformed, his attacks terrifyingly powerful.

"Bang!" "Bang!"

The blows of these two experts created massive earthquake-like vibrations with each exchange.

The Fiend and the black-robed guard were going all out against each other.

"How can this black-robed guard be so tough? Killing a black-robed guard isn't a four star mission at all. This should be a five star mission." Crompton cursed softly, while at the same time, he worked hard to control the geomagnetic force to affect the black-robed guard.

This black-robed guard was indeed very strong.

In reality, Crompton's side had been fighting him three against one! Three Fiends against one black-robed guard.

The three Fiends were the three Fiends that had been in charge of supervising Linley's squad.

Only, this black-robed guard had two Highgod clones. One of his clones as well as one of the Fiends on Crompton's side had fallen, leaving the black-robed guard with only one body, while the Fiends only had Crompton and 'Opole' [Ao'pu'er], the Highgod who was currently battling.

The fact was that Crompton's power was very weak.

"Bang!" Opole's sword flashed like lightning, stabbing into the blurry shadow.

"Aaaah!" A miserable, agonized cry.

"Bang!"

The shadow suddenly broke apart, with the broken part of the darkness reforming into a solid object; a large chunk of a leg. And then the shadow began to shudder before reforming into a complete figure. The black-robed guard was currently furious; he was cursing to himself, "Fiends? All you can do is gang up on others!"

Opole was laughing coldly as he transformed into a bolt of lightning, once more entering battle against the black-robed guard.

"Big Brother, come over, quickly!!!" The black-robed guard suddenly let out an explosive roar.

Following the roar, the faces of both Crompton and Opole, who was in mid-combat, both changed.

"Have to end this battle fast!" Opole didn't want to go all out, but he no longer had a chance. Bellowing with rage, his body began to distort as he transformed into a ray of bluish-black lightning which mercilessly struck towards the black-robed guard.

"Die." Opole's bellow could be heard echoing in the room.

The black-robed guard's face changed dramatically, but at the same time, he viciously swung out with his saber, which transformed into an illusory black shadow as it swept out towards that bolt of lightning.

"Bang!"

A terrifying energy ripple that caused even the cracks on the walls to expand.

The two of them hunched over, then fell to the floor. Opole was already dead, while the black-robed guard, despite having exhausted all of his spiritual energy, hadn't died yet.

"You want to kill me, but your soul defense was far weaker than mine?" The black-robed man chuckled.

"Whoosh!" A human figure suddenly appeared in front of the black-robed guard.

The black-robed guard's face changed. Lifting his head up, he saw the savage-faced Crompton, who was wielding a long saber. "Die!" Crompton, ignoring all else, chopped down towards the black-robed guard with his saber. The long saber pierced through the air, seemingly instantly arriving in front of the black-robed guard's eyes.

"Ah!!!!"

Bound by the 'Gravitational Field' and heavily wounded, the black-robed guard howled angrily. Ignoring all else, he brandished his blade again, once more using his soul attack.

"Clang!"

The sabers collided, and their souls attacked each other!

In terms of profoundness of soul attacks, the black-robed guard was indeed more formidable than Crompton, but his spiritual energy had been almost exhausted by now. Crompton, however, hadn't had his power affected much. A head-on collision like this meant that they were essentially on par.

"Bang!" The black-robed guard borrowed the force of the collision to fly back and retreat.

However...

In the instant when Crompton had struck out with his long saber, with a flip of his wrist, he had suddenly shot out a dagger from his hand as well.

"Slash!" The dagger buried itself into the black-robed guard's body.

The black-robed guard fell from mid-air, landing at the corner of the wall. His eyes were filled with resentment, absolute resentment!

"You aren't willing to accept this?" Crompton snickered.

Crompton knew that he was weak, which is why he had spent money to buy expensive soul poisons, which he had stained his dagger with. This flying dagger was Crompton's greatest weapon, and it also contained the 'Strength' profound mystery of the Laws of the Earth.

As the black-robed guard was already heavily injured, upon being hit, he immediately died.

“Opole, you always showed off in front of me! You always ordered me around and looked down on me!” Crompton’s face was savage, and he stared coldly at the two Fiend corpses in front of him. Right now, he was extremely wild. “But today, I, Crompton, am the survivor, right? Haha...and I acquired this black moon ring as well. I’ll immediately become a Four Star Fiend.”

With a wave of his hand, Crompton collected the two Fiend corpses, and then looked towards the black-robed guard’s corpse.

But...

The ground was empty.

The corpse was missing!

“How...how is this possible?” Crompton stared, his eyes turning round.

Two Fiends had died, while he, Crompton, had risked his life as well before finally killing that black-robed guard. But now the body of that black-robed guard was missing?

“Hurry up and go!”

Linley and the other three flew at high speed out of the secret corridor, back to the fourth floor.

"Haha, Crompton is going to feel 'awesome' about that, haha." Bebe was extremely delighted.

The black-robed guard's corpse was next to the wall, just a meter or so away from the cracks in the wall. Linley's team naturally immediately moved closer to the cracks in the wall, then immediately stored the corpse into an interspatial ring.

Generally speaking, anything at close range could be stored into an interspatial ring.

Crompton's gaze immediately fell onto the wall and the cracks in it that had been caused by the battle.

"Aaaah, inside!" Crompton instantly understood.

"Bastard!" Crompton immediately bellowed. He charged straight towards the wall, using a full strength vicious attack with the Profound Mysteries of 'Strength'. The already-cracked walls, with a 'boom', shattered apart, revealing a giant hole. Behind the hole was the secret tunnel.

"Moon ring, my moon ring!" Crompton's heart was filled with resentment.

With a moon ring, he would have completed the mission, which meant that he not only would get an enormous reward, he would also become a Four Star Fiend.

"Where'd they run off to?" Crompton stood in the middle of the hole, staring into the two ends of the secret tunnel, not able to make up his mind for the moment. But right at this moment...

"Swish!" "Swish!"

Two figures suddenly appeared in the room. It was two black-robed guards.

"You killed Fifth Bro?" The two black-robed guards stared at Crompton.

Crompton turned his head and was instantly terrified. A single one of these guards was already very difficult to deal with; now two of them came?"

"Flee!" Crompton no longer cared about anything else, choosing to charge straight up. And this direction was the same direction which Linley's group had fled towards.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 25, Nowhere to Run

The black-robed guards of Moon Lake Castle were all elite Highgods who had been carefully selected.

Crompton's team of three Fiends, facing that single black-robed guard, had only won a narrow victory. But of course, the main reason was that Crompton himself was too weak, while the other two Fiends were only average for highgods.

"I just killed one, and now two more appear? If they catch me, I'll definitely die!" Crompton was terrified senseless, and he wildly fled out from the corridor.

"What's going on?" Crompton's face changed.

The tunnel up ahead had been sealed!

"How is this possible? How could this tunnel have been sealed? It should have an exit!" How could Crompton have imagined that when Linley's group of four fled, to prevent him from pursuing and attacking, they had moved the wall over and shut it?

Crompton was currently fleeing at high speed!

How would he have any time to investigate if this wall had a secret mechanism or not? He had no time! There were two black-robed guards in hot pursuit behind him. If he hesitated, he would be finished.

He only had one option – break through the wall!

Frantic, Crompton ignored everything else and rammed his fist viciously against the wall at the end of the tunnel, a punch which held nothing back...

“Boom!” The wall immediately split asunder, and Crompton charged out from the shattered wall, rushing into the room. However, Crompton’s speed still slowed down slightly, while from behind, the two black-robed guards who were more powerful than him to begin with caught up to him in that moment!

“You want to flee!” A furious bellow. A black shadow rushed out from the shattered wall, then delivered from mid-air a vicious saber blow that seemed to have the power to split the heavens and rend the earth apart. Under this wild blow, space itself distorted and began to shake as ripples in space spread out towards each side like ripples in water.

Crompton’s face changed dramatically.

“Nooo!” Crompton’s face was savage, and he bellowed as he struggled in the face of death.

“Clang!”

Crompton used his own warblade to block upwards above his head, blocking that wild chopping saber of the opponent, preventing it from pressing downwards any further!

However...

That black-robed guard's saber carried a strange vibrating power, which passed straight through the warblade to Crompton's head. With a 'rumble', Crompton's head instantly began to vibrate countless times as it turned into powder!

"Nooo!" That fierce cry of Crompton's still reverberated in the room.

From head to waist, his entire body had been shaken to smithereens.

The black shadow solidified. It was a callous, short silver-haired man who was wielding a warblade. Behind him, another black-robed guard said softly, "Big Brother, just now, we only saw one of Fifth Bro's divine clones. But that bald man was still alive. Fifth Bro should be dead."

The two black-robed guards felt great pain in their hearts.

The callous man growled, "Most likely the vast majority of we ten brothers have perished. One on one, those Fiends aren't necessarily our match. But they outnumber us!"

Indeed. More than twenty Fiends had come, while there were only ten black-robed guards.

Two or three of the weaker Fiends were able to overcome a single black-robed guard, while there were powerful Fiends present as well. Even aside from those three Five Star Fiends, there were quite a few Four Star Fiends as well, who were comparable in power to the black-robed guards.

Suddenly, the sounds of a violent battle rang out from the fourth floor.

"Let's head over." The two black-robed guards didn't hesitate at all, instantly hurrying towards that area.

On the fourth floor of Moon Lake Castle, within a main hall that was a hundred meters large that had many long tables within it. These tables were capable of seating hundreds of people; most likely, it was the location meant for the gold-robed guards to gather together and celebrate and eat.

Within a side room next to the main hall.

Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Regina were all here.

Hearing that fierce cry, Bebe raised an eyebrow. Excitedly, he said, "Boss, that sound seems to be the stinking baldy's."

Linley had the same thought, and a hint of a smile crept onto his face. "Right. The direction the voice came from should be from the secret tunnel. Crompton probably saw that the corpse went missing and wanted to pursue us, but then encountered others in the tunnel." Linley knew that if Crompton didn't die, in the future he would definitely make trouble for Linley's team.

Linley had been preparing to have a big battle with Crompton.

But now, it seemed, someone helped him deal with the matter.

Delia laughed as she looked at Regina and asked, "Regina, do you have any moon rings yet?"

"Not yet. If I did, I would have left this castle long ago. Why would I be here risking myself? But it seems all the gold-robed guards have been killed. We weren't able to find any at all in the end." Regina shook her head helplessly as she spoke.

Linley understood this as well.

"Although at first, they killed some of the Fiend trial participants, in the end, our numbers were still greater than the numbers of the gold-robed guards." Regina sighed. "More importantly, most likely quite a few Fiends killed some gold-robed guards as well!"

Linley agreed with this.

Although Fiends were in pursuit of the black-robed guards, when they encountered the gold-robed guards, they naturally wouldn't just let them leave either.

"Boom!" A massive earthquake spread out, causing even Linley's room to shake and vibrate.

"Right over there." Linley was shocked.

There were battles going on everywhere in Moon Lake Castle, so Linley wouldn't have paid any attention to distant battles. However, this battle was happening in the main hall nearby. Linley's team couldn't help but just slightly open a crack in the room, peering into the hall.

"Three black-robed guards and eleven Fiends?" Linley's group was shocked at what they had seen.

The three black-robed guards had fled to this place, while the Fiends had pursued them.

"The black-robed guards are outnumbered badly. They'll definitely lose." Bebe judged. Although Linley's group was chatting amongst themselves, because they had utilized their Godrealms, they had blocked off sound from leaving their area into the main hall.

Linley sighed with some surprise. "The black-robed guards, especially that one with short silver hair, is so powerful. He...trains in the Elemental Laws of the Wind?"

Linley's immediately attention focused on that black-robed guard.

Just now, when the two black-robed guards had killed Crompton, they heard the sounds of battle and had immediately hurried over. They discovered a black-robed guard besieged by three Fiends. The two black-robed guards naturally helped out...but as soon as they did, other Fiends hurried over as well.

There were simply far too many Fiends!

In the end, it ended up being eleven against three!

In the wide main hall, the eleven Fiends battled against the three black-robed guards.

“Ruuuuuumbble....” A low, unpleasant sound suddenly rang out, like a hammer striking against the souls of everyone present.

It was the leader of the black-robed guards, the short silver-haired man.

Wielding a warblade, he released the profound truths of the Elemental Laws of the Wind. The ten black-robed guards were ranked in order of strength. As the big brother of the ten black-robed guards, his power was comparable to that of the steward's.

His warblade danced as that rumbling sound persisted.

“What is that bizarre sound?!” When the Fiends heard it, they couldn't help but feel irritated and distracted. They didn't want to listen to it and so blocked off all foreign sounds, and yet that bizarre sound still entered their brains, causing them to be irritated and distracted time and time again.

“Die!”

A black warblade danced out. The silver-haired man stared coldly as he chopped down with his black warblade against a Fiend.

The chop was blocked.

“Rumble...” That vibration directly entered the Fiend’s head, which immediately transformed into fine powder as a divine spark fell out.

“Everyone, be careful. He’s already completely fused the Profound Mysteries of Music and the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves!” Amongst the Fiends, there were some with great experience and who were immediately able to make this judgment. Only when the Profound Mysteries of Music and the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves were completely fused into the Profound Truths of Sound would there be such a terrifying attack.

With a single attack, not only had he affected his opponent’s souls, he was able to launch combined soul-material attack!

The Elemental Laws of the Wind had nine types of profound mysteries. Any two profound mysteries when combined would have particular strengths. Only, the fusion of the Profound Mysteries of Music and the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves was the most famous one. Its power was extremely terrifying!

“Is that...?”

Linley, also analyzing the Profound Mysteries of Music and the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves, seemed to have realized something from the attack of the leader of the black-robed guards.

"Pure sound waves can reach such a level?" Linley was greatly astonished. "And that sound. Why is it that the sound had the same effect of shaking the soul as those infrasound waves?" Linley was starting to be puzzled. He couldn't understand at all.

At present, Linley had only gained a basic level of understanding regarding the Profound Mysteries of Music and the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves. He hadn't reached mastery in either, much less fuse them completely.

"It seems this leader of the black-robed guards has already mastered the Profound Truths of Sound." Linley hypothesized. "Even a Highgod was shaken to pieces. How can sound waves be so powerful?" Linley's heart was filled with confusion. All sorts of hypotheses regarding the profound mysteries of music and sound waves began to appear in his mind, then be applied to the attack by that black-robed guard. Linley felt as though he was coming to understand something. "Uh, wait, that's wrong. That's not how the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves work. So not only is it capable of internal vibrations, it's also capable of material attacks..."

The attack of this black-robed guard had caused Linley to instantly understand something. Only, this 'something' was the first step on the journey to fusing the Profound Mysteries of Music and the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves!

Delia, Bebe, and Regina were all flabbergasted. Linley actually sat down into the meditative position.

"He...what is he doing?" Regina was somewhat shocked.

Bebe's expression was bizarre. In a low voice, he said, "Boss...Boss probably had another insight."

"A sudden insight?" Delia was somewhat shocked as well.

Although the black-robed guard was very powerful, the eleven Fiends had experts in their ranks as well. Over the course of that wild battle, two of the three black-robed guards died, leaving only that black-robed guard leader and seven Fiends.

Seven Fiends surrounded him.

"All dead...Second Bro...Third Bro...they are all dead, all dead!" The black-robed guard leader was going crazy.

"Aaaaaaah!" The black-robed guard leader actually raised his head up and began to bellow wildly.

A spatial ripple that could be seen with the naked eye suddenly emanated out from the body of the black-robed guard leader, instantly encompassing the seven Fiends! As the ultimate desperation attack of the black-robed guard leader, this roar also contained the most powerful attack of the Profound Truths of Sound.

With this roar, of the seven Fiends, two of them actually became completely stunned and their heads spun. For a moment, they were in a dazed state.

"Swish!" "Swish!"

At the same moment, three arrows shot out from the hands of that black-robed guard leader, piercing towards one of the dazed Fiends.

"Slash!"

The Fiend didn't react at all, and the three arrows pierced straight into his body.

"Bang!" Another Fiend collapsed.

"What a pity. I only had three arrows. Otherwise, I could have killed another Fiend." The black-robed guard leader said quietly in his heart. Even when a Highgod was in a dazed state, a single Godslayer Arrow's soul poison wasn't enough to kill one of them.

Thus, he used all three of his arrows against a single person.

The other dazed Fiend thus managed to escape a calamity.

"Kill!" The five more powerful Fiends who hadn't been too deeply impacted by that roar launched simultaneous attacks on that black-robed guard leader.

"BOOM!" The black-robed guard leader's body exploded.

The main hall was covered in corpses. Only now did the six remaining Fiends let out a breath."

"He trained in the Elemental Laws of the Wind. He was extremely fast, fluctuated unpredictably, and the two profound mysteries he had fused were that of sound waves and music." One of the Fiends shook his head and sighed. "We really are catastrophically unlucky to have encountered this fellow. I don't know if even ten of us Fiends have survived this mission."

Linley, still in a state of meditation and insight, didn't know that the black-robed guard leader had already died. Linley, drifting amidst the myriad wonders of the Laws, had his heart completely one with nature and with the world.

Only....

"Boss, wake up, quick!" Bebe sent a spiritual message, calling Linley to wakefulness.

"Bebe, what is it?" Linley looked at astonishment towards Bebe.

"The most exciting battle, and the most dangerous battle. We might be hit by the collateral shockwaves at any moment!" Bebe said softly.

Not just Bebe; the nearby Delia and Regina were all staring towards the outside in astonishment. Linley peered through the crack in the door as well, and saw that outside, a long black dragon covered with black spikes was coiling in the main hall.

Loysius and another Five Star Fiend was standing there in mid-air, their gazes locked onto the black dragon's.

The other six Fiends were standing in the corners of the room.

"You won't be able to run." Loysius growled.

"Speak. How much is your bounty for this mission? I will give you ten times the amount! As long as the two of you are willing to leave immediately." The black dragon let out a low growl.

"I didn't expect that the master of this castle was a divine beast." Loysius laughed coldly. "However...you, give us ten times the reward? Hmph, when we kill you, all of the wealth of your interspatial ring will be ours. And what's more..." Loysius' face seemed to have suddenly become covered with a layer of ice. "You killed my second sister!"

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 26, You Can't Kill Me

The battle at Moon Lake Castle had already reached the final stages. The master of the castle had already transformed into his original form, an enormous black dragon that was hundreds of meters long, and with ferocious sharp spikes growing from the back. Despite having transformed back into his original form, the master of the castle wasn't confident in battling these Fiends!

Within the secret room on the side of the wide main hall.

Linley's group of four was secretly watching through the crack in the door. Actually, it wasn't that the Fiends didn't realize Linley was there; only, they could sense that Linley and co's auras were all of the God-level, and so the Fiends couldn't be bothered to pay them any heed.

"That Loysius says the black dragon is the master of the castle?" Linley appeared quite puzzled.

The nearby Delia explained, "Linley, just then, when you suddenly began to meditate and gain insights, we didn't dare disturb you. At that time, the master of the castle was pursued and attacked here in the main hall. Seeing that there were six other Fiends here, the master of the castle lost his confidence as well."

Linley nodded slightly.

"Huh?" Linley suddenly had a thought.

"Moon Lake Castle is already in such dire straits. Even if those gold-robed guards are still alive, most likely all of them have fled the castle." Linley understood that regardless of whether or not any of the gold-robed guards had survived, most likely they wouldn't encounter any more gold-robed guards.

After all, those hundreds of gold-robed guards weren't idiots either. Even the master of the castle had fallen to such dire straits. Even if they were alive, why wouldn't they flee?

"Bebe, take a look." Linley tossed an interspatial ring to Bebe. "See if there are any moon rings inside."

"Right." Bebe hurriedly bound it with blood.

Meanwhile, Linley took a look inside the other interspatial ring.

At first, when Linley's group had been ambushed by those other four Fiend trial participants, those four people had failed in their ambush and two of them instead had been killed by Linley's group. Naturally, they acquired the two interspatial rings from those two.

"We only have two moon rings right now. We need one more." Linley was somewhat worried.

Delia looked at Linley and Bebe.

"Boss, although this interspatial ring has some inkstones and azurites, it doesn't have a moon ring." Bebe said helplessly.

Delia and Bebe both looked at Linley, wanting to see whether or not the interspatial ring Linley was holding had a moon ring within it.

"There it is! It really has a moon ring inside!" Linley's investigation resulted in a look of delight appearing on his face. The previous owner of this interspatial ring was the leader of the group, 'Fettes'. It made sense that after they acquired a moon ring, he would have stored it into his own interspatial ring.

"Haha, we have a full set of moon rings now." Bebe was extremely excited.

But Regina just stared at Linley. "Linley, just one ring?"

"Just one ring." Linley smiled apologetically. He understood that Regina deeply desired a moon ring as well. However, the three of them only had three moon rings; they didn't have any extras to give Regina. They wanted to help but were unable to.

Regina was very disappointed, but she still squeezed out a smile. "It's fine. When we go out later, I'll see if there's any other chances."

Suddenly, an explosive shout rang out from the main hall...

"Don't go too far! I can gift you with enormous wealth, and I can even give you this entire castle. In fact...I can even come up with a way to let you all become Six Star Fiends. The point of completing this mission is to become Six Star Fiends, right?" The enormous dragon bellowed.

The hundreds of meters long black dragon coiled about in the air of the main hall, while Loysius and the other Fiend just stood there in mid-air. The difference in size between the two sides was enormous.

However, right now, the enormous black dragon was begging the other side.

"Hmph, let us become Six Star Fiends? The only way of becoming a higher level Fiend is to complete a mission. There's no other ways at all." Loysius stared at the light blue scimitar in his hands, then said slowly, "Stop struggling. Prepare to die!"

"Big Brother, let me do it." The other, blue-haired warrior said hurriedly. "Let me avenge our second sister."

"No."

Loysius glanced sideways at the enormous black dragon. "Although he has utilized two spirit attacks and his spiritual energy is most likely almost used up, we can't take any risk. I'll do it!" Loysius had already begun to gather his power. He was completely confident.

"I am Wyrnessin [U'er'ni'sen]!" The enormous black dragon bellowed. "You can't kill me! You can't kill me!!!"

"Wyrnessin?"

Loysius snickered. "Who's Wyrnessin? If you are going to brag before dying, pick a more frightening name. For example, you could say that you are the Bloodviolet Fiend. Or even that you are an almighty Sovereign... haha, who gives a damn who you are? Die!"

As he spoke, Loysius chopped out with that scimitar.

It moved very gently. Space didn't move at all, and there wasn't even any wind. It was as though this scimitar didn't even exist.

The enormous black dragon bellowed.

"You can't kill me!" It was extremely enraged. As the scimitar chopped down gently, the enormous black dragon went mad. Risking its own life, it once more executed its divine ability. The enormous black dragon emitted that low, growling roar...

"Whooooosh." Space trembled.

"Crackle!"

Loysius' scimitar chopped down, and a blue shadow slashed through the air, landing on the enormous black draconic head. The strange thing was...the scales and flesh of the enormous black dragon split neatly in half as the scimitar cut straight through the head and struck onto a divine spark.

"You will regret this!!!"

The enormous black dragon's dying roar echoed in the main hall.

"BOOM!"

The enormous black draconic corpse slammed into the ground. Loysius' face was ashen as he withdrew his scimitar. Glancing sideways at the massive corpse, he snickered, "Hmph, his divine ability really is formidable. But you said I'll regret it? In the entire Nightblaze Prefecture, there's only a few people that I'm afraid of, and I know all of them. How will you, a dead man, make me regret it?"

"Big Brother!" The blue-haired, muscular man looked towards Loysius in concern. "Are you alright?"

His second sister had suffered that divine ability of the master of the castle and had thus perished. Loysius had previously battled with the master of the castle on the fifth level and had taken on the innate ability once before. Now, he had been hit with it again.

"I'm fine." Loysius glanced at his brother and squeeze out a smile. "Third Bro, let's head back. Sadly, Second Sis died."

The muscular blue-haired was in great pain as well.

"When we came, Second Sis said that after completing this mission, we will all be Six Star Fiends, at which point, we should find a location where we could build a castle that would belong to we three siblings, and we would quietly train there. But now, we won't have the chance." The blue-haired man said softly.

Loysius let out a low sigh as well. "Let's go."

They didn't spare a single glance at the other six Fiends, flying away.

The other six Fiends had been trembling in shock as they watched the battle. When experts went all out like this, the battle would be over after one or two clashes.

"The power of this Loysius truly is frightening. That scimitar...not even a Highgod-level divine beast could take it." A Fiend sighed.

Perhaps in ordinary material planes, divine beasts were extremely rare.

But in the Infernal Realm, the place where countless experts gathered, there were still quite a few divine beasts. The reason why divine beasts were powerful was because of their 'divine ability'. No matter which type of divine beast they were, upon reaching the age of maturity, they would be Demigods. Seemingly, there wasn't any difference.

However, there were huge differences between different types of divine beasts.

The difference lay in their 'divine ability'.

Some divine beasts had natural abilities that allowed them to launch certain types of spiritual attacks, while others had special material attacks...for example, the Heaven Devouring Beast and the Ba-Serpent both had a type of 'Devour' ability. But if the opponent was able to resist the strength of the 'Devour' ability, they would be fine.

But Bebe was different. His 'Godeater' ability, the natural ability to devour divine sparks, was definitely an extremely, freakishly powerful type of ability.

The more freakishly powerful a divine ability was, the rarer that type of divine beast would be in number!

"Loysius trains in the Laws of Life. The four Edicts are all very hard to deal with. Loysius truly is frightening." The six Fiends all sighed and said a few words, and then they left the main hall. However, before leaving, one of the Fiends collected the enormous corpse.

"The corpse of a Highgod-level divine beast is worth money as well. Can't let it go to waste." The Fiend laughed as he collected the enormous corpse and put it into his interspatial ring.

After the six Fiends left.

Linley's group of four finally exited the room.

"Paaagh!" Bebe was somewhat unhappy. "I wanted to collect that body. I didn't expect that Fiend took it away."

Certain body parts of divine beasts were extremely good components for making certain culinary delicacies. The corpse of a Highgod-level divine beast was very rare as well. The parts of such an enormous corpse could be sold off for hundreds of thousands of inkstones, or nearly a million. This was a small fortune."

"You were thinking about that?" Linley didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. "Let's go. Back to the metallic lifeform."

Their rewards on this trip had been quite massive. The most valuable asset they had acquired was actually that Deathgod Golem, as well as the corpse of the black-robed guard. The black-robed guard himself had a divine spark in his corpse, and the interspatial ring he had contained massive wealth as well.

"Can you...make a trip with me into the castle to take a look?" Regina forced the words out.

Linley's team couldn't help but be startled.

"I, I just want to take a look and see if there are any gold-robed guards left." Regina felt rather embarrassed as well. After all, this was as good as asking Linley's team to head back into danger. Although...logically speaking, Linley's team, alongside Regina, shouldn't have any problems in dealing with a gold-robed guard.

But who knew how many gold-robed guards they would run into, if they did run into any?

Delia and Bebe looked at Linley, waiting for Linley's decision. Linley paused for a moment, then looked at Regina and said, "Regina, we can't possibly run all over the castle with you. How about this. We're still going to leave the castle, but we can take a bit more of a roundabout route to see if we can run into any gold-robed guards. If we do, we'll help out, but if we don't, then there's nothing for it."

"Thank you." Regina said hurriedly.

She knew that her request was a bit excessive. For Linley to be willing to agree to do this much was already very good of him.

Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Regina all headed out towards the upper layers of Moon Lake Castle. They returned to the third, second, and first floors, then left Moon Lake Castle through the windows. Regina truly hoped they would encounter some gold-robed guards.

However, currently Moon Lake Castle truly didn't have a single gold-robed guard left.

In the air above the clear and crystalline reflections of Moon Lake, the poisonous red fog had long since dissipated and disappeared. Right now, there were five Fiend trial participants seated cross-legged in the air above Moon Lake.

"Someone is coming out."

The five saw Linley's team fly out and immediately went forward to greet them.

"Hey, what are you guys doing?" Linley frowned and said calmly. Linley had already been ambushed within Moon Lake Castle. Naturally, he wouldn't be overconfident.

One of the five spoke. "I want to know, do the four of you have any spare moon rings? We can buy them off of you."

"I still want one for myself." Regina snorted.

The five, upon hearing this, were somewhat disappointed. They could tell that Linley's team simply didn't have enough moon rings.

"The five of you, no need to wait here outside. There shouldn't be anyone else left in the castle." Linley said. When they came out, they had searched everywhere in the fourth through first floors, giving all of the major locations a glance. If someone was there, they would have discovered them long ago.

Linley's team was already one of the last ones to come out.

After speaking, Linley's group of four flew directly towards the metallic lifeform. Soon, Linley's group reached the metallic lifeform, hovering there in mid-air. Through the translucent metal of the creature, they were able to dimly make out the sparse number of human figures within.

"So few people." Linley sighed to himself, then entered the metallic creature.

Within the corridor inside the metallic creature, the silver-haired elder saw Linley's group and laughed, "Congratulations for surviving and returning."

"You made it back alive? Congratulations."

As soon as Linley had entered the rear cabins of the metallic creature, he swept the area with his gaze. This rear cabin of the metallic creature had many seats, more than enough to seat a thousand. However, there were far, far too many empty seats, with filled seats so rare. "A thousand came. Not even a hundred are left alive!"

Glancing at the nearby Delia and Bebe, Linley felt a surge of rejoicing in his heart as well. At least his wife and his brother had survived. "That silver-haired elder was right. This is indeed worth celebrating."

Infernal Realm. Nightblaze Prefecture.

A mountain range without any life whatsoever. The stones of the mountain were charred black, and there was some decayed wild grass as well.

Within this mountain range, there was a lake that was dozens of kilometers in circumference. The lake water was rancid, and it emanated a deathly aura as well. Some white skeletons were floating on the top of the lake. This mountain range was a forbidden area!

Even Fiends didn't dare to go near this place.

"Drip, drip..." The deathly lake water began to bubble.

"BOOM!"

Suddenly, the massive surface of the lake suddenly was pulled apart, and the lake waters naturally pulled open, revealing a corridor that was dozens of meters wide which led straight into the depths. Nearly a hundred figures appeared from the depths of the lake. Aside from the leader, who wore a gray robe, the others all wore black robes.

Nearly a hundred people stood there in the air above the lake.

The gray-robed leader had pitch-black hair, but the most eye-catching part of him was still his two eyebrows, which drooped all the way down to his chest. If Loysius had been here and seen this gray-robed man, he definitely would have been shocked. Because this gray-robed man looked exactly the same as the master of Moon Lake Castle.

“BASTARD!” The muscles around the gray-robed man’s eyes were twitching. He was currently at the edges of an absolute explosion of rage.

The gray-robed man growled, “It seems that I, Wyrnessin, have been hidden from the world for too long. Those people have forgotten my name. They actually destroyed my divine clone! I told them...that I would make them regret it!” The gray-robed man’s heart was filled with boundless rage.

He had two mighty divine clones.

He had first developed his divine clone of Death, while his original body was that of a divine clone of Darkness. In terms of power, his accomplishments in the Edicts of Death had far surpassed his accomplishments in the Laws of Darkness. Despite that, given the power of his divine Darkness clone as well as the many guards he had, he shouldn’t have had any problems.

But who would have imagined that...

One of his bodies had been destroyed.

“Kill them, kill them all!” The gray-robed man’s heart was filled with murderous thoughts.

He only had two bodies to begin with. Both of them represented a life. Losing a divine clone...of course he would be furious.

"Master, where shall we go?" A black-robed man behind him said respectfully.

"My Moon Lake Castle is close to Royalwing City! Based on the Fiend Castle's rules for choosing Fiend trial assignments, they would definitely select nearer locations." The gray-robed man said in a low voice. "Those Fiends have most likely boarded the metallic lifeform and begun to head back to Royalwing City."

"We will first go to Royalwing City!" The gray-robed man said coldly.

"Yes, Master (Lord)!"

The nearly-hundred black-robed men behind him simultaneously called out, with the only difference being in their manner of address.

"Hmph, no matter what, they'll have to return to Royalwing City! We'll stop them outside Royalwing City." The gray-robed man immediately looked at one black-robed man, whose body suddenly vanished. At the same time, a sinuous metallic creature appeared in mid-air. The gray-robed man and the nearly-hundred black-robed men entered the metallic lifeform.

"Whoosh!"

The metallic lifeform split through the air, making haste towards Royalwing City.

In terms of speed, this metallic lifeform's speed was far faster than the one which Linley's group was on.

Not too far away from Moon Lake, the metallic lifeform Linley was in was currently hovering in mid-air.

The silver-haired elder flew back to the metallic creature and immediately instructed, "There's nobody else inside. Head out!" Immediately, the metallic lifeform transformed into a blur, disappearing into the distant horizons.

Within the metallic lifeform, the silver-haired elder entered the front cabins, saying in a sonorous voice while looking at everyone, "Everyone, stand up for now and gather at the center of the walkway."

"Stand up?"

Although puzzled, Linley and the others all stood up. The nearly hundred survivors in the rear cabins all gathered at the center of the walkway. Suddenly...the metallic creature shrank in size by a large margin, both in length and in width. The seating arrangements changed so that only a hundred appeared.

When they had arrived, they had fifty rows of twenty seats each.

Now, they had twenty rows of five seats each. The body was much smaller.

"There's very few people here right now. No need for the metallic lifeform to be so large." The silver-haired elder said calmly. After speaking, he left the rear cabin and returned to the front cabin.

Currently, there were only a hundred seats, causing the people in the rear cabins to be fairly close to each other now.

"Heading back."

Linley looked out from the translucent metallic window of the metallic creature, feeling relaxed.

"Boss, when we return to Royalwing City and turn in the moon rings at the Fiend Castle, we will become Fiends." Bebe chortled as he looked at Linley and spoke. "By then, we'll be able to wear Fiend medallions. Haha, at least when we enter the city, we won't have to stand in line to pay the fees any longer."

"Pay the city entrance fees?"

Linley and Delia were speechless when they heard this. To them, what was a single inkstone these days?

"Who here has moon rings? If anyone has moon rings, I'm willing to pay a price to buy them." Suddenly, a voice rang out from the rear cabin. This voice instantly caused everyone in the rear cabin to look over. The speaker was a soft, sinister looking, handsome man.

"Pay a price to buy them?" Linley was shocked. "As bold and audacious as this? The staff members of the Fiend Castle are in the front cabin."

Bebe frowned. "Uh? He is speaking so loudly. If that silver-haired old man hears it, won't that will be terrible?"

Regina's eyes were shining. She was looking at the people nearby. Upon hearing Bebe's words, she lowered her voice and explained, "Bebe, the only thing that matters in the Fiend trials is whether or not you have the required item. They don't care how you acquired it. Whether it was by theft or by purchasing, as long as you can turn in a moon ring, that'll be enough."

Hearing this, Linley's group now understand.

"The reason the Fiend Castle does this is to encourage internecine strife." Linley mused to himself.

Only, this was what the Infernal Realm was like to begin with. Slaughter and battle was the main purpose of this place.

"If you want to buy it, haha...I do have an extra moon ring." Suddenly, in the rear cabin, a voice rang out. This voice caused Regina and some others to immediately grow excited, and they hurriedly looked over.

The person who had an extra moon ring was an extremely muscular bearded man who was just 1.2 or 1.3 meters tall.

"Dwarf?" Linley raised an eyebrow.

"What price?" A woman with long golden hair asked.

"My asking price isn't too high. A million inkstones. If you want it, pay up." The muscular dwarf said directly.

"A million?" Some people immediately exhaled in shock.

To a Highgod, perhaps a million inkstones wasn't much. But to a God, a million inkstones was an extravagant sum. Even for the likes of Linley's group, when they had sold off that Highgod artifact, they had only received 750,000 inkstones.

But how would an ordinary God acquire a Highgod artifact?

Only after one battle and plundering after another would one be able to amass a fortune in excess of a million inkstones.

"Too expensive." Regina frowned. She didn't have enough wealth to purchase it.

"I'll take it." Immediately, that soft-looking, handsome man spoke out.

Although nearly a hundred had survived, there were still twenty or thirty who hadn't acquired moon rings. The others, upon hearing someone was offering to buy it, immediately grew frantic.

"I'll pay 1.1 million inkstones." Some people hurriedly called out.

"I offered to pay first." The handsome man said frantically.

The muscular dwarf said, "I already said the price. One million inkstones exactly. Here you go. Give me a million inkstones." The muscular dwarf was very straightforward. He immediately carried out the transaction with the handsome man. The others couldn't help but feel disappointed.

Regina let out a sigh.

It wasn't that she wasn't willing to pay; she simply didn't have the money.

"Who else has moon rings?" Someone called out loudly from the rear cabins.

At this moment, a white-robed middle-aged man laughed calmly. "I'll set the same price as that short gentleman. A million inkstones. Whoever wants a moon ring, give me a million inkstones and I will give you a moon ring."

"There's more?" Regina couldn't help but to look over, but she didn't have enough money.

"Swish!" Instantly, several figures immediately charged over.

"Here you go." A jade-haired woman immediately shoved an azurite cube that was ten centimeters on each side in the hand of that white-robed middle-aged man.

"Sell it to me." Some others were calling out. "We'll give you a million inkstones also!"

"I already gave him a million inkstones. This moon ring is mine." The jade-haired woman said hurriedly, while at the same time, she stared at the white-robed man. She was worried that the white-robed man was lying. However, she believed that he probably wasn't.

The white-robed man smiled as he accepted the million inkstones, and with a flip of his hand, handed a moon ring over to the jade-haired woman. "All yours."

The jade-haired woman was overjoyed. Accepting the moon ring, she returned to her own seat.

The others were very disappointed.

The white-robed man only smiled. "Don't fight. As long as you have enough money, I'll be able to sell enough moon rings." With a flip of his hand, the white-robed man produced five more moon rings in his palm.

This scene caused everyone to be stunned.

"Where did this guy get so many moon rings?" Everyone in the rear cabins stared at the white-robed man.

Immediately, some people handed over a million inkstones, and all of them received a moon ring.

The white-robed man continued smiling. "If anyone else wants a moon ring, please come over. I have more." As he smiled towards the onlookers, the entire rear cabin immediately fell silent.

Only those with enough money could buy it.

Although over twenty people had failed to acquire moon rings, only six of them had more than a million inkstones. The others didn't have enough money to buy them.

Regina suddenly stood up. Laughing, she said, "Sir, please lower the price for the moon ring just a little bit. A million inkstones is simply too much. The moon rings are only useful to us. To others, it is nothing but an interspatial ring."

Interspatial rings were worthless. Not even worth a single inkstone.

"Right." Instantly, many people also began to clamor. "Why don't you lower the price, like maybe five hundred thousand inkstones? What do you say? I think there will still be quite a few who will buy from you."

"Right. Five hundred thousand inkstones." Regina also said. Regina's own assets were only around eight hundred thousand inkstones.

"You can't do that." The people who had just bought moon rings found it unfair. "We paid a million inkstones to buy it."

The white-robed man laughed calmly. "I already said, a million! If you don't have enough inkstones, I'd rather not sell than lower the price." After finishing his words, the white-robed man fell silent.

Regina's face couldn't help but change.

"Regina, how much do you have on you?" Delia suddenly spoke out.

Regina couldn't help but look at Linley's group. Actually, just then, Linley's group had been secretly chatting through using their divine sense. On this trip, Linley's group had made some enormous gains. The Deathgod Golem alone was worth a hundred million inkstones. The black-robed guard's wealth in his interspatial ring was an astonishing figure as well.

"I...still lack two hundred thousand." Regina said with a hint of eagerness.

Bebe chortled, then with a flip of his hand, retrieved two azurites. "Right, here you go!"

Seeing this, Regina couldn't help but feel excited. "Thank you!" She immediately accepted it, then ran over to the white-robed man.

Outside Royalwing City, the gray-robed man was seated in the meditative position in a patch of grass, with dozens of experts next to him.

"Master, a metallic creature of the Fiend Castle is flying over. It is coming from the direction of Moon Lake Castle." A voice rang out in the mind of the gray-robed man, who immediately opened his eyes. He growled, "Come with me." Immediately, he led the dozens of figures flying into the sky.

A few dozen kilometers outside of Royalwing City.

The metallic creature which Linley was seated in was flying at high speed towards Royalwing City. Linley's group was very happy. After all, they were able to see the distant Royalwing City grow closer from outside the translucent window.

"We're finally arriving." Linley's group was all smiles.

Suddenly...

"Boom!" The entire metallic lifeform shuddered violently, and then with a 'BANG!' sound, the entire metallic creature exploded into countless shards of metal. The Fiends within the metallic lifeform, caught completely off guard, immediately controlled their bodies to float in midair.

Linley's group was hovering in midair as well, but as they stared at their surroundings, their faces turned white.

In the area around Linley's entire group, there were nearly a hundred black-robed men standing in mid-air. These black-robed men had completely surrounded everyone in Linley's group, without anyone being able to flee. Every single black-robed man emanated an absolutely astonishing aura.

"Highgods. All Highgods!"

The faces of everyone present changed, Linley included!

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 28, Wild Revenge

The ten Fiends who had been lucky enough to survive as well as the nearly hundred Fiend trial participants were all in a state of shock. They were surrounded by a large group of Highgods who were staring at them as if they were corpses. The hearts of everyone present shook.

“Why is this happening?” Linley didn’t dare to believe what he was seeing.

They were just about to arrive at Royalwing City and become Fiends, but at the final, critical juncture, they were waylaid by a group of Highgods.

“What are you doing?” The strongest of the experts in Linley’s group, Loysius, stared at the surrounding people, frowning as he spoke. Although Loysius wasn’t confident in his ability to battle against so many Highgods, he was confident in his ability to escape.

“What are we doing?” One of them, a black-robed man snickered.

Suddenly...

A number of black-robed figures voluntarily moved aside, creating a corridor in the air. A gray-robed figure flew out.

“Master (Lord)!” The black-robed men all bowed respectfully.

But the gray-robed man just stared at Loysius, his eyes filled with a boundless, baleful look, as though he wanted to eat Loysius alive.

"You...you are!!!" Loysius and the others all stared in shock at the gray-robed man. The gray-robed man's appearance looked absolutely identical to that of the master of the castle. At this moment, Loysius and the other Fiends who had seen the appearance of that master of the castle were all stunned.

They all thought of a possibility!

"Can he be...?" The master of the castle who had been killed was just a divine clone!

The gray-robed man's face was cold and grim, and a hint of a cruel smile played at the corner of his lips. His gaze swept past Loysius and the others, but in the end landed upon Loysius once more. His other divine clone was destroyed by this Loysius.

The one who he hated the most was this Loysius as well.

"Who are you!" A shout roared out, and the silver-haired elder flew to the front, staring angrily at the gray-robed man. "This was the metallic creature of our Fiend Castle. You dare to destroy it? And it seems you want to attack? You are being rather too arrogant!"

"Fiend Castle?"

The gray-robed man lifted an eyebrow, turning to look at him. "What of it? I don't believe that the true experts at the headquarters of your Fiend Castle will come looking for me, just because I killed your group. In addition...the relationship between the powerful Seven Star Fiends and those of you in the Fiend Castle is nothing more than a working relationship. They won't obey your orders."

The silver-haired elder was stunned.

"You ask me who I am?" The gray-robed man's jaw shifted slightly as he looked disdainfully at the silver-haired elder. "Then I'll tell you. My name is Wyrnessin! Have you heard my name before?"

"Wyrnessin?"

The silver-haired elder frowned slightly.

"Wyrnessin!" Loysius and the others all had the same thought. Indeed, this gray-robed man was the master of the castle. Or, precisely speaking, the other divine clone.

"Him!"

Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Regina were all shocked and suddenly understood. When the black dragon had been killed at the castle, he had shouted loudly that he was Wyrnessin. "No wonder he came for revenge." Linley was secretly in dread now. "No wonder, before that castle lord was killed, he said that the one who killed him would regret it. Before dying, the castle lord had said his name...but it seems as though everyone has forgotten who he is."

Linley could tell.

Perhaps Wyrnessin's name was once very famous, but nobody present knew it.

"Ugh..." Wyrnessin let out a low sigh. "It seems I truly have been hidden away for too long. Even the staff members of the Fiend Castle have forgotten me."

Wyrnessin himself just stood there in mid-air, but while chatting, he naturally exuded a sort of strength which caused everyone, Loysius included, to feel terrified. Everyone understood...this was an exceedingly powerful expert!

As Wyrnessin was sighing, Loysius and his third brother were chatting with divine sense.

"Boom."

Suddenly, a sonic boom appeared and two shadows suddenly flew towards the north.

Wyrnessin was standing south of them. Loysius and his brother didn't dare flee in that direction, so they chose to flee towards the north.

"Hmph!" Wyrnessin let out a cold sneer.

The twenty-plus black-robed men who were standing to the north sent out palm strikes with their right hands almost simultaneously. Their united blows suddenly filled the air in front of those twenty-plus black-robed men with a black energy, immediately forming an enormous black 'web' which swept towards Loysius and his brother.

The spreading of this giant web caused Loysius and his brother to immediately retreat in terror.

"Sou!" At this moment, Wyrnessin moved as well, suddenly appearing by Loysius' side. Loysius, with a savage laugh, chopped over with a back-handed stroke from his light blue scimitar, but Wyrnessin just flicked a single finger, tapping the scimitar.

"Clang!"

A clear metallic sound rang out.

"Aaaah!" Loysius actually lost his grip on his light blue scimitar. The scimitar fell downwards, while Loysius himself held his head in agony, emitting an agonized scream.

"Big Bro!" The muscular blue-haired man called frantically, but Loysius didn't seem to hear him. He continued to spasm there in mid-air, while at the same time holding his head and screaming in absolute agony.

"Big Bro, what is it? What's going on?!" The muscular blue-haired man was absolutely besides himself.

"Stop!" Wyrnessin said calmly.

Loysius' agonized screams suddenly halted, and he returned to his senses. He stared in terror at Wyrnessin. "You...you have a Spiritleech?"

"Spiritleech?" Hearing this title, the faces of the muscular man and the other Fiends turned absolutely white. The term 'Spiritleech' was something which experienced people would occasionally hear of. Even in Blacksand Castle, the 'Spiritleech', a forbidden item, was rarely available for purchase.

Even if it was available, the price would be absolutely staggering.

Wyrnessin chuckled. "Right. I spent a good amount of effort to create this Spiritleech." "You, you made it?" Quite a few people present were stunned.

There were perhaps many, many Highgods who had trained in the Edicts of Death. However, those capable of creating a Spiritleech were extremely rare. In the entire Infernal Realm, there were 108 Asuras, but it would be hard to say if there were 108 people capable of creating a Spiritleech.

"Did you think I would let you die so easily?" Wyrnessin snickered. "You should feel proud that I'm wasting a Spiritleech on you."

"Proud?" Loysius' entire body was shaking. When he thought about the terrifying effects of the Spiritleech and about the pain he had just been in, beads of sweat began to appear on Loysius' head.

"Bang!" Gritting his teeth, Loysius attempted to smash his own head in and commit suicide!

But before his hand touched his forehead, Loysius once more began to scream in agony. "Aaaaaah!" Holding his head, his entire body spasmed, a savage look on his face. Moments later, Loysius stopped screaming, his face ashen as though he were an invalid. He stared in terror at Wyrnessin.

"I told you!" Wyrnessin, right now, was like a Sovereign, standing far above them and holding their lives and deaths in his hands. He stared down at Loysius. "I would make you regret it!"

Everyone's hearts shuddered in terror.

He was able to create a Spiritleech. This meant that this Wyrnessin had already reached an astonishing level of attainment in the Edicts of Death.

"Haha." Wyrnessin suddenly let began to laugh like a madman, the laughter causing everyone, including Linley's group, to feel terrified. Wyrnessin's gaze swept across the other Fiends. "Everyone involved in this matter will die!"

Those Fiends as well as the nearly hundred surviving Fiend trial participants as well as the staff members of the Fiend Castle were all terrified.

"Boss." Bebe said with his divine sense.

"Watch to see how things develop. At the last moment, we'll have to flee." Linley didn't know what should be done either.

Even someone as mighty as Loysius wasn't able to resist Wyrnessin at all. Although Linley had never heard of a Spiritleech, from the discussion between the two as well as the expressions on Loysius' face, he could tell that this 'Spiritleech' was definitely no ordinary item.

"Wyrnessin, you, you can't!" The silver-haired elder said hurriedly. "Royalwing City is right there, you, you can't..."

"Royalwing City is over there? I'm not killing anyone within Royalwing City! What have I to fear?" Wyrnessin chuckled, then swept his icy gaze across Linley's group. "So what if I kill a few little people like you?"

Linley was currently thinking at high speed.

"No. We have to live." Linley glanced at the nearby Delia and Bebe. "No other choices. We'll have to flee. When nearly a hundred of us flee, we can't all be caught. Moreover, we are very close to Royalwing City. We might be able to make it into the city." Linley continued to calculate their chances.

"I can't die!" "I don't want to die!"

The other Fiends and Fiend trial participants didn't want to die either. They were all thinking frantically.

"Brothers, let's all flee!" Suddenly, a divine sense rang out in the minds of every person present.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe, upon hearing this, couldn't help but decide to move.

"Westwards. Hurry!" Linley sent with his divine sense.

In that moment, more than half of the hundred surrounded people began to flee in separate directions.

"Boom!" In the area around them, all of the black-robed men simultaneously swept out with their right palms. Just like last time, a dense layer of black energy came out from every black-robed figure. If one took a close look, the black-robed figures had complicated magical runes on their bodies or robes. All the black-robed men were joining forces...

Every single direction was completely locked down.

A heaven-encompassing net!

Linley and the others had nowhere to flee. "Aaah!" Those who had moved the fastest and had run into the black web seemed to have been struck by a surge of powerful energy which knocked them back.

Linley and the others once more returned to their original position.

"Flee?" Wyrnessin looked disdainfully at them. "If I were to let a group of little fellows like you flee, then I, Wyrnessin, wouldn't have face to stay in the Infernal Realm any longer." Wyrnessin glanced disdainfully at the silver-haired elder, then said, "However, I can give you a chance. A chance not to die."

Linley and the others couldn't help but to look at Wyrnessin.

"It is very simple." Wyrnessin pointed at Linley's side. "In your group, one Highgod can live, and one God can live!" Wyrnessin's smile was so bright. "Don't say that I didn't give you a chance!"

Linley's group was completely stunned, but then, right away, all of them looked warily at each other.

"Linley, what should we do?" Delia said with her divine sense.

Linley maintained his silence, his eyes filled with worry.

What should they do? What could he do?

"Slash!"

Suddenly, someone attacked. Instantly, the 'thread' tying them together on the same side was broken.

"Don't piss me off!" Linley roared towards the others, brandishing with his adamantite heavy sword.

Wyrnessin bellowed, his long eyebrows dancing in the air, "I won't kill the final survivors. Haha, kill, kill!" Wyrnessin's eyes were filled with wild savagery.

Right now, Wyrnessin was venting his anger.

His divine clone was destroyed. Thus, he would make sure that everyone involved would be doomed!

"Not die?"

Wyrnessin said to himself. "First, give you some hope. After the final two survivors come out, I will make you suffer the most agonizing torment. I won't kill you. However, I am capable of tormenting you until you commit suicide!" Whenever Wyrnessin thought of the two people who would be 'survivors', and yet would face such a terrifying outcome, he couldn't help but feel excited and eager. "I told you. I will make you all regret it." Wyrnessin said sinisterly to himself.

Since he was going to take revenge, how would Wyrnessin let any of them flee?

"Hm?" Wyrnessin suddenly narrowed his eyes.

He saw that all of a sudden that Loysius fell downwards at high speed, this sudden drop causing the surrounding black-robed figures to be unable to block him.

"Fleeing?" Wyrnessin immediately chased afterwards.

"Aaaah!" Loysius, in mid-air, once more let out an agonized cry, but only one of his divine clones was screaming. The other divine clone of Loysius actually continued to fly downwards at high speed. However..Wyrnessin appeared in front of it.

"You want to run?" Wyrnessin looked at him disdainfully. "Did you think that I didn't know you had a divine clone?"

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 29, Penitent Flames

Seeing Wyrnessin suddenly appear in front of him, Loysius' heart shook.

"I'm finished!" Loysius couldn't help but feel some despair.

The Spiritleech planted in his soul was only in his most powerful divine Life clone. Loysius had another divine clone. But now, that clone wasn't able to flee either.

"If you don't want to die right now, then go back!" Wyrnessin barked.

Loysius knew that by retreating, he would probably die as well, but he still chose to return to the encirclement.

"Crunch!" A dagger pierced straight into the head of a God.

And then, with a flip of his hand, Bebe collected the corpse as he flew back towards Linley. Linley, Bebe, and Delia were all in one location. If others didn't attack them, they wouldn't attack others either. But once any person attacked them, Linley's team would immediately kill the enemy!

Regina was by Linley's side as well.

Only, at this sort of critical, life-and-death juncture, Linley's team didn't dare to fully trust Regina either.

Blood splattered everywhere as the slaughter continued.

"Linley." Delia looked towards Linley, who squeezed out a smile. Given the situation, and the fact that Wyrnessin had already said that only a single God would be permitted to remain living, there would definitely be casualties in Linley's group of three.

Who would die?

"I would rather die than let Delia or Bebe die." At this moment, Linley's heart was in great pain.

"Even if I die, I'll die by your side." Delia looked at Linley, a hint of a smile actually on her face. "I am already very satisfied to be able to be together with you."

"What nonsense are you spewing!" Linley shouted angrily with his divine sense.

But Linley's heart was tied up in knots. Although Delia wasn't very talented in terms of training, all these years, she had quietly supported Linley. Her quiet attentiveness and support had imperceptibly transformed their love for each other, engraving it into each other's souls.

In neither life nor death would they be parted.

"You won't die." Linley looked at Delia, while at the same time paying careful attention to the surrounding area.

That white-robed man who had sold quite a few moon rings was staring at Linley's team. Just then, Linley's team had already discovered that the white-robed man was indeed very strong. Ten Gods had already died by his hand.

"I urge you not to come offend us." Wielding the adamantine heavy sword in his hand, Linley sent his divine sense.

The white-robed man hesitated as he looked at Bebe. In the end, he didn't choose to attack.

Linley and Bebe had killed quite a few people just then as well. Linley used soul attacks, while Bebe used material attacks. They were amongst the most powerful Gods of this group as well.

"HALT!" A cold shout thundered forth from the direction of Royalwing City.

Everyone who heard this angry shout felt their head grow dizzy. They lost all perception, and only a while later did they recover. By the time Linley's team had recovered, they saw that three figures had appeared in mid-air. Beneath the light of the Blood Sun, the shadow of the leader of those figures seemed all the more majestic and dazzling.

He wore a long golden robe, had white eyebrows, and golden pupils!

White eyebrows, golden pupils!

"Governor Royalwing, Seven Star Fiend!" Linley's heart exulted wildly. Linley, Bebe, and Delia's faces instantly revealed a look of utter joy.

Not just them; even the silver-haired elder who was drenched in blood from the battle but had yet to die, upon realizing who had come, let out an excited call, "Lord Governor!"

"Lord Governor?" Quite a few of the Fiend trial participants stared at the newcomer in excitement.

As a Seven Star Fiend, Royalwing definitely was one of the most powerful forces of the Infernal Realm.

"Oh, Stuart [Si'tu'er'te]!" The gray-robed man, Wyrnessin, glanced at Governor Royalwing. "Stuart, can it be that you want to interfere in this matter?"

Linley's group was shocked. They knew that 'Royalwing' was nothing more than the nickname which the Governor Royalwing had gained upon becoming a Seven Star Fiend.

As for Lord Royalwing's real name, not many knew.

The white eyebrows of Governor Royalwing rose, and he stared at Wyrnessin with a sharp gaze. "Wyrnessin, this is a squad from the Fiend Castle, and they are very close to Royalwing City. Don't go too far." Governor Royalwing's words contained a hint of anger as well.

"Stuart, my divine clone was killed. You tell me, am I justified or not in getting revenge?" Wyrnessin stared at Governor Royalwing.

Governor Royalwing frowned. "Your divine clone was destroyed? How could the likes of them have done that?"

Governor Royalwing knew exactly how powerful Wyrnessin was.

Wyrnessin hesitated momentarily, then said sourly, "I was staying in my lair, focusing on analyzing the Edicts of Death, but my divine Darkness clone was staying in Moon Lake Castle." After all, Wyrnessin wanted to enjoy life as well. He couldn't always spend his time in training.

"Who would have imagined that such a large number of people would suddenly attack my Moon Lake Castle." Wyrnessin was furious.

Governor Royalwing now understood.

This was very simple. Many experts would choose to divide their divine clones up in multiple locations. That way, if one divine clone fell into grave danger, at least another would survive.

"How can I possibly not avenge such a huge enmity?" Wyrnessin said.

To these ultimate experts, their life was of course incomparably valuable. A divine clone's destruction was equivalent to losing one of their lives. Who wouldn't be utterly enraged? Wyrnessin had planned long ago to kill all of these Fiends and spare not a one.

Governor Royalwing was worried as well. He then looked at Wyrnessin and said slowly, "Wyrnessin, I understand how you feel. But...you are acting right outside of Royalwing City. You should at least give me, Stuart, a little face."

Wyrnessin frowned slightly.

Both Governor Royalwing and Wyrnessin had become famous as ultimate experts eons ago in a long bygone era. They had long ago, in that era, become Seven Star Fiends!

"Stuart, can it be that you want to fight me?" Wyrnessin said in a low voice, frowning.

Right now, the thirty-plus survivors who were surrounded were watching nervously. Linley and the others knew...right now, their lives were in the hands of these two ultimate experts. Whether they lived or died would depend on the results of Governor Royalwing's discussions with Wyrnessin.

"I don't want to fight with you, but, you can't go too far either." Governor Royalwing said.

Wyrnessin understood Royalwing's temper quite well.

"Fine. These little God-level fellows, I won't kill them. But those four Highgods that are still surviving, I must kill them!" Wyrnessin said with certainty. "The destruction of my divine clones involved those Fiends!"

Governor Royalwing glanced over.

"Lord Governor!" The silver-haired elder said hurriedly, and the other three Highgods looked towards Governor Royalwing with supplicating gazes.

Governor Royalwing spoke out. "Of the four surviving Highgods, that one over there is a staff member of the Fiend Castle." Governor Royalwing pointed at the silver-haired elder. "He can't possibly have anything to do with your death."

Wyrnessin glanced sideways at the silver-haired elder, then nodded and said, "Fine. I can spare him."

"Lord Governor." The other three Highgods, Loysius included, called out repeatedly.

But Governor Royalwing didn't pay them any mind at all. Governor Royalwing looked at Wyrnessin, sending a divine message. "It is best if you take care of this quickly. You've caused so much commotion, and were taking so much time..." Wyrnessin immediately understood.

Governor Royalwing wanted face as well.

"Fine!"

Wyrnessin smiled.

"Lord Governor!" Loysius, the muscular blue-haired man, and a gold-haired Fiend immediately called out in high voices.

"You killed one of my divine clones. Hmph!" Wyrnessin's eyes suddenly turned white, and a translucent ripple spread out, immediately shooting towards the muscular blue-haired man, the gold-haired Fiend, and one of Loysius' divine clones, invading their bodies.

"Ah!" Desolate screams were ripped forth from the three.

At the same time, a translucent flame swirled above the heads of the three, and then the three fell down from the skies, dead!

"Penitent Flames?" Governor Royalwing's eyes lit up. "This Wyrnessin has become much more powerful than he had previously been."

"So powerful." Seeing this, the nearly thirty lucky survivors were all shocked. Highgod Fiends had been killed without any ability to fight back by this Wyrnessin, and just then, that formless attack that had created translucent flames was something they had never even heard of.

Right now, the only surviving Fiend was Loysius. This was the divine clone of Loysius which had suffered the 'Spiritleech'.

His other divine clone had been killed.

"Penitent Flames?" Loysius stared in terror towards Wyrnessin. "The legendary Penitent Flames?" Loysius now fully understood how great the difference was between him and Wyrnessin.

"You...why haven't you gone to challenge an Asura yet?" Loysius said.

Linley had a thought. "Challenge an Asura?" Linley knew that the Infernal Realm had, in total, 108 prefectures, and also 108 Asuras! The Lord Prefect of every single prefecture was an Asura! In the Infernal Realm, 'Asura' was a title given only to the mightiest of experts, and there was only one way to obtain it.

Challenging for it!

But not just anyone had the right to challenge an Asura. The challenger had to first become a Seven Star Fiend!

Upon becoming a mighty Seven Star Fiend, one had the right to challenge an Asura. If the challenge was successful, the previous Asura would lose the title of 'Asura', and the challenger would receive the title of 'Asura'. Thus, there would forever be only 108 Asuras in the Infernal Realm.

"Challenge an Asura?" Wyrnessin glanced at him sideways. "First of all, I'm not too interested in that."

"Secondly, do you think that just because I am able to use the 'Penitent Flames' that I will be able to defeat an Asura?" Wyrnessin snickered. "If we were still in the era of when I first arrived in the Infernal Realm, perhaps. But countless years have passed. After so many challenges, every single Asura of our era is extremely hard to deal with."

Wyrnessin glanced towards Governor Royalwing as well.

Governor Royalwing nodded slightly, as though he shared the same thoughts.

They were both Seven Star Fiends, and they had reached the level of Seven Star Fiends countless years ago. But they didn't dare to go challenge the Asuras! Because if their challenge was to fail, then generally speaking, the result would be death!

"Little fellows, count your blessings." Wyrnessin glanced at the nearly thirty surviving Gods.

Wyrnessin didn't have too much of an urge to kill Linley and these others, because he too knew that the death of his divine clone didn't have much to do with these Gods. Since Governor Royalwing had come in person, he had to give Governor Royalwing some face.

"Everyone, leave now." Governor Royalwing spoke out.

Immediately, under the leadership of the silver-haired elder, the nearly thirty lucky God-level survivors immediately flew towards the direction of Royalwing City.

Moments later...

In mid-air, the only figures left were Wyrnessin's subordinates, Loysius, and the three people on Governor Royalwing's side.

"Hmph, what are you looking at? You want to go back to Royalwing City as well? Haha, in your dreams!" Wyrnessin looked at Loysius, who ignored him silently. But then, Loysius suddenly began to spasm, shrieking in agony while clutching his head.

Governor Royalwing's eyebrows lifted up.

"It is a Spiritleech." Wyrnessin said unconcernedly.

Governor Royalwing was slightly startled, and he let out a surprised breath. "Wyrnessin, you were able to make a Spiritleech? Although it isn't very effective against experts on our level, this thing is astonishingly valuable." Spiritleeches weren't of great use against the likes of Governor Royalwing.

However, in the entirety of the Infernal Realm, how many people were capable of being on their level?

"If you want one, you can come to my place to buy one. The price that I'll give you will be 10% lower than the price at Blacksand Castle." Wyrnessin said.

Governor Royalwing couldn't help but grin.

"Stuart, I'll be leaving now." Wyrnessin informed him.

Governor Royalwing nodded slightly.

Wyrnessin then stared once more at that Loysius. "Kid, I told you. You will regret it...very, very much." And then, he led Loysius and his forces into the metallic lifeform and left at high speed."

"That young fellow has fallen into Wyrnessin's clutches. He's in for a tragedy." Governor Royalwing let out a sigh.

Seven Laws, Four Edicts. Amongst these, the most sinister and one most capable of tormenting others was the Edicts of Death. And in turn, experts on the level of Wyrnessin were capable of truly terrifying tricks.

"We finally made it back to Royalwing City alive." Linley, Delia, and Bebe stood on the streets of Royalwing City, momentarily not sure whether they should laugh or to cry. This sort of fluctuation between life and death truly made one's heart tremble.

"Linley, this time, I truly was scared to death." Delia revealed a smile at this moment.

Bebe pursed his lips. "That old man Wyrnessin really went too far. But, alas, it seems he's really powerful. Grandpa Beirut isn't here either. If he was here, everything would be fine."

Linley took Delia by the hand. "Let's go. We'll go to the Fiend Castle!" Turning in the moon rings would make Linley and the others One Star Fiends.

Immediately, Linley, Bebe, and Delia headed straight towards the Fiend

Castle.

Book 14, Fiend – Chapter 30, Inventory Checking

In the main hall of the first floor of the Fiend Castle, quite a few people were gathered, amongst which were Linley's team.

"Miss Yuna!" Bebe stood in front of the counter, laughing as he greeted that female employee, Yuna.

Yuna looked towards Bebe with some surprise and pleasure, as well as towards Linley and Delia who were behind him. "Linley, I was just sighing about how few people survived in your group. I didn't expect that the three of you all survived and made it back. Congratulations, truly."

"We were fairly lucky." Whenever Linley thought about what had happened outside of Royalwing City, he still felt a sense of fear.

When he had been facing Wyrnessin, Linley discovered that he didn't have any ability to resist at all. Their difference in power was simply too great.

"Miss Yuna, we've been here for a long time now. When will we have the chance to turn in the proof that we accomplished the trials?" Bebe said rather frantically. Linley's group had been waiting quite some time here on the first floor. Yuna laughed as she said, "Don't be impatient. You are already Fiends now. It isn't simple as simple as just giving you a Fiend medallion. There's a process for this."

A while later...

"The people who succeeded on the Fiend trials in Moon Lake Castle, up to the second floor!" Suddenly, a muscular man with short golden hair came down the stairway from the second floor of the Fiend Castle.

"Hurry on up." Yuna said with a laugh.

"Miss Yuna, we'll head up now, then." Bebe chortled.

Immediately, Linley's group of twenty-plus people all stepped onto the stairway leading towards the second level of the Fiend Castle. The main hall of this second level was much smaller than the main hall of the first floor, and there were many rooms here as well. Linley's group was led by that muscular man with short golden hair to a black room.

Within the black room, there were three people seated.

"All of you, step forward one at a time and turn in the moon rings, as well as the Fiend seal." One of them, a black-robed middle-aged man said clearly.

Immediately, one after another stepped forward to turn in the moon rings and begin the process of becoming Fiends. But very clearly...the procedures were quite complicated. Fortunately, the black-robed man was fairly fast, and he was able to process each person in just a few minutes.

"Next!" The black-robed man said.

It was Linley's turn.

Linley immediately handed his 'moon ring' as well as the 'Fiend seal' over.

"Name." The black-robed man said.

"Linley." Linley said.

And then, Linley felt his entire body tremble. So the black-robed man had actually summoned his Godrealm, using it to hold Linley down while shutting out the outsiders.

"I have to get an imprint of your soul's aura." The black-robed man withdrew a green, fingernail-sized bead with a flip of his hand, then put the green bead next to Linley. At a visible rate, the green bead quickly began to transform to a gray color.

Moments later, the entire bead had turned gray.

"Soul aura? What is this?" Linley asked curiously.

The black-robed elder glanced at him, then said calmly, "This is known as a 'soul reflecting stone'. It is capable of absorbing an imprint of a soul's aura. All experts have different soul auras. As long as we have this 'soul reflecting stone' with your soul aura, we will be able to verify your identity."

Linley couldn't help but feel astonished.

So there was an item such as this in the world.

However, it made sense. When he was in the Yulan continent, some alchemists were capable of creating items that astonished Linley. In the Infernal Realm, it only made sense that many complicated items existed.

"This is your Fiend medallion, while this is your secondary Fiend medallion. Bind them both with blood." The black-robed man instructed.

Seeing the Fiend medallion, Linley's eyes couldn't help but light up. This was the proof that he was now a Fiend.

"Secondary Fiend medallion?" Linley was somewhat surprised. This so-called 'secondary' Fiend medallion was actually a blue medallion, but this blue medallion was something which Linley had never seen Fiends wear before.

The black-robed man laughed calmly, "The secondary Fiend medallion is kept at our Fiend Castle. Once your secondary Fiend medallion becomes an object with no owner, we will know that you are dead."

Linley now understood.

This was only a toy used to judge if someone was still alive or not.

He immediately bound them with blood, then retrieved the Fiend medallion, pinning it to his chest in accordance with requirements. Linley directly fused this 'Fiend medallion' with his 'Pulseguard Armor'. After all, his clothes were nothing more than a variant of his Pulseguard Armor.

Outside the Fiend Castle.

"Linley, in the future, will you remain at Royalwing City?" Regina said to Linley. "I owe you two hundred thousand inkstones. In a while, I'll pay you back." Regina didn't like owing others money.

"No need. We'll be leaving Royalwing City soon." Linley said directly.

"Leaving? Where are you going?" Regina said hurriedly. "Far away?"

Linley, Delia, and Bebe exchanged glances, then Bebe chortled towards Regina, "Regina, the three of us want to roam the Redbud Continent, and then float across the Starmist Sea and roam this boundless Infernal Realm. You tell me, will we be going far away?"

Regina was utterly shocked.

Even many Highgods in the Infernal Realm had never visited other continents.

After all, each of the five continents of the Infernal Realm were extremely large, more than enough for them to carve out their own little world. Without a special reason, generally speaking, people wouldn't risk heading to other continents.

"Then I...but I..." Regina didn't know how she was supposed to repay the two hundred thousand inkstones.

"Heh heh, no rush. When we meet again, you can pay us back." Bebe laughed as he spoke.

"Alright. Thank you for your help this time, truly." Regina looked at the Fiend medallion on her chest. She couldn't help feel all the more grateful. She had become a Fiend...this was something she had dreamed about for many years.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe made their farewells to Regina, and then went to a restaurant to first enjoy a celebratory victory feast, then returned to their residence. The room fees which Linley's group had paid had been calculated by the year.

Within the courtyard of Linley's residence, the three were seated around a stone table.

"Right now, we need to have a good reckoning of our exact amount of wealth." Bebe said excitedly. With a wave of his hand, seven interspatial rings fell to the table, emitting a clear, crisp sound as they did. These seven interspatial rings, under the light of the blood-red sun, gleamed with reflected light.

"I have some also." Delia laughed as two more interspatial rings fell onto the stone table.

Seeing this, Linley couldn't help but laugh.

On this trip to Moon Lake Castle, at first, under the commands of the Fiends, Linley's group had served as cannon fodder and suffered two attacks from Godslayer Arrows. Bebe had thus collected four God corpses, while Delia had collected two. Afterwards, they had engaged in multiple battles...

And not long ago, outside Royalwing City, after receiving the declaration from Wyrnessin, everyone had begun battling each other.

The nearly hundred remaining Gods had battled to the death, with only roughly thirty remaining. Linley's group alone had killed more than ten. Naturally, they had collected these corpses as well.

"Boss, you have the most." Bebe said.

With a flip of his Linley's hand, eleven interspatial rings fell to the stone table. Of these eleven interspatial rings, three of them had been acquired inside Moon Lake Castle, while the other eight had been acquired in the chaotic battle. But the most valuable of the eleven rings was...the black moon ring!

"This black moon ring's wealth is most likely greater than the others combined!" Linley sighed.

This was the moon ring of the deceased black-robed guard.

The black-robed guards were all Highgods. In addition, they were fairly elite ones. Naturally, their wealth would be significant as well.

"We've already investigated the wealth within this black moon ring. The amount of inkstones and azurites alone are worth ninety million. There are also some Golden Soul-Pearls and other usable items which have a total value of over a hundred million inkstones." Bebe said excitedly. "Right now, let's investigate the other interspatial rings."

They had investigated the ring of the black-robed guard early on.

But the other rings, aside from just two or three of them, had yet to be investigated.

"Let's begin to count our inventory." Linley and Delia were a bit eager as well.

On the table, there was a pile of interspatial rings. Linley's group divided them into three piles and began to bind them with blood, investigating the contents within. They withdrew large amounts of inkstones as well as some other consumables.

"Good man! Whew, which God was the original owner of this interspatial ring? He has so much money!" Bebe called out in surprise.

Linley and Delia immediately raised their heads to look over.

"How much?" Linley said eagerly.

"Boss, this God's wealth is over ten million." Bebe immediately said.

"And his interspatial ring has quite a few God sparks inside."

Although the Gods who took part in the Fiend trials were generally all fairly powerful Gods, most of them had at most a few hundred thousand inkstones. Only a few had more than a million. As for those who had more than ten million, they were extremely rare. Linley himself had investigated four interspatial rings, but the most wealth he had discovered was just 200,000 inkstones.

"Bebe, stop counting. Keep taking inventory for the next interspatial ring." Linley laughed.

Right at this moment, Delia let out a cry of surprise.

"What is it?" Linley and Bebe both looked over.

Delia's face was all smiles. "Linley, guess how much the items in this interspatial ring are worth, all together?"

Bebe immediately guessed, "Ten million?"

Delia smiled and shook her head.

"Is ten million too low or too high?" Linley hurriedly asked.

"Of course it is too low. It isn't just ten million." Delia said. Linley couldn't help but be shocked. "How much is there inside?"

Delia smiled. "The inkstones and azurites in here, all combined, are worth eight hundred thousand."

"Eight hundred thousand?" Bebe stared. "And you said it was more than ten million?"

Delia laughed. "I'm not done. Although the inkstones and azurites are only worth that much, however, this interspatial ring has..." Delia laughed and flipped her hand, revealing two black gems...divine sparks!

They could sense the aura from these divine sparks.

"Highgod sparks, and two of them?" Linley breathed in amazement.

Delia laughed and nodded. "Right. One is wind-type, while the other is darkness-type."

Linley couldn't help but be overjoyed, but then he was astonished. "Two Highgod sparks. How did a God get them?"

Delia couldn't help but tease him, "Linley, forget about him; don't we ourselves have a Highgod spark? And we've just arrived in the Infernal Realm recently, but we've already acquired the Highgod spark of that black-robed guard. So why can't others acquire them?"

"Makes sense." Linley had to accept it.

What he could do, others could also do. Only...this was a huge benefit to Linley's team.

A while later, Linley and the other two finally completely a rough inventory estimate of all of the interspatial rings. But of course, they didn't carefully look at some of the other toys. Linley's group only did a general accounting of the more easily calculated inkstones, azurites, divine sparks, and other items.

"We roughly have a total worth of 120 million inkstones! But of course, that doesn't include the four Highgod sparks we have." Linley said.

The four Highgod sparks were the one from the Yulan continent, the black-robed guard's, and the two from the interspatial ring.

"Delia." Linley looked at Delia. "I originally wanted to go buy a wind-type Highgod spark for you, but I didn't expect that we would acquire one for ourselves. You had best hurry up and fuse this one." Linley directly gave the wind-type Highgod spark to Delia.

Since Delia had embarked on a path of fusing with divine sparks, Linley would naturally let her reach the Highgod level as soon as possible.

As for Linley and Bebe, they relied on gaining insights, which wasn't something that could be achieved in a day.

"Alright." Delia nodded slightly.

The nearby Bebe flipped through some things he hadn't paid close attention to earlier. After all, when taking inventory, they didn't carefully go through everything. For example...Linley and the other two hadn't closely reviewed any of the books.

"Boss, take a look and see what this is." Bebe suddenly was rather surprised and pleased.

Puzzled, Linley turned to look. He saw Bebe holding a thick book in his hands, and on the cover of the book was the words, 'A Brief Summary of the Profound Mysteries of the Seven Elemental Laws'.

Seeing the words on the cover, Linley couldn't help but feel startled.

A Brief Summary of the Profound Mysteries of the Seven Elemental Laws?

Linley's greatest problem right now was that he didn't know anything at all about many of the profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws. Although it was said that others weren't capable of teaching him regarding the profound mysteries, and that he had to gain insights on his own, if he at least had some general guidance, his training path wouldn't advance in a wrong direction.

"Bebe, let me look at that." Linley said hurriedly and eagerly.

"I knew Boss would want this." Bebe laughed, then tossed over the book.

Delia had fused with a divine spark, and so she didn't need to gain insights into any profound mysteries. Naturally, she didn't need to read this book either. As for Bebe...given his lazy nature, he didn't have the mental energy or discipline. As soon as Bebe saw the book, though, he understood that his Boss would definitely love it.

Holding the book, Linley immediately began to flip through and read the 'Compilation on the Elemental Laws of the Earth'.

The Laws of the Earth had in total six profound mysteries. These were the 'Essence of the Earth', 'Strength', 'Worldwalking', 'Vitality', 'Gravitational Space', and the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World'. This book had some basic introductions regarding each of the six profound mysteries, as well as the powers they held.

It even contained some information about simple ways of using them.

"The Throbbing Pulse of the World should be used like this?" Linley read on, shaking his head. "The person who wrote this book clearly only knew just a tiny bit regarding the Throbbing Pulse of the World."

As someone who had trained in the Throbbing Pulse of the World, Linley naturally could tell that the person who wrote this book either knew just very little, or was just trying to cover up how little he knew.

The so-called 'usage methods' were extremely simple and very weak ways of using the Laws.

Linley completely ignored this sort of information regarding how to apply the Laws. Linley cared more about the descriptions of the other profound mysteries of the Laws.

"So that's the case!" Linley, seeing the description of the 'Strength' profound mystery, sighed in agreement. "Originally, I thought that the Laws of the Earth included a 'Massive' type profound mystery, but it seems that's just one aspect of the 'Strength' profound mystery."

The Profound Mysteries of Strength was the highest level physical attack type profound mystery of the Laws of the Earth, and it was very complicated.

While reading the book, Linley didn't notice the passing of time.

"So that was the Worldwalking ability." Linley sighed in praise. "Back in the past, the O'Brien Empire's 'Monolithic Sword Saint', Haydson, had already just touched upon the edges of the profound mysteries of Worldwalking."

In the past, with a single step, Haydson had been able to travel dozens of meters. Linley had been shocked greatly at the time.

Actually, this was the simplest usage of Worldwalking; it couldn't even be described as having reached a 'basic' level of mastery.

Worldwalking allowed a person to completely fuse himself into the boundless earth elemental essence of the world. It wasn't that Haydson had teleported; rather, he had merged himself into the earth elemental essence, and then moved through it to another location before reappearing.

Back then, Haydson had been too weak, and the amount of time he could remain merged with the earth elemental essence of the world was very short.

For a true expert, when the Worldwalking ability was used, one could completely disappear and remain merged with the earth elemental essence of the world for a long time.

After finishing reading regarding the six types of profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth, Linley began to flip through the 'Compilation on the Elemental Laws of the Wind.'

The Elemental Laws of the Wind had the most types of profound mysteries, nine in total. They were the 'Essence of the Wind', 'Doppleganger', 'Sound Waves', 'Music', 'Windwalking', 'Spatial Wind', 'Dimensional', 'Fast', and 'Slow'; nine profound mysteries.

Although there were nine, when different experts used them, they would produce effects of different power.

In addition, all profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws were fusable. Any two of them could fuse. Any three of them could fuse...and different fusions would create different types of marvelous, powerful attacks.

"So that's what the Spatial Wind is all about." Linley's eyes shone as he read.

"Dimensional. This is the most powerful physical attack type profound mystery of the Laws of the Wind." Seeing the description of the 'Dimensional' profound mysteries, he couldn't help but feel stunned.

A long time later...

"Huh?" Linley glanced at his surroundings, puzzled. "How come its dark now?"

"Boss. It's night." Bebe and Delia both began to laugh. "You've been reading for half a day."

Linley raised his head, and saw that in the sky, there was indeed a sliver of a knife-thin Violet Moon.

"Haha..." Linley couldn't help but begin to laugh as well. "This book really is good. Although reading it hasn't helped me gain any insights at all into the Elemental Laws, at least its given me a general idea." Linley understood that in the end, insights depended on one's self.

"I can't read it, I can't keep reading it." Linley said with a sigh. "I haven't even completed mastering the profound mysteries of the Laws that I have currently gained insights into. I can't be hasty."

Actually, the profound mysteries of the Laws weren't so simple.

Reading this was one thing, but if one truly wanted to attempt to gain insights in accordance with it, perhaps one would even be able to make any headway at all. For example, it might say that the 'Worldwalker' ability required one to become completely merged into the earth elemental essences of the world...but how would you do that? There was no way to use words to describe such a thing. This was a form of insight that one might have into the Laws!

The next morning, Linley's team headed to Redbud Castle.

"Before heading to the Indigo Prefecture, we at least have to gain some basic information regarding the geography of the Infernal Realm. Only then will we be able to work out a pathway.” Linley currently only knew that the Infernal Realm had five enormous, virtually endless continents, as well as the Starmist Sea and the Chaotic Sea.

To get to the Indigo Prefecture of the Bloodridge Continent...

Linley only knew that they had to first leave the Redbud Continent, then pass through the vast Starmist Sea before finally reaching the shores of the Bloodridge Continent.

Within the main hall on the first floor of Redbud Castle, Linley’s group hadn’t noticed any book selling counters last time. They first went to ask some of the customer service representatives, from whom they learned that actually...Redbud Castle had items for sale in more places than just the counters.

There were some standalone rooms as well.

The books were placed in a standalone room at the sides of the main hall. Linley’s team went into the room. There were very few people who were here looking at books.

“So many books!” Bebe sighed in amazement as he looked at the books.

“Search carefully. Let’s find information regarding the geography of the entire Infernal Realm.” Linley said.

The three began to carefully search. There were quite a few books that described the geography of the Infernal Realm. Some focused on describing the Nightblaze Prefecture, while others described the massive Redbud Continent. But as for describing the entire Infernal Realm, Linley found only a single book, which was just a simple atlas-type book.

What Linley needed wasn't just a map; it was something which would describe the threats and the risky areas of the Infernal Realm.

After all, the three of them weren't all that powerful yet. If they were to fall into a dangerous area, it would be disastrous. It was best to learn of these things beforehand.

"Linley, Bebe, come over and take a look." Delia called.

Linley and Bebe immediately walked over. Currently, Delia was holding a dark red book that was five or six centimeters thick. On the cover of the book were four words: "Infernal Realm, General Summary". Bebe pursed his lips. "A thin book like that? This book that I have which only describes the Nightblaze Prefecture is as thick."

How vast was the Infernal Realm?

To describe it in detail, even ten books wouldn't be enough, much less one.

"A book of this thickness isn't bad. Most likely, it won't just be a simple map collection." Linley laughed as he accepted the book.

Flipping through it, it was indeed much the same as Linley had imagined.

"This is pretty much it. Although the book doesn't have many descriptions, at least it has a general introduction to general geography and environment of the five continents, two seas, and 108 prefectures of the Infernal Realm. It even describes each of the ten or so cities in each prefecture, as well as some dangerous areas and information about them."

The Infernal Realm was simply too vast.

If it took two or three pages to discuss a prefecture, then the 108 prefectures combined would require nearly three hundred pages.

In addition, the pages of this book were quite long. It was an unusual book; even if it was burned or drenched, it wouldn't be damaged. After all, this wasn't that sort of frail material which existed in the material realm. However, every single page was only slightly thicker than the pages in the material realms.

And so, a fairly simple introduction to the Infernal Realm required a book that was five or six centimeters thick.

If it was the type which went into great detail, it would require several hundred books of the same thickness.

"How much is this" Linley glanced at the nearby, violet-robed attendant.

The attendant walked over and glanced at it, then laughed and said, "A hundred inkstones."

Linley immediately handed over a hundred inkstones. To Linley's team, currently in possession of over a hundred million inkstones, this was nothing. Only, Linley's team also understood...that their networth actually wasn't that much.

After all, a single Deathgod Golem was worth a hundred million.

Some higher level metallic lifeforms were also worth more than a hundred million, and it was normal for some of the nicer houses within the city to cost billions.

A hundred million?

Well, at least for an ordinary life, it was enough.

"Hey, why haven't I found any books regarding descriptions of the profound mysteries of the Laws?" Linley asked the attendant.

"Those books are a bit more expensive. They are held within the second hall. Each of them cost several thousand inkstones, and the better ones cost more than ten thousand." The attendant said. "And these types of basic, elementary books that only have common knowledge within are fairly cheap."

They left Redbud Castle. Linley's team selected a nearby restaurant. This time, Linley's team selected dishes worth roughly a thousand inkstones; this could be considered a slight extravagance.

While they were in the restaurant, Linley continued to flip through the geography book.

"Linley, have you made up your mind regarding our path?" Delia asked.

Linley closed the book, then nodded slightly. "Bloodridge Continent. This is the easternmost continent of the entire Infernal Realm. Right now, we are in the Redbud Continent, which is in the north. To reach the Bloodridge Continent, we must first head to a port city in the Rainbow Prefecture. Of the ten cities of the Rainbow Prefecture, Bluemaple City is nearest to the Starmist Seas. We should head to Bluemaple City first!"

"According to what the books describe, there are quite a few groups that will go from Bluemaple City to the Bloodridge Continent." Linley said. "Only, the distance from our Royalwing City of the Nightblaze Prefecture to the Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture is roughly four billion kilometers!"

It was common for prefectures to have a circumference of a billion kilometers.

For the distance from Royalwing City of the Nightblaze Prefecture to the ports of Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture was within his expectations.

"Four billion kilometers." Bebe stared. "That's way too far. It will take forever to get to Bluemaple City, and it will probably be very dangerous."

Linley laughed. "What are you worried about? We don't have to go alone. After eating, let's head to the Fiend Castle. We'll take on an escort mission from Royalwing City to Bluemaple City. Wouldn't we then easily reach Bluemaple City?"

Generally speaking, escort missions would have quite a few Fiends.

If Linley's team joined one, their journey would naturally be much safer. Even if they encountered any dangers, with an entire group of Fiends present, the situation would be much easier to deal with.

"Take on a mission? I haven't ever taken on a formal mission before." Bebe was somewhat excited.

"Sirs, the 'Goldscale Silkthin Fish' you ordered is ready." A waiter carried over a platter that was gleaming with a golden light. This beautiful, gaudy delicacy was placed upon the table.

Linley laughed, "Bebe, stop thinking about the mission. First eat, then talk. You ordered this fish, and it cost three hundred inkstones. Let's taste it. How is it?"

After eating, Linley's group headed to the Fiend Castle. The receptionist at the main hall of the first floor, their old friend Yuna, knew why they had come. Laughing, she pointed at Linley. "Mission acceptances are on the next floor up. One Star Fiends to Three Star Fiends take missions at the second floor, while Four Star Fiends to Six Star Fiends take on missions on the third floor."

The second floor of the Fiend Castle. The location for One Star Fiends to accept missions. A row of rooms. Linley's group walked into one of them.

"Speak. What sort of mission do you want?" A youth who was seated in the meditative stance on the ground said calmly.

"Escort mission, from Royalwing City to Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture." Linley said. "Ideally, a two star mission." Linley's group all consisted of One Star Fiends. They could at most take on two star missions. Upon completing a two star mission, they would naturally become Two Star Fiends.

The youth nodded slightly. After closing his eyes for a moment, he then waved his hand. A scroll appeared in his hands, which he flipped open and began to read. "Escort missions from Royalwing City to Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture. There's ten in total, three of which are two star. Take a look."

As he spoke, he handed the scroll to Linley.

After taking a quick look, Linley came to a decision. "The two star mission that begins in twenty days." The reason why Linley selected this one was because there were many people who had already signed up to participate in this escort mission, including the recruiting of a hundred Two Star Fiends!

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 1, The Fiends Assemble

Two star mission. Escort from 'Royalwing City' of the Nightblaze Prefecture to 'Bluemaple City' of the Rainbow Prefecture, a trip of nearly four billion kilometers. Compensation, two hundred thousand inkstones!

Although the distance was that of four billion kilometers, generally speaking, when riding on a metallic lifeform, a few decades was enough. An escort mission of a few decades which would result in a reward of 200,000 inkstones was quite a high compensation for a One Star Fiend or a Two Star Fiend.

"You choose this one?" The youth raised his head in surprise, glancing at Linley's team.

The look on the youth's face caused Linley to feel suspicious. "What? Is there a reason I shouldn't?"

"Oh. Give me your Fiend medallion for a moment." The youth didn't say anything extra. Linley's team immediately handed their Fiend medallions over. With a flip of his hand, the youth brought out gemstone which radiated with violet light.

He placed this gemstone next to the three Fiend medallions.

Under the violet light, strange characters suddenly appeared in the air above the three Fiend medallions.

"Uh?" Linley's team was rather surprised.

"What's this? A line of numbers?" Bebe asked. An extremely long number was currently hovering above the Fiend medallion.

The youth said very casually. "That's the serial number for your Fiend medallion. Every single Fiend has a different serial number, and we can verify your identity through it. The medallion also has your star rank as a Fiend." As he spoke, he recorded down the serial numbers of the three Fiend medallions.

And then, he handed the three medallions back to Linley's team. "Alright. What the three of you need to do is go to the city gates twenty days from now at dawn. At that time, staff members of the Fiend castle as well as the escorted guests will be waiting for you there. They will verify your Fiend medallions, and thus they naturally will be able to verify your identity."

"Does it cost anything to accept missions?" Linley asked.

Linley had heard that most Fiend Castle missions required a fee to be paid first before acceptance.

The youth laughed. "That depends on the mission. Taking on escort missions doesn't require a fee to be paid."

Linley's group left the Fiend Castle, returning to their own residence.

"Ah, so we have twenty more days. In twenty days, we'll leave this place." Bebe tossed his grass hat to the stone table, then sighed. "We've lived here for thirty years now. I'll miss it."

Linley couldn't help but let out a long breath.

They had come to the Infernal Realm so long ago now. They had finally become Fiends. In twenty days, they would finally begin their journey enroute to the Indigo Prefecture.

"Linley." Delia's face had a hint of a smile on it. "Tarosse, Dylin, and the others arrived here in the Infernal Realm long before we did. Where do you think they might be? This time, when we leave Royalwing City, will we meet them on the way?"

"Tarosse, Dylin?" Linley couldn't help but think back to the things which had happened in the past.

"All of them are together. Tarosse and Dylin, in particular, aren't just Gods, they are divine beasts. They should be able to have the ability to somewhat protect themselves." Linley looked towards the distant horizons. "Only, this Infernal Realm is too vast. I don't know where they were transported to."

The Infernal Realm had five great continents, as well as the Starmist Sea and the Chaotic Sea.

From the material plane, one could be transported anywhere and appear within any of those seven areas. Any two places had an extremely vast distance from each other. If they weren't sent to the same continent, meeting would really be difficult.

Bebe hurriedly shook his head and said, "Right. It isn't so bad for Tarosse and the others in the Infernal Realm, but Olivier came alone. Him, a Demigod all by himself, most likely will have a bit of a tougher time than we did when we first came."

"Without having come to the Infernal Realm, who would have known that it was like this?" Linley laughed calmly. "However, it makes sense. Countless experts from material planes have been transported here over countless years, and the Infernal Realm itself has many races...it is only natural for there to be so many experts here."

Linley's group felt very relaxed. After all, they now had a wealth of over a hundred million inkstones and had become Fiends. In the Infernal Realm, they would have no problems establishing themselves somewhere.

Linley's group naturally also had more confidence with regards to heading to the Indigo Prefecture.

Within the twenty remaining days, Linley's group quietly trained. Delia naturally focused on absorbing that Highgod spark. However, absorbing a Highgod spark would require dozens of years. In the blink of an eye...

The twenty days had passed.

This dawn, the cold, foggy dawn air still hovered about Royalwing City. In mid-air, the Violet Moon could still be seen. But of course, it was already past the 'curfew' time period. Linley's group got up early and headed towards the gates of Royalwing City.

"Royalwing City!" Bebe sighed emotionally while walking. "In the future, I probably won't have a chance to come to Royalwing City again."

"Don't overthink things." Linley, seeing the emotional look on Bebe's face, wanted to laugh. "Oh. The gates are up ahead."

"Uh, we're here." Bebe's eyes lit up, and he immediately looked over. "Where's the metallic lifeform? Why can't I see it?" Bebe looked carefully in the air above the outside of the city, but couldn't see any trace of a metallic castle.

Linley felt a hint of puzzlement as well.

Logically speaking, there should be a metallic lifeform outside.

"Let's head outside then discuss it." Linley said. As they stepped past the gates, a white-robed silver-haired youth, upon seeing the Fiend medallions on their chests, immediately walked over and asked in a low voice, "Are you here for the escort mission to Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture?"

"Right!" Linley's group nodded.

The silver-haired youth laughed and nodded. "Then please first go to the second floor of the restaurant next to the gates. The Fiends who are participating in this escort mission are all going there."

“Next to the gates?” Linley turned to look. “The restaurant at the south, or the one at the north.”

“The one in the south. At the door, you’ll see someone like me, dressed in white. When you go, he will receive you.” The silver-haired youth said.

Linley’s team was puzzled. The escort was supposed to gather together and head out at dawn, so why were they going to a restaurant?

However, the restaurant was within Royalwing City, and violence was forbidden within Royalwing City. Linley’s group didn’t have to be afraid of taken advantage of or bullied. Naturally, they casually returned to Royalwing City again. At the same time, other Fiends who had accepted this mission were also guided to follow Linley and the others into the restaurant.

“The three of you, please wait a moment.” The white-robed, blue-haired youth smiled at the entrance to the restaurant. He had seen his colleague outside the gates instruct these three to come over, so he knew the three were also here for the mission.

Behind Linley’s group were two more Fiends.

Linley glanced at them, and made his judgment. “All Gods.”

“The five of you, please come with me.” The white-robed blue-haired youth immediately guided Linley’s group of five to the second floor of the restaurant. Right now, the halls of the restaurant on the second floor were bustling. There were forty or fifty people gathered here now.

At the stairway to the second floor, there was a black-robed man standing there.

"A Fiend Castle staffer?" Linley could immediately tell, because this person held within his hand a gemstone that was shining with a violet light.

"The five of you, please permit me to make an inspection." The man smiled.

He immediately used that gemstone which emitted that violet light, placing it close to the chests of Linley and the others. That violet light, upon shining down on the Fiend medallion, immediately caused the Fiend medallion to display a serial number and star rank. The black-robed man was holding a book in his hands. At the top of it, he wrote down the serial number of the Fiends who were taking part in this mission.

Only after completing each verification was the black-robed man certain of every person's status.

"The five of you, welcome." The black-robed man smiled and nodded. Only now did he permit Linley's group of five to enter the center of the second floor.

A silver-haired old man who on his forehead had three long black horns arranged in a circular manner came walking over. With a smile, he said,

"Welcome, the three of you. Our expedition will occur not at dawn today, but at sundown. Please enjoy a repast here first. We will pay for all your expenditures here."

"Sundown?"

Although Linley's team was puzzled, they didn't mind.

One or two days, to Deities, was nothing.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe found a corner for themselves in the dining halls of the second floor, then sat down at the table and casually ordered some dishes.

"Linley, I keep on having the feeling that this escort mission seems to be a bit unusual." Delia said softly.

Linley nodded slightly. "Right. Look. Although the vast majority of the Fiends here are Gods, there's even around ten Highgods. Highgod Fiends are generally Four Star Fiends, or even more powerful. For them to have invited so many Fiends...the price isn't going to be low."

The missions given out by the Fiend Castle didn't have a randomly assigned remuneration; it was in accordance with a baseline which the Fiend Castle had come to.

To invite a One Star Fiend or a Two Star Fiend, the price wouldn't be too bad. But for Four Star Fiends or Five Star Fiends, the price would be astonishing.

“Lord Learmonth [Li'er'meng'si]!”

“Lord Learmonth, you came as well.” Suddenly, several voices rang out in the center of the restaurant.

Linley's group couldn't help but turn to look as well. A skinny, callous looking youth with blue hair was walking up. Immediately, quite a few Fiends stood up to welcome him, especially the Highgods, more than half of whom stood to greet him.

The callous youth named Learmonth entered, then swept the restaurant with his gaze, which finally fell upon three handsome siblings that looked very much alike. A hint of a smile appeared on his face. “Edwards [Ai'de'hua'si], you three brothers have taken on this mission as well? It seems I'll have it easy, then.”

The three laughed and stood up.

“Mr. Learmonth, since you've taken on this mission as well, then this road will most likely have no more dangers for us.” One of the three exceedingly handsome brothers said.”

Right now, the silver-haired elder with the three black horns began to chortle as he walked over. “Mr. Learmonth, Edwards and co., on this trip, we'll be troubling you.” In the eyes of the silver-haired elder, there was no need to pay any attention to the other Fiends.

Anyone who knew Learmonth or the Edwards brothers wouldn't be angered by this.

Learmonth was a mighty Six Star Fiend.

The Edwards brothers were all Five Star Fiends!

Generally speaking, the most powerful Fiends, the Seven Star Fiends, would be scattered everywhere in seclusion. Asking them to take on missions was very difficult. However, generally speaking, Six Star Fiends were already extremely powerful. When one of them joined a mission, there would virtually be no problems on a mission.

"Who is this Lord Learmonth?" Not too far away from Linley, someone began discussing in a low voice.

It seemed that it wasn't just Linley who was puzzled.

"Lord Learmonth is a Six Star Fiend, one of the ranked experts of our Royalwing City."

Linley's team couldn't help but feel startled.

Last time, when they were heading to Moon Lake Castle, the strongest figure had been Loysius and the other two. Loysius was only a Five Star Fiend, but he was still able to kill the master of the Moon Lake Castle without giving him a chance to fight back at all. Five Star Fiends were already so powerful; what, then, of Six Star Fiends?

In addition, a Six Star Fiend attending an escort mission? This caused Linley to feel astonished as well.

The large group continued to eat delicacies until sundown. During this period of time, Linley's group learned that there were nearly twenty Highgod-level Fiends who had accepted this mission, and nearly a hundred God-level Fiends.

So many Fiends, and the leader was a Six Star Fiend.

To have a Six Star Fiend take part in an escort mission of four billion kilometers...the remuneration would be astonishing. Tens of times or hundreds of times greater than that for a God-level Fiend.

"This escort mission is definitely not ordinary." Linley was rather nervous.

At sundown. Outside Royalwing City.

Linley's group, under the guidance of the silver-haired elder, quietly entered a metallic lifeform en masse. Almost as soon as they entered the metallic lifeform, without even having a chance to decide where to sit, the metallic lifeform began to move.

With a 'swish', the metallic lifeform disappeared into the horizons, leaving Royalwing City and heading towards Bluemaple City.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 2, Extremely Heavy Casualties

The metallic lifeform headed forward at high speed. However, the people within it couldn't sense any turbulence at all. Right now, Linley's group was all within the main hall of the metallic lifeform.

"The layout is pretty good." Linley looked around and sighed in approval.

The metallic lifeform had transformed to a fairly large size. There was a main hall in the center, while behind the main hall there were rooms lining each side.

The silver-haired elder with three black horns laughed and said, "Everyone, this is the main hall. The wine here is complimentary, and we've also invited some culinary experts. If you want to eat anything, you can instruct those two and they will have the chefs cook for you." As he spoke, the silver-haired elder pointed towards two white-robed youths nearby.

The Fiends present all smiled. These employers really were very considerate.

"Behind the main hall are the living areas. There are a total of 130 rooms. You can choose whichever one you like, one room per person. If people want to stay together and have their rooms fuse, just give the instructions to my metallic lifeform directly." The silver-haired elder smiled. "For example, you can say this; Camden [Kang'deng], merge these two rooms. 'Camden' is the name of my metallic lifeform."

The Fiends all nodded in satisfaction.

Metallic lifeforms had intelligence. Naturally, they could change their insides easily.

.....

“Camden, merge these two rooms together.” Linley said.

Immediately, the two rooms in front of Linley suddenly changed. The two doors transformed into a single door, while the wall between the rooms disappeared as well, forming a single large room. The bed in the room instantly changed to a larger size as well.

“Bebe, you can stay in the nearby room.” Linley turned and instructed.

Linley suddenly found to his surprise that at this moment, Bebe was staring unblinkingly into the distance. Linley followed Bebe’s gaze. “Oh?” A youth dressed in a black warrior’s outfit and a adorable young girl with braids was in that direction. Bebe was staring at that girl.

“Bebe, what is it?” Linley was somewhat surprised.

Delia’s face had a hint of laughter on it. “Linley, could it be that Bebe has fallen for that girl?”

Linley’s eyes rose upon hearing this. He took a close look at the adorable young lady. Her eyes were fairly large, and had a hint of a sly, playful look in them. The girl had noticed Bebe looking at her as well. She couldn't help but stare back for a moment, and then give a little cute sniff. "Hmph!" And then she turned and said, "Big brother, that guy wearing a straw hat is so annoying."

The youngster turned over, smiling towards Bebe, Delia and Linley.

And then, they entered their own room.

"Bebe." Linley called out. "She went in her room already. Why are you still standing there like an idiot?"

Bebe stood blankly in that spot for a long moment, then suddenly turned to look at Linley. "Boss, that girl is way, way, way, way, way too cute..." This loud shout called quite a few distant Fiends to turn and look.

Linley and Delia were shocked for a good long moment by Bebe's shout.

"Let's go into the room then discuss it." Linley immediately grabbed Bebe by the collar of his clothes and pulled him directly into the room.

Bebe was so excited that his eyes were shining. "Boss, I've discovered something!"

"Speak, what have you discovered?" Linley and Delia both laughed while looking at Bebe.

"I'm absolutely certain!" Bebe balled his fists. "There really is such a thing as love at first sight!"

Linley and Delia stared, stupefied.

"When I saw her, wow...I felt my entire body grow warm. My mind went completely blank, like I suffered a soul-attack. I only woke up a long while later...and when I woke up, I understood!" Bebe was incomparably excited. "My purpose for being here in the Infernal Realm is...chasing her and getting her!" Bebe balled his fists, his eyes filled with resoluteness.

Linley and Delia couldn't help but begin to laugh.

"What are you laughing at?" Bebe snorted. "Boss, think about it. How could there be such a coincidence that after so long in the Infernal Realm, I would meet her as soon as I took on an escort mission? This is... this is destiny!"

Bebe arranged his straw hat and even slightly straightened his hair, saying in a bright voice, "I have decided that before we reach Bluemaple City, I will successfully chase that girl. Boss, you just wait and see!" And then, Bebe immediately walked out.

"This Bebe..." Linley didn't have any idea as to what to say.

Delia laughed. "Linley, don't worry. Just let him do as he pleases."

"What do I have to worry about?" Linley sighed. "Bebe has grown up with me. After all these years, he's finally taken a liking to a girl. That's a good thing. Only...frankly, Bebe was certain that he liked her after a single glance?"

Linley still found it inconceivable.

"Is ordinary logic applicable to Bebe?" Delia said.

Actually, Linley was quite happy. Who Bebe liked was his own business. He himself couldn't interfere, of course.

Life in the metallic creature was very quiet. Although they ran into a few common bandit groups on the way, with so many Fiends standing there, the bandits immediately were terrified into scattering in all directions. In the blink of an eye, six years passed.

During these six years, Delia primarily focused on fusing with her Highgod spark, while Linley was training.

As for Bebe, he chased that girl.

And as a matter of fact, Bebe only needed three days before he and the girl were together. Both of them were sly, lively spirits, and when they were together, they were exceedingly happy. That big brother of the girl, seeing them like that, didn't oppose it. After six years...Bebe and that 'Nisse' girl were already a couple.

Everyone throughout the metallic creature knew that there was a pair of jokesters aboard.

In a room within the metallic creature.

Three Linley's were seated meditatively on the ground, dressed in an earthen robe, a light green robe, and a sky-blue robe.

Linley's divine earth clone was pondering 'Gravitational Space'. Although Linley was capable of using the 'Supergravity Field' technique, he was still feeling around at the edges of the 'Gravitational Space' mystery.

Linley's fastest improvement speed was seen in his divine wind clone.

'Fast', 'Slow', 'Sound Waves', 'Music'. Linley's level of understanding in these four profound mysteries was rising at a stable rate. In particular, the 'Fast' and 'Slow' aspects. According to Linley's calculations, given his current speed, in a few decades, his complete fusion of these two profound mysteries might be completed.

As for Linley's original body, it was focusing on gaining insights into the 'Elemental Laws of Fire'.

With regards to elemental affinity, Linley had a high level of affinity for 'earth' and 'wind'. His affinity for 'fire' came afterwards. As for the other elements, his affinity was exceedingly weak.

To date, Linley had two divine clones. Naturally, Linley wouldn't give up a chance to increase his strength yet again, and so his main body began to train in the Elemental Laws of Fire.

"I still haven't been able to grasp the basics of the Profound Mysteries of Gravitational Space. But I have for the Elemental Laws of Fire." Linley laughed at himself. "But of course, I've only grasped the basics for the simplest 'Essence of Fire' profound mystery." For all Laws, be it the Elemental Laws of Fire or the Elemental Laws of the Earth, the simplest profound mystery was that of the 'Essence'; the 'Essence of Fire', the 'Essence of the Earth', etc.

Also...

"When training in the 'Essence of the Earth' or 'Essence of Fire', there are some commonalities." Linley thus found it much easier to grasp the basics of the Profound Mysteries of the Essence of Fire.

"Linley, you woke up." Delia opened her eyes as well.

"How is your training proceeding?" Linley rose to his feet.

"Not bad. I'm halfway through mastering the profound mysteries of the Laws." Delia said.

The Elemental Laws of the Wind in total had nine types of profound mysteries. Prior to fusing with this Highgod spark, Delia had already known four of the nine profound mysteries. After spending six more years, Delia had gained insights into yet another one.

"Let's go. Let's go eat something and drink something." Linley and Delia walked out, shoulder to shoulder.

Their little journey to the dining hall was very peaceful. Most of the Fiends were training in their own rooms. Right now, there were only a few Fiends in the main hall, but of course...there would definitely be two people there. Bebe and Nisse.

"Linley, Delia, what a coincidence. You came as well." Someone walked over from by Linley's side. It was Nisse's older brother.

"Salomon [Sa'luo'meng], it is rather coincidental." Linley laughed. "Come, let's go have a drink."

Salomon, as Nisse's older brother, was a Highgod-level expert. However...Linley guessed that this Salomon was a very ordinary Highgod. This was because the most powerful people on this mission were the three Five Star Fiends and the Six Star Fiend.

Linley's group headed straight towards Bebe and Nisse, who were currently joking and teasing each other.

"Ninny, tell me, why are you girls so beautiful and yet so foolish?" Bebe sat there on the chair, staring at the nearby Nisse.

Nisse considered for a moment, then immediately said, "Oh, I know."

"Adorable Ninny, please speak." Bebe looked at Nisse.

Nisse wrinkled her little nose, then said, "Women are beautiful so as to let you men fall in love with us. As for why women are foolish...it's to make me fall in love with you!"

Bebe stared. "You are foolish, thus you fell in love with me?"

"If I wasn't foolish, why would I fall in love with you?" Nisse had an innocent, puzzled look on her face.

"Oh!" Irritated, Bebe slapped his head. Why was it that he could never overcome Nisse in these debates?

The nearby Linley and the other two, hearing this exchange, couldn't help but begin to laugh.

Bebe turned his head, looking at Linley in surprise. "Boss."

"Heh heh, you keep chatting. We'll sit over here." Linley laughed as he spoke. All of the tables here were fairly small, circular tables. They could sit three people. Even four people would find it to be rather crowded.

Linley, Delia, and Salomon sat down in a corner of the hall.

"Linley, Bebe really is rather adorable." Salomon laughed. And then, he paused for a long moment, as though considering something. Suddenly, he stretched out his Godrealm, covering Linley and Delia within the reach of his Godrealm.

"Huh?" Linley and Delia looked at Salomon, puzzled.

Salomon laughed, "Delia, Linley, there's something I want to tell you. However, I can't let others hear this. Thus...I am completely shutting out the sound."

Linley and Delia looked towards Salomon in astonishment. What was there to be so secretive about?

"There are very few people who know this rumor. However, over these six years, my little sister and your little brother, Bebe, have become quite close to each other. And so, I'm going to tell you this rumor." Salomon's face grew very solemn.

"Rumor?" Linley and Delia were both puzzled.

Salomon said slowly, "Do you know where this escort mission started off from?"

"Started off from?" Linley frowned. "Wasn't it in Royalwing City?"

"No." Salomon shook his head. "Based on what I have heard, the escort mission started off in the distant Peakstone Prefecture!"

"Peakstone Prefecture?" Linley was greatly shocked.

Peakstone Prefecture was a prefecture in the west part of the Redbud Continent, while Nightblaze Prefecture was in the center of the Redbud Continent. As for the Rainbow Prefecture, it was in the east part of the Redbud Continent.

"Right." Salomon said solemnly. "According to rumor, on the way over, the escorts suffered an enemy attack on the way over, and virtually all the Fiends died. Only a few were left. Therefore, the employer hired another group of Fiends in our Royalwing City."

Linley and Delia were both shocked.

"You knew this, but you still came?" Linley immediately discovered a problem in this.

"First of all, it is only a rumor." Salomon immediately laughed bitterly as he spoke. "And second of all, I only heard this rumor half a year ago."

Linley immediately came to the conclusion; everyone had headed out six years ago. Since Salomon had heard it only half a year ago, then it seemed he had heard this from others in the metallic lifeform.

"This is just a rumor." Linley said.

Salomon shook his head, lowering his voice. "Don't disbelieve it. Think about it. Why would they have us gather in the restaurant and be afraid to let us openly and publicly gather at the main gates? We waited until nightfall, then quickly and stealthily slipped into the metallic lifeform. Before we even had a chance to get our footing, the metallic lifeform immediately began to move."

Hearing this, Linley began to think that it made sense.

"Therefore, it's best to be cautious." Salomon said softly. "If we really run into any danger, those enemies won't be too vicious to us. We can immediately scatter and flee. Saving our lives matters the most. The failure of the mission just means that we won't get compensation."

Linley and Delia both nodded slightly.

And then, Salomon released his Godrealm. The two began to casually chat and drink.

Suddenly...

A divine sense swept across the entire metallic creature! Linley and Delia didn't notice it at all. Only, Salomon's face changed dramatically, and he let out a low growl, "A divine sense scan?"

"Divine sense scan?" Linley was shocked as well.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 3, Probe

Linley, Salomon, and the others instantly disappeared from the round table, reappearing at the translucent window. They all looked out through the translucent window...

In mid-air, there were hundreds of figures standing there, with the leader being a tall, slender figure with hair that was graying but a face which was exceedingly handsome. He seemed like a young man, and he had a sword on his back.

"Carrying a sword on his back?" Linley was puzzled.

In the Infernal Realm, very few experts would carry their weapons on their bodies. Most of them would keep them stored in their interspatial rings.

"So many Highgods!" The handsome youth's face suddenly changed slightly as well. As the leader of an extremely famous bandit group within a circumference of a million kilometers, he knew exactly which caravans could be robbed and which ones could not.

"Lord, shall we attack?" A God behind him said quietly.

The handsome youth didn't hesitate at all, immediately turning. "Attack? Your brain has problems. Everyone, retreat!" Instantly, the hundreds of bandits all fled downwards at high speed.

As for the metallic lifeform, without being affected at all, it continued to make its way forward.

Within the metallic creature.

Linley's group returned to their original seats, and that Salomon laughed calmly. "Looks like I was a bit too nervous. Those bandits are far more cowardly than I had imagined. Those people immediately fled before our people even went outside."

Linley laughed as well.

Just then, he really had been quite startled.

When Salomon had said there was a divine sense probe, but he himself hadn't discovered it, naturally that meant that the prober was a Highgod. To Linley, a Highgod was someone he had to be cautious about.

"Mr. Salomon." Delia laughed. "Don't worry too much. No matter how powerful the bandits are, our metallic lifeform has Mr. Learmonth, right? With him, it's not necessary for us to worry." Delia wasn't too worried.

Salomon nodded in agreement.

"Delia, you can't say that." Linley said.

"Oh?" Delia looked at Linley.

Linley warned, "Bandits groups are virtually all made up of Gods. Generally speaking, bandit groups that have a Highgod are top of the line groups. If a bandit group is so powerful as to have multiple Highgods, then the number of Gods in that group will also be exceedingly large."

Salomon and Delia both nodded.

They all saw how that bandit group just now had a single Highgod, but hundreds of others.

"If they really attack, true, we don't need to fear the experts amongst them, as Learmonth and the others will deal with them. But with enemy forces being so numerous, we might be faced with the combined attacks of a large group of Gods." Linley said resignedly. "After all, we only have a hundred or so Gods."

Delia just came to this realization.

If they truly ran into a chaotic group battle, then how many people could Learmonth kill by himself at the same time? And even if he was able to save Linley and the others, perhaps he wouldn't even care to.

They were neither family nor friends; why save them?

"It seems it is still best for us to be careful." Delia said.

"Boss, what are you all talking about?" Bebe and Nisse walked over together.

When Linley looked at Bebe and Nisse, he couldn't help but start to laugh. "Bebe, I've discovered that you and Nisse actually look rather similar."

"What?" Bebe looked confused, and then a look of sudden understanding appeared on his face. "Oh, I get it. Boss, have you discovered that you and Delia also look rather similar?"

Linley was startled. He couldn't help but share a glance with Delia.

Husband and wife would naturally have a bit of the same aura.

"This is known as, 'spouses look alike'. Thus, Nisse and I look rather similar." Bebe's eyes fluttered as he looked at Nisse. "Nisse, am I right?"

Nisse snorted, but her eyes had a hint of delight in them as well.

Linley and Salomon exchanged a glance, then laughed. Bebe and Nisse...it seemed the two of them really did have a possibility of being together.

.....

The metallic lifeform's journey was very peaceful. Linley's group spent most of their time in training. Although Royalwing City and their destination, Bluemaple City, were four billion kilometers apart, that was if they travelled in a straight line. Linley's group did not, however, travel in a straight line. They had to avoid some dangerous areas.

In the blink of an eye, another four years passed. In Linley and Delia's room.

"Whew." Linley opened his eyes.

Delia seemed to have sensed something, and she opened her eyes as well. "Linley, why did you stop training?"

"Delia, I've reached a bottleneck in my training of the 'Profound Truths of Velocity' in the Elemental Laws of the Wind." Linley said with a strange expression.

"Bottleneck? How is that possible?" Delia was greatly startled.

Generally speaking, only after reaching the very end would a bottleneck appear when one was training in a profound mystery of the Laws. During the early and middle stages, one might be slow but one wouldn't encounter any bottlenecks.

"Linley, last time, didn't you say that it would take you another twenty or thirty years to completely fuse them?" Delia asked.

"Delia, four years ago, I guessed that I would need another twenty years before reaching a bottleneck, and then a few more years to break through the bottleneck to achieve mastery!" Linley shook his head and laughed. "But I was wrong. The profound mysteries of the Laws aren't what I took them to be; I thought that the further I went along, the harder it would be.”

“I didn’t train in the ‘Fast’ and ‘Slow’ aspects separately. I compare and contrast them against each other and train them together.”

“At first, it was true that I needed more and more time, but as I trained to the later stages and continued to compare, contrast, and hypothesize, my breakthrough speed actually increased. The ‘Fast’ and ‘Slow’ aspects are akin to two roads which first start off in opposite directions, and so the further you walk along them, the more distant each road will become. However, when reaching a certain distance, the two will begin to draw close to each other. As you compare and contrast them, the two roads will draw nearer and nearer, and now, I’ve already reached the end stages of fusing them together.” Linley shook his head. “Only, I’ve become stuck in this training bottleneck.”

Delia began to understand it generally.

As a God of the wind-style, Delia also had trained in the ‘Fast’ and ‘Slow’ profound mysteries.

However, Delia was not able to make them fuse, nor did she understand...how the ‘Fast’ and ‘Slow’ profound mysteries, seemingly opposites, could be fused together.

“Come, let’s go get some food.” Linley wasn’t going to try and force it. Upon reaching a bottleneck, he would first relax and then train later.

“Another divine sense?” Linley suddenly frowned.

Just now, a God-level divine sense swept over the metallic lifeform.

Delia laughed. "On the way over, we've encountered so many probes. Even Gods dare to use their divine sense to probe us. Most likely, if they found that we are very weak, they would immediately come to attack and loot us."

"Forget them." Linley was irritated with these bandit groups as well.

The people in this metallic lifeform had become accustomed to the divine sense probes of these bandit groups. They couldn't be bothered to pay attention to them. After all, they knew...that if they were to leave the metallic lifeform to attack the bandits, they probably wouldn't be able to catch that many.

Today, yet another Highgod divine sense swept across the metallic lifeform.

But the Fiends inside the metallic lifeform continued to drink, to train, to chat. Nobody cared.

"Everyone, disperse!"

A youth with curly silver hair led his hundred subordinates to rush down and flee, retreating into the depths of the mountain valleys below.

"Whoooosh!" The metallic creature didn't slow down in the slightest, disappearing into the horizons.

But deep within a deep gorge.

"Drip, drip..."

Water flowed through the channels of a creek.

"After waiting so many years, I've finally encountered you." The youth with curly silver hair stood atop the pool of water. Behind him, a muscular black-robed man was standing respectfully.

"Hayde!" The silver-haired youth said coldly.

"Lord." The black-robed man bowed.

The silver-haired youth said seriously, "Immediately notify young master Inigo [Yi'ni'ge]. Tell him that we have discovered the squad where those two old fellows are in. As long as the young master knows that the metallic lifeform passed by our place, he will easily be able to judge the general direction it will head in next."

"Yes, milord."

The black-robed man nodded slightly.

Hundreds of millions of kilometers away from the silver-haired youth, within Red Orchid City, there was a hotel that had been completely booked by a group of hundreds of people.

In one of the courtyards within the hotel, there was a devilish youth with long, blood-red hair who was seated on a chair, flipping through a heavy tome. A nearby servant said respectfully, "Young master, Hayde is outside waiting to see you."

"Hayde?" The blood-red haired youth frowned. "Who is Hayde?"

"One of our messengers." The servant said respectfully.

In the Infernal Realm, messages were usually carried by someone who had divine clones located in separate areas.

For example, one might be in the Nightblaze Prefecture, while the other might be in the Rainbow Prefecture. Although there was a distance of billions of kilometers, since the two clones really were the same person, anything one clone knew, the other one billions of kilometers away would also know.

This was a fairly normal form of communication in the Infernal Realm.

"We finally found those two old fellows?" The youth immediately was overjoyed. "Hurry up and have him come in."

"Yes."

A man who looked identically to the muscular black-robed man called 'Hayde' entered the courtyard, immediately falling respectfully to one knee. "Young master Inigo, Lord Padgett [Pa'ji'te] has instructed me to inform you, young master, that the metallic lifeforms carrying those two old fellows just passed by his location."

"Oh?"

Inigo was instantly overjoyed. With a flip of his hand, an enormous detailed map appeared on the table.

"Passed by Padgett? Then it seems the squad these two fellows are travelling in will pass through this place, the Nisiwan [Ni'si'wan] Mountain Range. Since they've selected this route, then..." Inigo stared at the map, a hint of a smile on his face.

"The web I set up has finally found those two old fellows."

Inigo nodded slightly. "I don't know how strong the Fiends which those two old fellows have recruited are. Right. I first have to probe them."

"Immediately sent a message back and tell Vionnaz [Wei'ao'na]. Have him prepare his forces and immediately go to the area near the Bulu [Bu'lu] River. Those two old fellows will definitely pass through his area." Inigo immediately instructed his servant.

"Yes, young master." The servant immediately acknowledged and left.

Right now, the only one left in the courtyard was Inigo.

Inigo narrowed his eyes slightly, murmuring, "Those two old fellows. They've taken all the wealth of their master's clan and run all the way to the Redbud Continent. They definitely have major aims." And then, Inigo sneered coldly. "But no matter what they are aiming for, once I get the astonishing wealth which those two old fellows are carrying, I will benefit tremendously."

Inigo's face was all smiles.

"The ancient Boyd [Bo'yi] clan. How much wealth have they accumulated?" Inigo's eyes were filled with intrigue.

"Inigo." Suddenly, an ancient voice rang out, and a silver-haired elder wearing a green robe entered the courtyard.

"Oh, Teacher." Inigo hurriedly said.

The green-robed silver-haired elder shook his head. "Inigo, you've brought so many people with you and spent so much money. If you end up getting nothing, then..."

"Teacher." Inigo said in a quiet voice. "Don't worry. If I fail, then the wealth I built up over all these years will be gone, that's all. But if I succeed...Teacher, the Boyd clan is finished, but those two old fellows took all of their wealth as they fled."

"The massive wealth accumulated by the Boyd clan over all those years." Inigo's heart trembled just thinking of it.

But the green-robed elder still frowned. "Inigo, think about it. If you had such an astonishing amount of wealth, why wouldn't you hide? Instead, they invited all of those Fiends to escort them. It seems as though they are actually intending to return to the Jedefloat Continent."

Inigo frowned. "As for this, I'm rather curious as well."

"If I were in their shoes, I would have fled and disappeared long ago." Inigo laughed. "However, Teacher, no matter what, right now, we have already discovered their traces. As long as we kill those two old folks and seize their interspatial ring..."

"I hope you will be successful." The green-robed elder said.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 4, Strength in Numbers

The metallic lifeform flew at a high, stable speed. Linley and Delia's room. Linley was staring outside the window at the vast world. There were many humans, and also many beastmen, magical beasts, and other races of creatures.

"Those are all Saints." Linley was able to judge.

In the Infernal Realm, the vast majority were still at the Saint-level. Countless Saints were spread across every part of the Infernal Realm. Only, their lives had no guarantees at all.

"If I had entered the Infernal Realm when I was a Saint, then...I would have been in trouble." Linley couldn't help but say to himself. "That Hodan...when I was just a Saint, he tried to lure me into entering the Infernal Realm. He definitely had bad intentions."

"Linley, what are you thinking about?" Delia asked, puzzled.

"Nothing." Linley laughed and shook his head. "Delia, we've been on this metallic creature for over ten years now. Time has moved quite quickly."

"Right. Ten years. Most likely, in another ten years, we'll be at Bluemaple City. I hope that before you can reach Bluemaple City, you'll have reached the God level in the Elemental Laws of the Wind." Delia laughed.

"Let my divine wind clone also reach the God level?" Linley himself was not certain in his ability to do so. Breaking through a bottleneck could happen very quickly, but if it happened slowly...nobody could be certain as to how long it would take.

Just as Linley and Delia were chatting...

Salomon and Nisse were in a room together as well.

"Big bro, why did you want to speak to me?" Nisse laughed as she looked at her big brother.

Salomon looked at Nisse. She was currently wearing a straw hat on her head which Bebe had given her.

"Nisse, you truly wish to be together with that Bebe?" Salomon's voice was very low and very solemn as he spoke.

Nisse's smile slowly disappeared, and she nodded seriously. "Big bro, actually, I didn't want to go to the Jadenfloat Continent to begin with. Only, I didn't want to part from you. When I think about those years we spent at the Jadenfloat Continent and those attacks we suffered, I..." She couldn't help but clench her fists.

Salomon sighed to himself, then said, "I understand. Now, I want to ask about you and Bebe. What are you planning?"

"Big bro, Bebe is a really good person. Although he occasionally likes to joke and play around, he is very sincere to others, and treats me very well.

When I am with Bebe...I feel that I am very happy and carefree, without any worries at all." Nisse had a smile on her face now. "Sometimes, when I'm not happy, Bebe will come coax me. Big bro, don't just look at the way Bebe fools around. Bebe is actually exceedingly smart. Whenever I am even slightly unhappy, he'll immediately know."

"I like the feeling of being together with Bebe." Nisse looked at her big brother. "Big bro, I'm sorry."

Salomon said in a low voice, "Are you, no longer planning to go with me to the Jadenfloat Continent?"

"I'm not going anymore." Nisse shook her head.

Salomon maintained his silence. He had been together with his little sister, 'Nisse', for many years. Naturally, he couldn't bear to part from her.

"Big bro, I'm sorry." Nisse said quietly.

Salomon shook his head and laughed. "The trip back to the Jadenfloat Continent was going to be dangerous no matter what. This is for the better. You can be with Bebe for now. Once I return to the Jadenfloat Continent and arrange everything, you and Bebe, when you have free time, can come to the Jadenfloat Continent to look for me."

Nisse couldn't help but feel excited.

"Big bro!" Nisse excitedly hugged her older brother.

"Heh heh." Salomon began to laugh. "It's fine, it's fine. But Nisse, when you and Bebe are together, you need to be careful. I won't be by your side then."

"Got it, big bro!" Nisse hurriedly said. "Don't worry. By then, we will find an ordinary escort mission. It won't be very dangerous. Look, we've been on this metallic lifeform for a dozen years now, but we haven't encountered any dangers."

"BANG!"

Suddenly, the metallic creature shuddered, and both Nisse and Salomon's bodies swayed.

"Whoosh!" The entire metallic creature shrank into a single human form, while all of the people within the creature were now hovering in mid-air. A hundred-plus people were all rather astonished. Many Fiends had been in the middle of their training, but right now, they were all startled awake.

At this moment...

Ahead of the hundred-plus people, there was a large number of Deities hovering in mid-air. The number was so high that the One Star Fiends and Two Star Fiends like Linley were all so frightened, their faces changed.

"Boss, how many people are there here?" Bebe stared with round eyes.

"It seems like there's roughly ten thousand." Linley's heart clenched. "Nearly ten thousand experts, and it seems all of them are at least Gods, while a few are Highgods! Such a large group, if they were to charge and attack all together, then the results..."

Linley's heart grew nervous.

"Bebe, afterwards, we'll come to this side. Delia, later, you use the Deathgod Golem." Linley hurriedly instructed. "At this time, focus our efforts on preserving our lives. Let the Six Star Fiend defeat the foes."

"Ninny, come over here." Bebe immediately called out.

"Bebe." Nisse actually had a smile on her face. Clearly, she was rather excited at the thought of being together with Bebe. Salomon flew over as well, joining Linley's group.

Salomon was somewhat worried as well. He said in a low voice, "This will be trouble. So many people. Even a Highgod will find it dangerous to deal with the combined attacks of hundreds of Gods, much less the nearly ten thousand we have here."

"Everyone!"

A sonorous voice rang out in the air. "The reason you have stopped us is for the sake of money. Today, we don't want to fight with you to the death either. There's no benefit for either side in doing so. Name a price. As long as it is within our range of acceptableness, I will immediately offer it to you. Is this acceptable?"

The speaker of these words was the silver-haired elder with the three black horns.

At this moment, the silver-haired elder was cursing silently to himself. "This damn place, since when did it have a bandit group with ten thousand people? It even has twenty Highgods. I've never even heard of this group!"

"Haha..."

The leader of the bandit brigade, a red-robed man, laughed loudly. "It seems you are rather straightforward. Then I won't make things difficult for you either. We have a total of ten thousand brothers here. How about this. We won't ask for too much. Just give us ten billion inkstones. What do you say?"

Ten billion inkstones!

This figure shocked the silver-haired elder upon hearing it.

"Ten billion inkstones?" The silver-haired elder stared somewhat disbelievingly at the red-robed man.

"Ten billion?" Bebe muttered. "This asking price is really steep."

Linley, upon hearing this figure, thought back to how he himself had a hundred million inkstones. "They immediately ask for ten billion inkstones. It seems the amount of wealth I have is nothing."

"My friend, ten billion inkstones is a bit too high, isn't it?" The silver-haired elder's tone of voice became slightly harder. "Ten billion inkstones, I cannot accept this price. How about we lower it a bit..." The silver-haired elder stared at the red-robed man.

The red-robed man had long, fiery red hair.

"Unacceptable to accept it?"

The red-robed man glanced around himself, laughing loudly. "Brothers, did you hear that?"

"Haha..." Many experts began to laugh.

The red-haired man suddenly shouted ferociously, "Kill them!"

"Kill!" "Kill!" "Kill!" "Kill!"

The bandits simultaneously called out, while at the same time...

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

Ten thousand experts almost simultaneously launched their attacks, either using formless soul attacks or all sorts of material attacks. The entire sky was densely filled with countless swords images, saber images, elemental beasts, and more...

Covering the entire sky, these attacks charged towards Linley's group.

The faces of all the Fiends couldn't help but change.

Even someone as powerful as the Six Star Fiend, Learmonth, couldn't take the combined attacks of on ten thousand Gods head-on at the same time. He was only able to protect himself and a few people around him.

"Retreat!"

Linley growled, while at the same time he, Delia, Bebe, Nisse, and Solomon shot downwards at high speed. Although they retreated at high speed, the speed of the attacks was astonishingly fast. In almost an instant, the material attacks and soul attacks arrived.

Linley's group relied on their dodging abilities to avoid, but the attacks were too numerous, too dense, and too fast!

"Swoosh!" The Deathgod Golem emerged, blocking in front of Linley's group. Two sword energy attacks smashed viciously on the Deathgod Golem's body, and the superficial layer of skin and flesh on the Deathgod Golem split open, revealing the metallic body underneath it, which wasn't damaged at all.

However, multiple soul attacks completely bypassed the Deathgod Golem, easily going straight through its body.

"Delia." Linley directly interposed his own body in front of Delia's, and a soul attack struck into Linley's body.

"Ninny." Bebe did the same for Nisse.

Nisse, for a moment, was completely stunned.

The first wave of attacks passed.

"Linley, are you alright?" Delia was somewhat worried. Linley turned and laughed towards her. "Delia, don't you know how powerful I am yet?" Linley was specialized in soul defense. How could a soul attack launched from so far away harm him?

"Bebe, Bebe." Nisse was frantic with worry, and her eyes even began to tear up. "Bebe, are you alright?" Nisse was at the point of tears. Although she and Bebe had known each other for a long time, they had never faced any threats, and so she didn't know how powerful Bebe was.

All she knew was that Bebe was just a God.

Bebe just grabbed her by the waist. "Let's run. Stop blabbering." He charged downwards, while a look of delight instantly appeared on Nisse's face.

"That kid." Salomon nodded slightly in approval. "It seems I can entrust him with my sister."

All of the Fiends had scattered.

"Haha, not one of you will escape. Kill, kill!!!" The red-robed man bellowed. Several Highgods took command over several units, running in each direction as they began their pursuit and slaughter of the Fiends. As for the ten or so other Highgods, they led nearly five thousand other Gods, heading towards that silver-haired elder who was the employer for this mission.

Actually, the employer wasn't just that silver-haired, black-horned elder. There was another white-horned, silver-haired elder.

The two silver-haired elders glanced at each other.

"Mr. Learmonth, the Edwards brothers, we'll be relying on you." The black-horned silver-haired elder said.

"Don't worry." Learmonth said calmly, while the three Edwards brothers were supremely confident as well.

Linley, Delia, Bebe, Nisse, and Salomon formed into a five-person party. They were currently being pursued by hundreds of Gods.

"They want to chase us?"

Linley, holding Delia by the hand, suddenly accelerated dramatically. It must be understood that at present, Linley had already reached a bottleneck in the 'Fast' and 'Slow' profound mysteries. He was very close to the level of mastery. His speed was far faster than that of these ordinary Gods.

Bebe's speed was astonishing as well. He was also holding Nisse by the hand. As for Solomon, as a Highgod, he naturally caught up easily.

Soon, they threw off the hundreds of Gods chasing after them.

"Being outnumbered really is a pain." Salomon laughed sourly. Hundreds of Gods...if he were to fight them, he might indeed be capable of killing all of those Gods, but it was also possible that he himself would be the one to be killed. After all, there were simply too many Gods.

For example...

If ten soul attacks hit him at the same time, although he was powerful, he would still die.

"Bebe." Nisse's little face was red as she looked at Bebe. "Thanks."

Bebe immediately began to laugh. "Ninny, why thank me? With the relationship we have, is thanks necessary?"

Nisse, seeing the look of teasing laughter on Bebe's face, couldn't help but intentionally let out a snort. Watching this nearby, Linley, Delia, and Salomon all revealed hints of a smile on their faces."

"Another group of Gods. Let's hurry up and leave." Linley immediately shouted through his divine sense. There were simply too many Gods here. They had just avoided one squad of hundreds of Gods, but now another one had noticed them. Linley's group immediately began to flee again.

In terms of speed, they were still at a huge advantage.

Suddenly...

"Rumble..." The entire world began to shake, and invisible spatial ripples spread out, causing the trees and stones that were hit by the ripples to directly turn into powder.

Linley's group stared in mid-air in astonishment. Not just Linley; the all of the luckily surviving Fiends on the battlefield as well as the ten thousand bandits all raised their heads....

Learmonth was there in mid-air, sweeping his sword across. Ten-plus Highgod corpses fell down from the same time.

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" Of those ten-plus Highgod corpses, eight divine clones suddenly emerged from within them and began to flee in every which way.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 5, Sword Intent

Instantly, the entire battlefield fell silent.

Over ten Highgods had actually been killed in a single blow. This was simply inconceivable!

"How is this possible?" Linley stared with wide eyes. "Even if it was a soul attack, he would at most be able to hit one person. How could ten Highgods simultaneously fall from the skies? What happened just now?" Linley now regretted it.

Regretted not having seen that sword attack.

"Flee!"

"Flee!"

The divine clones that had emerged from eight of those Highgod corpses began fleeing in terror in every which way. After having witnessed the power of that sword, none of them had any courage to fight again.

"Too powerful. Too frightening."

These Highgods now truly had the fear of death in them.

"Fleeing?" Learmonth watched calmly as those eight divine clones fled, a hint of a cold smile at the corner of his lips.

Suddenly...

He drew his sword!

In that instant, eight rays of black sword shadows sliced through the air simultaneously, attacking in eight different directions towards those eight fleeing divine clones. Those eight divine clones continued to move forward, but their bodies were bisected, then fell down from the skies.

Blood splashed everywhere in the air.

"That sword!" Linley's pupils shrank, and in his mind, he frantically began to think about that sword.

That terrifying, nearly invincible sword!

In Linley's mind, the image of that sword flashed through as fast as lightning. That sort of extremely fast sword which had the 'intent' of an exploding volcano. In the instant the sword had been drawn, the power of the technique had been completely, explosively released...it was utterly unblockable. Wherever the sword shadow passed, destruction came with it.

"Is this the Way of Destruction?" Linley hurriedly shook his head. "It doesn't seem like it. It seemed like..."

In his mind, Linley was frantically trying to deconstruct that attack on a deeper level, the more he analyzed it...with each minor insight Linley gained, the more questions he had as well.

By now, the leader of this bandit group, that muscular, red-robed man, had fled long ago. Just now, he had been calling out for combat and killing, but he only had his subordinates attack. He himself stayed in the back, not charging forward to attack at all. When he saw that destructive sword, he had immediately chosen...

To flee!

"What a terrifying fellow. That sword was capable of simultaneously killing ten-plus Highgods!" The red-robed man's heart was filled with terror. "If I had been slightly slower, most likely I would have been killed by that frightening Fiend as well. How could these two old fellows have invited such a powerful Fiend?"

The red-robed man's eyes narrowed slightly. "This Fiend is so formidable. It seems that this time, we'll need to invite the young master's teacher, 'Mr. Wind', to personally get involved."

"Hmph." The red-robed man glanced backwards. "These idiots. Did they think the money of me, Vionnaz, was so easily earned? They were able to make money, but they weren't able to spend it. Unfortunately, the twelve Highgods that the young master gave me as subordinates all died as well."

The red-robed man was Vionnaz, one of Inigo's subordinates.

As for the bandit army, Vionnaz had spent money to invite several major bandit organizations to form a single group. After all, Vionnaz had led twelve Highgods, while the other bandit organizations all combined only had seven or eight Highgods.

In particular, Vionnaz had given them an enormous sum of money.

These bandit groups naturally had joined up. In recent days, they had joined forces to waylay quite a few groups.

"I need to hurry back to let the kid immediately inform the young master." Vionnaz immediately flew back towards his own residence.

With two divine clones being in two locations, communications naturally were quite fast. Inigo was thus easily kept abreast of the situation regarding Linley's metallic lifeform.

After the leaders of the bandit group were slaughtered, and especially after Learmonth's sword attack, all of the bandits lost their willpower and they began to flee in every direction. Instantly...not a single bandit group was now left.

"They really ran quite quickly!" Bebe snorted.

"This Learmonth..." Even Salomon was shocked by Learmonth, standing in mid-air. Learmonth's face was cold and calm, as though nothing had happened. Indeed, to Learmonth, this sort of small battle was nothing at all.

"Linley?" Delia called out softly.

But currently, Linley was completely lost in his own world as he pondered on that astonishing sword attack. How could he notice Delia's call?

"Hey, what's going on with the Boss?" Bebe noticed that Linley seemed strange as well. The nearby Nisse laughed. "Bebe, could it be that your Boss was scared silly by that sword of Learmonth's?" Nisse teased intentionally.

Bebe gave her a stare. "What do you know? My Boss probably had some insight."

At this moment, Linley returned to wakefulness.

"Linley, are you alright?" Delia felt that the look on Linley's face was rather odd.

"I'm fine." Linley shook his head and laughed. "Just now, I was thinking about a few things. I actually thought that I was about to make a breakthrough, but I was wrong." Linley glanced at the distant Learmonth, his eyes filled with astonishment and puzzlement. "That sword..."

Linley was also a sword-wielder, and his soul was shaped as a sword.

With regards to the concept of a sword's 'intent', he had his own thoughts as well.

"I've only just mastered the basics of the Essence of Fire, and haven't even become a Deity. Most likely, I guessed wrongly." Linley was still lingering over those lightning-fast eight sword attacks. At his current level of power, Linley was not capable of seeing through the profound truths of that sword.

The nearby Salomon laughed and said, "Linley, are you shocked by Learmonth's sword? Indeed, the sword attack by Learmonth just now was definitely at an extremely high level of the 'Way of Destruction'."

"Way of Destruction?" Linley raised an eyebrow.

"What, weren't you able to sense the aura of the 'Way of Destruction'?" Salomon asked.

"I sensed it." Linley said, but didn't follow up.

"If Linley sensed it, why is he surprised?" Salomon was somewhat puzzled, but he didn't speak it aloud.

Immediately, the lucky, surviving Fiends all headed towards Learmonth and the black-horned silver-haired elder. Soon, more than fifty Fiends gathered around them.

The black-horned, silver-haired elder and the white-horned, silver-haired elder looked at each other, a hint of worry in their eyes. They had already begun to guess...the reason why so many bandits had come to waylay them. It must be understood that generally speaking, when a bandit group discovered so many Fiends, they wouldn't attack.

The black-haired elder said loudly, "Everyone, I didn't expect that we would encounter so many bandit attacks on this trip. I truly am sorry. In such a short time, more than sixty Fiends have died. Thankfully, Mr. Learmonth as well as Edwards and his brothers were here..."

"When we reach Bluemaple City, we will add additional money to your compensation."

The black-horned elder said, and then a golden light flashed as the metallic lifeform once more formed in mid-air. However...the metallic lifeform was now clearly smaller in size.

The Fiends once more filled it, entering the metallic lifeform.

Soon, the metallic lifeform headed out once more. Fiends lived a life on the bloody edge of a blade to begin with. These Fiends who had lived for countless years only wanted their lives to be more exciting and to reach the peak of power in the Infernal Realm. To them, life and death...

Right, death was something they didn't wish to face, and when they encountered any dangers they weren't able to resist, the Fiends would flee.

But when death truly came, they wouldn't be in terror.

After all, ever since they became Fiends, every single one of them had become mentally prepared for that possibility!

"The black-horned elder has a bit of a conscience. He knows he should increase our compensation." Bebe snorted. "I keep on having the feeling that this escort mission isn't simple."

Linley nodded as well. "Right. Only, when we took on the mission, the only thing we noticed was that more than a hundred One Star Fiends and Two Star Fiends had been recruited. Who would have imagined...that there were Four Star Fiends, Five Star Fiends, and even a Six Star Fiend taking part as well!" Linley understood that this sort of 'group mission' was divided into different parts.

It was much like the battle at Moon Lake Castle.

Linley's group was responsible for dealing with gold-robed guards, while the powerful Highgod Fiends were responsible for dealing with black-robed guards as well as the castle's master.

This mission, with a Six Star Fiend involved, wasn't a simple one either.

"Everyone is already on board. What is there to think about?" Salomon shook his head. "If just now, when facing the attack of the bandits, taking the chance to flee would have been one thing. But right now, we are already aboard the metallic creature. If we want to leave and retreat now, once this gets out...we'll lose face."

Spineless, fearful cowards.

They would definitely become a laughingstock.

"Everyone, calmly train." Linley said seriously. "No matter what, even if we encounter enemies, the primary target isn't us. It is the black-horned elder and the white-horned elder. We just need to work hard to protect ourselves."

Linley didn't have any intention of protecting their employers. After all...

Those two elders were both Highgods, while Linley himself was just a God.

"Right."

Everyone nodded, and then scattered towards their own rooms to begin training. In this room, only Linley and Delia were left.

"I wonder why those two old fellows chose us, these Gods, to participate in the mission." Linley was still filled with confusion. "Forget it. Protecting Delia and Bebe is enough." Linley looked at Delia, and then closed his eyes and began to train.

"I hope that in a short period of time, I'll be able to quickly break through this bottleneck in the Profound Truths of Velocity. That way, I'll be able to protect us better." Linley chanted to himself quietly.

Red Orchid City. Within a courtyard in a hotel.

Inigo received the news that had been delivered from his subordinate, Vlonnaz. He couldn't help but frown. "I didn't expect that those two old fellows actually invited such a powerful Fiend. To have trained to such a level in the Way of Destruction means that he is most likely a Five Star Fiend or a Six Star Fiend."

Inigo didn't dare imagine that it would be a Seven Star Fiend.

This was because Seven Star Fiends were ultimate experts with their own titles. They didn't lack for money, and they were at the top of the rankings as Fiends. They generally wouldn't take on missions.

"Inigo." The green-robed elder suddenly appeared in the courtyard again.

Inigo, seeing this person, immediately stood up and said respectfully, "Teacher, the results of Vionnaz' mission is already known..." Inigo immediately told the results of that battle in detail to his teacher.

The green-robed elder frowned. "Oh? Trains in the Way of Destruction, and killed ten Highgods with one sword? Power like this is indeed hard to oppose." The green-robed elder, although somewhat worried about the power of this opponent, didn't feel that things were hopeless.

"Teacher, do you feel confident?" Inigo said softly.

The green-robed elder said in a low voice, "Since he's accepted a mission, then this Fiend shouldn't be a Seven Star Fiend. Since he is a Six Star Fiend...I should be able to defeat him. However, based on the power of that sword attack you described, the attack of that Fiend is simply too powerful. I still can't take it on head on."

"No need to take him head on, Teacher. You only need to kill those two old fellows." Inigo said hurriedly.

The green-robed elder nodded slightly. "If that's the case, then I am confident. I just need to separate the Fiends from them for a time."

"Then I'll entrust everything to you, Teacher."

The green-robed elder laughed calmly.

Linley, in his room, continued to train for nearly a year.

"Huh?" Linley opened his eyes. "Why do I feel uneasy all of a sudden?"

For some reason, Linley suddenly felt some restlessness in his heart. Linley immediately took a deep breath, letting himself calm down.

Delia opened her eyes as well. "Linley, what is it?"

Through the window, Linley looked at the outside. "Nothing. Only, while I was training, I felt my mind grow uneasy for some reason." Right now, the area below the metallic lifeform was a boundless desert. The wild wind howled and desert sand filled the skies.

The metallic lifeform continued to fly at high speed.

"You felt it also?" Delia said in surprise. "I felt some unease as well."

At this moment, the metallic lifeform was completely covered by yellow sands. Originally, the metallic lifeform's Fiends didn't care about the sand, but...for that instant the metallic lifeform was covered by sand, the entire metallic lifeform suddenly, in the blink of an eye...

"BOOM!"

Blew apart!

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 6, The Ancient Castle of Sand

The metallic lifeform had completely exploded, and the Fiends that had been inside instantly became surrounded by the boundless sands. Each grain of yellow sand seemed to weigh a million kilograms, and Linley was completely surrounded by sand, completely unable to move.

“Delia!” Linley couldn’t help but try to grab Delia’s hand.

“Linley!” Delia also wanted to grab Linley’s hand.

“Whoosh!” Boundless amounts of yellow sand swirled over. Linley was completely unable to control himself.

“What is this?!” Linley wanted to break free of the constricting binds of the yellow sand, but Linley was completely unable to resist that strange, unusual binding energy. In an instant...‘boom!’ Linley was thrown to the ground.

Linley immediately stood up, staring around him. “This...what is this?” Linley’s heart was filled with questions and puzzlement.

This was a massive, ancient-looking structure formed completely from yellow sand. Linley, when raising his head, was only able to see the enormous roof formed from yellow sand, and was unable to see the sky at all. This was an enormous edifice made completely from yellow sand, which Linley was now trapped within.

What astonished Linley the most was...

"Nobody. There's nobody around me. Where is everyone?" Linley stared around himself.

But within this edifice of sand, not a single person could be seen.

Linley spread out his divine sense, but was shocked to find..."How is this possible? My divine sense, even in the Infernal Realm, can cover an area of a hundred meters. But why is it that in this damn place, it only spread to ten meters?" Linley was shocked.

"My divine sense is being affected?"

Linley began to understand. "Can it be that this sand construct is a space of its own?"

Although Linley had discovered that nobody was here, he was still able to sense one person – Bebe! Bebe and Linley's souls were linked. No matter how far away they were, they would still be able to sense the other's existence.

"Boss, how are you doing? I'm in a sand-formed building. I can't see anyone. Everyone seems to have disappeared." Bebe's voice rang out in Linley's mind.

Their two souls were connected. They didn't have to speak using divine sense; they could speak through their souls.

Linley, hearing Bebe's words, began to understand. "Bebe, my situation is the same as yours. This is an ancient structure completely made out of sand. I can't see a single person within. Bebe, be careful...I have the feeling that we are in a special dimension."

"Right, got it." Bebe replied. "Boss, I'm going to start heading in your direction."

"Alright." Linley could sense Bebe as well.

The two would always be able to sense the general direction of the other. Naturally, they could draw closer to each other, even if they weren't able to see each other.

"This sand structure?" With a flip of his hand Linley withdrew Bloodviolet.

"Swoosh!" Linley flew into the air, the Bloodviolet in his hand suddenly moving at a high speed. A ray of violet light flashed, and the roof of the sand structure rumbled, and a small pile of yellow sand was smashed and fell down.

However, the yellow sand roof only trembled, then quickly returned to its normal calm.

Linley's face changed. His Profound Truths of Velocity had already reached a bottleneck. This most powerful physical attack in his possession, the 'Dimensional Decapitator', was now many times more powerful than it had been when he was in the Yulan continent. But it hadn't been able to budge this castle of sand at all.

"What a bizarre power." Linley frowned. "A strange energy has completely infused this yellow sand."

"This strange place..." Linley didn't waste any more time, immediately drawing closer to Bebe.

"Boss, this damn place is too weird. I have no way of getting over. There are no paths in front of me, and the walls are too weird. I can't break them apart at all. Whenever I break them apart slightly, the yellow sand will move back." Bebe said frantically.

Linley couldn't help but feel surprised.

"Bebe, wait." Linley continued to move in Bebe's direction as well.

The enormous sand structure had many openings and many corridors. It was like an enormous maze. Linley, after walking a while, discovered that there was a dead end in front of him, a wall formed from yellow sand. Linley could clearly sense that Bebe was right there, but he was unable to cross over.

"Bebe, my path has also been blocked by a wall." Linley frowned, turning to stare at his surroundings.

"So many roads and passages?" Linley couldn't help but think back to the Yulan continent, and a type of entertainment he had seen there;

mazes.

In mazes, there were many corridors and avenues. However, there was only a single true pathway. If one took a single wrong step, one wouldn't be able to exit the maze.

"Could it be that this structure made out of sand is a maze?" Linley guessed to himself.

"No other choices. For now, let's just treat it as a maze." Linley immediately began to walk along other roads. While walking, he thought back to the previous pathways he had taken. Given Linley's visualization abilities, if he knew the rough locations of the corridors, he would be able to eventually extrapolate the correct pathway.

"Bebe, this strange place is most likely a maze." Linley said to Bebe mentally.

"Maze?" Bebe was greatly shocked.

"Right. Think of a way to draw closer to me from a roundabout way." Linley continued to memorize every single corridor; if he went down a wrong pathway, he would immediately turn back.

"So it's a maze...fine, I'll definitely find the right path." Bebe was very frantic as well. Both him and Linley had people they were worried about. Linley was worried about Delia, while Bebe was worried about Nisse.

.....

Twenty or so people were together, with the leader being Inigo and his teacher.

“Teacher, for you to reach such a level in the Elemental Laws of the Wind...most likely, there’s only a few people in the entire Infernal Realm who can do this.” Inigo’s face was all smiles, and he spoke respectfully.

The green-robed elder laughed calmly. “Stop flattering me. This is the one and only ultimate technique that I have. In terms of pure power, that Fiend is perhaps still somewhat more powerful than me. Whew...he really is powerful. He broke open the walls of my ‘Castle of the Winds’ in a single sword blow.”

“So what if he broke them open? You can change the walls as you please, Teacher.” Inigo knew well how powerful this technique of his master’s was.

Seven powerful Elemental Laws, and Four Edicts.

Of them, the Elemental Laws of the Wind had the most connection to space. In particular, when several of the profound mysteries were fused, the mastery over space would become even greater.

“They think this is a maze?” The green-robed elder knew exactly what was happening within this ‘Castle of the Wind’. He discovered that many Fiends were beginning to search for an exit in accordance with the rules for dealing with a maze. “Right, it is a maze, but...it is a maze that I can change whenever I want to!”

The green-robed elder laughed calmly. "Inigo, lead your men and begin the attack. I will work with you."

"Yes, Teacher." Inigo immediately led his men out.

Inigo and twenty-plus Highgods easily entered. Even if they encountered walls, when they drew near, the walls would naturally separate, revealing a corridor. For Linley, it was the opposite...and so, Inigo's group had no impediments within the castle at all.

In addition, they even had the guidance and cooperation of the green-robed elder.

Linley was walking at high speed, while the map of the maze in his mind was growing more and more clear. Linley couldn't help but reveal a hint of a smile on his lips. "It seems I'm almost about to make it out of this maze." Linley felt very confident.

But suddenly, Linley's fast footsteps came to a halt.

"How is that possible?"

Linley stared at the wall in front of him, his face instantly changing dramatically. "No, there shouldn't be a wall here. I just walked past here a while ago. This place should have a corridor, and there was a pillar here!" Linley immediately turned to look. There was indeed a pillar.

"The pillar is still here, but the corridor? Can I have remembered wrongly? Impossible!"

Linley shut his eyes, that clear map appearing within his mind. These were all places he had walked past.

"Impossible. I couldn't have taken a wrong route." Linley immediately headed back towards another direction. "There should be a corridor with an opening up this way. I just passed it." Linley murmured. But as Linley reached the place where there should have been an opening, Linley was stunned.

In front of him...

There was indeed a large corridor, but there were no openings.

"What is going on? I...I can't have remembered wrongly." Linley couldn't help but rub his head, constantly pondering the routes he had just taken. "I can't have remembered wrongly, but these places are all..."

Linley's face suddenly turned pale.

"This..this ancient maze, can it be that it is changing?" Linley had a sudden feeling of hopelessness. A maze would have a chance for one to leave it, but if the maze was constantly changing, what was one to do?

"Boss, I'm at the place you just were." Bebe's voice rang out in Linley's mind. "I don't know what's going on. Just as I reached a dead end, the wall suddenly disappeared and a corridor appeared. Boss, hurry over. I don't know where I should go right now."

Linley, staring at the now-disappeared 'gap', laughed bitterly. "Bebe, I...I won't be able to get back to my original location."

"Delia." Linley's heart was filled with worry, but he had no options.

As Linley and the other Fiends were all frantically searching for an escape route, Inigo's forces stealthily took their lives one at a time!

"This damn place...how am I supposed to leave?" Swaid [Sa'wei'te] was a Four Star Fiend who had taken on this mission, an expert who was at the Highgod level. When he had seen the Six Star Fiend, 'Learmonth', as well as the three Edwards brothers, he had been overjoyed.

He had believed that he wouldn't be in any danger.

However, right now, there was nobody nearby he could rely on. He could only rely on himself.

"It isn't a maze. It should be something created by an extremely powerful expert of the Elemental Laws of the Wind." Swaid's heart was shivering. "To be able to reach such a level in the Elemental Laws of the Wind...he must have fused at least half of the nine profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of the Wind."

Swaid knew that an expert on that level was definitely not someone he could overcome.

Suddenly...

The yellow, sandy wall next to Swaid suddenly cracked open, and two figures scurried in, charging towards him. A wave of heat surged towards him, as well as an icy aura that attacked his body.

"Not good." Swaid's face changed dramatically.

At the same time...

A human figure in the yellow sand next to Swaid suddenly emerged, and a narrow sword pierced straight towards Swaid.

Three Highgods had joined forces to kill Swaid! In addition, this was a sneak attack. Swaid was only just barely able to recover in time to block the two enemies in front of him, but the third person easily stabbed him with the sword. In the blink of an eye...

"Prepare to attack the next one. Oh. Be careful. There's two up ahead. One is a Highgod, while the other is a God. The two of them actually ran into each other. You three, head towards the tunnel up ahead..." The green-robed elder's voice rang out in the ears of the three.

Although this Castle of the Winds was very strange, it had taken in quite a few Fiends, so it was normal for one or two of them to occasionally meet up.

These three Highgods glanced at each other. They laughed.

With the help of this Castle of the Winds, killing was utterly effortless. In particular, they had the advantage of numbers and of stealth.

The green-robed elder walked forward. "The wealth of the Boyd clan? It seems it is about to fall into my hands." The green-robed elder knew exactly where those two employers were located. With but a single step, the green-robed elder entered the sand.

The black-horned elder was currently hovering in mid-air cautiously.

"There's actually an expert of such a level..." The black-horned knew exactly what this castle was. Naturally, he didn't dare to draw near to the ground or to the walls. Otherwise, once the enemy ambushed him suddenly from the ground, he wouldn't even have the time to react. "It seems this time, we are in trouble."

"Hrm?"

The black-robed elder suddenly turned his head to stare towards a distant corridor. He saw Linley, dressed in that earthen yellow robe, carefully moving forward.

"It is him. He seems to be called Linley." The black-robed elder was somewhat surprised.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 7, To Choose

Linley walked in the middle of this changing castle, exceedingly worried. "This damn place is constantly changing. There's no way I can find the exit. In addition, there are enemies attacking and ambushing from within!" Linley clearly remembered seeing the corpse of a Fiend earlier.

Upon seeing the corpse, Linley immediately understood that this ancient castle wasn't just meant for trapping people.

There were people lying in ambush here!

Actually, Linley should have understood this long ago. Only, he didn't dare to think about it. "Ambush? Assassinate? Bebe and I are a bit better off. I have a soul protecting Sovereign artifact, while Bebe has treasures bestowed upon him by Lord Beirut. He shouldn't have any problems staying alive. But Delia, she...alas. I shouldn't have been in such a rush. I should have let Delia reach the Highgod level first before heading out." Linley was filled with regret.

"If Delia were to be killed..."

Thinking of this, Linley grew even more worried.

In truth, Delia trained in the Elemental Laws of the Wind, and had already mastered six of the profound mysteries, and had a Deathgod Golem with her. Although her abilities at staying alive were inferior to that of Linley and Bebe's, she still had some degree of ability.

Only, Linley himself remained worried.

"The enemy is definitely extraordinary, to be able to create this bizarre castle. Everything else aside, Delia hasn't reached the Highgod level yet." Linley carefully yet speedily moved through the castle, hoping that he would run into Delia within.

But suddenly...

"Huh?"

Linley reached an opening, then out of the corner of his eye, saw someone hovering in mid-air.

"The black-horned elder?" Linley immediately recognized him. That black-haired elder clearly had seen Linley as well, as he looked over towards him.

But right at this moment, the gentle wind suddenly took solid form, transforming into a green-robed elder. The green-robed elder had a hint of a smile on his face. He glanced sideways at Linley, not worried at all. "A God actually ran here as well."

To the green-robed elder, a God was someone he could kill in an instant. Given his status and stature, he couldn't be bothered to care about Linley at all."

"You are...?" The black-horned elder saw the green-robed elder appear out of thin area, and his face changed dramatically.

The green-robed elder glanced calmly at the black-horned elder before him. "You truly are bold. For you and your brother to abscond with the enormous fortune of the Boyd clan is one thing, but...I didn't expect that after so many years, you two would dare to turn back. What, you wish to return to the Jadenfloat Continent?"

The black-horned elder's face changed, and then he chuckled in a 'relieved' manner. "That year, my big brother and I fled from the Jadenfloat Continent. We thought that no one had detected us. This time, we only invited so many Fiends out of an abundance of caution, but I wouldn't have expected that you would come!"

The green-robed elder let out a disdainful snort.

"You want to acquire the fortune of the Boyd clan? Haha..."

The black-horned elder suddenly raised his head and laughed loudly, then stared at the green-robed elder. "Keep dreaming. For us two brothers to dare come on this trip means that we naturally came fully prepared. Even if you kill both of us, you won't be able to obtain the treasures of the Boyd clan! You...will never get it!"

The green-robed elder's face suddenly sank.

He had followed his student, Inigo, from the Jadenfloat Continent through the Stormy Seas to the Redbud Continent. It was all for the sake of the fortune of the Boyd clan.

"Hmph. Once I kill you, I'll know." The green-robed elder, with a wave of his hand, summoned forth a longsword that looked like a silver thread. This was a flexible sword, but compared to Linley's 'Bloodviolet' sword, it was even thinner and even lighter.

"Prepare to die." The green-robed elder, confident of his status, would usually notify his opponent before killing them.

As soon as the black-horned elder had seen the Castle of the Winds, he had understood how powerful the opponent was.

Although he himself was also a Highgod, compared to the person in front of him, the difference was considerable.

"You want to kill me? I will make you pay a price." The black-horned elder had already made up his mind to die here. Bellowing, he made a black heavy sword appear in his hands. Instantly, the air around the black heavy sword began to twist, and a black light shot out in every direction.

Linley, seeing these two Highgods about to battle, couldn't help but feel startled. "I'd better run. If I get involved in this, I'll be finished!" Linley didn't hesitate at all, immediately running towards the direction of one of the other corridors.

Although he was moving quickly...

"Bang!"

The first clash by these two Highgods caused the black-horned elder's body to be sent flying towards Linley's direction at high speed.

"Huh?" Linley couldn't help but feel stunned. Raising his head, he watched as the body flew towards him.

But with a flip, the black-horned elder righted himself, standing up. Just now, one of the divine clones of the black-horned elder was killed.

"You want to kill me?" The black-horned elder was now fully aware of how great their difference in power was. One of his clones had just been destroyed, and he now only had this one left. "Clan master, your old servant didn't let you down. Only, in the future, your old servant won't be able to toil on behalf of the young master any longer."

"Bang!"

The black-horned elder's long blade, carrying an earth-splitting force, transformed into a black blade shadow, causing space to distort and leaving behind nothing more than a faint blur.

"Haha...you just had one of your divine clones die. I want to see how many you have left!" The green-robed elder laughed wildly, and then Linley only noticed a hint of a beautiful silver flash. Wherever those rays of silver light flashed past, space itself began to form extremely tiny cracks.

Linley was shocked.

"Cracks? Cracks in space in the Infernal Realm?" Linley found it hard to believe.

"Boom!"

The black-horned elder was only able to block a single silver ray of light; afterwards, his entire body was criss-crossed by the multiple remaining rays of silver light. His body was chopped into multiple parts which fell down from the skies. In particular, the interspatial ring on his left hand was sent flying downwards.

At this moment...

"Interspatial ring?" Linley had a thought. He absolutely could collect this interspatial ring for himself.

"Can I take it?"

The black-horned elder's interspatial ring definitely had an enormous fortune within it. Linley was certain of this. As one of their employers, a person capable of inviting a Six Star Fiend, the amount of wealth this black-horned elder had was definitely staggering. Only, was he able to collect it?

Linley looked at the distant green-robed elder, then without hesitating at all, immediately fled.

"I wouldn't be alive to spend it."

Linley fled at high speed, quickly traversing thousands of meters, disappearing from the green-robed elder's field of vision. Only, every location within this castle was under the control of this green-robed elder. Naturally, he knew exactly where Linley had gone. The green-robed elder chuckled. "This God didn't let greed cloud his judgment."

If Linley had stolen that interspatial ring, even if the green-robed elder originally would have had disdained killing Linley, a God, the green-robed elder would have personally intervened to retrieve the ring. At that point, Linley would have had no chance at all.

"What does he have inside?" The green-robed elder landed, then collected his interspatial ring while binding it with blood.

The green-robed elder's face changed greatly. "Hrm? Only thirty billion inkstones. How is that possible? As little as that?" The green-robed elder couldn't believe it. "Impossible. The fortune of the Boyd clan was built up over countless years. Even the tiniest part of it would exceed this amount."

Perhaps to Linley or to ordinary Highgods, thirty billion inkstones was an enormous fortune.

But...

To the green-robed elder and other such experts, it was nothing more than a small sum of money. If you were to compare these thirty billion inkstones to the entire fortune of the Boyd clan...that would be like a single hair on the bodies of nine bulls! It must be understood...that within a city, a single hotel was worth tens of billions of inkstones.

How could the fortune of the Boyd clan be compared to a single hotel?

"No. There's also that white-horned elder." The green-robed elder's eyes were cold. "The wealth is definitely on him." But when he sensed the location of that white-horned elder, his face changed dramatically. "Not good...that Fiend is about to draw close to the white-horned elder."

Learmonth's face was cold and callous. Wielding his longsword, he walked calmly through the castle as though he was just taking a stroll in his own garden. When he encountered any yellow sand walls, he would still walk straight through them, completely ignoring the walls in front of him.

His sword would flash!

"Crunch!"

The yellow sand walls were all directly destroyed. Learmonth himself moved like an illusion, passing through the empty hole, while the yellow sand wall immediately recovered afterwards.

"Hmph." Learmonth turned to look coldly towards the side.

"Swish!" Like a bolt lightning, his sword chopped out towards the distant yellow sand wall. Instantly, fresh blood exploded out from the yellow sand wall, and a corpse fell down from within the wall. The eyes of the corpse were filled with shock, as though he couldn't believe that Learmonth had noticed him.

Learmonth continued forward.

Nobody could block his advance!

"I know you can hear me." Learmonth said while walking. "You might as well come out. Do you believe that I am unable to break through your spatial castle?"

"Crunch!"

Yet another sword chop flashed out against the impediment in front of him, and Learmonth's body swayed yet again, appearing on the opposite side of that way.

"Ah, Mr. Learmonth." The white-horned elder stared in astonishment and joy at Learmonth, whose face revealed a rare hint of a smile.

"I was a step behind." The green-robed elder was hidden only a few hundred meters away from the white-horned elder, in a room. "This one named Learmonth? His attack power is truly frightening. With but a casual attack, he is able to generate such power. If he were to truly explode forth..."

The green-robed elder had extraordinary experience. Of course he could tell that Learmonth had yet to use his ultimate attack.

Generally speaking, extremely powerful experts like them would stake their lives on their ultimate attacks, which usually consumed a great deal of spiritual energy and divine power. Thus, unless a critical moment came, these ultimate experts generally wouldn't want to use their ultimate attacks.

"That damnable fellow." The green-robed elder immediately came to a decision. "Right now, all I can do is find more Highgods and have them attack the white-horned elder, while I personally go entangle that Learmonth for a while."

The green-robed elder understood that there was no way the other Highgods could entangle Learmonth.

But to kill the white-horned elder, only a few Highgods needed to join forces and sneak attack him. That was all that would be needed.

.....

As the battles continued unabated within the castle of sand, the number of Highgods grew lower and lower.

Salomon stood calmly in mid-air.

"I hope Nisse is fine." Salomon was still worried in his heart.

"Swoosh!"

Suddenly, from the nearby wall, two figures appeared who shot straight towards Salomon, their wild releases of energy causing space to shudder.

"Hmph!" Salomon, with a flip of his hand, emitted multiple rays of black light. Those two figures let out miserable screams. One of them suddenly smashed against the floor, never to move again, while the other fled into the yellow sand walls, disappearing.

"Want to kill me?" Salomon chuckled.

The battles continued, and one Highgod Fiend after another fell.

"Aside from that terrifying Fiend, there are four Highgods that are hard to deal with." Inigo heard the reports from his subordinates and began to frown. He didn't know that those four extremely hard to deal with Highgod Fiends were the Edwards brothers and Salomon!

Star rank didn't necessarily, completely testify as to one's strength.

For example, a powerful Fiend might only be a One Star Fiend as he might have just taken the Fiend trials. But that didn't mean his power was only at the one star level.

Salomon was a good example. On the surface, he was only a Four Star Fiend. But his true power?

Not all Fiends could be judged by their star rank.

"No need to deal with those Highgods. There's no profit from them." Inigo gave the order. His real goal was just those two old fellows. There was no need to kill all of the Highgod Fiends." For now, no need to join forces. Attack as you please. Deal with all of the God-level Fiends.

For Highgods to kill Gods, naturally there was no need for them to join forces.

"Yes, young master!"

The Highgods disappeared into the yellow sand.

With this order being given, the God-level Fiends within the castle fell into grave danger, including Linley, Bebe, Delia, Nisse...

A crisis had descended!

Linley carefully walked through the yellow sand, his hands, legs, neck, and head all covered with an earthen yellow membrane. He looked as though he were a metal warrior. Linley had already used his 'Pulseguard Armor' to protect every part of his body.

"Swoosh!" An explosive sword shadow suddenly descended upon Linley from the side!

Linley only felt as though suddenly, he had transformed into a tiny boat that was currently being rocked by the wild waves of the ocean.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 8, Many Dangers

"A Highgod!"

Linley glided away like a bird in flight, gliding away alongside that explosive burst of sword energy while at the same time, the adamantine heavy sword appeared in his hand. Wielding it as though it were weightless, he sent it slamming over...and a multiple meter long earthen yellow sword shadow chopped out.

Pulsating Essence Attack!

This was a type of material attack developed after fusing the 'Essence of the Earth' and the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World'. It was primarily reliant upon the 'Essence of the Earth', with the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' supporting it.

Compared to the 'Voidwave Sword', it was the opposite; the Voidwave Sword was primarily reliant on the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World', while the 'Essence of the Earth' supported it.

"BANG!"

The two forces collided, and the wild explosive force backlashed onto both. Linley borrowed that backlash force to flee, while the golden-haired youth also took a few steps back. He stared in astonishment at Linley.

"What a powerful sword. A God actually has such strength!"

This gold-haired youth was not angry; he was instead delighted.

These Highgods didn't have much interest in killing God-level Fiends, but now this Highgod did. Just based on that sword alone, Linley was qualified to have him treat this fight seriously.

"Swoosh." Launching himself upwards, the Highgod shot out like an arrow, piercing through the air at high speed in pursuit of Linley.

Linley, fleeing in front of him, had already begun moving at his maximum speed early on, but the enemy behind him continued to draw closer. "This Highgod is so fast, and also, it seems he is a wind-style Highgod as well." From the opponent's previous attack, he could essentially sense that the opponent was a wind-style Highgod.

"Haha, flee?"

The gold-haired youth pursued at high speed while reaching out with his left hand, clawing at the air.

"What's this?" While fleeing, Linley's face changed dramatically. His body seemed to have been bound by countless thin threads. Although Linley was still able to flee, a restrictive force seemed to act upon him. Even his speed fell down by half!

"This is the Profound Mysteries of Dimensional Space!" Linley instantly realized what this was. He had seen Delia often use this technique against others. But now, Linley was the one who had been hit.

"Terrible!" Linley's heart was filled with worry. "The power of this Highgod in using this technique is much greater than Delia's." Linley knew that the strength of an attack was connected to one's divine power. The same type of profound mystery at different levels of divine power had different strength levels.

In the blink of an eye, the gold-haired youth reached a distance of less than ten meters from Linley.

"You won't be able to run!" A loud laugh rang out, and a strange ripple spread over Linley. Linley's speed dropped yet again, and in his heart, he was shocked. "The Godrealm of a Highgod!" Linley knew long ago that facing a Highgod was extremely dangerous.

Although there was a chance for victory, he only had a tiny chance.

"In terms of profound mysteries, this gold-haired youth is a Highgod who knows all nine profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of the Wind. I can only hope that he hasn't fused any of the profound mysteries." Linley knew that the only chance of success he had was...a soul attack!

"The Voidwave Sword must not fail."

Linley had continuously fled upon meeting this gold-haired youth; he didn't use his Voidwave Sword at all. Linley didn't dare to rashly unleash it; he had to seize the best opportunity to kill the opponent in one blow. Otherwise, given the difference between him and his opponent, the opponent could easily rely on his speed to use a material attack to kill Linley.

Thus...

It was one thing to not unleash his ultimate attack, but if he was to unleash it, he had to succeed.

"Either you die or I die." Linley continued to grit his teeth, constantly thinking up new ways to flee.

However, now that he was bound by the 'Dimensional Wind' and the 'Godrealm', and given that Linley's speed was lower to begin with and was now only a third of his normal speed, the difference between them was so great...that unless something unexpected were to happen, the outcome of this battle was predetermined.

"Swish!" Linley's body suddenly came to a halt. His face changed dramatically as he stared in front of himself.

In front of Linley, behind him, and above him, there were ten 'gold-haired youths'. This gold-haired youth had actually created nearly forty doppelgangers, completely encircling Linley.

"The situation just got worse." Linley was frantic. "The forty doppelgangers...which one is the real one? Bebe isn't present. I'm unable to determine which one is real. What should I do?" Linley gripped the adamantine heavy sword, looking cautiously about him.

The gold-haired youth had transformed into nearly forty doppelgangers to encircle Linley.

"Haha, in front of me, you still want to run? Your speed is too slow, too slow." The gold-haired youth chuckled.

Linley warily watched his opponent.

"Haha, die." The gold-haired youth chuckled, and then the nearly forty doppelgangers almost simultaneously struck out. Instantly, Linley was completely covered by knife-edge palm attacks. Linley was completely unable to dodge; his only choice was to take the attacks head on!

"He...looks down on me." Linley, seeing this, was laughing coldly in his heart.

Doppelganger was one of the nine profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of the Wind. This Doppelganger Technique created bodies that had the aura of the original body. Generally speaking, others would find it very hard to tell the true body from the false bodies. This was an exceptional technique for fleeing. But as for attacking, it was weak.

The Doppelganger Technique was meant for fleeing or to be used against weak experts.

After all, the strength of each doppelganger was far inferior to that of the main body.

The doppelgangers of Highgods, in terms of strength, wouldn't be much stronger than that of Gods.

"Hmph. A single doppelganger's attack might not be strong, but the combined attacks of thirty-plus doppelgangers are considerable in power. In addition, my main body's knife-edge palm attack is included as well." The gold-haired youth was completely confident. "This fellow is just a God."

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

In an instant, the many knife-edge palms landed on Linley's body. Linley in total was hit by twenty eight palm blows, and had been only able to dodge ten of them.

Of the 28 palm blows, twenty seven of them landed on Linley's 'Pulseguard Armor' and collapsed, while leaving Linley's 'Pulseguard Armor' completely unharmed. But the twenty eighth palm blow landed directly on Linley's body.

"CRUNCH!"

The Pulseguard Armor cracked open, and Linley's chest was struck by a vicious blow that all but went through his chest. Blood splattered outside, while his shattered white bones were revealed as well. This blow that split apart the 'Pulseguard Armor' had been launched by the gold-haired youth's real body!

The gold-haired youth was surprised. Linley's 'Pulseguard Armor' was simply astonishing.

"A defensive Highgod artifact?" The gold-haired youth chuckled. "Unfortunately, you are a God. A defensive Highgod artifact in your hands won't be used to maximum effect." The gold-haired youth was disdainful.

"Crackle..." Linley's 'divine power' in his body bubbled out, immediately healing his wound. At the same time, the 'Pulseguard Armor' on his body once more reformed. As long as his divine power remained, this 'Pulseguard Armor' could instantly recover.

"A defensive artifact?" Linley, in his heart, was disdainful. "So this is the true body!"

From that attack just now, Linley was instantly able to tell which of the bodies in front of him was the true body.

"Already healed?" The gold-haired youth was astonished. He immediately realized that Linley wasn't using a defensive artifact, but rather a material defense.

"Haha...your material attack isn't bad, and your material defenses aren't bad either." The forty gold-haired youths circling Linley all spoke out. "A pity." After speaking, the nearly forty gold-haired youths instantly moved as one. Right now, whether the youth attacked as one or en masse didn't make much of a difference to Linley.

From that exchange just now, Linley was already certain as to which one was the real body.

The gold-haired youth's speed was far greater than Linley's. He easily and continuously changed directions as he drew near Linley.

"This brown-haired kid has a powerful material attack and defense. It seems I'll have to kill him with a soul attack." The gold-haired youth made up his mind. "I refuse to believe that the soul defense of a God can be very powerful!"

"Death take you!" The gold-haired youth calmly lashed out with a sword blow, causing tiny tremors to appear in the air as well as a low humming sound.

Linley's eyes narrowed. "My only chance!"

"Rumble..." Linley's adamantite heavy sword struck out as well with his most powerful attack...the Voidwave Sword!

"Clang!" Linley's face suddenly changed. His Voidwave Sword had met no opposition at all as it struck into the enemy's head. The enemy's attack, in turn, didn't carry any soul power at all.

"What?" Linley suddenly had a bad feeling. "Vibrations!"

A strange sort of vibration directly entered Linley's brain. This strange vibration first clashed against that soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, the translucent scaly membrane around his soul, then shattered and dispersed.

Linley had managed to withstand the attack, but the enemy...

"Aaaah!" The Highgod's entire body swayed, a low growl emitting from his lips.

Although this Highgod had become a Highgod on his own, and had an extremely pure soul and strong defense, in the face of Linley's 'Voidwave Sword', created from the fusion of two profound mysteries, his soul still trembled and a large amount of spiritual energy immediately collapsed.

He immediately became woozy.

"Die!" Howling angrily, Linley followed up with another sword blow.

The adamantine heavy sword struck directly onto the dazed gold-haired youth.

"BANG!" The gold-haired youth's soul was no longer able to withstand it, and it directly collapsed.

"Swoosh!" A figure suddenly appeared from within the gold-haired youth's corpse. "Another one?" Linley's eyes turned wide, but as if by reflex, he lashed out yet again...

Once again, the Voidwave Sword!

"BANG!" That figure collapsed as well.

Only now did Linley sit down.

Having executed three 'Voidwave Sword' attacks in a row, Linley's spiritual energy had been nearly exhausted. Actually, when he executed the third 'Voidwave Sword', Linley had already begun to feel his head split.

"I was too nervous. The divine clone of that gold-haired youth was just a Demigod clone. It wasn't worth me using the Voidwave Sword at all." Linley glanced at the divine clone, then laughed inwardly at himself. "Fortunately, that fellow finally died." Linley directly collected the gold-haired youth's interspatial ring, divine spark, and divine artifact.

And then, Linley ran a few hundred meters away, enduring the pain in his head. He found an unassuming location and immediately retrieved an amethyst.

"The Voidwave Sword uses up far too much spiritual energy." Linley stored the amethyst into his Coiling Dragon ring, which immediately refined it, causing surges of golden fog energy to enter Linley's consciousness. The dry, parched sea of consciousness once more began to throb with spiritual strength.

"Whew." The head-splitting pain began to subside, and Linley let out a long breath.

"Facing a Highgod really is dangerous." Linley, thinking back to that battle, said to himself, "If that gold-haired youth had instead relied on his speed and material attacks to come at me repeatedly, he absolutely would have killed me."

Linley quickly came to a conclusion based on the results of that battle.

“Those who become Deities on their own will have their souls nurtured and transformed repeatedly by the natural Laws, and so will have exceedingly strong soul defenses as well. Just gold-haired youth just now was able to take a hit from my ‘Voidwave Sword’ without dying. It seems as though in the future, I must be careful.” Linley became all the more cautious.

Linley had narrowly escaped the last attack, but the other Fiends wouldn’t be so lucky. How could it be easy for a God to overcome a Highgod?

Linley was someone who had fused two profound mysteries of a Law, which was extremely rare amongst Gods. And more importantly...Linley had a damaged soul-protecting Sovereign artifact which negated the gold-haired youth’s attack. Otherwise, how could Linley’s soul have withstood it?

Nisse was filled with panic. She took one careful step after another through this castle of sand. Just now, she had discovered the corpse of a Fiend. Clearly, this castle of sand was filled with life-threatening dangers.

Soundlessly, a skinny, callous male figure suddenly appeared from the wall behind Nisse.

“This little girl isn’t bad. I’ll kill her first.” The callous man said quietly to himself. Just now, he had killed three God-level Fiends. In front of him, God-level Fiends weren’t able to fight back at all. Looking at Nisse in front of him, the callous man laughed to himself. “Let me end your life.”

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 9, Blue Water Drop

As danger had descended upon her, Nisse's heart suddenly trembled, and she couldn't help but turn to look.

"Ah!" Nisse was so terrified, her face turned as white as parchment, while at the same time, in her terror, she raised her speed to the limit, fleeing forward.

"You want to run?" A hint of disdain was in the eyes of the callous looking man. He immediately activated his 'Godrealm', and Nisse, who had been moving at high speed, instantly became restricted and slowed down. Nisse was only a God, and in her heart, she began to feel terror. "Bebe, big bro, where are you?"

As she faced death, her thoughts were of Bebe and Salomon!

At this moment, Nisse was right in the middle of a corridor opening.

"Bebe!" Nisse's eyes immediately lit up. To her right, roughly a hundred meters away, a figure appeared. It was Bebe, wearing his straw hat, his face filled with delight. But when he saw Nisse suddenly appear, he also saw that behind her, there was a Highgod.

Bebe's facial expression instantly turned to that one of terror!

"A pity. I won't make it in time." Nisse could already sense the cold air of the sword energy behind her. Her eyes were filled with a hint of unwillingness and regret. "Bebe, actually, right now, I just want to say a few words to you and hear your voice."

In this castle of sand, Gods were only able to stretch their divine sense out for less than ten meters. How would they speak through divine sense?

Bebe's eyes were filled with terror!

"No!" Bebe cried out in a fierce voice. They were a hundred meters away, and he was extremely fast, but that Highgod wasn't any slower than him. More importantly, the Highgod was too close to Nisse. "Ninny, no!!!" Bebe was filled with rage and regret.

In the same instant Bebe saw Nisse.

Linley was making his way alone through the castle of sand, which was filled with danger everywhere.

Linley had just undergone a vicious battle. After a short recovery time, his strength had returned to peak condition. Suddenly, a look of delight appeared in Linley's eyes. "Bebe. You aren't too far away from me. Right in front of me, there is a road heading close to your direction. It's possible that we will meet."

"I have a corridor in front of me as well. Boss, I'll head over as well." Bebe was extremely excited.

Linley didn't imagine that although at first, when he had intentionally tried to meet with Bebe, he was unable to, after that vicious battle, just by casually walking around, he would draw closer to Bebe.

"Swoosh!" Linley began to move quickly.

Passing through curved hallways, he entered a corridor which headed straight towards Bebe.

"Haha, Bebe!"

Linley already saw the familiar figure wearing a straw hat at the end of the corridor. It was Bebe.

Linley and Bebe were roughly three hundred meters or so away from each other. They were each at the opposite ends of the corridor. As for this three hundred meter long corridor, it had three or four exits and branching corridors as well.

"Haha, Boss, I see you!" Bebe said, his face excited.

"I see you too." Linley's heart was filled with excitement. He couldn't help but unconsciously speed up even faster. "Please don't let another wall suddenly appear in the center of this corridor." This was what Linley was worrying about; he had to come together with Bebe.

That way, he wouldn't be separated from Bebe again.

"Swoosh!"

Roughly ten meters ahead of Linley, a figure suddenly appeared from a branching corridor.

"Whoah, that scared me." What Linley feared the most was that a wall would appear, blocking him off from Bebe. "She is?" Linley's face instantly changed dramatically.

It was Nisse, who was being pursued and attacked!

Nisse saw that to her right, a hundred meters away, Bebe was present. But she didn't realize that to her left was Linley!

Bebe had been lost in his excitement at the coming reunion with Linley, but when he suddenly saw Nisse being pursued, his heart instantly turned ice cold. His excited, lively eyes suddenly became filled with terror. "Nooooo!" A fierce cry rang out!

It had been so many years. Bebe had never fallen for a girl.

This was the first time he had. Although Bebe liked to joke around, in his heart, he had sworn that he would accompany this adorable girl for his entire life.

It was a very simple, pure thought. But Bebe had always kept it in his heart.

Bebe wasn't able to rescue her in time!

But. Linley was!

"Highgod!" Linley saw that a few meters behind Nisse, there was the figure of a skinny, cruel man. Instantly, his face changed.

After the last battle he had undergone with a Highgod, Linley knew very well...that although he had fused two profound mysteries and a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, when fighting with a Highgod, his chance of victory was less than 50%. If the enemy was cautious, the chances of Linley dying would be extremely high!

If he was to save her, he would have to use his ultimate attack. Acting so hastily, it would be very hard for him to kill the opponent. Once the opponent saw Linley using his ultimate attack, he would definitely grow cautious, and most likely Linley himself would be finished.

But if he didn't save her, Linley might be able to find a better opportunity to kill the man in one blow!

"Nooooo!" Linley could completely sense Bebe's terror, sense Bebe's soul shudder. His soul and Bebe's soul were linked. Linley could clearly sense...the trembling of Bebe's soul.

He didn't hesitate at all!

"Kill!" A fierce look suddenly flashed in Linley's eyes, and the adamantine heavy sword in his hand slashed out in a perfect arcing line, and then a semi-translucent sword shadow that was a faint yellow color flew out of the adamantine heavy sword, striking directly towards the skinny, cruel-looking man.

Soul attack – Voidwave Sword!

As Linley attacked the enemy without any hesitation, the terrified Bebe also let out a fierce howl, while at the same time, an enormous illusion of a Godeater Rat appeared behind him. The mouth of the illusory Godeater Rat opened as it stared coldly at the skinny, cruel man.

Innate divine ability – Godeater!

The skinny, cruel man had been chopping down with his sword towards Nisse, but Linley was very close to him, and the Voidwave Sword attack instantly struck towards him.

“Not good!”

The skinny, cruel man’s downward chopping sword blow instantly transformed into a blocking scrape. As he didn’t know how strong the opponent was, the skinny cruel man immediately used his own most powerful soul attack, and an illusion of a green, electric serpent appeared, flying out from his sword.

The Voidwave Sword and the illusory electric serpent clashed.

“BANG!”

The illusory electric serpent vanished, while the Voidwave Sword trembled twice, then vanished as well.

“So powerful!” The skinny, cruel man’s heart shook. The opponent’s soul attack was actually on a level comparable to his own; to be precise, it was actually slightly more powerful. If this illusory sword attack had truly struck his soul, he probably would have had his soul dissipated.

Right as he was feeling stunned...

A strange ripple suddenly encapsulated his entire body. This was the innate divine ability, Godeater.

The skinny cruel man’s body went stiff for a moment, but a moment later, he broke free.

“Ugh!” The distant Bebe spat out a mouthful of blood, and his face turned pale as well. He only had the power of a God, but he wanted to use the Godeater ability against a Highgod? There was only one possible outcome. This Godeater ability was very unique!

If it succeeded, it would devour and take away the opponent’s divine spark, and the opponent wouldn’t be able to resist at all.

But if it failed, the opponent wouldn’t be harmed at all. In addition, the amount of spiritual energy this technique consumed was quite astonishing.

“There are two of them!” Only now did the skinny, callous man notice Bebe.

“What an unusual attack.” The skinny, callous man immediately began to treat Linley and Bebe as major foes. However, in the skinny, callous man’s heart, the one he was concerned about the most was Linley. This was because Linley’s Voidwave Sword was already at a level of power which could threaten his life!

“Bebe used the Godeater ability?”

Linley immediately ignored all else. Gritting his teeth, he took the opportunity to once more strike out with his adamantine heavy sword, launching his most powerful attack, the Voidwave Sword, once more.

But unfortunately, the impact of Bebe’s Godeater ability on a Highgod was too miniscule.

The skinny callous man’s sword once more emitted an illusory electric serpent, clashing once more with Linley’s Voidwave Sword. This spectacle was virtually identical to the one earlier. The two soul attacks once more cancelled out.

“Crackle.”

From the body of the skinny, cruel man emerged four deep-green lightning dragons. The four lightning dragons pounced straight towards Linley. Although the size of each lightning dragon wasn’t too massive, with all four charging over at the same time, Linley was completely unable to dodge.

"Die." The callous, grim man watched this calmly. "This is most powerful lightning-type attack!"

"Bang!" The Pulseguard Armor on Linley's body only resisted for an instant, then directly collapsed. Linley was sent smashing far away, with blood, flesh, and bones flying everywhere. His entire body had lost half of its mass as those lightning dragons had attacked Linley, trying to destroy him!

Bebe had just been delighted, but then upon seeing Linley immediately face death, he grew terrified anew.

"Boss!" Bebe's eyes were filled with concern.

"Not good!" As Linley's Pulseguard Armor was shattered, his body had immediately transformed. The divine earth clone and his main body immediately swapped, but despite swapping out quickly, Linley's divine earth clone still only had half its body and a head left.

In the recent battles, Linley had used the divine earth clone.

After all, the divine earth clone was the most powerful, and when using it to use attacks dependent on the Laws of the Earth, using his earth clone meant the attacks would be most powerful.

In this situation, Linley had to choose to switch bodies. After all, if his divine earth clone continued to take blows like these, the divine earth clone would most likely be shattered.

"I'll have to see how strong my Dragonform's defense is!" Linley's original body was Dragonformed!

"BOOM!"

The four lightning dragons finally dispersed. Linley collapsed where he stood from the explosion, the azure-gold draconic scales covering his body broken and battered, and multiple spikes on his back shattered as well. His left arm had been completely blown off, while his waist had almost been blown through as well.

"What astonishing defense!" The skinny man couldn't help but be amazed.

Actually, the attack he had used just now had used up nearly half of its strength in breaking through the Pulseguard Armor. At the critical moment, Linley had swapped out his body, using his main body in Dragonform to take it head on. Although it was very difficult, the defense in Dragonform was indeed exceedingly great, just slightly inferior to the Pulseguard Armor.

He was badly injured, but at least he had saved his life.

"What a talent." The skinny cruel man sighed to himself. Linley's soul attack and his defense, despite being just a God...the skinny, cruel man understood that if Linley was born into a major clan, he would definitely be one of their most highly valued talents to be cultivated.

"Unfortunately, you'll die in my hands." The skinny man said to himself calmly.

"Am I about to die?" Linley's badly wounded body lay there on the ground. He couldn't help but feel a surge of helplessness. There was indeed a great difference between himself and a Highgod. Once the opponent noticed his Voidwave Sword, then he probably would be finished.

"Crackle..."

Right at this moment...

Linley sensed that from within the Coiling Dragon ring, surges of unique energy began to fill his body. Linley's body instantly was repaired, and the draconic scales and spikes on his back were all healed as well. At the same time, that unique energy filled his draconic scales, spikes, and every other part of his body, strengthening the power of Linley's draconic scales.

On the surface of Linley's draconic scales, a layer of azure light was shining.

"What is this?" Linley immediately filled the Coiling Dragon ring with his spiritual energy.

"The three blue drops of water?" When Linley had become a Deity, the Coiling Dragon ring had a single golden drop of liquid as well as three blue drops of water within it. At that time, the golden liquid had transformed Linley's Dragonform, while Linley had yet to find a use for the three blue drops of water.

But now, one of the three blue drops of water was emitting an azure energy that was filling Linley's body, strengthening Linley's Dragonform.

"Huh?" The skinny cruel man saw that Linley's body had instantly healed. His face couldn't help but change.

"Hmph."

The skinny cruel man let out a cold sneer. His hands stretched out like claws, and six lightning dragons pounced towards Linley.

"NO!!!!" The frantic, furious Bebe had already charged next to the skinny, cruel man, but he wasn't going to make it in time to save Linley. Bebe's heart was filled with regret and self-hate. If Linley were to have died due to saving Nisse, Bebe would never forgive himself for the rest of his life.

"You can die together."

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 10, Meeting

“I feel so powerful!”

In a short amount of time, one of the three blue drops of water completely converted into energy, fusing with Linley’s original body, repeatedly strengthening Linley’s draconic scales. Linley’s scales defensive power was rising at an absolutely stupefying speed!

The three blue drops of water had now become just two.

“Huh?” Linley suddenly was startled into wakefulness. “Six lightning dragons?” Linley was shocked and frightened.

Six flashing lightning dragons bellowed and attacked Linley.

Before this, the attack of just four flashing lightning dragons had not only shattered the Pulseguard Armor but also had caused serious injury to Linley. Now there were six of them. Linley wasn’t able to form the Pulseguard Armor in time. The only thing he could do was...

“Swoosh!” Linley flew backwards, trying to dodge.

But how could a person’s movement speed compare to the speed of an attack?

“Bang!”

The six bellowing lightning dragons all smashed against Linley, and even the nearby walls of sand exploded from the collision.

"Boss!" Bebe, seeing Linley being struck by those six lightning dragons which exploded against his body, was terrified to the point of losing his mind.

"Don't, don't die." The distant Nisse's heart was filled with terror as well.

She didn't know what to do.

"If Bebe's Boss dies, Bebe will definitely be miserable. His Boss did this only for the sake of saving me." Nisse could only stand there in the distance. She didn't have any ability to interfere. This sense of helplessness filled Nisse's heart with guilt.

Bebe, because Linley had been attacked, had lost his wits for a moment, but when experts were battling, how could they possibly lose their focus?

"Daydreaming in a battle?" The skinny man's lightning-like sword flashed down viciously, striking against Bebe. Bebe's body was sent flying away, while at the same time, an illusory electric serpent ignored Bebe's defense, directly entering Bebe's body.

A soul attack!

"Huh?" The skinny man suddenly turned to look back.

After the explosion of the six lightning dragons, Linley was just standing there, azure light flowing atop his azure-golden draconic scales. Surges of power emanated from his draconic scales. The strength of his aura caused even the skinny man to feel terror in his heart.

"What...what is this aura?" The skinny man couldn't believe it.

He was certain that what he feared right now wasn't Linley himself, but rather it was the aura coming off of the draconic scales.

Linley's cold, dark-golden eyes stared at the skinny man. His lips curved upwards slightly, and this skinny man was completely unable to ascertain if Linley was smiling or not.

"I...have to thank you." Linley said calmly.

The skinny man was stunned. Thank him?

Linley knew very clearly that if it hadn't been for the skinny man nearly destroying his original body, which caused this 'blue water drop' to suddenly send its energy into his body and transform it, there is no way that Linley would have been able to utilize this blue water drop.

Currently, he had used up one of them, but Linley was still overjoyed.

This was because he could clearly sense that currently in Dragonform, he possessed incomparable, boundless strength! Absolute strength!

Physical strength of the body!

"Boss!" Bebe's delighted voice rang out.

"What?!" The skinny man turned to look and was astonished. Bebe had suffered his soul attack, but hadn't died. "How is this possible. A mere God who suffered my soul attack didn't die?" The skinny man was completely unable to accept this, but instantly, he had a thought. "Can it be, can it be that he has a soul protecting divine artifact?"

"Impossible. How can that be?" The skinny man couldn't believe this conjecture.

Soul protecting divine artifacts were very special!

They weren't like ordinary swords, sabers, armor, and other artifacts which were easy to forge. In the entire Infernal Realm, there were exceedingly few people capable of forging 'soul protecting divine artifacts', and many Highgods didn't have that sort of ability. The damndest thing was...there were no soul protecting divine artifacts for sale!

Linley's group, upon arriving in the Infernal Realm, had yet to find a single soul protecting divine artifact for sale. If there were, Linley would have bought one for Delia long ago.

This was because once a person was killed, his soul protecting divine artifact would definitely be damaged as well. A damaged soul protecting divine artifact was generally useless.

Also...

There was more to it than that. Soul protecting divine artifacts weren't made from special ores; they were forged from 'spiritual energy'. For example, for Linley to repair his soul protecting Sovereign artifact, he had to use his spiritual energy to repair it. This was because...soul protecting divine artifacts were made out of spiritual energy to begin with.

Only, they had a rather special structure!

Because they were made out of spiritual energy, soul protecting artifacts couldn't be easily tamed and commanded just through blood binding. There were many profound mysteries that were involved in these things! Only the original creator of the soul protecting divine artifact, by using some special methods, could allow for his soul protecting divine artifact to be used by others.

Thus...

Anyone who had a soul protecting divine artifact had definitely received permission from the creator of the artifact.

And every single creator of a soul protecting divine artifact was, without a doubt, one of the ultimate experts of the Infernal Realm! Every single one was extremely accomplished in understanding the soul, and had reached terrifying heights.

"This kid with a straw hat...he has a major figure backing him up?" The skinny man came to this judgment.

"And that Draconian! The aura coming off from his body is so terrifying." The skinny man's heart quivered. "What is going on. One has a soul protecting divine artifact, while the other has such terrifying defense."

Right now, the distant Nisse was overjoyed. "Bebe's Boss didn't die. Bebe's also fine. Wonderful, wonderful!"

"Haha, Boss, let's kill this bastard together." Bebe said through their souls.

"Fine!" Linley was exceedingly happy as well.

The powerful strength he felt in his Dragonform caused Linley want to let loose.

"Swoosh!" Bebe's dagger shot out like lightning towards the skinny man.

"Whoosh!" Linley launched himself from the ground.

Linley shot out like an arrow, exploding forward and moving so quickly that his body turned into a blur. Linley's right leg danced out like a saber, chopping down with a fierce, azure-golden light towards the neck of that skinny man.

The speed was too fast!

"Who cares who you are? Kill!!!" The skinny man was angry now as well.

"Clang!"

The longsword in his hand collided head on with the draconic scales on Linley's right leg, creating a metallic ringing sound. After having absorbed a drop of that 'blue drop of water' and having been strengthened to a terrifying degree, Linley's draconic scales were not one whit inferior to a Highgod artifact.

Linley's body landed.

"How is that possible?!" The skinny man's face changed dramatically. Today, he had been shocked too many times.

Bebe came howling forth as well.

"You have a soul protecting divine artifact. Then, I shall use a material attack! The skinny man's body once more emitted those four lightning dragons towards Bebe, who didn't dodge at all, instead charging at high speed towards those four lightning dragons.

"BOOM!"

The four lightning dragons landed directly on Bebe, then dispersed, but Bebe wasn't hurt at all.

"Die." Bebe's eyes were filled with murder.

"How is this possible?!" The skinny man's mind was in utter chaos. Linley's freakishly strong draconic scale defense, Bebe's soul protecting divine artifact...and now, Bebe used his terrifying physical defense to blast through one lightning dragon after another. The skinny man was at the verge of insanity. "Who are you guys?!"

"Swish!" A metallic tail slapped over lightning-fast.

"Clang!"

The sword and the iron-whip-like draconic tail clashed. The skinny man borrowed that force to retreat backwards. Ignoring all else, what he decided he needed to do was...flee!

"Freaks! Two freaks!" The skinny man cursed angrily. "Such freakishly strong defense, and a soul protecting divine artifact as well. Can they be two young masters from a major clan? But how can the young masters of a large clan come wandering around at the God-level, without a single protector?"

The skinny man knew very well. The Infernal Realm had existed for a long time, and within it, there were extremely ancient, great clans!

Those great clans were able to exist for countless years; naturally, they had power to rely on and special abilities. For the young masters of these clans to possess soul-protecting artifacts was very normal. Linley and Bebe's performances were very much similar to that of those young masters of those clans.

Only, why would high and noble young masters get involved with this sort of escort mission?

"Big bro, kill him!" Nisse's voice suddenly rang out.

"Huh?" The skinny man was suddenly startled into wakefulness.

However...

A ray of black light flashed past his eyes. The skinny man didn't even have a chance to react before the dark black light entered his body.

The skinny man immediately collapsed.

"Hmph!" Salomon stared coldly at the corpse on the ground.

"Big bro." Nisse immediately ran over, throwing herself into Salomon's arms and beginning to cry. "Big bro, just now I, I almost was killed by him. Sob..." After having experienced the terror of a near-death experience, then being worried for Linley and Bebe, she finally was no longer able to hold back her tears upon seeing her big brother.

"Don't cry." Salomon comforted her.

"Big bro, just now, if it wasn't for Linley, I would be dead already." Nisse lifted her head to look at her big brother. "Just now..." Nisse immediately explained everything.

Salomon, hearing his sister's explanation, immediately turned to look at Linley. Upon seeing Linley's Dragonform, Salomon was slightly surprised. However, his experience was much greater than his little sister's, and he immediately bowed and said thankfully, "Linley, thank you. You saved my little sister's life. I, Salomon Boyd, will never forget this!"

Salomon Boyd. This surname one which Linley didn't particular understand the importance of.

'Boyd' was a clan name which Linley had never heard of.

"Big bro..." Nisse stared in astonishment at her big brother, Salomon.

Her big brother wouldn't easily reveal his identity. Why did he do so now?

"For the sake of Bebe, even if I had to risk death, I would rescue Nisse." Linley said. At the same time, he returned to his divine earth clone, his body once more becoming covered with the Pulseguard Armor.

"Boss." Bebe and Linley exchanged a glance.

"Let's hurry up and go." Linley said hurriedly. "I don't know what the situation is with Delia." Linley was worried about Delia.

Immediately, Linley, Bebe, Salomon, and Nisse began to traverse this sand castle.

After having absorbed that blue drop of water, his Dragonform had quickly raised in power to yet another monstrous level. Linley had already made his decision.

“My main body’s Dragonform has an exceedingly strong material defense, while it also has a soul protecting Sovereign artifact. It has sufficient material and spiritual defense. In the future, if I face an ordinary Highgod, I am capable of killing them head on. However...the soul protecting Sovereign artifact is damaged!

Linley was still somewhat worried.

“Ordinary Highgods using a soul attack aren’t able to use it to seek out a weak spot. But in Moon Lake Castle, when I was hit by the soul poison of the Godslayer Arrow, the soul poison was actually able to search for the ‘weak point’ in my damaged soul protecting Sovereign artifact to attack my soul.” Linley understood.

It was just that the opponents he had encountered thus far weren’t very powerful.

If his enemy was a powerful Highgod, the Highgod would be able to use his soul attack to seek out the weak points, then attack the gap.

“Thus, in the end, I can’t completely reveal this trump card.”

Unless it was critical, Linley wouldn't easily reveal the secret of him being able to Dragonform. After all, only a trump card that remained hidden would be effective. Besides, his 'Pulseguard Armor' wasn't weak either.

Linley and the other three walked shoulder by shoulder, but were unable to find Delia.

"Strange. Why has the sand castle stopped transforming?" Bebe muttered.

Linley had noticed this as well.

"Perhaps...the person who set up the castle of sand is currently busy battling, and so he has no energy to deal with changing the castle." Salomon guessed. Salomon's words were correct; at this moment, the green-robed elder, 'Mr. Wind', was currently battling with Learmonth!

"BANG!!!!"

A terrifying explosion occurred, while at the same time, the entire 'castle of sand' seemed to have lost its controller. With a rustle and rumble, the sand began to flow down, and the entire castle of sand in the blink of an eye transformed into boundless amounts of sand dunes.

The castle of sand was gone!

The destruction of the castle of sand allowed everyone to see the sky, to see the Blood Sun.

There were quite a few corpses lying about the sand. Many of the Fiends had died miserable deaths, while the lucky survivors were in the midst of the desert. All of them seemed to be astonished, including Inigo and his subordinates.

“What is going on?” Inigo didn’t understand. How did the castle of sand which his teacher controlled suddenly collapse?

Linley was staring at his surroundings. Immediately, he saw from afar the ashen-faced Delia, who had the Deathgod Golem by her side. “Delia!” Linley immediately rushed over, overjoyed.

“Linley!” Delia’s eyes were immediately filled with joy as well, and she too rushed over towards Linley.

In the middle of the empty desert, there were dozens of broken, bloodstained corpses. Both the forces of the Fiends as well as the forces of Inigo came to a halt in their attacks, while Linley and Delia tightly embraced each other.

“Delia!” Only now did Linley settle down.

Ever since they had been trapped into the castle of sand, Linley had been feeling a sense of terror deep in his heart. He was terrified of Delia dying. Linley would forever remember how Delia had been when she was young and at the Ernst Institute with him. And then, their reunion meeting at the O’Brien Empire.

Decades had passed in what seemed like moments, and Delia had become the other half of Linley’s life.

When he saw her, Linley’s heart grew calm.

And didn’t Delia feel just the way Linley did?

“Thank you, heavens.” Delia said softly in Linley’s arms. “Linley, just now, it was so dangerous. I almost got killed by that Highgod, but I didn’t want to die...I wanted to see you.” Delia, thinking back to the near-death struggle she had just undergone, felt her heart tremble.

In the face of great danger, Delia had really gone all out, using both the Deathgod Golem as well as her profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of the Wind.

Fortunately, she also knew the 'Doppelganger' technique, and was also proficient at the 'Dimensional Wind'. This allowed her to be lucky enough to escape.

"I won't let you be in any danger ever again." Linley held Delia by the hand. Holding his loved one's hand, Linley felt that his life and his soul were incomparably rich and filling.

Just as Linley and Delia were absorbed in the joy of meeting again...

"Bang!"

A terrifying explosion sounded out in mid-air. A ray of green light and a ray of black light clashed multiple times, each time causing the world to shake. And then, the two rays of light landed on the desert sands, transforming into the green-robed elder and a black-robed Learmonth.

The green-robed elder's face was ashen. He stared at Learmonth, his heart filled with extreme terror. "This Learmonth's power is even more frightening than I had anticipated. His sword techniques in the Ways of Destruction have reached such a terrifying level." Prior to this, the green-robed elder had only wanted to tie Learmonth up for a while.

Unfortunately, Learmonth's power was far greater than he had imagined.

This had resulted in the green-robed elder being the one to fall into peril instead. He didn't even dare to allow himself to be distracted by controlling the castle of sand. Thus, he voluntarily released the castle of sand, focusing entirely on this terrifying opponent – Learmonth.

Learmonth held his longsword in his hand, looking calmly at the green-robed elder, a faint hint of a smile playing at his lips. "Your power is not bad. You are worthy of receiving my most powerful sword attack."

The green-robed elder's face instantly changed dramatically.

"What? Most powerful attack?" The green-robed elder's heart turned cold. Before this, he had been able to stay alive, but he had to use all his strength to do so.

The experts who were watching, upon hearing Learmonth's words, were all astonished.

"Delia, let's move backwards a little bit." Linley held Delia by the hand, retreating to where Salomon and Bebe were, watching these experts battle from a safe distance. "I really rather look forward to seeing what their attacks look like!"

Prior to this, when they encountered that bandit ambush, Learmonth's sword attack had stunned Linley. This chance in front of him was all the more precious..

"Those two old fellows played me!" Inigo cursed to himself. He glanced towards Salomon. "There's no mistake about it, but we don't have any more chances. It seems as though Teacher is unable to hold on any longer. It's best if I leave!" Inigo immediately, stealthily merged his entire body into the sands, disappearing. Right now, everyone's attention was on those two ultimate experts, and nobody was paying attention to Inigo.

In addition...

On the side of the Fiends, the only one who knew Inigo was that luckily surviving white-horned elder, but the white-horned elder hadn't noticed the distant Inigo at all.

"BOOM!"

Learmonth's entire body exploded forth with a terrifyingly powerful sword intent. Learmonth's body actually emitted an enormous illusory sword that radiated the Way of Destruction. Learmonth seemed to have transformed into the nucleus of that enormous illusory sword, and a fierce, sharp sword energy was swirling around it.

The power of the sword intent was rapidly rising!

"Crackle..." The sword intent actually caused space to shudder.

Everyone seeing this had their faces change. The Infernal Realm was one of the Higher Planes, and its stability was far greater than that of a material plane's. The sword energy hadn't even been released yet, and yet it already possessed such power. At what sort of level then would Learmonth's most powerful sword attack be at?

"Madman. He's truly a madman." The green-robed elder's heart was cold.

Learmonth's power had already caused him to feel dread.

"Hmph. So what if you are powerful. The Elemental Laws of the Wind are the best for fleeing!" The green-robed elder, faced with Learmonth, had already been awed and frightened by him. Suddenly, he transformed into hundreds of doppelgangers, dispersing in every direction.

One of the nine profound mysteries of the wind – Doppelganger!

"So many doppelgangers?" Delia was shocked, and Linley let out a surprised breath as well.

When Delia used the Doppelganger technique, she was only capable of nine doppelgangers. This green-robed elder, however, had transformed into hundreds of them. The same profound mystery, 'Doppelganger', when used by people of different levels of ability would have tremendously great differences in power.

"The Doppelganger technique is indeed an excellent fleeing method. Hundreds of doppelgangers, all of whom are hard to tell apart by their aura. Learmonth will find it hard to catch the right one." Linley said to himself. However, Linley continued to watch Learmonth, waiting to see what his reaction would be.

"Fleeing? How disappointing." Learmonth's voice rang out.

At the same time...

"Rumble..."

In an area of a thousand meters surrounding Learmonth, out of nowhere, countless surges of sword energy appeared. The hundreds of fleeing doppelgangers were smashed into powder by the sword energy. In the blink of an eye, all of the hundreds of doppelgangers were annihilated, leaving behind only a single green-robed elder.

"How is this possible?!" The green-robed elder's face changed dramatically.

Learmonth flew towards him at high speed, striking out like a viperous dragon. Wherever his body passed, many ripples in space appeared. The speed of Learmonth wasn't lower than the green-robed elder at all.

"I won't be able to flee!" The green-robed elder instantly understood this upon witnessing the other person's speed.

The green-robed elder retreated backwards, while at the same time, a silver, string-like sword appeared in his hands. "Since I can't flee, then I'll go all out!" The green-robed elder's eyes were now filled with a ferocious killing intent as well, and green energy swirled around his body, forming into a what appeared to be a solid dragon.

"Groooooowl!" The massive green dragon bellowed.

Watching the battle, Linley felt astonished. "Essence of the Wind and the Profound Mysteries of Music.” Linley could immediately tell how powerful this attack by the green-robed elder was. “That enormous green dragon is not only capable of protecting his body, it is also capable of creating musical attacks to affect the enemy.”

This was a support ability.

“Haha...Starpoint Explosions!” The normally calm, emotionless Learmonth was now revealing his wild side. Laughing madly, the longsword in his hand shot out.

The longsword pierced through the air!

As it did, in mid-air, a black ‘hole’ appeared as the longsword twisted through the cracks of reality. Wherever the longsword passed, tears in space constantly appeared, and everything around it was transformed into nothingness.

Facing Learmonth’s most powerful attack, the green-robed elder slowly brandished out that silver thread-like sword.

“Rumble...”

The silver sword was even longer and even narrower than Bloodviolet. It lashed out like a whip. Crack! Under the lashing of that silver sword, space itself split apart, creating an extremely narrow spatial tear, as a strange music rang out.

The entire desert was utterly silent.

Linley and the others were all utterly astonished by these two sword attacks. One was a terrifying sword that contained within it the Way of Destruction, while the other used the sharpness of the Elemental Laws of the Wind.

"BOOM!"

The silver sword, moving in a strange way, struck down upon the edge of Learmonth's longsword.

"BANG!"

The silver sword suddenly exploded, transforming into countless silver shards which flew everywhere.

"Swish!"

The tip of the longsword almost instantly pierced through the green-robed elder's forehead. It was so fast that the green-robed elder wasn't able to dodge at all. His eyes were filled with shock, and fresh blood slowly flowed down from his forehead.

"Bang!" The green-robed elder's corpse fell down.

"That soft sword...that simple whipping and chopping motion..." Linley's heart suddenly grew agitated. It was as though something had come to his mind, and he immediately shut his eyes quietly.

In the desert. Everyone else was still watching those two experts. But Linley was lost in meditating and in his insights.

Indeed. The green-robed elder's power was slightly weaker than Learmonth's. But as far as his insights into the 'Elemental Laws of the Wind' went, he had already fused quite a few profound mysteries.

That simple whipping motion included multiple profound mysteries.

Recently, Linley had been stuck in a bottleneck with regards to the Profound Truths of Velocity. He had been pondering on how to break through this bottleneck and completely fuse the 'Fast' and 'Slow' profound mysteries.

After the life-and-death struggle within the desert castle, as well the fluctuating feelings of worry and then calm, and now after seeing the green-robed elder's most powerful attack, Linley had already begin to create cracks in the 'bottleneck' of the Profound Truths of Velocity...

The green-robed elder's corpse lay there on the ground.

Learmonth let out a sigh. This sigh contained within it a hint of disappointment.

Learmonth glanced at the corpse of the green-robed elder. "You both use flexible swords, but your power is far too weak when compared to the Bloodviolet Fiend. Your time seems to have been all spent in defense and in trapping people. With regards to offense...too weak." Learmonth said softly.

A person suddenly appeared from within the green-robed elder's corpse. It was the divine clone of the green-robed elder. Only, this divine clone was a mere God.

"Learmonth. You speak the truth." The green-robed elder said astringently. "Only, in the future, I'll never be able to train in the Elemental Laws of the Wind again." The green-robed elder didn't try to flee. His divine clone was only at the God level. How could he flee?

"Mr. Learmonth, please kill him." The white-horned elder walked over, his eyes filled with hatred. "He's already killed my brother. I hope you will kill him, or allow me to personally deal with him." The white-horned elder's heart was filled with hate.

Him and his elder brother, the black-horned elder, had been together for many years. Although they had known that this return trip to the Jedefloat Continent would be dangerous, when his elder brother had died, the white-horned elder's heart was still filled with rage and hate.

"No need for you to personally act." Learmonth said.

In Learmonth's mind, although the green-robed elder only had a God-level divine clone left, he was once an extremely powerful expert. Experts would not tolerate being humiliated.

The green-robed elder glanced at him, then said to Learmonth, "Learmonth, I accept my loss to you. If you are willing to let me live, I will tell you a secret!"

"What are you doing?!" The white-horned elder immediately grew frantic.

The green-robed elder laughed coldly. "Are you afraid?"

"Swoosh!" The white-horned elder immediately flew forward, his eyes filled with a killing intent. Only, a sword flash suddenly struck out upon the white-horned elder, knocking him flying back.

"Mr. Learmonth, you!" The white-horned elder

Learmonth let out a calm laugh. "I'm a little curious as to what this secret is." As he spoke, Learmonth looked at the green-robed elder.

The white-horned elder was frantic.

The green-robed elder glanced disdainfully at the white-horned elder, then nodded and said, "Fine, I'll tell you. In truth, this employer who you have been escorting on this mission is in reality, an old servant of the Boyd clan of the Jingan Prefecture of the Jedefloat Continent..."

"You..." The white-horned elder was utterly frantic. "Learmonth, you... how can you!"

Learmonth glanced at him coldly. "Shut your mouth."

The green-robed elder's face immediately had a hint of a smile appear on it. He continued, "After the Boyd clan was destroyed, these two old fellows took the vast fortune which the Boyd clan had accumulated over countless years and fled. Learmonth, I think you too can imagine...how astonishing the amount of wealth which a powerful clan accumulated over countless years is."

The white-horned elder's face was ashen.

At this time, next to Bebe, Nisse's face was filled with rage as well. But Salomon only watched coldly.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 12, A Breakthrough in Wind

“Boyd clan?” Bebe had a thought, and he couldn’t help but glance towards the nearby Salomon.

Although Bebe was rather rambunctious, he was very smart and insightful. When Linley had saved Nisse, Salomon had, for whatever reason, revealed his true name when thanking Linley – Salomon Boyd!

At that time, Bebe hadn’t paid much attention.

But now that he heard it again, Bebe began to grow puzzled.

“Nisse has been with me for so long, but she’s never been willing to tell me what her surname is!” Bebe began to suspect. “Since that’s the case, the surname must be very important. Salomon only recently told my Boss. Since his family name is Boyd...”

“Can this Boyd be the same ‘Boyd’ as the clan this green-robed elder is referring to?”

Bebe mused secretly, while at the same time looking towards Linley. Only three people had been present when Salomon had said his surname; Linley, Bebe, and Nisse.

“Boss...actually closed his eyes and began to meditate?” Bebe couldn’t help but find himself caught between laughter and tears. Next, Bebe turned to look towards the distant Learmonth, the green-robed elder, and the white-horned elder. "It seems as though the situation is about to change. Will Learmonth attack out of greed?" Bebe mused to himself.

Indeed, right now, the situation had just become very terrible for the white-horned elder.

He hadn't anticipated that the green-robed elder would actually voluntarily reveal this. The white-horned elder understood that his power was far inferior to Learmonth's. If Learmonth wanted to attack, then...

"Even if the young master helped out, we wouldn't be able to deal with Learmonth." The white-horned elder understood. "In addition, it won't just be Learmonth alone who will turn red-eyed with greed upon learning this secret. The Edwards brothers are here as well."

The Edwards brothers had also escorted them on the mission, and had yet to reveal any startling abilities.

However, not a single one of them had died. This gave testament to their strength.

"No matter what, even if I die, I cannot reveal the young master's identity." The white-horned elder made up his mind.

"Oh, you said Boyd clan?" Learmonth raised an eyebrow. "The Boyd clan of the Jedefloat Continent's Jingan Prefecture is indeed an ancient clan. Even though I am here in the Redbud Continent, I've heard of the fame of the Boyd clan."

The green-robed elder said, "Of course. You can imagine how wealthy the Boyd clan is, Learmonth."

The Edwards brothers looked at each other, secretly speaking through divine sense.

"Oho, things are getting messy." Bebe looked at the distant Edwards brothers, then looked at Learmonth, before finally looking at the weakest actor, the white-horned elder. "This old fellow is almost certainly going to die. There's too many people who would be greedy for this treasure."

The white-horned elder said furiously, "Mr. Learmonth, I'm your employer, you..."

"Shut your mouth." Learmonth glanced at him calmly.

The green-robed elder couldn't help but laugh, while at the same time saying, "Learmonth, I'll leave now." As he spoke the green-robed elder prepared to leave.

"Swish!"

A black sword energy pierced through the green-robed elder's skull. The green-robed elder's eyes were filled with shock and disbelief, and then he fell to the ground. The final remaining God-level divine clone of this green-robed elder died, just like that!

"This...?" The white-horned elder, Edwards, and the others were all shocked.

Learmonth glanced calmly at the green-robed elder. "I only told you to tell me the secret. I never agreed to spare you in exchange. You killed one of my employers. How could I not kill you?" And then Learmonth turned to look at the white-horned elder.

The white-horned elder's face instantly turned ashen.

"Fine. If you want to kill me, then kill me." Having seen Learmonth's power, the white-horned elder didn't try to resist at all. He said coldly, "Since you were willing to kill Mr. Wind, I am content." The white-horned elder was already prepared for death. He murmured to himself, "Young master, you'll have to rely on yourself now."

"If I kill you, who will pay me my escort fee?" Learmonth asked.

The white-horned elder was astonished.

And then, Learmonth walked away while saying calmly, "Hurry up and prepare the metallic lifeform. We are going to head out."

"He isn't going to kill me?" The white-horned elder was unable to believe it.

The ten-plus lucky survivors amongst the Fiends stared towards Learmonth in astonishment as well. It must be understood anyone who cared about money at all would find it hard not to grow greedy for the wealth of the vast fortune of a massive clan. In addition, killing the white-robed elder would have been very easy.

"What is going on with this Learmonth?" The three Edwards brothers looked at each other.

Learmonth's reaction had caused the Edwards brothers to be unable to implement their plan.

"Big brother, let's just endure for now."

Learmonth was able to refrain from being greedy, but the three Edwards brothers were not. This was the massive fortune of an ancient clan. The fame of the Boyd clan was so great, it echoed like thunder.

"Wait a while before heading out!" Salomon's voice rang out. "My friend here is currently training."

Learmonth, the three Edwards brothers, the white-horned elder, and the luckily surviving remnants of the Fiends all looked over. Linley was standing there right there in the sands, his body surrounded by a faint swirl of wind. Indeed, he was training. This sight caused everyone to be extremely surprised.

"He started training, just like that?" The lucky survivors amongst the Fiends were all shocked. To immediately begin training having just concluded a life and death struggle...that truly was crazy.

"Waiting for him alone? Wake him up." The second of the three Edwards brothers said with a frown. Him, a Five Star Fiend, wait for a God? He didn't have that sort of patience.

Bebe, hearing this, couldn't help but frown.

"Intriguing, intriguing." Learmonth looked at Linley, a hint of a smile on his face. "We aren't in any rush to leave. Let's wait a while."

Since Learmonth had made his decision, the three Edwards brothers wouldn't say anything now.

Immediately, the surviving Fiends took up temporary residence within the desert. After this great battle, the Highgods only numbered Learmonth, the three Edwards brothers, and Salomon, while for the Gods, including Linley's group, only thirteen survived.

Time passed on.

In the blink of an eye, three days passed. The Fiends were very patient, and didn't care about these three days at all.

"How long will the Boss be training for?" Bebe, seeing Linley remain in his meditative state, was growing frantic. "The Fiends aren't impatient yet, but if too much time passes, they definitely will grow impatient. But disturbing the Boss when he is training will have a major impact on him."

Bebe understood that Linley's sudden decision to meditate must have meant that he had a sudden insight.

This sort of opportunity was very precious. Once interrupted, it would be hard for him to once more enter this state.

"Rumble..."

A surge of unique ripples of Law descended from the heavens, encapsulating Linley.

"He made a breakthrough!" Everyone, including Learmonth, immediately opened their eyes to look towards Linley. They all understood...that this descent of the natural Laws was the sign of a someone breaking through to become a Deity naturally.

Linley hovered in the air, while at the same time, his divine wind clone came out from his body...a light green-robed Linley.

"Rumble..."

A divine spark which emanated a green light emerged from Linley's head, hovering there in the air above him. A large amount of wind elemental essence, under the guidance of the natural Laws, directly converged upon the divine spark, which slowly began to transform.

Moments later...

That Demigod-level divine wind spark had transformed into a God-level divine wind spark.

The ripples of the natural Laws subsided, and Linley opened his eyes.

“Uhh...” Linley, having made the breakthrough, now saw that a large group of people were around him, staring.

“Congratulations, Linley. You now have another God-level divine clone.” Salomon said with a laugh.

Learmonth nodded slightly as well. He looked towards Linley with an appraising gaze. “Very nicely done. You even gained insights during a life-and-death crisis.”

Learmonth very much appreciated this sort of person, who could make a breakthrough even during a life-and-death crisis.

He himself loved combat and challenges. As for money? As Learmonth saw it, having enough money to spend was sufficient. The so-called fortune of the Boyd clan was something which Learmonth didn’t care about at all. Learmonth’s goal was...

To become a Seven Star Fiend, then challenge an Asura!

Become one of the 108 Asuras of the Infernal Realm!

The three Edwards brothers glanced at Linley. They only chuckled. A mere God. What was there to be proud of? The Edwards brothers didn’t hold Linley in any particular regard at all. They immediately looked at the white-horned elder. “Hey, that kid has made his breakthrough. Let’s head out.”

"Alright. Head out." The white-horned elder immediately said.

"Head out?" Only now did Linley come to the realization that all the other Fiends had been forced to wait here for him when he had suddenly begun to meditate.

"Bebe, how long did I meditate for?" Linley asked through his spirit.

"Three days. Boss, you really are amazing. Your divine wind clone has reached the God level as well." Bebe was boundlessly delighted for Linley.

Linley secretly let out a sigh of relief. "Not too bad. Just three days." If he had been training for half a year with the others all accompanying him, Linley would have felt extremely embarrassed.

The Infernal Realm. A desolate mountain range within the Redbud Continent.

Inigo stood there beneath a waterfall, two Highgods behind him.

"I didn't expect that the Boyd clan actually has a successor." Inigo said to himself. "Although that fellow was only allowed to enter the Boyd clan's estate a single time before being sent out...luckily enough, I remembered him."

Salomon's identity, even within the Boyd clan, was a major secret.

As he had entered the clan's estate only a single time before being sent out caused there to be very few people who knew who Salomon was. There were very few people who knew that Salomon had a connection to the Boyd clan.

But Inigo, thanks to a stroke of luck, had found out by accident.

And this time, when Inigo saw Salomon, he instantly understood!

"No wonder those two old fellows fled to the Redbud Continent, then tried to go back." Inigo said to himself. "However, since I now know, then..."

"Young master, what shall we do?" The two subordinates behind him looked at him.

Inigo said emotionlessly, "We head out." As he spoke, Inigo flew at high speed towards the north, and the two Highgods behind him immediately followed.

The metallic lifeform was constantly pressing forward. It had shrunk yet again. After all, there were very few people inside it now.

Within the metallic lifeform. Linley and Delia's room.

"The 'Fast' and 'Slow' aspects of the Profound Truths of Velocity have been completely fused. Only the sword attack that is both 'hard' and 'soft' is the sharpest, most powerful sword attack!" Linley understood now why experts of the Elemental Laws of the Wind found flexible swords to be so suited for them. Flexible swords allowed one to bring out the full strength of the profound mysteries.

After having seen the green-robed elder and Learmonth's sword intents...

Linley had some new thoughts regarding his usage of the sword as well.

"Unpredictable and fierce! This represents the most powerful attack of the Profound Truths of Velocity." Linley continued to visualize them in his head. He was hard at working trying to make the attacks of the Profound Truths of Velocity more powerful and to apply it better.

This attack primarily relied on the Profound Truths of Velocity.

Naturally, it was a material attack.

"If I combine this material attack with my Dragonform..." Linley mused to himself. "The Dragonformed body is incomparably tough, and in terms of both strength and speed, it has reached a very high level. If I take the strength I have in Dragonform, then combine it with the Profound Truths of Velocity, then put it all on display through Bloodviolet, the power will definitely be substantial.

The same profound mystery, when used by a Highgod, would be far more powerful than when a God used it. This was because the mystery would be exerted through the divine power of a Highgod.

After Dragonforming, however, Linley's strength, defense, and speed were even more monstrous than most ordinary Highgods. This was a body that was as tough as a divine artifact!

Linley was also beginning to gain a clearer and clearer understanding of the power of his most powerful sword attack.

In the blink of an eye, three months passed.

"Unfortunately, there's no place to test it out within the metallic lifeform." Linley said to himself. His sword attack was now able to easily chop apart this metallic lifeform. If they truly were to fight here..most likely the white-horned elder and the other Fiends would be enraged.

"Linley." Suddenly, a voice rang out.

"Uh? Oh, Salomon, it's you." Linley saw that Salomon was outside his door.

Upon seeing Salomon, Linley thought about what Bebe had told him regarding the proceedings when he was training. He hadn't heard the green-robed elder discuss the Boyd clan, but upon returning to the metallic lifeform, of course Bebe had told him everything.

"This Salomon...can he be the master of this clan?" Linley wondered to himself.

Salomon said with a laugh, "Linley, there's something I wish to discuss with you."

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 13, Re-Employment

Linley had a thought. Why had this Salomon suddenly come looking for him?

"Salomon, my wife, Delia, is inside training right now. How about this. Let's chat outside." Linley said with a smile.

Salomon's face was very friendly. "Fine." As he spoke, he walked out of the room alongside Linley.

Linley guessed to himself, "Salomon's name is Salomon Boyd. Bebe told me as well that when those people were trying to kill the black-horned elder and the white-horned elder, it was because those two were the old servants of the Boyd clan and carried the fortune of the Boyd clan with them! But from the looks of it, the treasure is probably carried by Salomon."

"However, if this Salomon truly is a member of the Boyd clan, he should keep the secret. Why did he reveal his identity to me?"

Linley didn't understand.

The two stepped into another room. Salomon immediately spread out his Godrealm, preventing sound from leaking out.

"Please, please sit." Salomon said courteously, and then he sat down as well.

Linley spoke out. "Salomon, why have you sought me out?" As he said, Linley looked at Salomon.

Salomon's face was very sour. He let out a low sigh.

"Linley, I think you've probably guessed part of it." Salomon sighed as he spoke.

Linley didn't deny it either. He nodded. "Right. Before he died, I heard the green-robed elder say something about the Boyd clan? Can it be that the Boyd clan truly is your..."

Salomon nodded. "Right. I am indeed a member of the Boyd clan. The heir to the Boyd clan."

Linley's heart was startled.

Indeed!

And this Salomon wasn't an ordinary clan member; he was actually the heir and successor.

"The Boyd clan truly is a large clan." Salomon said slowly. "In Jingan Prefecture, it is one of the top ten large clans, but of course it is difficult for even an enormous clan to exist forever and never decay. Under the secret machinations of our opponents, my Boyd clan was finally brought down and destroyed."

"My father...was the clan leader of the Boyd clan!" Salomon said softly.

Linley nodded slightly.

"In fact, I was only conceived by happenstance, when my father was touring the Infernal Realm and met my mother. I was just an illegitimate child." Salomon snorted. "In the Boyd clan, it would be very hard for someone of my status to become the heir."

Linley now understood. He said to himself, "I didn't expect that this sort of thing happens in the Infernal Realm as well. It seems this Salomon's life in the Boyd clan wasn't very good."

Although Linley had never experienced this himself, he had heard of it.

The status of a bastard was far inferior to that of someone in the direct line of descent.

"That year, Nisse and I went on a visit to the Jadenfloat Continent. But on that trip..." Salomon's face grew ugly. "We were directly kicked out!"

Linley was slightly startled.

Kicked out?

"I only stayed at the Boyd clan for a single day before being forced to leave." Salomon laughed bitterly. "I returned to the Redbud Continent.

Only afterwards did I learn that it was my father, the clan leader, who had arranged for myself and my sister to be expelled. Father had discovered long ago that the clan was facing a terrible danger.”

“At that time, when I returned to the Redbud Continent, it was Father who sent me to my teacher to study from him.” Salomon said with a sigh.

Linley just stood there, listening.

“Indeed...” Salomon said heavily. “The Boyd clan was finished. Some of its businesses in the ten great cities of Jingan Prefecture were swallowed and taken over. However, the vast fortune accumulated over countless years by our Boyd clan was hidden away. Those two faithful old servants of our clan took it and headed to the Redbud Continent to give it to me.”

Linley said helplessly, “Salomon, why are you telling me this?”

Although telling him this sort of secret was a form of trust, it was also a source of pressure for Linley.

Salomon looked at Linley. Calmly, he said, “I trust you. At the same time, I don’t want Bebe and my sister Nisse to have any misunderstandings between them, so it’s best to explain things clearly.”

Linley couldn’t help but take a close look at Boyd. He then nodded slightly.

Something like this could indeed cause Bebe’s suspicions to be raised. If it wasn’t made clear, there would always be a hint of reservations between Bebe and Nisse.

"This Salomon is worth befriending." Linley nodded to himself. This fortune...he himself of course viewed money as something being the more the better, but there was no way he would rob and kill a friend for the sake of money.

Salomon continued to speak.

"A long time passed after I acquired this fortune. When I felt my power had reached a certain level, I led my two servants and my little sister back towards the Jedefloat Continent. I didn't expect...that after so many years, there still were people waiting here for us." Salomon sighed.

Linley laughed calmly. "Salomon, the fortune of an entire clan will cause greed in many. So what if they wait ten million years?"

To an expert who could live for hundreds of millions of years, waiting ten thousand years really was nothing.

"Fair enough."

Salomon continued. "Linley, today, I have told you these things because first of all, I want for there to be no misunderstandings between the two of us. After all, my little sister is going to be together with your little brother." This was how Linley introduced Bebe, as his little brother.

And in truth, the relationship between the two really was like that of two siblings.

"Secondly, Linley, I hope that in the future, you will help take care of my little sister." Salomon said bitterly. "Even once I return to the Jadedfloat Continent, I will still be beset by difficulties. My little sister, if she goes with you, will probably be better off. I only have a single little sister...I don't want her to be in danger!"

"It's fine. Don't worry about this." Linley didn't hesitate at all. "As long as I, Linley, do not die, I will definitely protect your sister."

In the Infernal Realm, the people Linley cared about were, without question, Bebe and his wife Delia. Even if it were only for Bebe's sake, Linley would protect Nisse.

"That makes me relieved." Salomon nodded and laughed. "Linley, since that's the case, I won't disturb you further. You can go be busy."

After Linley left, Salomon's face, previously all smiles, instantly turned gloomy, his gaze turning fierce. "I told him so many things, but Linley continues to conceal his secrets from me. Hmph, does he think that I don't know? A core member of the Four Divine Beasts clan..."

Salomon knew very well what the history of the Four Divine Beasts clan was.

"The Four Divine Beasts clan once shook the Four Higher Realms with their fame. Although they have decayed, they are still outstanding figures within the Infernal Realm.” Salomon murmured. “After transforming, his draconic scales are azure-gold, and his aura is so frightening. He is definitely a core member.”

Within the castle of sand, Linley’s Dragonform had absorbed that drop of blue water, and then he had attacked that Highgod. Salomon had appeared and had seen Linley’s transformation form.

Salomon, as the heir to the Boyd clan, had been secretly trained by some reclusive experts at his father’s request. Naturally, he knew many of the secrets of the Infernal Realm. Salomon had previously told Linley his name precisely because he had the intention of befriending Linley.

Boyd clan? Forget about now; even when they were at the heights of their power, they could only be considered a major clan within the Jingan Prefecture. Compared to the Four Divine Beasts clan, they were far inferior.

Which of the ultimate experts within the Infernal Realm hadn’t heard of the great fame of the Four Divine Beasts clan? And this was with the Four Divine Beasts clan being in a decayed state.

When the Four Divine Beasts clan had been at the full heights of their power, their influence reached throughout the Four Higher Planes.

In Salomon’s mind, Linley was definitely hiding secrets from him. How could he know that Linley actually only knew just the tiniest bit about the Four Divine Beasts clan?

The metallic lifeform pressed onwards. In the blink of an eye, it flew for yet another three months.

"This truly has been boring."

Linley sighed to himself. "With regards to executing the sword attack with the 'Profound Truths of Velocity', I already have some confidence. Only, without practical experience, I can't be certain. But within this metallic creature, there's no way I can casually test it out." What Linley wanted to do right now was to find an empty space and to test things out.

He wanted to ascertain the strength of this attack with the Profound Truths of Velocity.

"Everyone, please come to the main hall." Suddenly, a voice rang out.

"To the main hall?" Linley couldn't help but be puzzled. "Judging from the sound, it should be the voice of that white-horned elder."

Delia, who had been fusing with her divine spark, was startled into wakefulness. "Linley, did that white-horned elder ask for us to all go to the main hall?" Linley took Delia by the hand and laughed, "How should I know what is going on? Let's go take a look." As he spoke, the two left their room.

Within the main hall of the metallic lifeform, a group of Fiends stood together, all of them looking towards the white-horned elder.

The white-horned elder said in a bright voice, "Everyone, we will soon arrive at Yilan City. We will stop outside of Yilan City. Everyone can take a rest within the metallic lifeform. After two crises, many Fiends have died, and our two chefs have died as well. This time, I will go into the city to invite some new chefs to come, and also employ a few more Fiends from the Fiend Castle."

"Employ Fiends?" The Fiends in the main hall didn't object.

This trip was fairly dangerous, but how could an escort mission be without danger? If there was no danger, why would there be a need for Fiends to escort them?

The Fiends actually welcomed more Fiends joining in.

"I've been bored to death recently. It'll be good to enter the city. We can relax." Immediately, some Fiends began to laugh.

"Boss, when we go inside Yilan City, we'll be able to have some good food in the restaurants in the city." Bebe smacked his lips as he spoke. "Ever since those two chefs were killed during that bandit attack, a long time has passed since I had any good food."

Everyone was discussing this amongst themselves.

The white-horned elder said loudly, "At the same time, I would like to ask everyone to remain within the metallic creature and not to enter Yilan City." These words instantly caused dissatisfaction.

"Why not?" A Fiend spoke out.

The white-horned elder said calmly, "I hope everyone can understand. After the battle at the castle of sand, I imagine all of you know about the Boyd clan's affairs. I don't want for this information to spread out. Thus... even if you don't stay inside the metallic lifeform, at the very least, you cannot enter the city."

Indeed, amongst the Fiends present, there were some who wanted to leak this news out.

The secret of the Boyd clan?

Linley nodded to himself. It was true. If someone spread this secret, everyone would probably meet with danger on the way.

"I understand this logic." The eldest of the three Edwards brothers said calmly. "Please don't worry. Since we've accepted this mission, we naturally won't reveal it. Even if we were only doing it for our own sakes, we wouldn't reveal it. All of us will stay outside the city and not enter it. Mr. Learmonth, what say you?"

Learmonth nodded. "Nobody is permitted to enter the city, nor chat casually with outsiders, until this mission is completed."

The white-horned elder was overjoyed. "Thank you, the four of you."

With the three Edwards brothers and Learmonth having spoken out, the other Fiends wouldn't raise any other objections.

Moments later, through the window, they all saw the city drawing nearer. The metallic lifeform came to a halt at a wide, empty expanse of wild grass roughly ten kilometers outside of the city. The white-horned elder headed by himself through the city gates, while the others left the metallic lifeform as well.

They rested in the area around the metallic lifeform.

"I hope everyone will act wisely." The eldest of the three Edwards brothers, the handsome man, said emotionlessly. "If someone interacts with outsiders, don't blame us for being merciless."

"Hmph. So boring." Bebe snorted softly. "We're at a city, but we can't go inside."

Linley's face was all smiles. "This is good. I will have the chance to test the sword technique now." Linley walked to an empty area, then drew Bloodviolet and began to test his sword technique. As he was worried that someone might recognize Bloodviolet, Linley had intentionally changed Bloodviolet's appearance slightly.

Actually, there were many violet longswords, and the number of people who had personally met the Bloodviolet Fiend could be counted on one hand. After Linley's modifications, even the aura of Bloodviolet had changed. Who would possibly be able to recognize Bloodviolet?

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 14, The Scorching Volcano

Linley's group remained outside of Yilan City, while nearly a hundred million kilometers east of Yilan City, there was an enormous chain of volcanoes.

The massive volcano chain took up thousands of kilometers of space. Within these thousand kilometers was an area of volcanoes, and the entire place was a dim red color.

"Crackle..." A white mist emitted from the center of the mountain range. A dense smell of sulfur could be smelled from far away, and many skeletons of humans, beastmen, and others lay throughout the mountain range. There was no life here, not a single blade of grass. This was a famously lethal region in the Infernal Realm...

The Biss [Bi'si] Volcano Range!

Dozens of human figures were flying in the air above the Biss Volcano Range. Judging from their appearances, they seemed rather ragged.

"The Infernal Realm really is chaotic. It's impossible to find a peaceful place to live." The leader cursed angrily.

"Big brother, let's hurry up and find a place where we can find our footing." A muscular man behind him said softly. "Let's try to find an out of the way place where we can build our power, and then we can worry about other things. In the Infernal Realm, there are too many dangers."

"Right." The leader nodded.

But right at that moment...

"Boom!" "Boom!" "Boom!" "Boom!" "Boom!"

From the surface of the Biss Volcano Range, thousands of stones, carrying scorching flames, began to rise into the air at a terrifying speed. Instantly, those dozens of figures began to flee in terror, but those thousands of stones were capable of altering their trajectory.

"Crunch!" "Crunch!"

In the blink of an eye, dozens of Deities had their heads smashed in. Their divine sparks flew out and their souls dispersed. All of them fell down from mid-air.

Their corpses landed at the ground level of the volcano.

"Crackle..." The volcano range was like a living thing, swallowing up the corpses, interspatial rings, divine sparks, and divine artifacts.

The Biss Volcano Range was as peaceful as ever before. Aside from the fact that the surface of the volcano range now had a few more corpses, nothing had changed at all.

The Biss Volcano Range was a dangerous area, but for the many people who had never read any books regarding it or who had no experience, how would they know that this was a dangerous area? For example, Linley's group only knew about some of the dangerous areas because they had bought some books.

And also...

Many dangerous areas in the Infernal Realm were newly formed and not recorded in any books.

Dangerous areas littered the world. This was the Infernal Realm!

A metallic lifeform was flying at high speed towards the Biss Volcano Range. Roughly a few dozen kilometers away from the Biss Volcano Range, the metallic lifeform landed on the ground. From within it, three figures disembarked. It was Inigo and two of his subordinates.

"Young master, we're coming to a halt now? Why don't we fly into the volcano range?" One of them, a Highgod, asked questioningly.

Inigo glanced sideways at him coldly. "Hmph, into the volcano range? You are asking for death! The Biss Volcano Range is one of the lethally dangerous areas of the Infernal Realm. It isn't as simple as you imagine it to be! Follow me." As he spoke, Inigo strode forward at high speed towards the volcano range.

"How dangerous is this Biss Volcano Range, exactly?" The two Highgods behind him both wondered.

They were Highgods. There were very few areas which could pose a threat to them.

"If you don't want to die, then don't run about wildly." Inigo snorted. "In this place, I'm not able to protect you."

Although Inigo was walking on the ground, he traversed the dozens of kilometers in a very short period of time. Inigo led his two subordinates to the outer reaches of the Biss Volcano Range. Looking at the white steam and the barren, lifeless landscape, the volcano range covered with the odor of sulfur, Inigo couldn't help but clear his throat.

"Lord Esquin [A'si'kui'en], I am second young master Inigo of the Bayfield [Bei'fei'er'de] clan of the Jingan Prefecture. I would like to request that Lord Esquin graces me with a meeting!" Inigo bowed respectfully as he spoke.

After speaking, Inigo remained in the bowing position, quietly awaiting for a response.

"Someone lives within this volcano range?" The two Highgods behind Inigo both felt surprised.

They too had heard that the Biss Volcano Range was a dangerous area, but they had never heard that the Biss Volcano Range had people within it.

"The Bayfield clan?" A deep voice rang out from within the volcano range, causing the entire volcano range to rumble slightly. "Enter, then."

And then, a tunnel suddenly appeared from a crack on the surface of the volcano range.

Inigo took a deep breath, then walked towards the corridor. The two Highgods behind him both felt astonished.

"Hurry up and follow." Inigo barked.

"Yes, young master." The two immediately followed Inigo in, stepping into the corridor.

According to the rules of the Infernal Realm, once one became a Seven Star Fiend, one had the right to challenge the Asuras. Only by defeating an Asura would one receive the position. The former Asura would either die in battle, or survive and relinquish their position...after countless challenges and struggles, the Infernal Realm naturally now had many reclusive experts.

These reclusive experts might be former Asuras, or they might be Seven Star Fiends, or perhaps even those extremely powerful experts who weren't interested in fighting for the position of Asura.

Without question, however, they all possessed terrifying power.

The common people of the Infernal Realm had no idea they existed, but some of the ancient clans knew about some of the reclusive experts who couldn't be offended.

The two subordinates of Inigo immediately understood. "Most likely, this Biss Volcano Range has an ultimate expert residing within."

In the dark corridor, the three continuously advanced deeper into the ground.

Suddenly...

"Crackle..." The stone wall at the side of the corridor suddenly splintered into countless pebbles which suddenly moved forwards!

"Ah!" "Ah!"

The two Highgods were pierced through by those countless flying pebbles, and even their divine sparks were struck numerous times. Their souls were immediately dispersed!

But Inigo's face didn't change. He thought to himself, "I didn't expect that after so many years, that pet of Lord Esquin's behaves just as father said. Hmph. These two fellows served as food for Lord Esquin's pet!"

Moments later...

Inigo walked to the end of the corridor, where a river of lava was flowing. Inigo had arrived at the heart of the volcano range now. This core region was an extremely vast, empty cave. In the center of the cave, there was a scorching hot pond of golden magma.

"I didn't expect that there was such a strange thing underground."

Inigo's face changed.

"Drip...drip..." The golden magma continued to boil and flow.

The muscles on Inigo's face clenched twice, and then he left through another corridor, arriving at a large, lavish, empty underground palace. Deep within the underground palace, black-robed figure was currently seated in the official position, while within his arms there was a golden kitten.

Inigo immediately bowed and said, "Inigo Bayfield pays his respects to Lord Esquin, and also brings the well-wishes of my father."

"Mm." The black-robed figure responded calmly. "Inigo, I've heard your father speak of you. Why have you come to me?"

A hint of a smile appeared on Inigo's face. "Lord Esquin, actually, I spent a very long period of time and led over a hundred Highgods in preparation for a major event, but in the end, despite spending a large amount of money, most of my subordinates died and we still failed."

"Whatever it is that you want, speak clearly!" The black-robed figure snorted coldly in dissatisfaction.

Inigo hurriedly said, "Yes, I'll speak clearly. Not long ago, the Boyd clan was destroyed, but two servants of their clan took the vast fortune accumulated by the Boyd clan over countless years and fled with it. I have been searching for them this entire time, and chased them here from the Jedefloat Continent. In the end, I discovered them!"

"Boyd clan?"

The black-robed figure was finally startled. "Are you referring to the Boyd clan which was as famous as your Bayfield clan?"

"Yes." Inigo said.

The black-robed figure let out a few insidious chuckles. "Haha, Inigo, the fortune of the Boyd clan is an astonishing sum. You've actually come to notify me about such a fortunate event? Why didn't you go seek out other members of your Bayfield clan? I have to question what your intentions are."

Inigo said hurriedly, "Lord Esquin, there are two major reasons why I didn't go to my clan for help."

"First of all, if I were to look for the experts within the clan, I would have to at least head back to the Jingan Prefecture of the Jadenfloat Continent. The distance is simply too vast, and it's hard to say if some variables would occur which would cause me to lose track of them." Inigo said hurriedly. "As for the second reason, I'm afraid Lord Esquin will laugh at me."

Inigo laughed self-mockingly, "Lord Esquin, you should know that my big brother is the eldest son of the clan chief. In the future, he will be the one to inherit the position of clan chief. As for me, in the future, I will most likely be sent off to some distant area. My power will probably be far inferior to even my current level."

The black-robed figure let out two insidious chuckles. "You are a smart kid. Right. Speak a bit more regarding the fortune of the Boyd clan. If I can acquire this fortune, I naturally won't mistreat you."

Although he was extremely powerful, this vast fortune of an enormous clan had been enough to make him greedy.

"Um, this..." Inigo mumbled.

The black-robed figure chuckled, "Kid, do you think I can't tell what you are thinking? Fine, then. You and I can make a contract by the Overgods. If I acquire the fortune of the Boyd clan, I will give you ten percent. What do you say?"

The power of a contract was extremely great.

It was like the 'bond of equals' or 'master-servant bond' between a man and a magical beast. When metallic lifeforms were under the control of others, it was also because of this sort of bond.

As for the Overgod contract, it was an extremely serious type of bond.

"Alright." Inigo was instantly overjoyed. Ten percent of the fortune!

If he had given this information to his clan, the clan would heavily reward him, but how much would he get? This was the entire fortune of the Boyd clan; if his own clan gave him even one percent, that would be quite good. How could they give him ten percent?

Inigo and the black-robed man immediately set up an Overgod contract.

"Crackle..."

Two rays of black light flew out from Inigo and the black-robed man's foreheads, piercing into their divine sparks.

Inigo was now completely at ease. He immediately laughed. "Lord Esquins, on this trip, on the surface, those two servants have employed a group of Fiends, with one of the servants having died and only one remaining."

"So the fortune is on those two old servants?" The black-robed figure said.

Inigo instead said, "Not necessarily. Lord Esquins, I saw someone within the group of Fiends who is very likely to be a member of the Boyd clan. I suspect...that the fortune is currently on him."

"He joined the Fiends?" The black-robed figure nodded slightly.

"Lord Esquins, don't worry. When the time comes, I will follow you and immediately point him out."

The black-robed figure said calmly, "How about this. Inigo, you arrange for everything. All you need to do is notify me.” Inigo bowed respectfully, then retreated.

After Inigo left, the black-robed figure immediately stood up. His ashen, pale face was only now revealed. A hint of a smile was at the corner of Esquin’s lips. “Since we have made an Overgod contract, this kid won’t dare lie to me. It is worth a trip.”

Esquin was also worried that Inigo might play some tricks, but now, there was no need.

“Phusro [Pu’si’luo], let’s prepare to head out.” Esquins petted the golden fur on the kitten in his hands.

“Meow.” The little golden kitten called out.

Outside Yilan City, the metallic lifeform remained halted outside the city. The three Edwards brothers and the other Fiends waited quietly outside the city.

“That kid really is hard working. He’s always training.”

“Most likely it is because he encountered so many dangers. He’s afraid of death.”

The three Edwards brothers chatted and laughed quietly amongst themselves, while at the same time glancing sideways into the distance at Linley, who was experimenting with his sword techniques time and time again. Linley had already been experimenting nonstop for eighteen full days. Over the course of these eighteen days, Linley had continuously trained while also correcting and improving the technique.

Theory and practice were not the same. There were always some differences.

Linley once more struck out with Bloodviolet. As it chopped out, instantly, the sword shadow became blurred, as though it had reached the limits of speed as well as the limits of sloth. This sort of feeling was extremely disorienting. As his sword flashed past, sharp ripples in space appeared.

"Crackle..." The earth split open.

This was caused by those spatial ripples alone.

"There we go." Linley's eyes lit up. For experimentation, Linley only used a tenth of his full power, but the strength of this attack remained astonishing.

A smile appeared on Linley's face. "That's about it. This 'Bewildering Shadow' attack has finally been completed! If I were to attack using it at full strength, especially when matching it with the massive strength and speed of my Dragonform, the power of this attack...will be dozens of times greater than it was just now!"

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 15, News of Olivier

After spending eighteen days of time, Linley had finally completed this technique which he had been pondering for so long. This 'Bewildering Shadow' was Linley's most powerful material attack now. After having developed the 'Bewildering Shadow', Linley began to accompany Delia and Bebe with a relaxed mind.

After the metallic life had waited outside Yilan City for a month or so, the white-horned elder finally returned with a group of hired Fiends. Soon, nearly a hundred Fiends had followed the white-horned elder over.

"So there are Fiends here already." The hired Fiends, upon seeing Linley's group, couldn't help but begin to laugh and chat.

"But there's so few people. There's less than twenty people, all combined."

"Most likely this mission really will be as dangerous as claimed."

"Dangerous? If they died during the mission, all that can be said was that they were useless!"

Hearing this discourse, the three Edwards brothers, Learmonth, and those original Fiends were all laughing coldly in their hearts....

"So few? How would you know that when we first started, we had over a hundred Fiends as well!"

"Useless? Let's see how many of you will survive."

Linley and the others felt as though they could already see the sight of these Fiends being killed.

The white-horned elder laughed. "Everyone has been waiting for quite some time now. Let's go in. We're heading out now."

Immediately, the bustling array of people all filled the metallic creature, with Linley, Delia, Bebe, Nisse, and Salomon walking together.

"Hired so many?" Bebe mumbled. "110 Fiends, a hundred at the God-level, with the other ten being Highgods. Why invite so many Gods? To serve as cannon fodder?"

Hearing Bebe's words, Linley actually mused to himself, "Cannon fodder? No, most likely, with more Fiends present, it will be easier to hide Salomon's identity."

Linley suddenly thought back to that original conversation he had with Salomon early on.

During that conversation, Salomon had intentionally acted mysteriously and said that this escort mission was very risky, and that the origin point for this mission actually wasn't Royalwing City. He had said that if this mission ran into any danger, Linley should immediately flee and try to preserve himself. At that time, Linley had felt grateful towards Salomon.

But afterwards, Linley had learned...

That this escort mission's primary figure was actually Salomon!

"Most likely, he intentionally spread that 'rumor' as well." Linley said to himself. "When danger came, if the Fiends scattered everywhere, he would most likely have a chance to flee as well. By then, with so many people fleeing and him amongst them, others would only pay attention to the white-horned elder. Nobody would go deal with him."

Linley had to admit that Salomon truly did think far ahead.

Hiring more Fiends was just done for obscuring the truth.

"It's best to be somewhat cautious when dealing with someone like him. Otherwise, I'll probably be taken advantage of him without even realizing it." Linley couldn't help but feel more guarded towards Salomon.

The metallic lifeform had remained outside of Yilan City for roughly a month, and now it was once more heading off. Currently, the metallic lifeform had once more transformed to the size it had been at when leaving Royalwing City. The interior of the metallic lifeform once more appeared to be bustling.

The metallic lifeform. Linley and Delia's room.

Delia was frowning as though thinking about something. She then turned to look at Linley and spoke. "Linley, there's something I want to tell you."

"Hm, what is it?" Linley turned his head to look at Delia. Judging from her expression, it seemed to be rather important.

Delia frowned. "Linley, at first, when we accepted this mission, we thought that it would help us move along the way in our journey. But I keep on having the feeling that this mission is too dangerous. Don't you know who we are escorting? One of the ancient clans of the Infernal Realm and the massive wealth they have accumulated over countless years! We've been attacked twice already. I'm worried there will be a third attack. Most likely, the third attack will be even more dangerous than the first two. Although we do need to face some challenges in the Infernal Realm, but, we don't need to put ourselves in such danger. We could die at any moment."

Linley nodded.

During this journey, they had first suffered the bandit attack, which had only been a probe. The second attack within the castle of sand had been filled with danger. If there was a third attack, how dangerous would it be?

Linley reached out with his arm, taking Delia into his embrace. In a gentle voice, he said, "Delia, I know. However, we've already accepted this mission. What are we supposed to do, withdraw from it? Look at those other surviving Fiends. Do you see any of them withdrawing?"

If they had taken the chance to flee during a chaotic battle, they would at least have an excuse and say that they fled in terror and got separated.

But actively withdrawing...

Once this was recorded down into the mission records of the Fiend Castles, once it spread out, they would have lost all face! In the Infernal Realm, courage was revered while cowardice was reviled! In addition, the Infernal Realm was dangerous to begin with. Everyone was psychologically prepared for the danger.

"That's not what I meant." Delia said hurriedly. "I understand that we can't withdraw. Once that spreads to the Indigo Prefecture and your ancestors find out...we can't lose face like that. All I wanted to say was that once we arrive at the Rainbow Prefecture's Bluemaple City, we need to do a better job of selecting missions. An easier one."

"I understand."

Linley nodded, then comforted her, "Don't worry. We're halfway through the journey now. Wait a bit longer."

"Delia doesn't like danger." Linley said to himself quietly. In truth, only when teetering at the brink of death, when fighting for his life at the edge of the blade, when encountering danger, did Linley feel his blood pumping. He wasn't afraid at all.

On the contrary, Linley felt as though he were back in the Mountain Range of Magical Beasts as a youth.

This was a very exciting feeling.

"Creeaaaak." He shut the door, then headed towards the main hall.

Because there were many Fiends, the main hall within the metallic lifeform seemed quite crowded. There were seven or eight people seated there drinking and chatting, two of whom Linley recognized. Months had passed since they had left Yilan City, and Linley had gotten to know these Fiends.

"Oi, Linley!" Immediately, a Fiend greeted Linley from afar.

Linley grinned and waved back, then sat down by himself at a round table. He casually ordered two dishes and some wine, then began to drink by himself.

At this time, a muscular, two meter tall man with golden hair walked over, somewhat surprised. He looked at Linley curiously, then said softly, "You...are Linley?"

Puzzled, Linley looked up and glanced at him. "Right. I am Linley."

"You are Linley Baruch?" The golden haired man suddenly asked.

Linley was greatly shocked. Someone knew his full name. "You are?" The golden haired man, seeing the look on Linley's face, laughed and sat down. "Linley, don't be nervous. I've just heard of you before, that's all."

"Heard of me before?" Linley didn't understand.

In the Infernal Realm, he didn't have much of a reputation. How could a stranger recognize him?

"Let me introduce myself first. My name is Bachelor [Ba'che'lei]. As for why I know your name...Olivier, you know him, yes?" The man laughed.

Linley was shocked. "Bachelor, you know Olivier?"

After having been in the Infernal Realm for so long, upon suddenly hearing the name 'Olivier', Linley's heart was filled with a strange feeling. After all, this was someone from his homeland of the Yulan Plane.

"Of course I know him." Bachelor held a goblet of wine, laughing. "Olivier and I have a bit of a history together. We arrived in the same batch of people to the Infernal Realm, and then were tossed out by the Redbud Army together, so we took up residence in a nearby tribe."

Linley nodded to himself. This was essentially his experience as well.

"At that time, I was already a God, while Olivier was only a Demigod. However, his training speed was very fast. After roughly fifty years, he reached the God level in the Laws of Light." Bachelor sighed. "And then, we came together to Yilan City to take part in the Fiend trials. We both succeeded in becoming One Star Fiends!"

Linley had a hint of a smile on his face.

It seemed as though Bachelor and Olivier's relationship truly wasn't just a superficial one.

"Then where is Olivier himself?" Linley asked.

Bachelor shook his head helplessly. "After becoming One Star Fiends, we took on a two star mission. However, we encountered some danger in that mission. Unable to deal with it, we all fled in every direction. I fled with some of my friends back to Yilan City. As for Olivier, I haven't been able to find him."

Linley frowned.

"Perhaps Olivier is still alive. Who knows?" Bachelor raised his head, gulping down the wine in his goblet, then put it back down and sighed. "Fiend missions are filled with danger to begin with. If you die, you die."

Linley nodded slightly.

In the Infernal Realm, death was all too common. Everyone was mentally prepared.

"When Olivier and I were in the tribe together, he mentioned you to me before. You gave him a very deep, lasting impression." Bachelor sighed. "When I praised him for having been so quick to become a God, he said that you probably had reached this level as well. And it seems this is indeed the case!"

Linley let out a long, drawn breath.

While they were in the Yulan continent, he and Olivier had often been viewed as equals and discussed in the same breath by others. The two were acclaimed as the two greatest talents the Yulan continent had seen in over ten thousand years. However, within the boundless Infernal Realm, Linley and Olivier were very unremarkable figures.

"I hope that Olivier is still alive." Linley quietly prayed for his compatriot.

"I was able to run into two talents who come from the same material plane. This is a form of karmic destiny. Come, cheers." Bachelor grinned as he spoke.

Linley had good impression of Bachelor as well, and so he laughed and raised his own goblet as well.

Linley began to casually chat while drinking with Bachelor. When Linley mentioned the battle at Moon Lake Castle, Bachelor shared his own experiences during his own Fiend trial. However, at this time, neither Linley nor Bachelor noticed that the metallic lifeform was currently flying through a volcanic region.

"Based on the map, it should be an ordinary mountain range beneath us. Why did it transform into a volcano range?"

The two Fiends by the window chatted together.

Indeed, this volcano range had moved here not long ago!

Linley and Bachelor were still chatting happily.

"Linley, you have no idea. Even I thought that I was dead for sure. At that second, with a 'slash' sound, Olivier suddenly appeared behind the enemy, then stabbed him straight through the back of his head, killing him with a single blow. That's the only reason why I managed to survive." Bachelor said excitedly.

But right at that moment...

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

A dense array of sounds suddenly pierced through the skies, while at the same time, the metallic lifeform exploded apart with a 'BOOM' sound. Countless red boulders were smashing towards all of the Fiends within the metallic creature. Everything immediately became a scene of utter chaos.

"BOOM!" A Fiend who was drinking in the main hall not too far away from them was struck by one of those fiery red boulders. His body was smashed into a pulp, and his head was shattered open, his divine spark falling down from mid-air.

An enormous fiery boulder came smashing towards Linley, who immediately dodged, but the fiery red bolder suddenly arced in midair.

"BANG!" It smashed hard onto Linley's body.

Linley's body trembled violently, and the Pulseguard Armor on his body trembled as well. "Fortunately, this Pulseguard Armor was defensively strong enough!" Linley secretly celebrated. "Not good. Delia." Linley immediately wanted to fly towards Delia.

But a large number of fiery boulders continued to smash around him.

Linley discovered that Bachelor was currently facing the attack of a fiery red boulder. Bachelor roared angrily, chopping down with the greatsword in his hands, and a surge of fierce power struck viciously against that fiery boulder, which was immediately cleft in two.

However, the two cleft halves actually continued to fly towards Bachelor.

Bachelor's face changed dramatically.

"Whoosh!" An illusory, blurry violet sword shadow suddenly appeared. The violet sword shadow was lightning-fast, but it also gave a slow, plodding feeling. Wherever the sword shadow passed by, space itself trembled. The violet sword shadow struck towards those two boulders, which immediately shattered apart, transforming into a large amount of pebbles.

Bachelor immediately let out a breath, glancing sideways towards Linley with a hint of thankfulness in his eyes.

"Careful!" Linley's face changed dramatically.

"Boom!"

A nearby fiery boulder that had been attacking someone else suddenly changed direction, smashing directly towards Bachelor's head. "BANG!" Bachelor's head exploded, and a divine spark fell down from mid-air.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 16, Golden Magma

“Rumble...” Linley didn’t have the time to think about other things. He saw countless boulders everywhere, with so many above them that they blocked out the sun. All of the fiery boulders pressed down towards the Fiends, surrounding them. Linley himself was collected in by those countless boulders, rendering him unable to move.

“Crackle...”

All of the fiery red boulders began to move bizarrely. If someone was watching from the outside, that person would have discovered...that within the volcano range, a fiery mountain peak had suddenly appeared.

This mountain peak was formed from those countless fiery boulders.

Linley and the surviving Fiends, as well as the corpses of the dead Fiends, were within the mountain peak.

“What is going on?” Linley stared in astonishment.

The boulders that had been surrounding him were all moved away, and in front of him was a narrow corridor. Linley followed through this narrow corridor for roughly ten meters, at which point he discovered an awesome spectacle...in front of him, there was a tunnel that led directly upwards and downwards!

At this time, one surviving Fiend after another was gathering in this vertical tunnel, coming out from their own narrow corridors. The group of them just floated there within the vertical tunnel.

"Delia?" Linley frantically looked for her towards each corridor.

The vast majority of the Fiends who had survived to come out of the tunnel were Highgods, while a few Gods were amongst them. The sudden attack just now had caused many Gods to lose their lives.

"Boss!" A voice suddenly rang out.

Linley immediately turned!

He saw Delia and Bebe emerge from within a distant corridor.

"Delia, Bebe." Overjoyed, Linley immediately went over. Bebe and Delia's eyes were filled with joy as well. Linley carefully looked at Delia, his heart delighted.

"It was all thanks to Bebe just now." Delia sighed emotionally. "That attack came too suddenly, and there were many of those giant boulders. Fortunately, I was able to use the Deathgod Golem to take one of them head on. Afterwards, it was only thanks to Bebe's help that I was able to safely pass through those terrifying waves of attacks."

Bebe quirked his lips. "I just stood there. When the metallic creature was shattered, I was only a few meters away from Delia, so it was easy for me to help out." Although he spoke casually, within Bebe's eyes, there was still a hint of urgency.

Linley understood that Bebe was worried about Nisse.

"Where's Nisse? Wasn't she with you at the time?" Linley suddenly asked.

Bebe squeezed out a smile. "At that time, Ninny went to her brother's place. Salomon is a Highgod. He should have been able to protect Ninny."

"Bebe." A voice rang out from afar.

Bebe immediately turned his head, and a look of delight appeared on his face. "Ninny." Nisse and Salomon immediately flew over. After suffering this attack but not dying, everyone finally was able to smile.

Suddenly...

"Everyone, let's break open the mountain walls and go out." Suddenly, someone called out.

"BANG!"

An explosion immediately followed. By the time Linley and the others turned their heads, all they saw was a shattered corpse falling downwards.

"What's going on?" Linley's group was somewhat mystified.

"Everyone, what should we do right now?" Suddenly, a voice rang out.

Everyone, including Linley, turned to look. The speaker was a Highgod. Linley had heard of his name before; his name was Sperry. He had a rather high reputation amongst the group of Fiends who had been hired from Yilan City, and his strength was most likely that of a Four Star Fiend or a Five Star Fiend.

This Sperry had long, slightly wavy brown hair.

With a flip of his hand, a black blade shadow suddenly appeared. Space shuddered as the blade shadow flashed past the mountain wall, carving out a half-meter deep hole, but the rocks carved out from the hole all shot out at high speed towards Sperry.

Countless blade shadows flashed, and those shattered rocks transformed into dust.

The strange thing was, the powdered rocks actually reformed, flying back to the half-meter deep hole in the mountain walls, completely filling it up. And then, the stone powder moved about, transforming to a very polished state without any hint of a blade scar.

"Everyone saw that, right?" Sperry swept everyone with his gaze.

Many of the Fiends present were highly experienced. Seeing this, they were able to hypothesize what the situation was.

"This should be a Volcano Titan!" Immediately, someone spoke out. "The most important part of a Volcano Titan is their energy nucleus. As long as the nucleus doesn't shatter, they are able to control countless amounts of rocks to once more reform their enormous bodies. Most likely, this entire volcano range is just part of the enormous body of the Volcano Titan."

"Volcano Titan?" Linley was shocked, and he couldn't help but exchange glances with Bebe.

Linley thought of a type of creature. The strange thing he had encountered on the sixth floor of the Necropolis of the Gods...the Flame Tyrant!

At that time, that creature was also a mountain-sized giant. The first time, they had managed to destroy it, but a semi-translucent stone had formed as the center for the recreation of its body. Afterwards, Linley had relied on the Throbbing Pulse of the World to shake the energy nucleus to pieces, killing the creature.

"Can it be that this is also a Flame Tyrant? Or, to be precise, the Highgod variant of a Flame Tyrant?" Linley wondered to himself. This 'Volcano Titan' was definitely a Highgod. If it was only a God, how could it have so easily killed so many Gods?

"I didn't expect that we would end up inside the body of a creature! And this volcano range is a creature." Bebe muttered.

"Everyone knows the situation. Now, what should we do?" Sperry said, and then he looked towards the white-horned elder. "What thoughts do you have? You have hired us for this mission, after all."

The white-horned elder said sincerely, "How could I have any thoughts on this? Everyone, you decide."

"We only have seven Highgod Fiends here." Another person said clearly. "That ambush attack was dangerous to Gods, but not to most Highgods. Also...neither the Edwards brothers nor Learmonth are here. I refuse to believe that they would die! Thus, I imagine that the surviving Fiends have most likely been divided into two or three segments."

Everyone nodded slightly.

The three Edwards brothers and Learmonth were all extremely powerful experts in this mission. No one believed that the attack just now was capable of killing them.

However, Learmonth and the others weren't here.

"Perhaps they are in another part of the Volcano Titan's body." Sperry said calmly. "However, this Volcano Titan truly is bold, to allow us to enter his body. As long as we can find his energy nucleus and shatter it, he will die for certain. Come. We have no other choices. Let's go downwards."

Perry led them in flying downwards, and immediately, all the other Fiends immediately followed.

Linley and the others flew downwards as well.

Soon afterwards, they landed on the ground. This place was covered with boiling rivers of lava, which had passageways and corridors to each side.

Within a palace that was hidden away deep within the volcano range, Esquin was seated on a chair, dressed in a black robe, holding that little golden kitten in his arms. Inigo, appearing rather respectful, was standing next to him.

"Phusro, how goes it?" Esquin gently petted the little golden kitten in his arms, smiling as he spoke.

"Meow. Master, I've already separated the Fiends apart, and the more powerful Fiends are now in a different area! That powerful Fiend named 'Learmonth' which Inigo described has been placed in a separate area, blocked off from everyone else. For now, he won't be able to interfere with our plans. Meow." The little golden kitten spoke in human tongues.

Esquin nodded slightly.

"Meow. Master, that white-horned elder and that man whom Inigo said is probably a member of the Boyd clan have been placed by me in the same location. Right now, they have reached the Goldflame Pool. Meow." The little golden kitten said silkily.

Esquin smiled in satisfaction. "It's about time. Let's move!"

"Drip, drip..."

In the center of this cave, there was a pool of golden lava that was constantly boiling and hurtling about. The air on top of the magma pool was twisted and distorted from the high temperature.

By the time Linley and the other Fiends arrived here, some of the Fiends, upon seeing the pool of magma, had changed looks on their faces. They unconsciously backed away slightly from that golden magma. As for Linley and Bebe, who were rather inexperienced, they didn't know how terrifying that golden magma was.

"Liquefied Goldflame?" Salomon said softly.

"What's a Goldflame?" Linley, Bebe, and Delia didn't understand.

Salomon said in a low voice, "This is a very monstrous toy. Its corrosiveness and temperature is extremely high. Forget about you; even a Highgod that falls in will be in trouble. Don't go too close to it."

"Liquefied Goldflame?" Although Linley was over ten meters away from that golden magma pool, he could still sense those waves of heat assaulting his body. If a Saint from a material plane was to come here, most likely within just a few meters of this golden magma pool, the Saint would immediately combust and burn to nothingness due to the temperature.

The group of Fiends all intentionally stayed a distance away from the golden magma pool, not daring to draw too near.

"Rumble..." Quite bizarrely, the stone floor around the magma pool began to move like waves of water. All of the Fiends were caught off guard and immediately flew into the air.

"Swish!" "Swish!" "Swish!"

A large number of boulders from the cave walls suddenly fell down, while at the same time shooting towards Linley's group of Fiends at astonishing speed. The densely clustered boulders shot over, and Linley and the others were forced to use their strength to block. Linley, Delia, Bebe, Nisse, and Salomon were all together.

"Bang!" A boulder slammed into him. Although his defense was powerful, Linley was still knocked flying by dozens of meters, and moved all the way over to the air above the golden magma.

"Drip, drip..."

The 'magma' in the golden magma pool suddenly transformed in to an enormous golden liquid hand, reaching out to grasp Linley.

"Swish!" Linley immediately activated the Profound Truths of Velocity, using it to maximum effect. He transformed into a surge of blue smoke, twisting strangely in the air and avoiding that clutch, then flying back to Delia and Bebe's side.

"Ahhhhhhh!"

Linley had managed to avoid disaster, but another person had also been knocked to the air above the magma pool and had been grabbed by that golden liquid hand, then dragged into the golden magma pool. Upon being dragged in...he never came out again. Only a few bubbles could be seen.

"Everyone, be careful. Don't let yourself be knocked into that golden magma pool." Linley could still taste his fear.

"Linley, you be careful too." Salomon had the easiest time of their group. Whenever boulders drew near, a black light would flash in his hands and those boulders would immediately transform into smithereens.

Delia was prepared now, and the Deathgod Golem was constantly smashing apart one boulder after another in front of her. Deathgod Golems were incomparably tough, far tougher than these boulders, and it sheared through them now.

"Ahhhh!"

Yet another person was knocked into the air above the golden magma pool, and two enormous liquid golden hands reached out, dragging him down. He, too, never appeared again. This sight caused those experts who were suffering the attacks of those many boulders to be terrified.

"Not only is this golden magma pool itself terrifying, the main issue is that this blazing titan is secretly using techniques against us. Even a Highgod who falls in that place will find it hard to survive." Salomon sent mentally to Linley and the others. "Everyone, be careful. Don't fall in."

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were all on maximum vigilance, smashing one boulder after another aside.

Most of those who fell into the golden magma pool and died were Gods.

As for their employer, that white-horned elder, he had a fairly easy time of it. He was wielding a staff in his hands, which danced and whirled like a viper, deflecting the boulders which attacked him towards each side, with the boulders being unable to harm him at all.

But right at this moment...

From another corridor that also led to this cave, three figures walked out. It was the three Edwards brothers. When they had been in the metallic lifeform, they had shared a single room. After the metallic lifeform had exploded and shattered and those boulders had sought to crush them, the three brothers had still been together.

"There's actually liquefied Goldflame here!" The three Edwards brothers carefully inspected the scene.

"Ah, that Learmonth isn't present!" The eyes of the third Edwards brother shone. "Big brother, second brother, this is a good chance. That white-horned old man is right there."

The three Edwards brothers were beginning to grow rather excited.

They didn't consider how this opportunity had suddenly came. Learmonth wasn't here; what did the three of them have to be afraid of?

Upon killing that white-horned elder, they would receive the astonishing wealth accumulated over countless years by the Boyd clan!

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 17, The Fight Over the Priceless Treasure

"Drip, drip..." The golden magma pool was continuing to bubble and boil. The many fiery boulders shooting at them finally came to a halt.

Only now did Linley and the others let out sighs of relief.

Suddenly, the shattered stones that had been broken into dozens of pieces on the ground floated into the air. Everyone grew cautious, prepared to block at any moment. But these levitating stones just flew back towards the walls on each side, merging into those deep holes. After a vibration, the walls of the cave once more returned to normal.

It was as though those attacking boulders had been nothing more than a dream.

"Whew." Linley's group let out sighs of relief.

"The survivors are fewer in number again." Delia said softly. Everyone in the cave sensed a sort of pressure. Just now, those shooting boulders had been nothing more than an appetizer. The main course hadn't arrived yet. However, less than ten Gods were surviving.

The Highgod Fiend, Sperry, said brightly, "Everyone, we..."

"BANG!"

Very suddenly, three thick electric serpents suddenly snaked across from the distant tunnel entrance, rapidly striking towards the white-horned elder. The strange thing was, the heads of the three electric serpents were flashing were saber light.

"Hrm!" Salomon's forehead creased slightly.

The white-horned elder immediately grew solemn. His body swayed, and suddenly, one doppelganger after another filled the cave, floating in the air above it. There was an awe-inspiring sight of over three hundred doppelgangers, each one emitting the same soul aura. For the moment, there was no way to tell which one was the real one.

"Haha..." With loud, while laughter, the three electric serpents coiled and twisted, transforming into three people. It was the three Edward brothers.

"The Edward brothers. What are you doing!" The white-horned elder's angry shout simultaneously came out from the mouths of the three-hundred plus doppelgangers, reverberating throughout the cave. "What are you doing!" "What are you doing!" The angry sound continued to cascade and echo throughout the cave, carrying with it a hint of an unusual vibration.

Linley and the other Gods couldn't help but feel their heads grow slightly dizzy.

"Profound Mysteries of Music?" Linley couldn't help but be startled.

The three Edward brothers had separated long ago. They were standing in front of the three exits from the cave, preventing the white-horned elder from fleeing.

"What are we doing?" The eldest of the three Edward brothers laughed coldly, then opened his mouth wide. "Roaaaaaaar!" With this furious, earth-shaking roar, countless bolts of electric light spread out, covering the entire cave. And then, the electric bolts suddenly split apart, heading to two different ends.

The electric light condensed around the two ends, then shot out electricity in each direction.

"Crackle..."

Between each end was a strange electric radiation area, with the three hundred plus doppelgangers caught within the field. But it wasn't just the three hundred doppelgangers that were caught here; Linley and the others were also caught within it, causing them to suffer as well.

"Linley, Bebe, this is a sort of material attack of the Laws of Lightning. However, it is a rather unique type of material attack. Protect yourselves." Salomon shouted to them through divine sense.

At the same time, Salomon's hands spread out, and two rays of black light flashed out, ensconcing Delia and Nisse.

A material attack!

Bebe's body was unbelievably tough. Naturally, he wouldn't fear it.

"Thank you." Linley said towards Salomon through divine sense. It was already very good of him to be willing to protect Delia.

"Ahhh!" In the next instant, Linley sensed an astonishing, unique electric force trying to break through his Pulseguard Armor. Not only did it attack from in front, it also attacked from behind. However, the Pulseguard Armor's defensive power was quite astonishing indeed.

Linley was able to take it head on.

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

One doppelganger after another exploded, while at the same time, of those God-level Fiends, aside from Linley and his group, only two managed to survive. The other Gods all perished.

"Second brother, third brother, you help out as well." The other two Edward brothers all opened their mouths as well.

With two angry roars erupting, even more electricity spewed forth into the air. Countless flashes of electricity condensed around those two ends, and instantly the penetrative power of the electric field multiplied. Those two luckily surviving God-level Fiends let out miserable cries, and then were burnt by the electricity to ash, leaving behind only their divine sparks.

"Haaargh!" Salomon let out a low growl, and the black light surrounding Nisse and Delia also intensified, with his own expression becoming fiercer.

"Motherf*cker, those three bastards have gone crazy." Salomon growled in a low voice.

Bebe's body was extremely durable. Even though the penetrative power of the electric bolts had increased, he was still able to take it head on. As for Linley, however, the 'Pulseguard Armor' around his body was beginning to shudder.

"Not good." Linley could clearly sense how innumerable tiny needle-like electric sparks were piercing through his Pulseguard Armor. The Pulseguard Armor shook violently, and at this point, Linley no longer hid anything. He immediately switched to his original form.

"Huh?"

The three Edwards brothers were greatly shocked. They couldn't help but look at Linley.

The azure-golden draconic scales covered his entire body, with a faint blue light swirling above the scales. An ancient, powerful aura emanated out from Linley's Dragonform. Even Highgods couldn't help but to turn and look. The powerful Dragonformed body didn't fear the penetrative power of those electric sparks at all.

"He is...?" The three Edwards brothers exchanged glances, coming to the same hypothesis.

With his body so incredibly endurable, there was no way Linley was one of those common Draconians. In addition, that aura he carried was also astonishing.

"It doesn't matter who he is. Our target is only that white-horned old man. Brothers, let's do it." The three Edward brothers leapt forward at virtually the same instant, each wielding a thin knife, with faint electric light crackling on the surface.

The white-horned elder let out an angry shout, and the longstaff in his hand came smashing down!

"Crackle..." Space began to crack and split open.

"The old fellow was pretending to be weak all along!" The three Edward brothers had savage looks on their faces, with the eldest of them using his knife to smash against the longstaff.

"Bang!"

Like echoing thunder, the white-horned elder's longstaff in his hands began to crackle with electricity, and he couldn't help but shudder slightly for a moment. At this time, the other two Edward brothers simultaneously shot in this direction like arrows, moving so quickly that even Linley and the others could only feel astonished.

"Absolutely trampled!" Linley frowned. He couldn't help but to glance at Salomon.

This was the old servant of Salomon!

But Salomon didn't move at all. He just watched quietly. Clearly, Salomon didn't want to intervene at all, or perhaps...he didn't have enough strength to intervene.

"Alas, this old fellow is doing to die." Linley sighed to himself.

"Growl..." The roar of a dragon could be heard as an enormous electric dragon opened its mouth, bellowing and chomping down towards the white-horned elder. Facing death, the white-horned elder let out a wild, savage cry, and a deep explosion could be heard.

As the lightning dragon dispersed, the corpse of the white-horned elder fell to the ground as well.

The eldest of the three Edward brothers immediately grabbed the interspatial ring, and smiles appeared on their faces as well.

"We finally got it!" The three Edward brothers were incomparably excited.

The boiling, bubbling lava's golden light shot out towards that interspatial ring, which was so dazzling to behold!

But right now, Linley's attention was on Salomon and Nisse. Salomon was still very calm, but Nisse's eyes were beginning to fill with tears.

"This Salomon definitely is unwilling to reveal his identity. The two old fellows are dead. Precisely speaking, this escort mission has lost its employers." Linley said to himself, and then Linley glanced at the wildly celebrating Edward brothers.

Linley knew very well that the actual priceless treasure lay with Salomon!

"Haha..." Suddenly, a cold, sinister laugh echoed within the cave. Everyone, including the three Edward brothers, turned their heads to look. From another tunnel in the cave, a person appeared, completely covered in a black robe!

The black-robed man's face was utterly pale, and in his hands, he held a golden kitten. He calmly said, "Do you three brothers think that you'll be able to acquire the treasure of the Boyd clan?"

These words instantly caused the looks on the faces of the three Edward brothers to change.

"Be good boys and put down the interspatial ring, and I can spare your lives and permit you to depart this place." The black-robed man, Esquin, said coldly.

Linley and the others very wisely withdrew to the corners of the cave.

"It seems things are going to become increasingly exciting." Bebe's eyes were shining.

Linley's attention was still on the nearby Salomon, who had a hint of a cold laugh on his face. Clearly, the coming disaster for the three Edward brothers was a source of pleasure for him. However, Linley was still puzzled. "Isn't Salomon worried that the black-robed man will act against him as well?"

"The priceless treasures of the Boyd clan. In your dreams!" The eldest of the three Edward brothers shouted angrily.

"Bang!"

The three simultaneously transformed into three enormous electric serpents, snaking towards Esquin.

Esquin continued to hold the kitten with his left hand. He stretched out his right hand, which was covered with a translucent glove. Through the glove, one could see the details of his right hand clearly...this was a hand which was slightly black and had a yellow tint to it.

A deathly aura!

The right hand stretched out and slapped towards the air in the direction of the three attackers. The three attacking electric serpents bizarrely began to break apart inch by inch, suddenly transforming back into the three Edward brothers. The three Edward brothers were extremely shocked and frightened. Without hesitating, they chose...

To flee!

"Swoosh!" "Swoosh!" "Swoosh!"

The three went flying towards the three different exits. After having exchanged blows, the three Edward brothers had discovered very clearly that they weren't even close to being a match for the black-robed man. Their difference in power was simply too great. "He is at least a Seven Star Fiend, and he might even be a retired Asura!" The three brothers were terrified.

"Fleeing?" Esquin laughed calmly. "Phusro!"

"Meow." The kitten in his arms let out a meow.

Suddenly....

The three corridors immediately closed, with this cave now being completely sealed off from the outside.

Seeing this, the three Edward brothers were completely stunned. They all turned and looked at each other, then their leader, the eldest, hurriedly said respectfully, "Milord, we three brothers no longer desire the priceless treasure. We offer it to you, milord, and hope that just like you said earlier, you can spare our lives, milord."

"Oh. You don't want it anymore?" Esquin laughed.

The three Edward brothers hurriedly nodded.

“Unfortunately, I’ll only give someone a single chance! Just now, you didn’t take that chance...” As he spoke, Esquin suddenly transformed into hundreds of doppelgangers, surrounding the three Edward brothers.

“Shadowshape Doppelganger technique.” Bebe stared in astonishment, his eyes wide.

Esquin’s usage of it was clearly far superior to Bebe’s, whether in terms of speed or in the number of doppelgangers.

The three Edward brothers were momentarily unable to determine which one was the real body. With a sudden ‘BOOM!’, Esquin’s palm came slamming down towards the youngest of the three Edward brothers, and his head immediately exploded apart.

“Third brother!”

The eyes of the eldest brother and second brother of the three Edwards brothers instantly turned red, while at the same time, they hurriedly began to dodge.

The Shadowshape technique was very terrifying, because the true body could constantly fluctuate between every single shadow. They could dodge a single shadow, but could they dodge so many?

“Soon, it will be your turn.” Esquin’s voice rang out.

"Bang!" Yet another palm suddenly caused a man's head to shatter.

"Second brother!" Only one remained.

"Bang!" Another black shadow flashed by, and a right hand covered by a translucent glove smashed in the skull of the eldest of the three Edward brothers.

Immediately afterwards, all of the shadows reformed into a single form. The black-robed man was still holding the golden kitten.

Within the cave, Linley and the others didn't dare to so much as breathe too loudly.

Too terrifying!

"Can it be that he is a Seven Star Fiend? Or even a former Asura?" Linley couldn't help but make this guess. Linley could tell that this Esquin's speed was very terrifying. The three Edward brothers weren't able to react to a single palm attack.

In addition, his strength was formidable as well; the combined attack of the three Edward brothers had been dispersed with a single palm slap!

"Those three idiots wanted to acquire the treasures of the Boyd clan, but they didn't even know who the real owner of the treasure is." Esquin snickered. When these words came out, the muscles on Salomon's face began to twitch.

Esquin turned to look at Salomon. With a calm laugh, he said, "Child of the Boyd clan, did you think that by hiding amongst the other Fiends that I wouldn't be able to recognize you? Hand over the fortune of your clan to me. I will give you one chance as well. Give me the treasure, and I will let you leave!"

Salomon's face instantly turned ashen, without any hint of blood at all.

Salomon turned his head, staring hatefully at Linley. His eyes were filled with venom!

The only person he had told his identity to was Linley!

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 18, Salomon's Rage

Salomon's face was savage, and the fury in his heart was roaring.

He, Salomon, was only an illegitimate child of the Boyd clan. He had been kicked out of the household after entering it for only a single day! Alone and without any support, he had been escorted to his teacher's place, a reclusive expert who had only accepted him as a disciple for his father's sake.

However, his teacher was a person with an extremely perverted disposition.

"I endured the humiliation of being expelled from the clan, and the life of torment I lived with Teacher I endured as well. I dreamed of one day standing at the pinnacle of the Infernal Realm, and trample down upon those bastards who looked down on me. Everything was for the sake of this!" Salomon thought back to all of the past years.

He had been enduring this entire time.

After receiving the news from the two servants that the Boyd clan had been destroyed, and that the only remaining person with the blood of the Boyd clan remaining was him, he hadn't been heartbroken; instead, he had been wildly jubilant!

If they died, good! Those bastards deserved to die!

His chance had come!

Because those two servants had brought an enormous fortune with them, in accordance with the plans his father had laid prior to dying, Salomon had remained hidden with his teacher for a long period of time. After achieving success, he led the two servants and his ignorant little sister out towards the Jadenfloat Continent!

On this trip, Salomon was planning to spread his wings and become without peer!

His plans had been very perfect.

The two servants had been two chess pieces he had been prepared to sacrifice to begin with. When he first saw Linley transform, Salomon had guessed Linley's identity. For the sake of drawing a closer relationship with Linley, he had revealed his own name. At that time, he had thought that Linley wouldn't immediately know his true identity.

After all, it was just a single character.

Salomon had thought that in the future, after Linley learned more about the affairs of the Boyd clan, he would feel Salomon had behaved very sincerely to him. Salomon had been in such danger, and yet had still revealed his identity! This action was a bit risky, but in order to win Linley's trust, it was worth it.

More importantly...

First, he felt that Linley wouldn't immediately know about the affairs of the Boyd clan.

Second, he could tell what sort of a person Linley was, especially from the way Linley had risked his own life to rescue Salomon's little sister. This let him understand that Linley shouldn't be the sort of person who would lust after a friend's wealth. After all, Linley had been willing to risk his own life for Salomon's little sister; would he care about a little money?

Salomon's calculations had been very clear.

However, who would have imagined that the affair at the castle of sand had caused the Boyd clan's affairs to be revealed. Linley and Bebe couldn't help but suspect who Salomon was. In order to reduce their suspicions, Salomon had told Linley his true identity. As Salomon saw it... Linley shouldn't have been able to reveal it.

First of all, Linley's character. He shouldn't have been the type to reveal it.

Secondly, Linley remained within the metallic lifeform. He shouldn't have had a chance to reveal it.

But now...

This black-robed man had immediately been able to recognize him.

"The Boyd clan was destroyed, and those two old servants died as well. Who else in the entire Infernal Realm knows who I am? It must be Linley.

Right. It was Linley. It was Linley who must have sent a message with someone else at Yilan City through divine sense and revealed my secrets. That must be it!"

Salomon was absolutely enraged.

"That bastard, Linley. He really puts on quite an act. Even I was tricked by him. I was wrong about him!" Salomon's mind was filled with hatred. As he stared at Linley, his eyes betrayed his desire to devour Linley and tear his life away.

His dreams!

His goals for which he had struggled towards for countless years!

It was very likely that it was Linley who caused them to all come to naught!

How could he not hate Linley?

Linley was currently flabbergasted. Salomon was staring at him viperously, but he hadn't revealed Salomon's identity!

"Linley, you...you are impressive!" Salomon ground his teeth, his eyes turning red.

"I..." Linley felt completely wronged.

He could guess that this Salomon definitely believed that it was he, Linley, who had revealed the secret. But he had never spoken of it.

"Salomon." Linley wanted to speak.

"You don't need to say anything!" Salomon's gaze was viperous. By his side, even Nisse, so familiar with him, felt her heart quiver. Was this her warm, friendly big brother?

"Salomon, why are you staring at my Boss like that? What sort of look is that? What sort of attitude is that?" Bebe shouted angrily. In Bebe's mind, Linley was like his parents or like his older brother; he wouldn't permit anyone to treat Linley like this, even if the person was the big brother of the girl he liked.

Within the cave, the golden magma continued to bubble and boil.

But the aura now seemed very strange.

"Child of the Boyd clan, stop wasting time. My patience has limits." The black-robed Esquin, carrying the golden kitten, laughed calmly as he spoke.

Salomon immediately turned his head to stare at him.

"You want the fortunes of my Boyd clan. I'll tell you this..." Salomon's face was savage. "I don't have it!"

The smile on Esquin's pale face vanished, leaving behind only a cold emotionless look. He stared coldly at Salomon. "It seems you want to die."

"Even if you kill me, I still don't have it." Salomon raised his head.

"Hmph."

Esquin sneered coldly, and then he suddenly seemed to have teleported as a black blur appeared in front of them. Esquin himself appeared right in front of Salomon, casually slapping towards Salomon with a palm.

It was still that sallow, yellow hand which was covered by a translucent glove.

Salomon's eyes were savage. He retreated at high speed, while at the same time, an explosive, gloomy black light burst forth from his hands. "Rumble..." The air shuddered, and the gloomy black light shot directly towards that seemingly slow but actually incredibly fast right hand.

"Bang!"

A very gentle sound. Esquin's right hand trembled, then he hurriedly retracted it. His right hand remained that sallow yellow color, and he hadn't been harmed at all.

"You...this is...? Tell me, who is your teacher?" Esquin gave Salomon a surprised glance.

Salomon, who had retreated to the distant edges of the cave, snickered. "Why ask about my teacher? Can it be that you are already afraid after I used just a minor technique like this?"

A hint of anger appeared within Esquin's ashen face. He let out a cold snort. "I gave you a chance, but you didn't take it!" Esquin's right hand stretched out slowly, and it gradually began to turn blood-red, and it swelled in size as well.

The entire right hand was now even larger than an ordinary person's head, and it was as scarlet red as a drop of blood.

Esquin placed the golden kitten in his arms down, then turned to stare at Salomon. "Did you think that you would be able to threaten me with those little tricks?" As soon as he spoke, Esquin suddenly transformed into hundreds of shadows, filling virtually the entire cave.

Elemental Laws of Darkness – Shadowshape Doppelganger technique!

"Am I really going to be forced to use that technique?" Salomon hesitated.

Suddenly, a fan-sized blood red hand came slapping down towards his head. The air around the blood-red hand was twisting and distorting like a vortex, while at the same time the vortex of space was faintly swirling with a black smoke.

Salomon's face changed dramatically, and then turned savage. He actually shot out with his own twin hands, a black light covering his right hand which clashed directly with that blood red palm.

"BANG!" The cave itself trembled.

Salomon was knocked backwards like a bag of sand from the blow. "Crunch!" The bones of his arms were shattered, revealing red flesh and blood as well as white chunks of bone that went flying everywhere. Salomon himself was smashed into the wall, and he spewed out fresh blood from his lips, then slid down to the ground.

"Big brother!" Nisse called out in alarm.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe all frowned.

"Linley, why did Salomon act that way towards you? Can it be that it is because of his identity, that he thinks you revealed it?" Delia asked through her divine sense.

Linley felt sourness in his heart, and he sent back, "It should be, but I..."

"I know." Of course Delia knew that Linley wasn't the person to reveal it. After all, in the Infernal Realm, how many people did Linley even know? Even if wanted to send someone a message, he didn't have the ability to.

Linley looked at the heavily wounded Salomon. All he could do was to secretly shake his head. Most likely, no matter what he said, Salomon wouldn't believe him.

"Don't kill me." Salomon stood up and hurriedly shouted.

"Oh, you don't want to die now?" The black-robed Esquin snickered, while at the same time, with a wave of his hand, that little golden kitten returned to his arms while the blood red color in his right hand returned to his normal dark color. "What, are you now prepared to give me the wealth of the Boyd clan?"

Esquin was worried as well. Worried that Salomon wasn't actually carrying the treasure on him. This was why Esquin didn't want to directly kill Salomon either.

"My teacher's name is Elektra [Yi'lai'ke'te'la]!" Salomon said hurriedly.

Esquin frowned, a look of detestation appearing on his face. "So it really is that freak, Elektra. When I saw the destructive light you generated, I knew it. Child of the Boyd clan, for you to be his disciple means that you really have quite the capacity for endurance." Esquin let out two chuckles.

Salomon's face was gloomy. He thought back to the time he had spent by his teacher's side, which was indeed extremely painful.

"The fortune of the Boyd clan? Where is it?" Esquin continued.

Salomon's face turned rigid. Just now, he had been hoping that upon hearing the name of his teacher, this person would give up. However...it seemed as though this person didn't care too much about his teacher.

Esquin, seeing the look on Salomon's face, understood. Letting out a cold laugh, he said, "What, did you think that just because you reported your teacher's name, I would be afraid? First of all, given your teacher's temperament, even if you died, he wouldn't come out to avenge you. In addition, even if your teacher did come, I, Esquin, wouldn't be afraid of him, that old freak!"

Salomon hesitated a moment. Seeing that Esquin's face was slowly growing more sinister, he hurriedly said, "Mr. Esquin, please give me a little time."

"Fine." Esquin nodded slightly.

He didn't want to force Salomon too much either. After all, who knew if Salomon had put the treasure somewhere else.

Right now, within the cave, aside from Linley's group, there were several other Highgod Fiends who were maintaining their silence. These Highgod Fiends, upon hearing the dialogue between Salomon and the Esquin, could guess now what the treasure they were escorting on this mission was.

"So this fellow is actually a member of the Boyd clan." Those Highgod Fiends all looked towards Salomon.

But Salomon himself was staring at Linley. In a low voice, he said, "Linley, do you know how many years I have waited for this day?"

"Salomon, I didn't..."

"No need to speak." Salomon shouted in a cold voice, and the gaze which he swept towards Linley carried within it a hint of viperous fury. "Linley, for this day, I have trained for over a million years! A million years! Do you know how long a period of time that is? In addition, I had to endure the torments of that old freak Elektra!"

Esquin's eyes contained a hint of amusement within them. "A million years? This little fellow's endurance really is pretty strong."

Salomon's eyes were glowing red. "I've been enduring this entire time. Waiting! The final hope of the Boyd clan, the final hope of myself, Salomon! I, Salomon, trusted you and told you my identity. But...I didn't expect that you would actually reveal it! You, Linley, actually destroyed my one and only hope!"

"I misjudged you!"

Salomon ground his teeth. "You greedy, ravenous wolf, I misjudged you!!!"

Salomon turned to stare at Esquin. "Mr. Esquin, I truly am amazed that you were able to insert a spy like Linley into the escort squad of Fiends. I truly admire you. I admire you so much I could kowtow to you!" Every single word of Salomon's contained boundless anger.

Esquin raised an eyebrow, then laughed. He didn't deny it!

Esquin's laughter, as Salomon saw it, was a self-delighted laugh. He became all the more enraged!

"Big brother Linley, it really was you?" Only now did Nisse begin to understand. She stared at Linley in disbelief. "You actually belong to this Esquin's side? It was you who revealed my big brother's status?" Nisse hadn't understood how the other side had come to know of her brother's identity.

But now, she understood.

Linley felt misery in his heart. He spoke out, "Salomon, Nisse, if I told you that it wasn't me who revealed it, would you believe it?"

"Ninny!" Bebe's handsome, delicate face was filled with rage. "My Boss said he didn't reveal it, and that means he definitely didn't reveal it. In addition, we don't even know this black-robed guy! I can vouch for it with my life. Ninny, can it be that you don't even trust me?"

"But, my big brother, he..." Nisse knew very well how hard her big brother had been striving.

Once he succeeded in this venture, her big brother would rise to the heavens in a single bound.

"Bullshit." Salomon glanced coldly at Bebe. "Ninny, can't you tell that this Bebe grew close to you, most likely as part of a pre-planned plot?" Upon hearing this, Nisse's face couldn't help but turn white. After speaking, Salomon turned to look at Esquin. "Mr. Esquin, I know that Linley belongs to your side, but...I hope that you will kill him! Otherwise, don't even think about acquiring the treasures of my clan!"

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 19, Kiss

When these words came out, Linley's face couldn't help but change.

If it weren't because Salomon was worried about Elquin, he would have killed Linley long ago. After all, as Salomon saw it, Linley was someone who should have been on Elquin's side. Naturally, he wouldn't easily offend Elquin.

"Salomon, you asshole!" Bebe immediately bellowed in fury. "I told you, my Boss definitely did not reveal your secret. Why are you so convinced that it was my Boss who did it? And you want to kill him? You are a motherf*cking asshole, an asshole!!!"

Bebe actually wanted to kill Salomon right now, but his strength was far inferior to Salomon's!

"Salomon, on this entire way over, Linley remained within the metallic creature. How could he have had the opportunity to reveal your secret?" Delia was frantic as well. She was afraid of Linley being killed.

Linley just stared at Salomon silently. By now, Linley knew exactly what sort of person this Salomon was. He was the type of person who would pretend to be an extremely good person and to feign kindness for the sake of his goal, in a way which others would not be able to notice at all.

However, once he failed in his goals, a type of person like him would reveal his true, ferocious side! Far more terrifying and terrible than ordinary people!

"Die. You will die. Not just you, Linley. Also, your wife. And your brother, Bebe. All of you will die!!!" Salomon seemed to have gone insane, as he pointed at Linley, Delia, and Bebe.

Hearing that her big brother wanted to kill even Bebe, Nisse immediately grew frantic.

"Big brother, Bebe, he..." Nisse said frantically.

"Nisse!" Salomon shouted. "Haven't you seen the true faces of these three yet? Bebe didn't have any good intentions when he made friends with you!"

Nisse couldn't help but to turn and look towards Bebe.

Bebe's gaze was as ice, and he stared coldly at Salomon. "Salomon, I hate being slandered by others. Not only do you slander me, you want to kill my Boss and Delia. Then you..." Bebe glanced at the nearby Nisse. "Nisse, don't blame me for what I am going to do."

"Bebe, what are you going to do?" Linley could sense that Bebe was behaving differently.

Bebe's face was like ice. From within his hands appeared that black dagger, the dagger which Beirut had given him.

"This is..." Elquin's eyes lit up, and he glanced at Bebe in surprise.

Bebe then opened his lips wide, and a round black pearl floated out from within his lips. This pitch black pearl actually flew into the handle of the dagger, fitting itself into an opening there which it was perfectly fitted for. And then, the surface of the dagger began to be covered with a blue aura.

"Crackle..." Space trembled.

Even though the dagger hadn't moved, the blue aura was powerful enough to cause space to tremble.

"What is this?" Salomon, Nisse, and the other surviving Highgods including Sperry all were shocked. They could clearly sense the threat which this dagger posed to them. Not a single one of them dared to take on that dagger head on.

Linley and Delia were both puzzled as well. Even they hadn't known that Bebe had been hiding this trump card, but the terrifying aura which emanated out from the dagger after the pearl entered it could be sensed clearly. "Too terrifying. That aura...most likely not even a Highgod can take it."

Linley had believed all along that given how much Beirut cared about Bebe, he definitely would have given Bebe a trump card for preserving his life.

And now, it seemed as though this was it.

"Bebe, don't." Nisse said hurriedly.

Bebe just stared coldly at Salomon. In an icy voice, he said, "Salomon, die." The dagger in his hand suddenly flew out...

"Swish!"

A black light flashed, and a hole was easily torn in space, as though the space of the Infernal Realm was just a piece of paper. The power of this attack was simply astonishing and unheard of. Salomon's face changed as well, but the speed of that black light was simply too fast. He wasn't able to dodge!

Suddenly, an enormous scarlet blood-red hand appeared, and space began to twist into a vortex.

"Bang!"

The black light and the scarlet blood-red hand collided.

The black light immediately flew back into Bebe's hand. Bebe's face had turned somewhat pale, and he stared in astonishment at Elquin.

Elquin was sent moving backwards by dozens of meters as well, and he stared in astonishment at the dagger in Bebe's hands. He said to himself in shock, "As I thought. I didn't expect that Beirut would actually give a treasure as precious as this to him. This little fellow and Beirut definitely have an extraordinary relationship."

Elquin was secretly shocked.

Elquin knew exactly how terrifyingly powerful Beirut was. Immediately, his thoughts turned, and Elquin made up his mind. "Since this treasure is in this little fellow's hands, I cannot kill this little fellow. Otherwise...Beirut will definitely learn of it, and once he has me on his mind, I'll be in for trouble."

Linley and the others, including the Highgod Fiends and Salomon, were all greatly shocked. They all knew exactly how terrifyingly powerful Elquin was; the three Edward brothers weren't able to resist at all when they had fought. But that queer dagger of Bebe's had actually forced him backwards.

But how could they have known...

"Bebe, that technique of yours...?" Linley was greatly surprised.

Bebe sent through divine sense, "I'm not that powerful. The person who forced that fellow to retreat was the power of Grandpa Beirut, which had been contained within that spirit-pearl. It can be said that it was Grandpa Beirut who defeated him." Bebe, in truth, just followed the instructions in activating it.

Elquin glanced at Bebe, then turned to look at Salomon. "Salomon, in order to protect you, I lost a Highgod artifact which I have been using for a trillion years."

Only now did Linley and the others realize...

That the translucent glove which had been on Elquin's right hand had been torn apart!

"Beirut really lives up to his reputation." Elquin's heart shuddered. Although he was a reclusive expert, there was still a great gap when compared to the legendary and mighty figure, Beirut, who had suddenly appeared out of nowhere to prominence.

Elquin's heart was filled with anger, and he stared at Salomon.

A Highgod artifact which he had been nurturing for over a trillion years was incredibly precious to its user. After all, how could a purchased Highgod artifact compare to a Highgod artifact which you had been personally nurturing?

"I told you. That Delia and that Bebe all have to die!" Salomon growled.

"I cannot kill that Bebe. The others can die! Salomon, don't test my patience further." Elquin said calmly.

"Fine." Salomon nodded. "That little rascal can be spared." In his heart, Salomon still hated Linley the most.

"Phusro, handle it." Elquin said calmly.

"Meow." The golden kitten meowed gently.

It was extremely strange. The stone walls of the entire cavern suddenly came pressing down, and the space within the cave immediately shrank in size. The faces of Linley and the others changed dramatically. They saw the stone walls constantly press down towards them, and the other Highgod Fiends immediately began to bellow with rage and strike at the stone walls.

"Bang!" "Bang!"

Explosions could be heard nonstop, but their full strength blows could at most chop out a half-meter long hole which would immediately heal.

In but a few moments, the space of this cavern had shrunk to less than 30%. The mountain walls continued to press them towards that golden magma pool. In other words...every person within the cave no longer had enough space to stand. They had to hover in the air, hover above that golden magma pool.

Even Elquin and Salomon were hovering there.

"Delia. Hurry up and use your Deathgod Golem to block below you." Linley was worried that Delia would be dragged into the golden magma pool.

"Right." Delia nodded gently, and then glanced at Linley.

"Lord Elquin, Salomon, we didn't interfere. Release us." Sperry and the other five Highods said hurriedly.

Salomon, his heart currently filled with fury, glanced at them coldly. "Hmph. All of you can die."

"Phusro." Elquin said calmly.

"Meow..." The golden kitten purred, a hint of joy seemingly contained within his voice.

Instantly...

The previously calm and quiet golden magma pool beneath them suddenly transformed into a large number of giant liquid golden hands which snatched at the Fiends above. Dozens of enormous hands had erupted forth from this golden magma pool.

"Swoosh!"

All of the Fiends immediately tried to rely on their speed to dodge. The air above the golden magma pool was filled with countless figures as everyone frantically tried to dodge.

Only Elquin, Salomon, Nisse, and Bebe weren't being attacked by any of the giant liquid golden hands.

"Bebe, you and Delia, stay together." Linley shouted mentally. "Got it, Boss." Bebe immediately drew closer to Delia. Indeed, those giant liquid golden hands tried to avoid Bebe and moved away from him.

However, those giant liquid golden hands would still move in an arcing route to try and snatch Delia.

By being next to Bebe, though, Delia was in less danger now.

"If this continues, it won't end well." Linley had a terrible feeling, because he knew...that there were no corridors nearby. They could dodge for a time, but they couldn't dodge forever. Eventually, they would be caught.

"Aaaah!" Suddenly, a Highgod was seized by one of the giant liquid golden hands.

Upon one giant liquid golden hand grabbing the Highgod, immediately, the many other giant liquid golden hands surrounded him, then dragged him directly into the golden magma pool. This scene caused the faces of Linley and the others to change.

"Boss!" Bebe's frantic voice rang out in Linley's mind.

Linley turned to look. It was Delia who was now surrounded by the giant liquid golden hands. Although Delia had Bebe helping out, her own power was simply too weak. In the end, she was still caught by that giant liquid golden hand, and once she was caught, there was no way she could break free.

"Crackle!" Delia was dragged directly into the golden magma pool. Her feet first entered the pool, and Delia continued to stare upwards towards

Linley.

Linley seemed to have been gone dumb.

"Linley. Take care of yourself." Delia's divine sense echoed in Linley's mind.

"Delia!" Linley's eyes instantly turned scarlet red. He shot down like an arrow, ignoring all else as he charged towards Delia. Linley stared at Delia, and Delia stared at Linley! In this moment, only Delia's head remained above the surface of the magma pool.

The two were only ten meters apart from each other. Given Linley's speed, that distance could be traversed in but the blink of an eye.

But in that instant, one scene after another of the two being together flashed through Linley's mind, as fast as lightning.

In his youth, the two had been class together at the Institute.

Ten years of parting, then their reunion.

The Anarchic Lands, their marriage, their child.

Their arrival in the Infernal Realm. Delia had followed him here without reservations, and they had adventured through the Infernal Realm. Silently, noiselessly, Delia had become the other half of his life. Neither of them could be without the other.

In the instant she was dragged down into the magma pool, seeing how Linley ignored everything else and immediately charged down, Delia's tears began to fall.

"Boom!" Magma sprayed everywhere!

Linley burrowed into the magma, clutching Delia's already-submerging body. The earthen aura surrounding Linley immediately covered Delia as well, as a 'Pulseguard Armor' formed on Delia's body. Only, the corrosive power of that golden magma was simply too great. The Pulseguard Armor couldn't help but begin to tremble and melt.

Linley frantically used the divine power of his divine earth clone to maintain the Pulseguard Armor.

Within the magma pool.

The yellow earthen aura covered Linley and Delia, and a strange type of spiritual energy slowly circled around Linley and Delia's consciousness. That strange energy was actually able to locate the flaw in Linley's damaged soul-protecting Sovereign artifact and easily slip through.

Linley and Delia both begin to grow woozy.

"Linley. You are such a fool." Delia's eyes were filled with tears.

"We roamed the Infernal Realm together. Even if we die, we die together.”

Delia was on the verge of losing consciousness, but she still managed to smile. “Linley. I feel very satisfied with the life I have lived.” And then, she struggled hard to raise her head and kiss Linley on the lips, and Linley kissed Delia back. In the last moment before Linley lost all consciousness, one scene after another from his youth until now flashed through his mind like lightning.

His meeting with Grandpa Doehring.

Killing the king of the Kingdom of Fenlai.

His fame shaking the world in the O’Brien Empire.

The founding of the Baruch Empire.

The adventure in the Necropolis of the Gods.

The destruction of the Radiant Church.

And then their adventuring in the Infernal Realm, where his wife had accompanied him until death. When they had arrived in the Infernal Realm, Linley had been mentally prepared to die. After all, in the constant slaughterfield that was the Infernal Realm, anybody could die. Even if he died...he would die happy.

He was dying alongside his beloved!

"Me too. I am very satisfied with my life!"

And then...

His consciousness was gone.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 20, Talisman

“Drip, drip.” The golden magma pool continued to bubble and boil. Those giant liquid golden hands now tried to snatch the three remaining Highgods.

Only three lucky survivors were left!

“Salomon, that bastard. Even if we die, we need to make him die with us.” Sperry sent a message with divine sense to the other two. They could already feel that dodging was very difficult.

“Right. Make him die with us!”

The Fiends of the Infernal Realm were all mentally prepared for death. Only, they didn’t want to die, and even if they were to die, they wouldn’t let their enemies get off lightly!

“Swoosh!” “Swoosh!” “Swoosh!”

The three Highgod Fiends simultaneously charged towards Salomon, but before they even drew near him, that sallow, charred yellow hand once again came slapping towards them. “BANG!” One of the Highgod Fiend’s skull was smashed and exploded apart.

“Elquin!” The other two Highgod Fiends were shocked.

Clearly, this Elquin wouldn’t permit them to kill Salomon!

"Kill his little sister!" Sperry and the other Highgod Fiend, knowing that death was nigh, in their fury decided that they would kill whoever they could lay their hands on. The two Fiends just barely dodged those giant liquid golden hands, then charged straight towards Nisse, hovering there in mid-air.

At this moment, Bebe was hovering there in mid-air, unmoving. When he saw Linley and Delia be dragged into the magma pool, he was stunned. But then...

"Boss...isn't dead!" Bebe's eyes were filled with surprised joy. "I can still sense the Boss's soul!"

The two were connected spiritually. As long as Linley was alive, Bebe would naturally be able to sense him.

The golden magma pool was only so big. Given the speed of these Highgod Fiends, Nisse was only able to move slightly before the Highgod Fiends arrived in front of her. A blurry, indistinct blade shadow came chopping down, and Nisse's face instantly turned white.

"Clang!" A metallic sound could be heard.

Nisse felt that she was being tightly embraced, and she opened her eyes in shock. "Bebe!" It was Bebe who had embraced her and had taken this attack for her.

"Aaah!" Because of the counter-force from his chopping attack, that Highgod Fiend was caught by those giant liquid golden hands. Although he frantically struggled, in the end, he was still dragged down by those giant liquid golden hands into the golden magma pool, and not a hint of life was left after that.

"Crackle..."

The many giant liquid golden hands spread out like the petals of a floor, directly swallowing the final Highgod Fiend, Sperry, then pulling him into the golden magma pool.

"Bebe, are you alright?" Nisse said, worried. But as soon as she spoke out, she immediately came to her senses. She realized that Linley had very possibly revealed her big brother's secret, and that this Bebe had most likely intentionally made friends with her.

"I'm fine. That bastard actually even used a soul attack." Bebe's face was somewhat ashen, but then he was stunned as well. He noticed Nisse's expression.

Bebe let out a bitter laugh, then gently release Nissed.

As Nisse left his embrace, for some reason, she felt her heart ache!

Bebe rubbed his nose. "I was wrong to think my love was reciprocated." Nisse, hearing this, felt a miserable feeling in her heart, but this information about the secret being revealed was like a thorn in her heart. "But wait, if Bebe had truly lied to me, he wouldn't have risked his own life to save me just now."

"Take care of yourself, Ninny." The sound rang out next to her ears, and then...SPLASH!

Only now did Nisse realize that Bebe had already jumped into the magma pool. Nisse was instantly stunned! In her mind, she could still clearly see that rowdy, playful, but towards her always considerate straw hat wearing youth!

"Bebe...died?" Nisse felt as though her heart was being ripped apart.

"Nisse, what are you doing?!" Salomon shouted, while at the same time he flew to Nisse's side.

"Big brother, Bebe, he..." Nisse's eyes were beginning to be covered with a layer of mist.

Salomon shouted, "What are you thinking? That Bebe did it on purpose. His body is tough, so he knew he would be able to take that blow. He did that on purpose, because it wouldn't pose any threat to him! You need to remember, Linley is our enemy. It's a good thing that he died, because otherwise..."

Salomon's heart was still filled with hatred.

"But, but if Bebe didn't care about me, he didn't have to save me." Nisse argued.

"That's exactly what he wanted you to think." Salomon said coldly.
"Nisse, that Bebe is extremely crafty and sly."

With a rumbling sound, the four walls of the stone cave once more spread out, and the space of the cave expanded once more. Elquin, holding that little golden kitten, landed on the flat ground, and Salomon pulled his little sister to fly over as well.

At the bottom of the golden magma pool, there was a place where the magma had naturally split open, forming a true, empty space. Linley and Delia were currently embracing each other there.

"What...what's going on?" Linley and Delia both woke up.

Delia immediately used her divine power to repair her body while staring at Linley. Linley shook his head as well. "I don't know either."

And then, Linley and Delia both began to laugh.

"Linley. I thought I was dead." Delia said gently.

"Me too. I thought I was going to die." Linley felt a warm feeling in his heart. With a wife like this in his life, what more could he ask for?

After truly having walked on the fine line between life and death, this time, Linley had truly believed he was dead. But who would have imagined that he would survive? This sort of feeling truly was astonishing and shook his soul.

"Linley." In Linley's arms, Delia looked up towards Linley. "After this experience, my heart is calm. Linley, although the Infernal Realm has many dangers, as long as you are by my side, I won't be afraid no matter where I go."

Linley held Delia, his heart filled with joy and bliss. He didn't say a word.

"You two, husband and wife, are really enjoying yourselves." A deep voice rang out in the mind of Linley and Delia.

Linley and Delia were both shocked.

"You are...?" Linley spoke.

"Everyone else who entered this liquefied pool of Goldflame is dead, aside from you two. Even the Highgods are dead." The deep voice continued.

Linley and Delia instantly understood who this person was.

"You are the Volcano Titan?" Linley said.

"Right. You may address me as Phusro." The deep voice said.

"Phusro?" Linley thought back to how the black-robed Elquin had held that golden kitten in his arms. Elquin seemed to have addressed the kitten as 'Phusro'.

"You are a member of the Four Divine Beasts clan, but more importantly, the relationship between you and that Bebe is quite deep. Thus, Master ordered me to spare your lives when pulling you into the liquefied pool of Goldflame, so as to temporarily fool that Salomon."

"You can wait right here for now. I won't claim your little lives. I imagine that you know that I can kill you at any time. Don't go out."

And then, the voice disappeared.

Linley and Delia exchanged a glance, then laughed. Delia said, "Linley, before this, I saw that Elquin was afraid to do anything to Bebe. He wanted to spare Bebe. I was wondering...why didn't he spare us? So actually, that was this Elquin's plan all along."

Linley laughed as well.

Indeed, everyone else who had entered the golden magma pool had died, so as to give Salomon a false impression...that anyone who entered the golden magma pool would die.

Actually, the golden magma pool was under the control of 'Phusro'. If he didn't want someone to die of course that person wouldn't die.

"This Phusro's power truly is terrifying." Linley was secretly shocked. That spiritual energy had gone straight through the flaw in his soul defense. Linley had known all along that powerful Highgods were capable of this.

But now, he had actually encountered it.

"Plonk!"

Suddenly, a figured charged down at high speed through the pool, then straight towards him. Linley could clearly sense the ripples of that soul. "Bebe, what are you doing here?!" Bebe quickly charged down into this area of land.

"Boss, so you really are alright!" Bebe saw Linley and Delia, and was instantly overjoyed.

"You guys really are a pain!" Phusro's voice rang out once more in the minds of the three.

"Who is he?" Bebe's face changed.

Linley explained, "He's the Volcano Titan, Phusro."

"Phusro? Can it be that he's the kitten?" Bebe's eyes lit up.

"DON'T MENTION KITTENS!!!" Phusro's voice exploded in fury. "Enough. The three of you, obediently stay here and don't go out. The sound from outside will carry in here. Don't worry, though...your voices won't be able to transmit out."

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were at the bottom of the golden magma pool. Indeed, they could hear the voices from outside.

Elquin, holding the golden kitten, laughed calmly as he looked at Salomon. "Salomon, all of them are dead now. I've given you face. You should give me the treasures of your clan to me now, right? Is it on you, or is it somewhere else?"

Nisse appeared quite nervous.

Salomon laughed calmly. "Right. I admit that I am a member of the Boyd clan, but Mr. Elquin, I have to tell you something."

"Speak." Elquin frowned. He felt as though something was amiss.

"The amount of wealth I have on me, and in fact even including all the wealth I have in other places, amounts to less than ten billion inkstones!" Salomon laughed calmly.

Ten billion inkstones, to ordinary Highgods, was an enormous figure. But to Elquin, it was nothing at all. To the Boyd clan, it was comparable to a single hair on the body of nine bulls.

"You are playing me for a fool?" Elquin's face changed.

Salomon hurriedly said, "No, no, I'm not playing you. To tell you the truth, those two old servants of mine did in fact bring a vast fortune to me, but...I've already offered the fortune to someone else!"

"To who?" Elquin frowned. "You'd best not lie to me."

"To Lord Aiken [Ai'ken]!" Salomon replied.

Elquin's face changed. "Aiken?" Elquin couldn't help but feel angered, and he shouted angrily, "Salomon, Lord Aiken is indeed powerful, and I, Elquin, don't dare irritate him, but...do you think that just because you randomly report a name to me, that I will give up? Why don't you say Beirut? Why don't you go ahead and say that you gave it to the almighty Sovereign, the Redbud Ruler? Anybody can name names!"

With a flip of his hand, Salomon revealed a black talisman which was covered with complicated runes.

"You should recognize this talisman." Salomon said.

"Hrm?"

Elquin's face changed, and he was instantly speechless. He could recognize it. This was indeed Lord Aiken's talisman. Since Salomon had this talisman, then the relationship between himself and Aiken must be extraordinary, or perhaps...Aiken had ordered him to carry out something.

Aiken, without question, was one of if not the most powerful figure in the Redbud Continent. Some even suspected that he had reached the level of being a Paragon.

He had previously been an Asura, but then he had voluntarily stepped down and allowed another Seven Star Fiend to take over. Nobody believed that it was because Aiken wasn't strong enough. Everyone knew exactly how terrifying Aiken was! Although he was not an Asura, his power was far greater than that of most Asuras.

Aiken of the Redbud Continent. Beirut of the Bloodridge Continent. They were all dazzling, legendary figures.

"Drip, drip..." The golden magma in the cave continued to bubble and hiss. Other than that, it was silent.

"Inigo, what say you? What should we do?" Elquin turned to stare behind him. Suddenly, a tunnel appeared in the stone wall, and a person came out. It was Inigo.

Inigo stepped out. He had been listening all along.

"Although this Salomon has the talisman of Lord Aiken, but, that doesn't mean that he doesn't have the wealth of his clan on him." Inigo said.

"You are..." Salomon and Nisse stared at him.

"I saw you before at the castle of sand." Nisse called out in surprise.

Inigo was slightly startled. Right. When the castle of sand had collapsed, Inigo and the others had indeed been seen.

Inigo then smiled slightly. "Right. Salomon, I am the person who was pursuing and attacking you. What of it?"

"That time?" Salomon began to understand.

"Right. It was I who told Lord Elquin of your identity." Inigo let out a chuckle. "Hmph. When you were at the Jingan Prefecture, you were kicked out by your Boyd clan. Although that was a minor matter, at that time, I just so happened to notice."

Salomon was stunned.

"Pity that kid named Linley. He really was wrongly accused by you." Inigo began to laugh.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 21, Sovereign's Might

At the bottom of that pool of golden magma, Linley and the others could clearly hear the sounds coming from up above.

"Linley, they finally realize that you were accused wrongly." Delia was very happy at this moment, but Bebe said fumingly, "That Salomon really is an asshole. After finding out that his identity was revealed, he ignored everything else and insisted on believing that it was you, Boss, who revealed it. This sort of person is absolute not worth treating as a friend!"

Ever since Salomon had asked Elquin to kill Linley, in the hearts of Delia and Bebe, they very much detested this Salomon.

"Salomon. It isn't worth getting angry over him." Linley shook his head. "Only, it's a pity, Bebe. That Nisse was still a pretty good person."

"Ninny?"

Bebe was stunned. He thought back to how he had protected Nisse, but Nisse still seemed to somewhat distrust him.

Suddenly, the sound of sobbing came from up above.

"It's Ninny." Bebe raised his head, but all he could see from up above was the boiling golden magma.

The golden magma caused the temperature of the entire cave to be extremely high. Even the air in the cavern was twisted and distorted.

"Linley...was wrongfully accused?" Salomon stood there, silent for a moment.

But the grief which Nisse had been suppressing for quite some time now exploded out. She actually ran straight towards that golden magma pool. Salomon was terrified, and he hurriedly grabbed Nisse by her hand. "Nisse, what are you doing? Are you trying to die?"

This was liquefied Goldflame.

Perhaps powerful Highgods could withstand it, but generally speaking, Gods who entered it would die.

"It was my fault. It was all my fault. I should have trusted Bebe. I should have trusted him!" Nisse was sobbing. Her heart was filled with boundless regret. Before this, when Bebe had charged into the golden magma pool, Nisse had felt agony in her heart as well.

But in her heart, at that time, there was another voice as well; the voice that said that Bebe had intentionally made friends with her, that he had been deceiving her!

That was the only reason Nisse had been able to remain standing there. But upon Nisse learning that Linley had been wrongfully accused, it was as though countless thunderbolts had suddenly gone off in Nisse's mind.

She was wrong!!!

Linley had been wrongfully accused, and Bebe had been sincere towards her!

"He didn't lie to me. He's never lied to me. In order to save me, Bebe ignored his own well-being, but I doubted him. I didn't believe him." Nisse's face was streaked in tears. She wanted to draw closer to the golden magma pool, but how could Salomon just watch as his little sister threw her life away? He firmly grabbed her by the arm and said frantically, "Nisse, Bebe is already dead. He's already dead!!! Regret is useless."

"Dead?" Nisse was stunned...and then she collapsed, limp, next to the magma pool.

"Ninny, why are you so beautiful?"

"I'm beautiful so you'll fall in love with me!"

The teasing, flirtatious words the two had exchanged in past years seemed to echo in her ears. Nisse flipped her hand, and a straw hat appeared within it. It was Bebe who had given it to her.

"Ninny, I brought this straw hat with me from my homeland, the Yulan continent. You won't be able to buy another one like it in the Infernal Realm. Take good care of it. I think that in the future, when the two of us have children, I'll give our kid a straw hat as well. All three of us will wear straw hats, haha..."

The bygone words of Bebe lingered by her ears. Nisse looked at the straw hat in her hands, and her heart trembled.

In an instant, countless spears of regret gnawed away at her soul like locusts!

Suddenly, Nisse began to cry. Soundless cry.

Salomon, when he saw this, felt a strange feeling well up in his heart... regret! Seeing his little sister like this, Salomon felt regret as well. After all, his little sister was the only family he had. He could be calculating and vicious towards others, but he had always cared about his little sister.

"Nisse..." Salomon knelt down, stretching out with his arm to embrace Nisse by the shoulders, wanting to comfort her. "Don't be sad. Bebe's already dead. It's too late. It was your big brother's fault. I'm sorry."

"Dead?" Nisse looked at the bubbling golden magma. She suddenly remembered how Bebe had been struck by the blade of a Highgod and had been unharmed. It seemed as though Nisse had suddenly thought of something, as she immediately turned to look towards Elquin. "Mr. Elquin, Bebe's defensive power is so formidable, he definitely should be able to resist this liquefied Goldflame! He's at the bottom of the lake, alive, right? Tell me that Bebe isn't dead, Mr. Elquin!" Nisse's tear-stained face stared towards Elquin.

Nisse's heart was filled with regret.

She wanted Bebe to be alive, to appear in front of her.

But Elquin only shook his head. He calmly said, "Miss Nisse, I'll tell you right now that the person named Bebe is dead! Those Highgods, that Linley and his wife, all of them who fell in are dead!"

"Nisse, if Bebe were still alive, wouldn't he come out?" Salomon urged.

Nisse lowered her head to look at the straw hat in her hands, unable to refrain from feeling agony in her heart.

At the bottom of the golden magma pool.

"Ninny!" Bebe was crying as well. Hearing Nisse's sobs and words, he cried.

Bebe, ignoring all else, suddenly charged towards the outside.

"BANG!" A powerful force appeared above Bebe's head, and Bebe smashed against it, then was knocked backwards.

"Are you looking for death?!" The deep voice rang out in the mind of Linley and the other two once more. "I warned you that for now, you are not permitted to emerge from within this liquefied Goldflame pool. This is your final warning. If this happens again, all three of you will die!"

Bebe was completely stunned. He looked back towards Linley and Delia.

"Boss, sorry." Bebe said quietly. Bebe understood that right now, their lives were completely under the control of Phusro. Acting in such a way would be thrusting Linley and Delia into grave risk.

Linley patted Bebe on the shoulders, but didn't know what to say.

"Bebe." Delia consoled. "Don't worry too much. Afterwards, when you go out, you'll be able to meet with Nisse. You can endure for a while."

"Right." Bebe nodded slightly.

Linley, seeing how Bebe was acting, sighed to himself. "Nisse is a fine girl. But her big brother Salomon is...even if we went outside and met with him, the rift between us will still persist." After all, Salomon had actually shouted arrogantly for Linley to be killed.

"Right. They are discussing the fortune of the Boyd clan once more." Linley raised his head. More voices were once more coming down from up above.

The cavern was extremely hot, but the people in the cavern were talking animatedly there.

Inigo looked at Salomon. In a cold voice, he said, "Lord Elquin, this Salomon does have the talisman of Lord Aiken, but that only means...that Salomon and Lord Aiken have some sort of a relationship. It doesn't necessarily mean that he gave the fortune of his clan to Lord Aiken!"

Salomon's face was sinister. Inigo chuckled. "What's more, Lord Elquin, do you actually believe that Salomon would be able to bear with parting with such a fortune and give it to someone else?"

"No, I don't believe it!" Elquin laughed calmly as he looked towards Salomon.

Salomon grew tense anew. Was he really going to be forced to reveal his final card?

Salomon said in a resolute, clear voice. "I've already made it clear. I gave my clan's fortune to Lord Aiken, using this fortune in exchange for Lord Aiken's trust. Lord Aiken has instructed me to go to the Rainbow Prefecture to take care of a major undertaking. If you truly kill me, then once Lord Aiken finds out, then...hmp!"

Elquin let out a disdainful sneer.

Inigo snickered as well. "Salomon, Lord Aiken is powerful, but he isn't so powerful as to be able to see the future. If we were to kill you and destroy your corpse and all evidence, how would Lord Aiken know that it was we who killed you?"

Salomon laughed calmly. "Right, right. I understand. The chances of Lord Aiken finding out are very low, but if he really were to find out, then you two would be finished. I can tell you clearly that the amount of money I have on me is less than ten billion inkstones. Can it be that for the sake of ten billion inkstones, you would be willing to incur the anger of Lord Aiken?"

"Ten billion inkstones?" Inigo said with a snickering laugh. "Who would believe you?"

Elquin stared at Salomon, then suddenly said, "Salomon, give me your interspatial ring and let me inspect it. If it truly is as you say, then I'll let you leave. What do you say?"

"Fine! Let it be as you say!" Salomon said clearly, but who would have thought that just as he agreed, Elquin would continue. "Oh, and also your interspatial belt. Give it to me for an inspection as well. I almost overlooked it. I didn't expect that your belt is also a storage device!"

Interspatial storage devices could be made in the shape of rings; naturally, they could be made into other things as well.

However, because rings were convenient, interspatial rings were extremely common.

"Belt?" Salomon's face changed.

Elquin and Inigo, seeing the look on Salomon's face, began to laugh. Clearly...Salomon's interspatial belt most likely contained the fortune of the Boyd clan.

"To give Lord Aiken face, all I will do is inspect your interspatial ring and belt. If it truly is as you say it is...then I will let you out." Elquin smiled as he looked at Salomon. "I think...that my attitude is already very good."

Given Elquin's level of power, how could he not have noticed that Salomon's belt was special?

"What, are you afraid to take it out to show us?" Inigo snickered.

By Salomon's side, Nisse was beginning to worry for her big brother as well. Although in her heart, she still felt a bit of rage towards her big brother, no matter what, Salomon was still her big brother.

"Big brother..." Nisse said softly.

Salomon's gaze turned sharp. Looking at the cat-holding Elquin and Inigo, he said, "Mr. Elquin, I truly don't want to be enemies with you, but you continue to force me. Fine, then. I will show you the fortune of my Boyd clan!"

Elquin and Inigo's eyes lit up.

"Indeed, he is carrying it on him." Elquin said to himself, and Inigo chuckled softly. "Lord Elquin, I told you long ago that this Salomon wouldn't be able to bear giving his clan's fortune to Lord Aiken." Elquin smiled and nodded approvingly towards him.

At the same time, they both stared towards Salomon, seeing what he was going to take out.

But their features instantly froze. They stared in astonishment at an item held within Salomon's hands.

"Do you see it? This is the entirety of the fortune of our Boyd clan!" Salomon was holding a single black drop of water within his hand. He laughed coldly as he looked at Elquin and Inigo. "I imagine the two of you should both know what this is!"

"Sov...Sovereign's Might?!" Inigo stuttered.

Elquin's face had become exceedingly ugly as well.

Salomon stared at the drop of black water in his hand. His gaze became unfocused, and he said softly, "Right. This is Sovereign's Might! A liquid drop of the power of a Sovereign. I trust that when combining this drop of Sovereign's Might with my own profound mysteries of the Laws, I will have enough power to kill the both of you."

Elquin and Inigo's faces were very unpleasant.

"How do you have Sovereign's Might? Could it be...Aiken?" Elquin instantly understood.

Salomon said softly, "I didn't lie to you at all. I really did give my entire clan's fortune to Lord Aiken. In addition, Lord Aiken previously owed my Boyd clan a favor. I gave that astonishingly vast fortune to Lord Aiken, and asked Lord Aiken to help me refine a drop of Sovereign's Might! Thus... this is the entire fortune of my clan."

Sovereign's Might was divided into types as well.

Earth, fire, water, wind. Darkness, light, lightning, Life, Destruction, Death, Fate.

“Although every single inkstone and azurite contains within it an extremely, extremely miniscule and almost negligible amount of Sovereign’s Might, when countless inkstones and azurites are put together and refined, in the end, a single drop of Sovereign’s Might can be forged!” Salomon said softly.

Sovereign’s Might in gaseous form would naturally dissipate. Therefore, it had to be refined into liquid form.

A drop was the smallest stable amount.

However, a single drop of Sovereign’s Might required the consumption of an astronomically large sum of inkstones and azurites. More importantly...it was extremely hard to refine Sovereign’s Might!

“In the entire Infernal Realm, there are very few experts capable of refining Sovereign’s Might. Fortunately, Lord Aiken has this ability.” Salomon said as he looked towards Elquin and Inigo. He didn’t want to take out this Sovereign’s Might at all. This was his one and only backup.

Once he used it, he would be unable to advance his plans. How would he, a single Highgod by himself, be able to resurrect the Boyd clan?

But even if he didn’t use it and if these two let him leave, the news that he had Sovereign’s Might would definitely spread out.

Every possible outcome was a bad one for Salomon!

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 22, Water Drop, Sovereign's Might?

Now that he had taken out a drop of Sovereign's Might, he could either use it to either kill his opponents, or to cause the opponents to let him go out of fear. No matter what, he could leave safely! However, upon taking it out and revealing it, he had revealed his trump card, and it would no longer be a trump card.

Salomon felt rage whenever he thought of this!

Glancing sideways at Elquin and Inigo, he saw that clearly, the two of them were very desirous of this drop of Sovereign's Might, but they also didn't feel confident in being able to take it.

Salomon said softly, "The inkstones and azurites of the Infernal Realm are all created by the Sovereigns of Destruction. This drop of black water is in fact a drop of Destruction Sovereign's Might, and I just so happen to train in the Way of Destruction. Destruction Sovereign's Might, paired with the Way of Destruction...the power will be even greater."

Elquin's face was truly terrible to behold.

In the Infernal Realm, Seven Star Fiends could be considered supreme experts, with Asuras being the greatest figures who could roam the entire Infernal Realm. However, there were 108 Asuras, many Seven Star Fiends, and retired Asuras. Throughout the course of the countless years of history, there were many powerful experts in the Infernal Realm.

To be able to stand at the very peak of even these experts, generally one of the below criteria had to be true.

1. Like Aiken, be capable of refining Sovereign's Might! Who would dare do battle against someone who was capable of using a drop of Sovereign's Might?

2. Be a supreme expert who possessed a Sovereign artifact! With a Sovereign artifact in one's possession, naturally one would be far above the others.

3. Be a Highgod who had reached the level of being a Paragon, of completely fusing all of the profound mysteries in one of the Elemental Laws. Naturally, such a person would stand at the very peak amongst Highgods.

4. Of course, there were always some special cases.

Special cases being that the Seven Star Fiend's original form was that of a divine beast which had an extremely monstrous divine ability, such as the 'Godeater' ability. With such a monstrous divine ability, then of course one would be exceedingly powerful. There were also soul mutations, and some other special circumstances.

In short, whether it was 'Aiken' whose fame overawed the Redbud Continent, or 'Beirut' of the Bloodridge Continent, these experts all had something they relied on.

But Elquin, in turn, could only be considered a rather talented Seven Star Fiend. He didn't have Sovereign's Might, nor a Sovereign artifact, nor had he reached the level of Paragon...naturally, it would be very hard for him to face Salomon.

Using 'Sovereign's Might' to attack, compared to using 'Highgod divine power' to attack, was as different as the heavens and the earth. Even if the understanding of the profound mysteries of the Laws were exactly the same, the difference in base power was simply too great.

It was comparable to an infant who was an expert in swordplay fighting with a giant who had boundless strength. How could the infant win, even if the giant didn't understand swordplay?

Same logic.

Salomon, in terms of understanding the profound mysteries of the Laws, might only have 10% the level of attainment his opponent had, but the power of Sovereign's Might was simply too great when compared to that of a Highgod's.

"What, you want to try and acquire this drop of Sovereign's Might?" Salomon chuckled.

"Mr. Elquin?" Inigo turned to look at Elquin. Inigo's personal power was weaker than Salomon's to begin with. Once Salomon used the Sovereign's Might, killing Inigo would only take an instant.

Elquin hesitated slightly, then let out a low sigh. "Sovereign's Might... such a small drop of water which contains such exceedingly terrifying power." Elquin's words contained a hint of envy. He dreamed of himself possessing a drop of Sovereign's Might.

Although it was a one-use item, even if he didn't use it, he could use it to threaten others. At a critical moment, he might be able to use it to save his own life.

Linley stood there at the bottom of the golden magma pool as though thinking about something.

"What is the Boss thinking about?" Bebe and Delia both noticed that Linley seemed to be a bit strange. "There's no need for the Boss to act like this just because he heard the conversation up above about 'Sovereign's Might', right? Although I have to say, this Sovereign's Might truly does make one envious."

Delia said softly, "Envious. Didn't you hear what Salomon said? Refining Sovereign's Might is extremely difficult, and only an extremely few people in the entire Infernal Realm are capable of refining Sovereign's Might. In addition, the amount of inkstones and azurites which would be consumed is absolutely astonishing. The entire fortune of the Boyd clan was only enough to forge a single drop."

Linley's spiritual energy was completely focused on entering the Coiling Dragon ring.

Within the Coiling Dragon ring, there were two drops of blue water remaining!

“Water drops? Water drops? Sovereign’s Might?” Linley felt rather numb. No matter how stupid he might be, he would still immediately connect the dots. “I’m an utter idiot. A single drop of blue water that is able to make my body transform and become so powerful that I can take on a Highgod artifact attack head on...such a monstrous water drop...aside from Sovereign’s Might, what else could it be?”

It had raised his body’s power so much that the amount of energy it had consumed was surely enormous as well.

A single water drop that was able to provide so much power? Only the legendary ‘Sovereign’s Might’ was capable of such a thing.

“Argh, I’m too foolish. When I received the Coiling Dragon ring, this damaged soul-protecting Sovereign artifact...it is a Sovereign’s artifact! Clearly, in the past, the master of this Coiling Dragon ring was a Sovereign! Since the master was a Sovereign, this water drop is naturally Sovereign’s Might.

Everything made sense.

Aside from a Sovereign, who else would leave behind three drops of Sovereign’s Might in the Coiling Dragon ring upon death?

After all, if it was a Highgod, the Highgod would most likely have used up the Sovereign’s Might during the battle. Only to someone as mighty as a Sovereign would these drops of Sovereign’s Might not mean that much. After all, Sovereign’s possessed boundless amounts of divine Sovereign power. Leaving behind three drops of Sovereign’s Might before death was normal.

"I used a drop. I still have two remaining. If I were to sell them, what sort of price would they fetch?" Although Linley was curious about it, he wasn't so stupid as to actually go do it.

A single drop of Sovereign's Might was a priceless treasure!

The entire fortune of the Boyd clan, accumulated over countless years had to be expended, as well as the favor which Lord Aiken owed the Boyd clan, with the result being that Aiken had forged a single drop of Sovereign's Might. In truth, to an expert on Aiken's level, a debt was actually far more valuable than any treasure.

If that wasn't the case, no matter how much treasure had been offered to him, Aiken probably still wouldn't have refined the Sovereign's Might.

After all, if he made Sovereign's Might for someone, it was very possible that one day, that drop of Sovereign's Might could fall into the hands of an enemy.

"The black drop of water is Destruction Sovereign's Might. My blue water drop should be Water Sovereign's Might." Linley could actually sense that the blue drop of water contained the aura of water. In the past, Linley had been curious...what sort of thing was this, that was capable of making his body so incredibly powerful?

Linley had never dared to imagine that it might be Sovereign's Might.

But today, Linley understood.

"If I were to use this Sovereign's Might when executing the 'Bewildering Shadow' attack, how powerful would it be?" Linley wondered to himself.

The strength of an attack was usually dependant on three factors; the divine artifact, the energy level, and the profound mysteries. Actually, if any one of the three factors were freakishly strong, the attack would be very powerful.

For example, if the understanding of the profound mysteries was at the Paragon level, then one would be nearly invincible.

If the energy level was at the Sovereign's Might level, then naturally it would also be terrifying.

If the divine artifact was a Sovereign artifact, then one would also be able to dominate the Infernal Realm.

But of course, if one was strong in one aspect, one couldn't be too weak in the other two aspects either.

Linley's divine artifact was a Highgod artifact, 'Bloodviolet'. His energy source would be 'Sovereign's Might'. As for profound mysteries, he had fused two different ones. With the three combined, he might not yet be able to be much of a threat to a Paragon-level Highgod, but he should have some confidence in dealing with the likes of Elquin.

However...

It would be at the cost of expending a drop of Sovereign's Might.

"Unless the situation is absolutely critical, I cannot use it. When used at a critical moment, this is a treasure that can save lives and alter fate." After having encountered so many life-and-death struggles, Linley naturally understood the importance of this Sovereign's Might. Sovereign's Might couldn't be used wantonly; rather, it had to be used to preserve one's life at a critical moment.

Linley returned to normal, and as he did, he discovered that Bebe and Delia were staring at him.

"What are you looking at?" Linley laughed. Actually, Linley was currently in a fine mood.

Anyone in this dangerous Infernal Realm who suddenly acquired a monstrously powerful item such as this 'Sovereign's Might' would be in an excellent mood. This was a true trump card!

"Boss, you were standing there without moving and grinning. Did something good happen?" Bebe asked.

"I grinned?" Linley's laughter became all the more brilliant. When something happened to someone, of course one would be delighted.

"Hm? Elquin has given up?" Linley suddenly raised his head, and Bebe and Delia heard the words from up above as well.

From within the cave, although Elquin was rather unwilling, in the end he still nodded. "Salomon, don't worry. I, Elquin, am not so greedy as to try and seize your Sovereign's Might. I trust you can't bear to use it either."

Of course he couldn't! If he used it, it would be gone. This was something he had exchanged his entire clan's fortune for.

"If you force me, then I will have no choice." Salomon said.

"Phusro, open the tunnel of this volcano range. Let them out." Elquin immediately ordered.

The little golden kitten in his arms let out a gentle call. "Meow...." Immediately, a massive valley appeared in the middle of the entire volcano range, connected to this cavern. Salomon raised his head and looked up at the already darkening skies. Clearly, it was almost nightfall.

Salomon, in his heart, let out a sigh of relief. "Fortunately, Elquin didn't force me to use this Sovereign's Might."

"Nisse, let's go." Salomon turned his head to look at Nisse.

Nisse turned to look at that golden pool of magma. That golden pool of magma was still bubbling and boiling, emitting that astonishing heat. Nisse couldn't help but once more begin to cry.

"Stop looking." Salomon said softly.

"Bebe..." Nisse raised her head to look at the straw hat in her hands, then lowered her head. "Let's go, big brother!"

And then, Nisse and Salomon immediately flew out through the enormous valley, disappearing from sight in the blink of an eye into the desolate wilderness.

"All that work for nothing!" Elquin let out a low snort. He had a belly full of suppressed anger right now. He had thought that the fortune of the Boyd clan was about to fall into his hands. Unexpectedly, the so-called fortune was a drop of Sovereign's Might! This was indeed a treasure, but it was one that was hard to acquire.

He could only watch as Salomon left with it.

Inigo suddenly set up his Godrealm, preventing any sound from leaving them. Elquin couldn't help but glance suspiciously at him. Inigo said softly, "Lord Elquin, I know that the one called Bebe is currently within that pool of liquefied Goldflame. The weapon Bebe is wielding is a treasure. If we seize it, this trip won't be considered a loss."

Although Inigo hadn't been present at the time, Phusro had informed Inigo of everything which had happened through innuendo.

Elquin now understood. No wonder Inigo had blocked out sound; he was afraid that Linley's group would hear them.

"Bebe's weapon? That is indeed a treasure." Elquin let out a sigh. "That is a weapon which only Beirut is capable of forging...a weapon which is completely forged out of divine sparks. It is tough and sharp! Its power far surpasses any ordinary Highgod artifact. It's only slightly inferior to a Sovereign artifact."

A godspark weapon!

Beirut's trademark, which only he, Beirut, could forge. Divine sparks were indestructibly tough, and only Godeater Rats were capable of digesting them. Currently, Bebe was only capable of digesting them and was not yet able to refine them, but Beirut was. In the Infernal Realm, a single godspark weapon had an astronomical price!

"But for Lord Beirut to give Bebe a weapon like this means that their relationship is extraordinary. If I killed him, then that would be offending Beirut. You should know how terrifying Beirut is." Elquin was rather hesitant.

Inigo cursed inwardly.

How could he not know how terrifying Beirut was? Beirut, who had suddenly sprang to prominence out of nowhere, was someone which perhaps ordinary Deities might not be aware of, but those larger clans and those reclusive, hidden experts all knew about him. If one had to use a single word to describe Beirut, then that would be...

Brutal!

Many people believed that in the Bloodridge Continent, aside from the Bloodridge Ruler, the number one expert was Beirut.

“Milord, I know that Lord Beirut is terrifying, but even someone as mighty as a Sovereign can’t know the past or the future. As long as we kill this Bebe while destroying his corpse and all proof of his existence, how would Beirut find out that it was we who did the deed?” Inigo said hurriedly. “If you are afraid that his godspark weapon is too dangerous to keep and runs the risk of Beirut finding out, then you can just go and sell it off at the Blacksand Castle. By then, nobody would know who the killer was. This godspark weapon is worth an astronomical price!”

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 23, Execution

Faced with Inigo's enticing suggestions, Elquin began to frown in thought.

"Lord Elquin. What are you worried about? Beirut definitely wouldn't find out." Inigo said hurriedly.

The little golden kitten in Elquin's arms meowed as well. "Meow. Master. This Inigo's words have some logic. Even someone as mighty as a Sovereign can't possibly know the past or the future. If you kill Bebe, Beirut almost definitely will not find out."

Elquin let out a low snort. "Kill Bebe? Your words do make some sense!"

"Phusro. Have Linley's group of three come out first." Elquin instructed.

The little golden kitten's eyes lit up as it immediately let out a delicate little cry. "Meow." Immediately, the boiling, bubbling golden magma split apart into a tunnel, revealing at the bottom of the pool...Linley, Delia, and Bebe. Their eyes were filled with surprise.

"Boss, I wonder what they were discussing just now." Bebe sent mentally.

Linley was feeling concerned as well.

While they were at the bottom of the lake, they were able to listen to the conversation going on above them. Before this, they heard Elquin let Salomon and Nisse leave. Bebe was growing rather frantic at that time, but Bebe was unable to leave. He could only wait helplessly at the bottom of the pool.

But afterwards, there was no longer any sound at all from above.

Linley immediately was certain: "Inigo and Elquin are up above there. They definitely wouldn't just be standing there like fools, I wager. They blocked off the sound so we won't be able to eavesdrop on them. Perhaps they are discussing something that has to do with us."

"Discussing something that has to do with us. Can it be that they are discussing whether or not to kill us?" Delia said. Aside from this, Delia couldn't think of anything else.

Delia and Bebe both felt rather worried.

After all, their lives were in the hands of others right now. Although the opponent temporarily hadn't killed them, that didn't mean that they were truly going to be released. Compared to Delia and Bebe, Linley actually felt a hint of confidence. Confidence that came from those two drops of Sovereign's Might!"

"If we really are in life-threatening danger, even though I can't bear to waste it, I'll use one of the drops of Sovereign's Might." Linley said quietly to himself.

He had already made his preparations.

As the golden magma split open, Linley spoke out. "Let's go out." Immediately, Linley's group of three flew out from the pool of golden magma and landed on the flat floor of the cave. At this time, Linley's group discovered a massive valley that had appeared at the side of the cave, one which led to the outside world.

This valley was the one through which Salomon and Nisse had left through.

Linley's group didn't flee. If the opponents wanted to kill them, their speed would be far insufficient for fleeing.

"Mr. Elquin, thank you for showing mercy to the three of us." Linley bowed slightly and said courteously.

Elquin was slightly startled, and then he laughed inwardly. "This young fellow named Linley is rather sly. The first thing he did was to thank me. If I was someone who cared about face, it would be rather difficult for me to kill him after that. Wait...I didn't want to kill him anyhow." Elquin couldn't help but turn to glance at Inigo.

Kill Bebe. Steal the godspark weapon?

"Only if my brain was seized by a fever would I do such a thing!" Elquin chuckled in his heart.

Indeed. If he killed Bebe, Beirut might not know who the murderer was.

But...if Beirut was truly enraged and began to investigate and used all of his influence, in the end, it might not be impossible for him to discover who the killer was. At which point in time, he, Elquin, would definitely lose his life!

"A godspark weapon...even if I truly were to seize, I wouldn't dare use it myself. If I used it, wouldn't that be as good as admitting that I was the killer? Even if I sold it, I would at most be able to earn some money. A godspark weapon isn't as valuable as 'Sovereign's Might'. It would be a bad bargain for me to lose my life in exchange for making a little bit of money."

Elquin's calculations were quite clear.

When he wanted to kill Salomon, he wasn't afraid; after all, Salomon himself had to spend the entire fortune of the Boyd clan and also a favor in order to have Aiken help out. This meant that Aiken didn't actually care too much about Salomon. If Aiken had bequeathed Salomon a drop of Sovereign's Might without asking for anything in exchange, that would mean that Aiken valued him highly.

"Killing Salomon doesn't matter, but killing Bebe...although the chances are low, if I actually were to be discovered, I would definitely die." Elquin didn't wish to anger Beirut.

"Lord Elquin." Inigo warned, and the little golden kitten in Elquin's arms wagged its tail gently.

Linley was still very much on guard. Right now, he had already drawn the drop of Sovereign's Might into his body. "I hope you won't force me to waste this drop of Sovereign's Might," Linley murmured to himself.

Elquin might have some valuable treasures, but how could those treasures compare with Sovereign's Might? Even the entire fortune of the Boyd clan was most likely less than a drop of Sovereign's Might.

Elquin glanced coldly at Inigo, then turned to Linley's group and laughed. "Linley and Bebe, right?" Elquin's pale face had a rare smile atop it. "My apologies for getting you involved in this. The three of you can leave now."

Inigo was flabbergasted.

The little golden kitten in Elquin's arms raised its head to look up at its master as well.

"Lord Elquin?" Inigo said hurriedly.

"Hrm? Do you have an objection?" Elquin looked towards him. Inigo had to force out a smile and say, "No objection." In his heart, he was angrily cursing. "On this trip, I lost over a fortune of over ten billion inkstones and many subordinates, but I didn't get anything in exchange. These bastards. They all deserve to die. They all deserve to die!!!"

Inigo wanted to vent his anger upon Linley's group, but unfortunately, in front of Elquin, he didn't dare act.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were overjoyed.

"Then we truly must thank you, Mr. Elquin." Linley said hurriedly.

"No need to thank me. Be careful on your journey." Elquin's smile was very sincere, as he very much wanted to demonstrate his friendliness. This was the way some people simply were; if they didn't want to offend you, they would go out of their way to be friendly to you. But once they decided to kill you for your treasures, they wouldn't show any mercy.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe exchanged glances.

"Let's go." Linley laughed.

He didn't have to waste a drop of Sovereign's Might. Naturally, Linley was very happy.

Just as Linley, Delia, and Bebe were flying out, suddenly..."Swish!" A black shadow of a sword scraped past Linley. The ripples in the air created by this sword shadow alone caused Linley's draconic scales to emit a clear sound.

"What is this?" Linley was badly startled.

Linley's group immediately came to a halt and looked to the side. In front of them, a tunnel appeared, split open by this sword shadow. A callous looking man dressed in a long robe wielding a longsword flew out. It was the long-missing Six Star Fiend...Learmonth!

Learmonth immediately discovered Linley's group, while at the same time, as he lowered his head, he saw that below, Inigo and Elquin were standing there.

"The others?" Learmonth asked Linley.

"All dead." Linley immediately replied.

Learmonth shook his head slightly. However, seeing that Linley's group was still alive, Learmonth still felt a hint of pleasure. After all, on the journey over, Linley's hard work in training and his performance had caused Learmonth to feel appreciation for him.

"Swoosh!" Learmonth immediately flew downwards.

Linley's group had just flown up; the distance between them and the cavern below was merely ten meters or so. They were able to see everything within the cave clearly.

"Boss, let's take a look first." Bebe said. Linley and Delia were in no rush to leave either. After all, neither side was interested in killing them. Why not watch?

"It is you?" Learmonth frowned upon seeing Inigo.

Clearly, Learmonth remembered having previously seen Inigo before at the battle at the castle of sand.

Inigo, upon seeing Learmonth, couldn't help but have his face change. However, remembering that Elquin was by his side, he still squeezed out a smile. "Inigo pays his respects to Mr. Learmonth."

"Phusro!" Elquin let out an unhappy growl.

"Meow. Master. He's very powerful. He's able to easily breach the stone walls. I've already done what I could to guide him astray, but he still managed to make his way here." The little golden kitten said in a low, aggrieved voice.

Learmonth turned to look at Elquin. "I am Learmonth. Might I ask who you are?"

"Elquin." Elquin said calmly. He didn't hold Learmonth in any regard, although he had heard from Inigo of Learmonth's strength.

"Elquin?" Learmonth's eyes lit up. "You are the former Seven Star Fiend, 'Elquin'?" Learmonth knew the names of some of the ultimate experts of the Infernal Realm.

"Oh, you recognize me?" Elquin lifted an eyebrow.

Learmonth's eyes were shining, and his entire body emanated a battle-ready aura. In a clear voice, he said, "I, Learmonth, am a Six Star Fiend. That which I desire the most is the chance to challenge a Seven Star Fiend!"

Elquin couldn't help but frown. In the Infernal Realm, there was a group of people that dearly loved battle! They loved to challenge experts. Elquin very much disliked this type of person, because this type of person was very hard to deal with. However, this Learmonth in front of him was clearly this type of person.

"Today, I'm in a bad mood. I don't want to fight any longer. You can f*ck off." Elquin said.

"Meeting a Seven Star Fiend is a rare event. How could I give this chance up?" Learmonth laughed. "By your side, you have Inigo, who should be the mastermind behind the attack on us. Ever since I became a Six Star Fiend, I have never yet failed a mission."

As soon as he spoke...

"Swish!"

An astonishing gray sword aura suddenly appeared, scraping directly past Elquin's body. Inigo, shocked, immediately retreated at high speed, his own flexible sword appearing in his hand.

"Clang!" The sword energy and the flexible sword intersected.

Inigo's face instantly turned ashen, and then he slumped powerlessly to the floor, before completely collapsing.

He was already dead!

Inigo's eyes were filled with awe and a hint of unwillingness.

"Once again, that sword technique!"

Linley, secretly watching from above, felt his heart tremble. "In the past, Learmonth easily killed more than ten Highgods with this. Even this Inigo is unable to withstand this sword. It is too terrifying." Although Linley had seen this sword attack more than once, he still felt awed and shocked.

Within the tunnel.

"You destroyed both of his souls with a single sword attack?" Elquin was slightly startled.

Learmonth smiled as he wielded his longsword. "Elquin, I, Learmonth, a Six Star Fiend, today formally challenge you. Regardless of who lives or who dies!" Learmonth's dream was to challenge an Asura, but he knew that his current level of power was not yet at that stage.

Elquin let out a cold snort. "Your Edict of Destruction has indeed reached an impressive level. But do you think that just by relying on that, you can defeat me?"

Elquin was smoldering!

He had sacrificed so much, but he had to watch as Salomon left. Not just that. The worst part of it was...he, Elquin, in order to block Bebe's ultimate attack, had lost his Highgod artifact! A Highgod artifact which was suited to him had to be nurtured for many years.

A divine artifact such as that had been destroyed, and now, someone came to challenge him. How could Elquin not be furious?

"Can it be you, Elquin, have lost your spine?" Learmonth raised his head slightly.

"Hmph." Elquin, who had a belly full of fire already, finally lost his temper. With a flip of his hand, a long black whip appeared. An expert generally wouldn't have only a single offensive divine artifact. For example, Linley himself had Bloodviolet as well as his adamantite heavy sword. This Elquin naturally had other Highgod artifacts which he often used.

"Since you insist on dying, then I will send you to your death!" The rage smoldering within Elquin's breast was finally let loose.

"Haha..."

Seeing this, Learmonth began to laugh loudly with excitement. "Elquin, this place is too small. How about we go find another place to battle?" "Fine." Elquin sneered in response.

Immediately...

Learmonth and Elquin flew out into the shattered gorge, flying straight past Linley and the other two, immediately appearing in the horizon. One was a Six Star Fiend. The other, a Seven Star Fiend. Today, a true battle was about to occur.

From below, Linley and the other two watched intently, especially Linley, whose eyes were gleaming.

A battle between experts. How could he miss it?

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 24, Insight

In the dark night sky, the Violet Moon's hazy light was like a light layer of gauze covering the earth. In the air above the volcano range, Elquin and Learmonth were wielding their weapons, facing each other. Below them, Linley's group and the little golden kitten raised their heads to watch.

"Linley, who will win?" Delia said softly.

Linley's head was raised as he looked at the two in mid-air. "Hard to say. I keep on having this feeling that Elquin seems to be slightly stronger. However, no matter what, Learmonth's attack is truly astonishing." Linley wasn't blinking at all, for fear of missing any of it.

The little golden kitten, Phusro, just hovered there in mid-air, gently swaying its tail while raising its little head to watch.

"I, Learmonth, in countless years, have challenged a total of eighteen Six Star Fiends. In each battle, I was victorious! This will be my first time challenging a Seven Star Fiend." Learmonth hovered in mid-air and said in a clear voice. Normally, Learmonth was very emotionless and seemed to care about nothing.

But at this moment, Learmonth's eyes flashed like lightning, and he was filled with battle intent.

Elquin's battle intent had been aroused as well.

"Hmph. Those that you defeated were nothing more than Six Star Fiends. Today...I will let you know the difference between a Six Star Fiend and a Seven Star Fiend!" Elquin's long black robes fluttered, and the long black whip in his hand gently swayed like an agile viper.

Seven star missions were the hardest missions available in the Fiend Castle!

One star to two star, two star to three star, all the way up to the fifth star and sixth star, the increase in the difficulty of a mission wouldn't be too extravagant. However, leaping to seven star missions was extremely difficult. This is why despite so many years having passed in the Infernal Realm, the number of Seven Star Fiends was still incomparably low.

Learmonth, despite having defeated eighteen Six Star Fiends, wasn't certain in being able to defeat Elquin. But it was precisely because he wasn't certain that this was all the more challenging and arousing!

"Haha..." Learmonth began to laugh loudly.

"Crackle..." A terrifying gray sword energy emanated out from Learmonth's body. In the blink of an eye, an enormous illusory sword that was over a hundred meters high appeared, while Learmonth himself was at the nucleus of this enormous illusory sword. The fierce sword energy had already caused space to tremble.

"You truly have trained the Edicts of Destruction to an extremely high level."

Elquin let out a calm sigh in praise, but his face didn't have a hint of concern on it at all.

"Rumble..." The area within a hundred meters of Elquin instantly turned pitch-black, without a hint of light. At the same time, the entire area began to twist and distort. Even the light of the moon was completely sucked in within this area of a hundred meters of darkness around Elquin.

Only Elquin himself was visible.

"Hmph. Feel free to use whatever techniques you feel proud of. Otherwise, you won't have the chance to do so after you die." Elquin said calmly.

Learmonth let out a chuckle. "Then...first receive my thirteen swords!"

Instantly, he unleashed the sword...

The sword shadow flickered, and suddenly, an awe-inspiring thirteen black sword shadows appeared, striking out through the air like thirteen viperous dragons. Multiple scars in space appeared as the thirteen sword shadows slashed out in different arcs, but came striking down at Elquin at the same time.

The thirteen sword shadows were incredibly fierce, like giant man-eating beasts, trying to chop Elquin into mincemeat.

"Hmph." Elquin, faced with these thirteen extremely fierce sword shadows, only let out a calm snort while at the same time lightly waving the long black whip in his hands. This seeming thin long black whip began to dance, and it seemed as though it had transformed into an enormous black python.

In addition, this 'large black python' carried with it a fog that seemed like strips of black silk.

"Crackle...."

The black whip, transformed into the 'large black python', coiled about like an enormous buckler, and the 'large black python' which carried within it that black silken fog coiled firmly against the thirteen extremely fierce and aggressive sword shadows.

"Bang!" "Bang!" Many of the strips of black silk instantly collapsed upon touching the sword energy, but upon dissipating into black fog, they once more reformed.

There were simply too many strips of black silk, and as soon as they shattered they reformed.

In addition, that 'large black python' very firmly blocked the attacks of those thirteen sword shadows. Soon, the thirteen sword shadows dissipated.

Using soft to overcome hard. Despite being incredibly sharp, those thirteen sword shadows were still ground down.

"Is that the best you can do?" Elquin said calmly.

“Excellent!” Learmonth’s eyes lit up. “This technique of yours contains at least three different profound mysteries of the Laws of Darkness! Elquin, of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of Darkness, how many have you fused?” Learmonth was an expert as well. With but a single glance, he was able to tell how many profound mysteries were contained within the enemy’s defense.

Elquin chuckled. “Why should I tell you? That was just the opener. That small attack of yours isn’t qualified for me to use my ultimate technique!”

Linley, quietly watching the battle, was trying to analyze the profound mysteries contained within Elquin’s technique. “Hm? Learmonth said that this technique contained three profound mysteries. Aside from the ‘Essence of Darkness’ and ‘Evil’, these two profound mysteries, what else is there?” From the surface, Linley was only able to recognize these two profound mysteries.

Linley suddenly laughed. “Right. Learmonth’s attack contained a soul attack component. Since that was blocked, the third must be a spirit-type profound mystery.”

A simple technique contained three different types of profound mysteries. This showed that Elquin had at least fused three of them.

“I’ve only fused two. It seems that I still have a long way to go.” Linley said to himself.

“Huh?” Linley’s eyes suddenly lit up.

In mid-air, Learmonth began to bellow in excitement. "Haha...." While laughing loudly, Learmonth began to move at high speed, transforming into countless shadows which surrounded Elquin, each one of which was carrying a sword shadow.

"Competing in speed? How laughable." How could Elquin be afraid of this?

Elquin's body flickered, then instantly transformed into hundreds of illusory shadows as well. IT was the Shadowshape Doppelganger technique. Elquin was capable of shifting to any one of those hundreds of shadows, making him completely unpredictable. Elquin's loud laughter rang out. "Haha, there's no way you can touch me!"

"I'm not competing with you in speed!" Learmonth's voice rang out, while at the same time, those moving shadows completely dissipated. Learmonth himself flew back at high speed, but then...

Countless sword shadows split the air apart.

"Crackle..."

Just as Learmonth began to move at high speed, he had already unleashed hundreds of sword shadow attacks, each one slightly different, whether in time of attack or location. Learmonth executed them all perfectly, and as he launched his final sword shadow...

Instantly, the countless sword shadows in mid-air formed into a single shape...a blossoming lotus flower.

In this moment, as those countless sword shadows attacked, the 'blossoming lotus flower' came into full form, and at the center of it was Elquin.

"Hrm?" Elquin's face instantly changed.

This sword lotus had already completely sealed off the area around him, giving him no place to flee. His only choice was to take it head on.

"This Learmonth truly is powerful." Elquin said to himself. And then, with a flip of his right palm, Elquin's blackened yellow right palm instantly became as scarlet-red as blood while increasing to the size of a fan. Elquin let out a cold snort.

His right palm suddenly slammed upwards!

From above, many sword shadows were pressing down at him.

"BANG!"

The sword shadows were completely dispersed, but blood was flowing on Elquin's scarlet-red hand. He had been wounded!

"My glove was destroyed. Otherwise, how could I have been injured?" Elquin was filled with anger.

In this attempt to seize the treasure of the Boyd clan, Elquin had incurred a major loss. And now, he had been challenged by Learmonth, and even wounded. One detriment after another...Elquin was truly enraged now, and he no longer used one technique to counter another.

He actively attacked!

The sword shadows from above crumbled away, and Elquin himself charged straight through that hole, like a giant eagle in flight, charging straight towards the distant Learmonth while shouting explosively through divine sense, "Learmonth, you receive one of my attacks as well!"

The long black whip in Elquin's hands twisted about, instantly turning scarlet red and transforming into an enormous blood-red serpent as it coiled towards Learmonth. This enormous serpent even opened its mouth wide, revealing its black fangs.

The enormous red serpent's sudden attack caused space itself to tremble.

"Rumble..."

"Excellent!"

Learmonth's eyes were flashing like lightning, and the longsword in his hand suddenly stabbed outwards. This sword attack appeared ordinary, but in the moment when it stabbed outwards, a black 'hole' in space suddenly appeared. The longsword seemed to twist as it stabbed through that black hole, and wherever the longsword passed by, space itself split open.

“Starpoint...EXPLOSIONS!”

Learmonth’s most powerful attack. The ultimate attack he had used to kill that green-robed elder at the castle of sand.

Elquin, seeing the power of this attack, couldn’t help but feel surprised. And then, Elquin gritted his teeth, his face savage. At the same time, the long whip in his hand which had transformed into a blood red serpent shuddered, then transformed into a nine-headed serpent, each one of which had its fanged maw open.

Learmonth’s seemingly unblockable sword pierced straight over...

“Crunch!” It pierced straight through the throats of one of the serpentine heads.

“Clang!”

The sword pierced through to the long whip contained within the nine blood red serpentine heads. Instantly, the entire blood red nine-headed serpent trembled, then with a ‘BOOM’ exploded, transforming back into that long black whip. At the same time, the serpent heads that had been block off by that explosion continued to charge towards Learmonth.

One blood red serpent’s head after another charged towards him at high speed, savagely biting towards Learmonth.

A sword shadow flashed!

Eight explosion sounds occurred simultaneously, while Learmonth himself was sent flying backwards by the force of the explosions, landing onto the ground of the volcano range below. Immediately, Learmonth rose to his feet. Right now, Learmonth's face was ashen, and there was a hint of blood at the corner of his lips.

"Formidable, formidable. You've fused four types of profound mysteries." Learmonth's body had bloodstains on it as well, and he carefully glanced at Elquin. "Since you were able to withstand this attack of mine, I admit defeat."

Elquin's face was paler than it had been in the past as well, but he hadn't been as heavily injured as Learmonth had.

The onlookers, being Linley's group and the little golden kitten, were all rather surprised.

"Learmonth lost?" Bebe murmured. "He isn't dead yet, but he admitted defeat?"

Linley continued to carefully watch the two combatants.

Elquin looked at Learmonth in surprise. "You...you actually managed to fuse Destruction divine power and fire divine power together? You...you have a mutated soul?" When receiving this attack just now, Elquin just barely managed to detect the true energy source contained within this ‘Starpoint Explosions’ technique.

It wasn’t Destruction divine power. It was a fusion of Destruction divine power and fire divine power.

“Right. Unfortunately, despite that being the case, I still am not your match.” Learmonth shook his head.

“A mutated soul. How truly rare.” Elquin sighed in amazement. “Generally speaking, only such a person is capable of fusing different types of divine power. Previously, I’ve only heard that when fusing different types of divine power, one’s strength would increase explosively. Today, I see that is indeed the case.”

Elquin glanced at Learmonth. “To be honest, your power should already be at the Seven Star Fiend level. However, you are still somewhat weaker than me. Then...die!” As he spoke, Elquin’s body suddenly transformed into an illusion, transforming into hundreds of illusory shadows which all attacked towards the heavily wounded Learmonth.

Laws of Darkness – Shadowshape Doppelganger technique!

Linley, watching this, was stunned. “Fusing divine power? Indeed. Right, Olivier had previously been able to simultaneously utilize darkness divine power and light divine power. Only, Olivier’s degree of fusion was not as great as Learmonth’s.”

Learmonth’s attack was hard to judge just from looking at it. When the person who received the attack, Elquin, had only just barely been able to detect it.

Thus, one could tell how deeply Learmonth had fused those two surges of divine power.

“When two different types of divine power are fused, the power of the attack is actually increased so much? How does one fuse divine power? From what Elquin said, it seems as though one’s soul has to mutate in order for divine power to be fused. Otherwise, it is impossible.” Linley’s thoughts suddenly came to a halt.

He looked towards the air. “Is Learmonth going to die, just like that?”

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 25, A Trillion Years of Depression

Faced with Elquin's attack, Learmonth naturally chose to flee for his life!

"Haha, you want to flee?" Hundreds of shadowy illusions filled the area, and Elquin's loud laughter seemed to come from the mouths of every shadow. Suddenly, an enormous serpentine whip shadow slashed down towards Learmonth, who with a ferocious look stabbed out once more.

The same technique!

Starpoint – Explosions!

The blood red whip shadow tore through the air towards the longsword anew.

"BOOM!"

Elquin's right hand trembled, and his body couldn't help but be pushed backwards, while Learmonth himself was knocked flying before once more forcing himself to come to a halt in mid-air. His face was ashen, and he growled, "Elquin, don't go too far!" Learmonth had realized that in terms of speed, he was inferior to Elquin. There was no way he could flee.

Elquin's face was sinister, and he snickered. "I didn't expect that you had enough spiritual energy to execute that attack a second time. However, your technique is only enough to wound me. In terms of the profound mysteries of the Laws, you are far too weak compared to me. I want to see how many times you can execute it."

Clearly, Elquin didn't want to spare him.

Elquin had a belly full of rage right now and he wanted to find a place to vent it. How could he let Learmonth leave?

Especially since, as Elquin saw it, Learmonth's future potential was unlimited. Elquin naturally would be delighted to kill such a genius as him.

"You want me to die?"

Learmonth took a deep breath, standing there in mid-air with his longsword raised. He said emotionlessly, "If you want to kill me, I will make you pay a price!"

"Pay a price?" Elquin chuckled. He didn't even know how many times he had heard these words before. Many people, before he killed them, had promised to make him pay a price, but unfortunately, they still died while he, Elquin, was living quite happily.

Learmonth seemed extremely calm. His entire aura had been drawn back into his body, and he stared coldly towards Elquin.

Suddenly...

Learmonth's eyes suddenly lit up, and then he shut them.

"Huh?" Elquin couldn't help but feel stunned.

Not just him. Even the spectators below, Linley and the rest, felt stunned. At the critical moment in the battle, Learmonth actually shut his eyes?

"You want to try and scare me, just before dying?" Elquin laughed coldly in his heart. The long black whip in his hand once more spun out. Although in his heart, he felt disdainful, Elquin still used his most powerful attack. The long black whip instantly turned scarlet red and simultaneously transformed into a nine-headed serpent!

Instantly, a dark red sword flash appeared in front of Elquin.

Elquin's face changed dramatically. Unable to dodge at all, all he could do was use his blood red, fan-sized right hand to slap towards it.

"Crunch!"

The dark red sword light instantly pierced through his palm and entered his body.

"Urgh...ahhhhh!" Elquin's entire body quivered, and his entire body emanated a red light.

"Boom!" Elquin's entire body exploded, and two Highgod sparks as well as an interspatial ring fell down from mid-air.

Linley and the other two, watching this battle, were all stunned, along with the little golden kitten. Clearly, just now, Elquin had the advantage, and Learmonth was actually trying to flee. But who would have imagined that Learmonth would suddenly snatch victory from the jaws of defeat?

“What? Learmonth won?”

Linley was quite shocked. “And that dark red sword flash. Not only did it contain Destruction divine power, it also contained fire divine power. It was very obvious.” Linley was completely puzzled. Previously, when Learmonth had attacked, Linley had only sensed the aura of Destruction, and hadn’t sensed the fire divine power at all.

The fire divine power was very weak.

However, why did it suddenly change just now?

“Haha...” Learmonth began laughing loudly in mid-air. “I finally completed this technique. Haha. I finally fused the Way of Destruction and the Elemental Laws of Fire. Indeed, only when both divine power fuses as well as the profound mysteries of the Laws fuse, will the power greatly increase. I’ve finally developed it!” Learmonth was extremely excited.

Hearing Learmonth’s excited voice in mid-air, Linley understood.

“Did he just say that he fused the profound mysteries of two different types of Laws together?” Linley was tremendously shocked.

Given his current level of training, Linley only knew that for example the six types of profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth could be fused. He had never, however, heard of different profound mysteries of different Elemental Laws as capable of being fused.

But hearing from what Learmonth was saying, it seemed as though the different Elemental Laws, such as the Laws of the Earth and the Elemental Laws of the Wind, were capable of having two of their profound mysteries fused as well.

“This, this, how is this possible?” Linley didn’t understand.

It wasn’t just Linley who was astonished. The other listeners, being Bebe, Delia, and the little golden kitten were all shocked as well.

Learmonth lowered his head to glance at Linley’s group, understanding their puzzlement. Laughing, he said, “Don’t overthink it. The different profound mysteries of different types of Elemental Laws can only be fused by people like me, with a mutated soul. There is no way for you to fuse your divine power, and no way to develop an attack like this.”

Linley began to understand.

Divine power and profound mysteries were paired together.

For example, when using earth divine power to use the profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth, the power would be great. If one was to use wind divine power instead, although one could still use it, the power would be much lower.

But fusing divine power, such as Learmonth...

Destruction divine power and fire divine power, upon being fused...if one was capable of also using a fusion of the profound mysteries of the Edicts of Destruction and the Elemental Laws of Fire...would have an absolutely terrifying amount of power once utilized.

The fusion of divine power already resulted in an extreme increase in power. Once the profound mysteries were fused as well, then matched with the fused divine power...no wonder Learmonth had been able to kill Elquin!

"Whew." Learmonth's face was very pale, but his eyes were still filled with jubilation.

Actually, after the repeated battles just now, his spiritual energy had been all but used up. As his power had increased dramatically, however, and as he had entered the realm of a Seven Star Fiend in power, Learmonth was indescribably delighted. "When I go back, I'll immediately take on a seven star mission. When the time comes, I'll challenge an Asura!"

"Just now, Elquin wanted to kill me. But now..."

Learmonth shook his head and sighed. Some things were very hard to predict. Actually, if Elquin hadn't pushed him to the brink of death and cause him to gain an insight that he previously had not been able to understand, how could he have made this breakthrough?

"This Elquin's interspatial ring should have many treasures within it." Learmonth flew straight down. Although he wasn't greedy, this was something which belonged to the person he had killed; it was wealth which he deserved to have. Naturally, Learmonth wouldn't reject it.

Right at this moment...

Very bizarrely, the entire volcano range suddenly vanished, and the interspatial ring of Elquin which had been atop the rocks of the volcano range vanished as well.

"You even want Elquin's items?" A low, gravelly voice said.

The volcano range had vanished, but another person had appeared!

"Who are you?" Learmonth turned to look at the newcomer. He couldn't help but be startled. This person was three meters tall, and was covered with a fiery red armor. His long scarlet hair fluttered unrestrained, and his craggy form was very clear. He was obviously a very muscular person.

The fiery haired man stared at Learmonth, then said clearly, "Actually, I need to thank you!"

"Thank me?" Learmonth could sense that this person was extremely powerful.

The fiery haired man laughed. "Right. Thank you for killing my master!"

At this moment, Linley and the other two, floating in mid-air, were shocked. "Killed his master? Could it be that he is...?" Linley turned to look, and indeed, the little golden kitten was missing. "He is Phusro! He is that little golden kitten!"

"He is Phusro?" Bebe stared wide-eyed.

"He is Phusro? That little kitten? How?" Delia couldn't believe it either. Who would made the connection between that adorable little kitten and this muscular giant?

Linley felt astonished as well, that the adorable little kitten had actually transformed into such a bulky giant whose voice was so thunderous.

"To thank you for killing my master, you can die as well." Phusro laughed loudly.

Learmonth's face immediately changed, and with a flip of his hand, a Golden Soul-Pearl suddenly appeared in Learmonth's hand, which he immediately swallowed. This Golden Soul-Pearl emitted a large amount of soul essence, capable of both nourishing and strengthening the soul, as well as recovering spiritual energy.

Phusro was in no hurry to attack.

"Are you done?" Phusro laughed calmly.

Learmonth was extremely shocked. Could it be that Phusro was going to let him recover? His current level of power was definitely comparable to a Seven Star Fiend's.

"I'm done." Learmonth replied.

"Then you can die now." In Phusro's hands, an axe suddenly appeared with a volcanic image atop it. Phusro suddenly chopped down with the axe, and with a 'RUMBLE', repeated layers of explosions could be heard.

Wherever the axe passed, space itself blew apart. The spatial walls of the Infernal Realm seemed to be as thin as paper.

Absolutely irresistible force!

Learmonth was so terrified that his face changed, and he immediately executed his most powerful sword attack...

The dark red sword flash also caused space to explode, flashing through the shattered space as fast as lightning, charging towards the heavy, oncoming axe as though it were a meteor shooting through the sky.

"BANG!"

The axe trembled slightly, and its power decreased dramatically, but at the same time, an enormous illusion of an axe flew out like an attacking ripple, shooting towards Learmonth.

“Swoosh!” Learmonth, after using his most powerful sword attack, immediately dodged backwards and fled at high speed, moving as though he had become a dark red illusion. Even though he was struck by two surges of the illusory axe ripples struck him, Learmonth still frantically fled, and in the blink of an eye, Learmonth completely disappeared.

Phusro held his giant axe, pursing his lips helplessly. “He ran really fast. When his divine power fused, even his speed increased many times, while I just so happen to be a bit slow, unlike Elquin, that bastard, who specialized in speed. Otherwise, I definitely would have killed him...”

Watching this, Linley’s group was stunned.

“Delia, Bebe, this Phusro has some issues. Let’s hurry up and leave.” Linley, recovering to his senses, hurriedly led Delia and Bebe to flee.

“Huh? You want to flee?”

Phusro suddenly chased after Linley’s group. In terms of speed, Phusro was inferior to Learmonth, but Linley’s team was composed of Gods. How could they escape?

“Swoosh!” Phusro appeared in front of Linley’s team.

Seeing Phusro in front of them, Linley’s team had to come to a halt.

Linley felt nervous. "This Phusro is too unpredictable. He's extremely powerful, but before this he's never intervened, nor did he help his master. His master was willing to let us go free, but who knows if he is." Linley was very nervous.

"Why are you fleeing?" Phusro seemed rather disgruntled.

Linley's group could only stand there in mid-air. Bebe murmured, "Who knows what's going on with you. You were actually so powerful!"

"Powerful?" Phusro began to bellow angrily. "What the f*ck good does being powerful do? Can I be more powerful than a master-servant bond?"

Linley's group was stunned. Master-servant bond?

What did strength and power have to do with a master-servant bond?

Phusro bellowed, "When I was just a Saint, I was forcibly tamed by this Elquin and had a master-servant bond set up! I don't even know how many countless years have gone past now. He's grown all the way from being a Demigod to a Seven Star Fiend!"

"But I am more powerful than him. Of the six profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of Fire, I've already fused five of them. I am a Volcano Titan and extremely talented in the fire element. Killing him would be utter simplicity, and even becoming an Asura isn't a problem!"

Phusro roared angrily, "But what good is being powerful? He was my master! I couldn't resist him. The binding power of the master-servant bond is too terrifying!"

"But..." Bebe wanted to interject.

"Shut your mouth! Listen to me!" Phusro bellowed indignantly.

Linley's group was terrified. Phusro was an utter madman. All they could do was listen.

Phusro continued, "This Elquin likes kittens. F*ck his grandmother, I'm a goddamn Volcano Titan, a valiant Volcano Titan. He actually had me transform into a kitten? And had me transform into an adorable little golden kitten? And every day, be in his arms and be petted by him?"

The muscles on Phusro's face were twitching. "Aaaaaaargh! The days passed like years, and every day, he would pet me with those filthy hands of his. Pet me gently. AAAAAAAAARGH! I almost went insane! But he was my master. All I could do was endure it! Motherf*cker, I had to endure it all!" This bellow caused the entire world to echo with his voice.

Linley's group was caught between terror and shock, but they also felt that this Phusro was rather pitiable.

Indeed, he was quite pitiable.

A powerful, valiant Volcano Titan, forced to become a little kitten and allow others to pet him for trillions of years.

"Do you know what that felt like?" Phusro stared with wide eyes towards Linley's group.

Linley's group could only maintain their silence.

"But I managed to endure it. I hid my power, and on the surface only revealed a tenth of my true ability." Phusro said coldly. "I always hoped for someone to be able to kill him! But he truly was a coward, while he was also a Seven Star Fiend. There were very few people capable of killing him, so I never had the chance. But this time, my chance came!"

"Originally, I wanted him to kill you, Bebe."

Phusro pointed at Bebe. "When the time came, I would leak this information and have Beirut come avenge you and kill him. By then, I would be freed."

"Beirut? You know my Grandpa Beirut?" Bebe was very startled. As Bebe saw it, his Grandpa Beirut was only someone who stayed on the Yulan Plane.

"I don't know him, but I've heard of him. Motherf*cker, I told you to shut your mouth. Why are you talking?" Phusro began to bellow at him again.

Bebe immediately shut his mouth.

"This madman." Bebe muttered to himself. "I, Bebe, won't bicker with a madman."

Phusro continued, "But Elquin, that coward, actually didn't dare to kill you. He actually was going to release you, so I had to intentionally guide that Learmonth here to come deal with him." Suddenly, Phusro began to laugh excitedly. "Haha, I originally didn't expect Learmonth to be able to kill him, but who would have expected that Learmonth actually did in fact kill him? Haha..."

Phusro suddenly grabbed Bebe. "Do you know? I really didn't expect it, really didn't expect Learmonth would kill him." This grab of Phusro's was very powerful. Fortunately, it was Bebe, as if it were Delia, most likely her body would have been torn apart.

"Uh, I know." Bebe nodded hurriedly.

He was rather frightened of this seemingly insane Phusro.

Phusro suddenly raised his head. "AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAH!" A wild bellow rang out. It included no profound mysteries; it was a pure, simple roar, a roar which shook the heavens. A roar which included a trillion years of grief, depression, and rage!

A trillion years of depression!

This sort of torment had almost tortured him to death, and yet every day, Phusro had to pretend to be so adorable, and keep going 'meow', 'meow'!

"I!"

"HATE!"

"KITTEEEEEEEEEEEENS!"

Phusro's face was savage, and he bellowed towards the heavens. "I WILL NEVER BE A KITTEN AGAIN! NEVER AGAIN!!!" Only after screaming for a long time did he calm down. Phusro's facial expressions slowly returned to normal, and he took a deep breath, then let out a deep breath.

Turning his head, he looked back at Linley, Delia, and Bebe.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were still utterly dumbfounded. None of them knew what this madman would do next.

"Whew. I feel much better now." Phusro beamed at Linley's group.

Linley's group couldn't help but gawk. However, Linley could understand how terrifying the trillion years of depression had been.

"The restrictive power of a bond is indeed completely irresistible." Linley said to himself. "Even for someone as powerful as Phusro, whose power had vastly exceeded Elquin's, but who still had to transform himself into a little kitten." When Linley imagined the life Phusro had lived, he could feel Phusro's pain.

It hurt just thinking about it. He could fully understand what level of depression, rage, and grief Phusro had reached, after trillions of years.

"I couldn't even give voice to the rage, grief, and depression in my heart. Can you imagine what that feels like?" Phusro was now completely calm and amiable. "Now, I'm finally free. I've also said everything I want to say. I feel much better now."

Linley's group nodded.

"Haha..." Phusro laughed brilliantly. "I'm finally free. I'm finally free!"

Phusro turned to glance at Linley's group. "Thanks for listening to me say so much. Actually, I'm usually very taciturn. Alright. We've killed so many Gods and Highgods this time. I imagine that these ordinary Highgods don't have much wealth on them. I'll give it all to you. Consider this your reward for listening to me complain!"

With a wave of his hand, Phusro immediately brought out over a hundred interspatial rings.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were stunned.

But then, with a wave of his hand, Linley collected this interspatial rings. "Mr. Phusro, this..."

"Haha, in a trillion years, you are the first person to call me Mr. Phusro." Phusro was exceedingly delighted. "Just based on this alone, you can take these toys with a clear conscience. Don't think too much of it; these interspatial rings don't have much wealth inside them. The most valuable two belonged to that Inigo and Elquin, which I will keep.”

“Alright. Take good care of yourselves. I, Phusro, am now free. I don’t want to stay in any one location. I will...roam the Infernal Realm!” His voice still echoed in the air, but Phusro himself had already vanished.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe just looked at each other.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 26, Head Out, Stay Behind?

Phusro's voice still echoed in their ears, but he himself was gone.

"This Phusro...really is weird." Bebe blinked his eyes twice, still feeling rather dazed.

Linley lowered his head to look at the hundred-plus interspatial rings hovering in his palm. Amongst them were mostly the interspatial rings of Gods, but also many of Highgods. "So many interspatial rings, with even Highgod interspatial rings amongst them. This is really a treasure that just fell down out of nowhere."

Linley felt joyful.

"That Phusro actually gave me so many interspatial rings." Delia sighed in amazement as well.

"So like I said, that guy's head isn't working. However, it's broken in a good way." Bebe chortled.

Linley shook his head. "Bebe, you can't say that. Phusro's experiences and ours are different. A trillion years of depression, of silent endurance. Only an extraordinary person would be able to endure so much. After finally being released one day, he was just venting."

Delia nodded slightly as well.

Whether it was his attack on Learmonth or his chat with Linley's group, it was all a form of venting.

"Oh." Bebe nodded in understanding, his eyes shining. "After venting, he casually tossed these little baubles to us. Phusro really is stingy though. Why didn't he give us Elquin's interspatial ring? That old fellow's wealth is definitely astonishing."

Linley and Delia were momentarily speechless.

"Just kidding." Bebe chortled, and then looked at the hundred-plus interspatial rings in Linley's hand. "Boss, so many interspatial rings. How many treasures do you think are you inside? I'll take a look first." Bebe clearedly seemed quite eager. "I love investigating the treasures within interspatial rings."

"Why the rush?" Flipping his hand, Linley stored away all of the interspatial rings.

"Right now, we need to first decide what we are going to do next. We can look at interspatial rings later." Linley glanced at his surroundings. The volcano range had disappeared, causing this area to once more return to its flat surface. The hazy, dim light of the Violet Moon shone down from the night sky.

The gauze-like violet moonlight shone down, filling the world with an ancient, vast aura.

Delia frowned slightly. "Linley, the Infernal Realm is filled with countless dangers. It will be very hard for the three of us to rely on our own ability to reach the Rainbow Prefecture's Bluemaple City."

Linley agreed as well. The three of them were all Gods. Although a Fiend's star rank could not be distinguished, others would still be able to distinguish someone's general level of strength. They would know Linley's group was at the God level and not the Highgod level! Highgod Fiends, bandits wouldn't dare to irritate.

But God-level Fiends, bandits wouldn't fear either.

"To take on a mission, we would have to go to a city. The distance between each city in the Infernal Realm is vast! There's no way for us to take on a mission right now." Bebe said resignedly as well.

Linley glanced at his surroundings, thinking back to some of the geographical information he had read before regarding the Infernal Realm. Moments later, he decided, "We are indeed in a bit of trouble. The closest city to us is at least eighty million kilometers away. Eighty million kilometers...who knows how many dangers we would encounter on the way over?"

"Eighty million kilometers?" Bebe and Delia both felt their heads ache as well.

Linley looked towards Delia. His mind couldn't help but be filled with the scene of himself and Delia falling into the golden magma pool. In that moment, he had truly believed he was going to die.

"For the sake of Delia, we can't keep on taking risks like this." Linley said to himself.

Delia and Bebe looked towards Linley. At times like this, they left the decision to Linley. Linley stared into the distance, then spoke. "How about this. Up ahead there seems to be a large mountain range. Let's go there and temporarily live there for a while and train quietly. When Delia completely fuses her Highgod spark, we will head out!"

"Live there?" Bebe was rather surprised.

"What is it?" Linley looked towards Bebe.

Bebe immediately shook his head. "Nothing. Boss, your words have merit. Let's wait until Delia is a Highgod. At least on the surface, others will see that she is a Highgod Fiend, which should be frightening enough. When we head out, it will be much safer."

This was indeed Linley's plan. Although Delia was only a One Star Fiend, who would be able to tell from the surface?

Others could only be certain that she was a Highgod Fiend!

Bandit groups didn't want to deal with Highgod Fiends. Who knew how many stars the Fiend might have? It might be a Seven Star Fiend!

"Huh?" Linley suddenly noticed that Delia had taken his hand. He couldn't help but to turn and look at her, and she gestured towards him with her eyes. Only now did Linley notice that Bebe was acting strangely.

Instantly, Linley understood. "Bebe is most likely thinking of Nisse."

"Bebe." Linley said.

"Huh?" Bebe raised his head, looking towards Linley.

Linley immediately said, "Bebe, how about, let's travel as fast as possible. Perhaps we can first go to a city to take on a mission, or buy a metallic lifeform of our own. Either way, we can hurry to Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture as soon as possible."

Bebe understood.

Salomon and Nisse, if they wanted to return to the Jedefloat Continent, would first have to go to Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture. Linley's suggestion...was to give Bebe a chance to catch up to Nisse.

However, this sort of hasty trip would definitely result in them meeting with many bandits on the way over. Who knew how many dangers they would face? Although Linley and Bebe were both strong, and would be able to deal with any ordinary bandit squads, if they were to encounter a bandit squad of thousands of Gods, what would they do?

It was too dangerous!

"Boss, thanks." Bebe said gratefully, but then shook his head and sighed. "However, there's no need."

Linley and Delia exchanged a glance.

Bebe continued, "This sort of hasty travel is very dangerous to begin with. It's best to do as Boss said at first, to first take up residence for a time...as for Nisse, to be honest, right now, I really hate that Salomon! Although I hate him, I believe that with Nisse by his side, at least her safety won't be a problem. As for myself and whether or not I'll be able to meet her again...I'll leave that up to fate!"

Although Bebe wanted to be together with Nisse, this sort of hasty trip would result in danger to both Linley and Delia. Bebe naturally wouldn't do that.

Linley's group headed towards the northeast, advancing roughly a hundred kilometers, at which point they discovered a very wide mountain range. In ancient mountain range, enormous trees that were a thousand meters high and needed dozens of men to encircle could be seen everywhere. Wild grass grew everywhere, and all sorts of strange creatures could be seen.

Every part of this place revealed its ancient heritage.

Although Linley's group had discovered several small tribes while travelling those hundreds of kilometers of flat land, these small tribes were formed by the puny Saints of the Infernal Realm. Generally speaking, tribes formed by Deities were able to control an area of land spanning thousands of kilometers.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe casually chose an unremarkable mountain, and midway up the mountain, Linley utilized Bloodviolet to carve out a large hole, creating a deep cavern residence for them to temporarily live in.

This cavern residence was newly made. Linley, Delia, and Bebe sat down and began to inspect those interspatial rings.

"So little. This one only has a few hundred thousand inkstones. It definitely belongs to a God-level Fiend." Bebe seemed to have tossed Nisse to the back of his mind, and was excitedly investigating the rings. "Whoah-oh! This one is badass. It actually has several hundred million inkstones. It definitely belongs to a Highgod Fiend!"

"I've searched seven interspatial rings but none of them exceeded ten million." Delia spoke out as well.

"No rush. I expect that you have only been searching God-level Fiend rings. Whoah. This one is impressive. It actually has....twenty billion inkstones!" Seeing the contents of this interspatial ring, Linley was shocked. This was the largest sum he had ever encountered.

"Twenty billion inkstones?" Bebe and Delia looked over as well.

Their prior total assets were only worth a hundred million inkstones. Twenty billion was definitely a shocking figure to them.

Actually, as Phusro had only taken away Inigo and Elquin's rings, the remaining rings included the white-horned elder's. Since the black-horned elder's had contained over thirty billion, the white-horned elder's ring naturally wouldn't be much inferior either. As for the Edward brothers, they were all Five Star Fiends. All of them possessed astonishing well! Actually, tens of billions of inkstones to Five Star Fiends was a normal sum.

After all, ordinary Highgods would have more than a hundred million.

As for some Seven Star Fiends, their assets were most likely in excess of a trillion inkstones. Inigo, as the second young master of his clan, also had a terrifying amount of wealth. Thus, the two most valuable interspatial rings had been taken away by Phusro.

"No rush. Let's keep investigating. We haven't even searched thirty. There's many left. Let's keep going slowly."

He had to admit that this sort of searching through the interspatial rings for wealth was indeed something that filled a man with excitement and hope. It wasn't tiresome at all.

"Whoah, my heavens. This one has thirty billion inkstones." Bebe cried out in shock.

"What's going on with me? Up until now, the most I've found was around seven billion inkstones." Delia laughed.

"I found another one that has nearly thirty billion inkstones." Linley laughed as he put another interspatial ring to one side.

A few moments later, they completed their review of these hundred-plus interspatial rings. The fortune within the most valuable one was actually sixty billion inkstones, while the least valuable one contained a pitiful hundred thousand! The difference was truly astonishing.

"All together...let's calculate..." Bebe's eyes were shining. "Wow, all together, we have two hundred billion!"

A truly astonishing figure!

"There were actually six rings which contained more than ten billion inkstones! I imagine that these six belonged to the three Edward brothers, the white-horned elder, Sperry, and those other two Highgod Fiends." Linley said. Actually, although they had more than a hundred interspatial rings, the most valuable ones were actually these six, which all contained over ten billion. These six combined alone neared two hundred billion.

The other hundred-plus interspatial rings, all combined, had a value of just barely ten billion, not even twenty billion.

"Quality, not quantity!" Bebe sighed. "These are all just Five Star Fiends and Four Star Fiends, but they already have such astonishing wealth. What about Six Star Fiends? Or especially the likes of Elquin, a Seven Star Fiend? Who knows how much wealth he has."

Wealth was something which accumulated like a pyramid.

The more powerful a person was, the more extravagant the amount of wealth they had.

"I expect that even all our wealth combined is still nothing more than a rounding error in Elquin's wealth." Linley said.

One could imagine it just by thinking about it. Who knew how many experts Elquin had killed, and how vast a fortune he had built up?

Still, although a fortune of over two hundred billion inkstones was nothing to the likes of these ultimate experts or those major clans, it was still a massive amount of money to ordinary Highgods. Linley's group of three began to quietly train within this cavern estate.

Delia focused on fusing with her divine spark.

The cavern in which Linley's group was living in was very large. In the Infernal Realm, generally speaking, every few thousand kilometers, there would be a tribe or a bandit group which would hold domain over that area. This mountain range where Linley lived in was no exception. It had bandit groups as well.

"Motherf*cker, it's been a year since we've made money." A long green haired man was flying in mid-air, staring into the distance while cursing in a low voice, "There's too damn many bandit squads in the Infernal Realm. Those who dare to travel by themselves are increasingly rare. Even those who do come out, travel alongside a Highgod. It seems I wasted my time today again. Forget it. Time to go back.

The green haired man flew in the air, heading back towards his lair.

"Huh? Someone's here?"

The green haired man suddenly disappeared like a gust of wind, then re-solidified atop a tree below as he stealthily stared towards a location midway up a mountain. "Just now, I saw someone fly in there. Can it be that this cave has someone in it?"

"Since when did someone move into this mountain range?"

The green haired man revealed a smile on his face. "Who cares who it is. I'll go inform the leader first. I hope it is someone with money!" The green-haired man didn't investigate clearly, immediately flying back to his lair.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 27, Disaster Descending From the Skies

Within the dark caverns. In the empty main hall.

Three Linley's were seated in the meditative position, dressed in a long yellow robe, a light green robe, and a sky-blue robe. The strange thing was, the yellow robed Linley actually seemed to be teleporting around, occasionally appearing in different areas throughout the main hall.

This cavern estate had been formed by Linley using his sword, and the walls and the floor all had sword scars.

While Linley and Delia were training, Bebe was extremely bored.

"Training is so complicated."

Bebe sat there on the floor of the main hall, lying against the stone, his head upraised and carrying that straw hat. "Why is it that I can never settle down to train? It'd be wonderful if I could be like the Boss. He actually starts grinning mid-training!" Bebe mumbled as he looked at the three Linleys.

Bebe didn't like to train. In the Forest of Darkness, even the easiest 'Essence of Darkness' mystery had taken him nearly twenty years to master, and that was with Beirut's assistance!

Taking off his straw hat and looking at it, Bebe naturally began to think of Nisse, a hint of grief appearing in his eyes. "I wonder how Nisse is doing."

Moments later.

With a flip of his hand, Bebe put the straw hat back on his head. "Forget it. No point to thinking randomly. Motherf*cker, the more I think about it, the more miserable I feel. Better to focus on my training!" Bebe gritted his teeth. "I refuse to believe that I have no talent in training in the Laws. I'm a Godeater Rat! Grandpa Beirut helped me so much. If it was the Boss, he probably would have easily gained insights into those three profound mysteries by now. I need to work harder. I can't lose face. At the very least, I need to master those three types of profound mysteries."

Bebe shut his eyes and began to quietly train as well.

A long time later, the light green robed Linley stood up as well. In his heart, he said to himself, "So the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves could actually reach such a level. Not only could it create unique vibrations within the insides of something, it could also simultaneously attack from outside. Combining the inner and outer aspects is indeed a very powerful material attack. Only, how would one use the Profound Mysteries of Sound Waves to attack the soul?"

Linley was pondering this. Suddenly, he discovered that Bebe was training intensively as well. He couldn't help but laugh. "It's rare to see Bebe working so hard." But right at that moment...

"Boss, you finished your training?" Bebe immediately opened his eyes.

"And I was just praising you at how hard you were working." Linley laughed.

Bebe stood up. "Boss, you have no idea. When I'm training in the Laws of Darkness, I'm extremely sensitive to any nearby movements. As soon as you stood up, I immediately woke up as well. Right, Boss. Your divine earth clone keeps on flickering around. What's that about?"

"Can it be that you have forgotten how in the past, Haydson was able to change his physical location with his technique?" Linley said with a laugh.

"Right, it does seem really similar. Boss, you figured it out?" Bebe said in pleased surprise.

"Not even close. I've just started with the basics." Linley laughed.

He had been training in this technique for quite some time. It belonged to the 'Worldwalker' profound mystery, one of the six profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of the Earth. Actually, getting a basic understanding of the Worldwalker profound mystery wasn't that hard; the 'Worldwalker' profound mystery and the 'Essence of the Earth' profound mystery were actually somewhat linked.

In order to completely master the profound mysteries of the 'Essence of the Earth', one had to be able to reach an extremely high level of merging with the earth essence.

As for the Worldwalker mystery, it required a person to be completely merged into the earth essence, and then travel through the earth essence, instantly appearing somewhere else. From the outside, it looked like teleportation, but in reality, it wasn't.

Upon reaching mastery in the 'Essence of the Earth', training in the 'Worldwalker' technique became much easier.

"Bebe, as I recall, when you were in the volcano range, it seemed like you used a technique which destroyed even that Highgod artifact of Elquin. What was that all about?" With regards to this, Linley hadn't yet had a chance to ask in detail.

Bebe pursed his lips. "This was a life-saving measure which Grandpa Beirut had given him. He said it was enough to deal with most Highgods. However, Grandpa Beirut originally told me that the energy in the black pearl was only enough to be utilized three times. I've already used it once, and I only have two more remaining."

Linley nodded slightly.

The power of that attack had truly been astonishing. Even Elquin, when taking that attack head on, had his Highgod artifact destroyed. Most likely, an ordinary Five Star Fiend or Six Star Fiend would have perished.

"Huh?"

Bebe suddenly looked towards the outside of the cave. "Boss, I feel something going on outside." Linley's face changed. Instantly, his two clones merged with his original form. This time, Linley immediately used his original form, and his body became covered with the Pulseguard

Armor.

Right at this moment...

A surge of divine sense swept out, instantly encompassing the entire cave.

"Haha...just three Gods!" A loud voice rang out from outside the cave. "The three of you, hurry the f*ck up and come out."

"Get the f*ck out here!" Instantly, a large number of angry roars rang out.

Linley frowned. It seemed as though quite a few people were shouting from outside, but Linley's current level of power was far greater than it had been when they had first come to the Infernal Realm, especially after his original body Dragonformed. Linley was confident in the shattered 'soul-protecting Highgod artifact' against ordinary Highgods, especially when he had his trump card, those two drops of Sovereign's Might.

Of course he was not afraid!

"Let's take a look." Linley said.

Bebe, made bold by his talents, accompanied Linley towards the cave exit as well.

Linley headed out, and saw a large group of people floating directly outside. This group was formed into a surrounding circle which had completely sealed off the cave. Linley immediately spread out his divine sense, immediately encompassing all of them.

"Eighty two, three of them being Demigods, the rest being Gods!" Linley made up his mind.

All of them were Gods. The current Linley didn't fear them at all.

"Boss, they actually stumbled onto us." Bebe's smirking mouth had a hint of amusement as well. He had been in a fairly bad mood recently. Salomon's true face and Nisse's departure had all caused Bebe to be in a foul mood. Only, in front of Linley and Delia, Bebe pretended to laugh and pretended as though nothing was amiss.

In truth, in his heart, he felt quite miserable.

After having stewed for so long, right now, Bebe wanted to let loose and vent!

The leader of this large group was a silver-haired, horned man. He laughed loudly. "What? Just the two of you came out? What about the woman inside? Have her come out as well. Or did you think you would be able to flee?"

"Haha, there's a woman? Big brother, let me have her." A horned man with short silver hair next to him said loudly.

"No problem." The leader laughed loudly.

Immediately, the other bandits all began to laugh loudly.

Linley frowned, and Bebe rubbed his nose as well, their gazes turning cold.

"I will give you a chance." The leader said arrogantly. "Since you are both Gods...how about this. Offer me your interspatial rings. I will permit you to join us. Don't worry...in the future, you will have a share in the wealth which we take in the future."

Linley secretly shook his head.

These bandits truly were interesting. They wanted to take his valuables and also have him join them? However, this was a fairly common sight in the Infernal Realm.

The leader said. "Have you finished consid..."

"Motherf*cker, are you done with the bullshit?!" Bebe shouted angrily.

The bandits were all stunned, and then the face of the leader turned cold. "Brothers, since they don't want their lives, finish them!" The leader waved his hand, ordering his subordinates to charge. Clearly...he didn't hold these three Gods in high regard.

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

Transforming into blurs or streaks of lightning or flashes of fire, dozens of figures charged forward like a swarm of wasps.

Bebe stored his straw hat into his interspatial ring, while at the same time wielding that black dagger. Glancing sideways into the swarm of charging bandits, he grinned savagely, then wildly began to execute his Shadowshape Doppelganger technique, immediately transforming into dozens of images which charged up.

"Haha, die." A God-level Fiend stabbed into Bebe's true body, but when the divine artifact sword in his hand struck him, it gave out a 'Clang!' sound, not harming Bebe at all.

Bebe delivered a backhand blow with the dagger.

"Swish!" He stabbed directly into the head of that God-level Fiend. Bebe's eyes were filled with a light of bloodlust.

"Next."

Bebe's dagger then stabbed out towards another person, while Bebe himself didn't even bother to dodge the enemy's attacks.

A large group charged towards him, stabbing towards Bebe from every area, while the rest charged towards Linley.

Linley wielded Bloodviolet and just stood there. Seeing the group of bandits charge over, Linley's hand suddenly began to flash with a hazy violet shadow moving at an exceedingly high speed. If one looked carefully, however, one would have a slow sort of feeling.

A visual misperception!

"Slash...."

Two heads were chopped off simultaneously, while the rest of their body was shaken by vibrations into muddy flesh. Two divine God sparks fell down from mid-air, and the violet illusion vanished.

"Too weak." Linley said to himself quietly. His most powerful physical attack, 'Bewildering Shadow', was an attack capable of threatening a Highgod. Against these Gods, it was effortless.

Instantly, eight people on the bandit side had died. The attacking bandits as well as the leader watching behind were all shocked. They hadn't expected that this time, they had rammed into an iron board. The leader immediately shouted loudly, "Brothers, launch group attacks!"

Instantly, the bandits flew back, gathering together.

Linley and Bebe each stood at one side of the entrance to the cave.

"You killed eight of my brothers." The leader's gaze was savage.
"Brothers, all together."

Depending on if they were fighting against experts or weaklings, these bandits would use different methods. The bandits once more swarmed forward like wasps, but in truth, this time was different. They were all moving in an organized, concerted manner.

At virtually the same time, the bandits brandished their weapons.

After having seen the chaotic battle between the Black Dragon Tribe and the other tribes, Linley and Bebe knew exactly how terrifying this sort of concerted group attack could be.

"Bebe, let's kill them together." Linley almost instantly entered his Dragonform.

His body became incredibly powerful, and was endowed with astonishing speed and strength. The power in his body exploded forth, and at the same time, he utilized his Profound Truths of Velocity. Linley was like a ray of golden-azure illusory light, charging towards the group of bandits, who weren't at all surprised by Linley's transformation.

In the Infernal Realm, there were simply too many races and lifeforms of various types.

"Bang!" "Bang!"

Almost instantaneously, over twenty soul attacks struck out, some which contained material components as well. This was the joint attack launched by the seventy four surviving bandits, but Linley's speed was simply too fast, and his body was too small. He was only struck by two of the soul attacks.

The two soul attacks were merely God-level soul attacks. They did nothing to Linley at all.

As for those five material attacks which struck him, they didn't break a single draconic scale.

Not just Linley; the same was true for Bebe!

"Not good!" Seeing this, the leader's face changed.

Linley, his face sinister, let the devilish Bloodviolet sword land its first attack upon the horned man with short silver hair. The horned man didn't have any chance to flee at all. Bloodviolet swept straight past his head, and his head instantly was shaken into muddy flesh.

"Bang!"

Linley's right leg struck out like a meteor carrying trillions of kilograms of force, smashing against a green-haired man's waist. "BANG!" The explosive force caused the green-haired man's body to completely explode, leaving behind only a God-level divine spark.

This kick contained the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' as well as the massive strength of Linley's Dragonform. It was extremely powerful.

"Swoosh!" A man chopped straight downwards with his warblade through the air, directly towards Linley's head.

"Swish!"

A golden-azure light flashed. It was Linley's draconic tail. The fierce tail struck out with a 'Clang!', sending the warblade flying while also crushing the God's head into a pile of pulp.

The Dragonformed Linley was nothing short of a man-shaped weapon, even more terrifying than a Deathgod Golem. After all, not only was Linley's defense tough, he also knew profound mysteries!

However, Linley's slaughtering speed was only on par with Bebe, who was in the middle of letting loose to his unhappiness.

“Slash!”

Crimson blood splattered across the dusty yellow cliffs, and shards of flesh fell down from the skies.

“All of you, die.” Bebe’s face was savage, and his dozens of shadows were everywhere. Through relying on the Shadowshape Doppelganger technique, Bebe was occasionally here, occasionally there as he entered a wild killing spree. Bebe’s eyes were filled with madness. “That bastard Salomon. That bastard!”

“If Salomon hadn’t intentionally caused chaos, how could Ninny and I have been separated?” As he thought this, he stabbed out with the dagger in his hand towards an opponent’s divine artifact, chopping it into two pieces while simultaneously cutting through the opponent’s head, which exploded.

“Ninny, Ninny!”

Bebe’s mind was full of thoughts of Ninny, but as he thought of Salomon, the speed at which he killed grew even faster.

A massacre. Bebe wildly vented his anger. How he wanted to be together with Nisse. Each time he saw Linley and Delia together, he would think of himself and Nisse. Only, this Infernal Realm was utterly vast, and Nisse was heading towards the Jedefloat Continent.

Who knew when they would meet again?

“Kill, kill!!!”

Bebe killed wildly, ignoring all else.

“Flee, flee!!!” The bandits who were not yet dead all began to scream in terror while fleeing in all directions. The leader of the bandits, in particular, had turned ashen pale. He had never imagined that Gods could be this monstrously powerful.

They were being easily demolished!

“Finished. My men are all finished.” The leader felt grief in his heart, but although he grieved, whenever he looked at Linley and Bebe, these two fiendish gods, he was so frightened that his heart trembled. “No matter what, I need to first save my own life.”

The leader ignored everyone else and immediately fled.

After Linley and Bebe killed those closest to them, they discovered that the other bandits had started to flee in every direction. Linley couldn't be bothered to chase them, but Bebe, caught in the grip of his bloodlust, howled angrily and then emitted a high screech which echoed throughout the heavens.

An enormous illusory Godeater Rat appeared behind Bebe. Bebe opened his mouth wide, staring at the distant bandit leader as well as a man next to him.

"Aaaaaah!" The bandit leader, in mid-flight, suddenly felt that he couldn't move. Not just him; the God next to him couldn't move either.

Suddenly, the God-level divine sparks of the two men floated out. Two divine sparks actually flew out of the leader, while another flew out from his subordinate's head. These three divine sparks flew directly towards Bebe's mouth.

The two corpses fell down from mid-air.

Linley looked at Bebe with some concern. Very clearly, Bebe was acting rather strangely.

"Bebe?" Linley flew over.

Bebe turned, then shook his head a few times and laughed, "Boss, don't worry. I'm fine. Just now, I was feeling rather peeved, and so I wanted to give vent to my anger. I feel much better now. These bandits really were blind. They actually dared to come waylay us. They really were looking for death!"

Linley, seeing the look on Bebe's face, finally sighed in relief.

"These bandits will most likely not dare annoy us again." Linley laughed as well.

Actually, Linley had been prepared long ago for this day. Every single place in the Infernal Realm was controlled and occupied by a force. In some desolate areas, it was normally just common bandits or small tribes, while in bustling areas, greater forces and powers would be in control.

The mountain range which Linley had chosen was very ordinary.

Linley expected that there shouldn't be many experts here. After today, in the future, most likely nobody in the area would dare make trouble for them again.

"Oh! I forgot to take the interspatial rings of many of those corpses. Although there wasn't much money there, we shouldn't let it go to waste." Bebe immediately flew down, and Linley couldn't help but laugh. Seeing Bebe in a better mood, Linley felt happy as well. "Bebe, wait for me." Linley flew down as well.

This slaughter did indeed awe and frighten the people nearby. The bandit group, originally 82 strong, had only less than thirty survivors after this disaster. This small bandit group frantically began to recruit others, but they didn't dare to come disturb Linley's group again. They didn't even dare to draw near.

And just like that, one year after another passed by like water as they trained quietly.

"Rumble..."

In the sixteenth year of Linley's training here, the natural Laws descended.

Within the cavern estate, Delia and Bebe both watched with nervous, surprised joy. Linley himself was floating in mid-air, completely surrounded by the strange energy of the natural Laws, while at the same time, powerful fire elemental essences swirled above him, then solidified into a fire-type divine spark.

“The Boss has become a Deity in the fire-element as well.” Bebe said in delight.

Delia was filled with excitement and joy as well.

In training, talent was critically important. If one didn't have talent in something, no matter how long one trained, one would find it hard to succeed. Linley was exceedingly talented in the wind and earth elements, and thus he trained very quickly in them. As for the fire-element, he wasn't bad either. Only, compared to the wind and the earth, it was rather weaker.

However, given how incredibly powerful his soul currently was, and the fact that he had been training on the metallic creature previously, giving him a total training time of over twenty years...

Linley had finally mastered the simplest type of profound mystery of the Elemental Laws of Fire – ‘The Essence of the Fire’.

This time, Linley once more chose to have his soul split apart. After all, Linley was currently in possession of a large number of amethysts and a large amount of wealth. To strengthen his soul wouldn't be too hard.

"Crackle..."

A Linley dressed in a fiery red robe and with fiery long hair suddenly appeared out of nowhere. It was Linley's divine fire clone.

Moments later, the ripples of the natural Laws disappeared, and the divine fire clone merged into Linley's original body. Within the sea of consciousness in Linley's original body, his powerful spiritual energy was gently flowing like waves of the ocean, while a rainbow-colored sword-shaped soul hovered above it.

Beneath the rainbow-colored sword-shaped soul, on the surface of his sea of consciousness, three Linley's hovered. They were a Linley who emitted by an earthen light, a Linley who emitted a light green aura, and a Linley who emitted a fiery red aura. The three Linley's formed a triangle exactly beneath the sword-shaped soul.

Linley opened his eyes, looking at the delighted Delia and Bebe.

"Boss, you now have three divine clones. With your original body included, that makes four." Bebe rubbed his nose as he spoke. "Compared to you, I, Bebe, really feel embarrassed. Up till now, I still only have two bodies, my original body included."

"Bebe, you at least have two. I only have one. Shouldn't I be even more embarrassed?" Delia teased with pursed lips.

Linley couldn't help but laugh.

Right now, both Delia and Bebe were exceedingly happy for Linley. With an additional divine clone, that meant he had another life, while at the same time meant that his future accomplishments would be even greater.

"This divine fire clone is only a Demigod clone. It is still very weak. Right now...I still need to rely on my earth and wind clones." Linley himself knew that for now, four bodies was most likely his limit. After all, Linley didn't know a single thing about the other Elemental Laws.

Lightning, water, light, darkness, etc. Linley didn't understand anything about them.

"Without any talent, I'm not even able to sense the Elemental Laws. How could I train in them? Even if I trained for a million years, I would still find it hard to succeed." Linley began to understand why the more one advanced in training, the harder it became.

Currently, in his understanding of the Laws of the Earth, he had already reached mastery in the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Essence of the Earth. Over the past sixteen years, his Worldwalker had advanced as well.

"The Laws of the Earth have in total six profound mysteries. I've only trained in three. Right now, although it seems like I am advancing quickly, the more I advance, most likely the slower it will become." Linley understood. After all, the 'Essence of the Fire', the simplest profound mystery of the Elemental Laws of Fire, had taken twenty years, despite his soul being so incredibly strong.

When he had trained in the Essence of the Earth, if it hadn't been for the fact that Linley was merging it with the Throbbing Pulse of the World, two years probably would have been enough for mastery.

And at that time, Linley's soul was much weaker than it was now.

This was a difference in talent!

Perhaps in training and comprehending, a person's hard work and spiritual sensitivity determined everything. Some people, upon seeing a scene, would instantly and naturally make the mental connections and perhaps suddenly breakthrough. This didn't have anything to do with elemental affinity; it was related to a person's pondering and logic, to one's spiritual sensitivity.

But with regards to how clearly or how unclearly one would sense the Elemental Laws, that was a matter of natural talent.

"Boss, what are you thinking about?" Bebe suddenly woke Linley from his pondering.

"Nothing. Just some random things. Let's go. We'll go to our living room to celebrate." In all those interspatial rings, quite a few had stored fine wine. Linley turned to look at Delia. Suddenly, he asked, "Delia, how has your fusing of the divine spark progressed?"

"I've fused with eight of the profound mysteries. I expect that in a few more years, I should be able to comprehend the ninth one as well." Delia smiled as she spoke.

“In a few more years, we can finally head out.” Bebe said rather hopefully.

Linley glanced at Bebe. In his heart, he felt rather guilty. Bebe had essentially been keeping them company here for sixteen years, while Nisse and her elder brother Salomon had most likely already reached Bluemaple City, and perhaps had even headed out on their journey to the Jedefloat Continent.

Who knew when Bebe and Nisse would meet again?

“Bebe, let’s go drink some wine.” Linley rested his right hand on Bebe’s shoulders. The two brothers headed together towards the outside.

In the blink of an eye, nearly five more years passed. Delia finally completely fused with that Highgod spark, reaching the Highgod level. From the outside, especially upon seeing Delia’s Fiend medallion on her chest, it was clear...that she was a Highgod Fiend!

Highgod Fiends had quite a frightening reputation.

“We’ve been in this place for over twenty years. I feel rather attached to it.” Linley turned to look at the cave estate, while the nearby Delia couldn’t help but laugh. Jokingly, she said, “What, you want to keep living here? How about...we stay for a few more decades?”

Linley waved his hand, and suddenly, a black panther shaped metallic lifeform appeared in mid-air. Linley's group flew into it. The metallic lifeform immediately transformed into a ray of light, flying towards the east. By now, Linley had over ten metallic lifeforms.

These metallic lifeforms had been discovered within those hundred-plus interspatial rings. After all, quite a few Highgods had purchased metallic lifeforms.

Within the metallic lifeform, Linley and the other two were seated on chairs, looking outside through the translucent 'window' to look outside. They drank wine as they headed forward.

"Boss, this metallic lifeform is so bizarre. Generally speaking, humans and magical beasts can't be stored in interspatial rings, but metallic lifeforms can. Also, I feel as though their intelligence is very low." Bebe said.

Linley nodded slightly. He had noticed this as well.

"Perhaps metallic lifeforms are rather special." Linley said.

Actually, what Linley didn't realize was that all the metallic lifeforms bought in sold in places like Redbud Castle had undergone some special modifications. They were already essentially transportation tools who only had very basic thought processes.

Seated within the metallic lifeform, Linley's group of three continued to advance.

The metallic lifeform once more halted, and Linley chuckled towards Delia. "Delia, sorry. We're going to have to trouble you to go out again." Delia laughed helplessly. "There really are quite a few bandits here, and they are all so annoying. They can't find me with their divine sense, but as soon as I head out, they go 'whoosh' and disappear."

Indeed...

As soon as Delia exited the metallic lifeform, those hundred-plus Gods, upon seeing someone whom they couldn't find with their divine sense, and in particular someone with a Fiend medallion...

"A Highgod Fiend!"

The bandits were so terrified, they immediately scattered.

Delia headed back into the metallic lifeform. "Let's continue going forward."

Bebe laughed loudly. "Haha, Delia, Highgod Fiends really are quite frightening to people!"

Delia nodded and said, "Actually, it makes sense. The Fiend trials are so very hard. Survival of the fittest! Also, the Fiend missions are fairly dangerous. In battles, it is Highgod against Highgod, God against God... generally speaking, after multiple missions, the surviving Highgods are all rather powerful ones."

Linley, hearing this, nodded slightly. This made a lot of sense.

“But of course, there’s another situation; a Highgod who is weak, but has a team.” Delia laughed. “Only then can that Highgod undertake multiple missions without dying. No matter what though, when bandits encounter Highgod Fiends, they will generally flee immediately.”

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 29, The Amethyst Mountains

In the desolate chain of mountains, there were almost no signs of human life.

People familiar with this place knew that this was a territory claimed by bandits. Normally, people didn't dare to halt here. At the edges of the chain of mountains, halfway up a mountain, there was a large amount of rattans and wild grass, with the mountain cliffs behind them.

The strange thing was...

The rattans separated, and a head popped out from between them. This was a youth who was slightly fat and whose gaze was very innocent.

Raising his head, he looked towards the sky. It was late at night, and the sky was covered with dark clouds, making the entire world pitch black. Even Deities would only barely be able to see a few hundred meters away. The youth nodded slightly. "The weather today is excellent. It is time to head forward."

"Swoosh!"

The youth transformed into a graceful gust of wind, heading towards the east silently. Soon, he had travelled thousands of kilometers.

"Huh?" The gust of wind came to a halt, and the youth returned to his normal form. He lay hidden on the ground, quietly staring into the distance. Just now, he seemed to have noticed some movement. Paying careful attention, he noticed a long-tailed beastman fly past.

"So it was just a Saint." The youth let out a hidden sigh of relief.

The youth once more transformed into a silent gust of wind. While it was dark, he pressed forward, occasionally coming to a halt. Like this, he carefully advanced. Suddenly, he realized that a metallic lifeform was flying at high speed. Instantly, a look of joy appeared on the youth's face.

"Swoosh!"

The youth's speed instantly exploded, and he flew into the air, chasing after the metallic lifeform. In terms of short-distance speed, Deities were generally capable of catching up to metallic lifeforms. When the youth drew near the metallic lifeform, he immediately spread out his divine sense, finding only a few Gods within.

"Everyone, I'm just a God. Please help me and give me a ride!" The youth immediately said through divine sense.

But the metallic lifeform paid him no mind.

"Milords, please help me." The youth once more spread out his divine sense and messaged.

"F*ck off. If you keep jabbering, I'll kill you." A divine sense message came out, and the youth immediately lowered his speed.

Shaking his head with a sigh, the youth once more transformed into a gust of wind, landing down and continuing to advance eastwards. In this pitch black night, he encountered three metallic lifeforms, all filled with many people, but his three entreaties were all refused.

Since he was refused, he had to rely on himself to travel. He managed to travel two hundred thousand kilometers before daybreak. By the time the skies slowly brightened, the youth stopped advancing.

The place he came to a halt in was within a flat area where wild grass was growing.

"Crackle..." The youth summoned his divine power and immediately dug out a tunnel within the wild grass. It was a very secretive, hidden place.

"Whew."

The youth sat down calmly within the tunnel, frowning in thought. "Given this speed, it'll most likely take me decades before arriving at the Amethyst Mountains. I didn't expect that I, Jenkin [Zhan'jin], would fall to such a state. This Infernal Realm...it really isn't an easy place to roam."

When thinking back to the life he had lived upon arriving in the Infernal Realm, Jenkin's heart was filled with sourness. He sighed.

However, moments later, Jenkin's mind returned to calmness.

"No matter what, my top goal right now is to hurry to the Amethyst Mountains. The Amethyst Mountains will be the place where I, Jenkin, make my first mark!" Jenkin's eyes were sharp and fierce. No matter how much he had to suffer, he wouldn't give up.

Undaunted despite countless setbacks. Self-confident!

This was why Jenkin was able to become a Deity and able to stay alive up till now.

"Fortunately, in the Infernal Realm, the area of a divine sense is very small. If this was in a material realm, where a divine sense could spread across a vast area, those bandits would be able to easily locate their targets." Jenkin smiled slightly. "Alas, but only once or twice a month will I encounter a night like last night, where there is no moonlight at all."

Jenkin knew very well that if he were to travel by day, he would definitely be discovered.

Once he was discovered, given his power as a new God, he definitely wouldn't be able to flee.

All he could do was travel during this sort of dark night, but a completely black night like the previous night only appeared once or twice a month. The chances were too low. Also, the complete darkness persisted for only a third of the day, during night. Thus, he only had a short period of time to hurry forward.

"All I can do is carefully move forward. Perhaps I'll be able to encounter a kind-hearted person who will give me a ride.”

Jenkin understood.

Generally speaking, those who travelled aboard metallic lifeforms couldn't be bothered to pay attention to others. If they encountered bandits, they wouldn't chase after them and attack, as that took too much time and energy and wasn't worth it. They couldn't be bothered to even act against bandits; naturally, when they encountered someone like Jenkin who begged for a lift, they would ignore him as well.

“All I can do is continue to wait.” Jenkin immediately acted, using the earth to cover the hole above him, revealing only a small opening which would allow a bit of sunlight in.

This sort of wide flatland was mostly inhabited by ordinary Saints, and bandits wouldn't be present on literally every inch of land, unless they were utterly bored.

He waited.

After roughly twenty seven days, yet another pitch black night came.

Jenkin silently pushed aside the grass, staring at his surroundings. After ascertaining no one was nearby, he once more came out of the tunnel, transforming into a gust of wind and silently advancing towards the east. This time, roughly two hours later, he encountered yet another metallic lifeform.

But when he flew over at high speed and sent an entreaty, he was once more refused and shouted at angrily.

Jenkin didn't feel any disappointment in his heart at all, and didn't even feel much of an emotional impact at all. As Jenkin saw it, every single chance had to be treasured. Failure was nothing. If he didn't even try, then he would definitely fail. Jenkin continued to stealthily travel forward.

After roughly an hour, yet another metallic lifeform flew over towards the east.

Jenkin immediately raised his head, once more chasing over at high speed. Up ahead was a fairly small metallic lifeform. Clearly, there were very few people inside. Generally speaking, if there were few people within a metallic lifeform, the people within would be fairly close family or friends who usually wouldn't allow a stranger to join them.

However, without at least making an attempt, Jenkin wouldn't give up.

Immediately spreading out his divine sense, Jenkin found two Gods within. "Milords, I am only a God. I hope you can help me and give me a ride." If he was refused and yelled at again, Jenkin wouldn't mind at all, nor would his mental state be disturbed.

However...

This metallic lifeform actually came to a sudden halt.

Jenkin immediately halted as well, nervously looking at the metallic lifeform, afraid that the people inside would come out to kill him. However, Jenkin consoled himself, "That won't happen. People who ride metallic lifeforms will encounter bandits and shout at them to leave. They've already become accustomed to not killing people who don't pose a threat to them."

"Boss, this fellow is quite interesting. He actually asks people to give him a ride." A voice rang out from within, while at the same time, an entrance to the metallic lifeform opened up.

"Then let him in."

A gentle yet ordinary voice rang out, but this voice caused Jenkin's calm heart to instantly swell with emotion. A look of shock and joy suddenly exploded forth from his eyes. Jenkin was certain that he would never forget this voice for the rest of his life.

"My Boss is letting you in. Hurry up and come in." A figure wearing a straw hat appeared at the entrance.

"Thank you, milord." Jenkin immediately flew over, entering the metallic lifeform.

The internals of the metallic lifeform was very soft and comfortable. Aside from several rooms in the back, there was a living room in the center, with wine, tables, and chairs. There was even a place to view the outside scenery. Jenkin said to himself, "This is what the upper class of the Infernal Realm live like!"

At the same time, Jenkin saw a young couple in front of him.

The young man had a head of long brown hair and wore a sky-blue robe, and his eyes contained a hint of a smile. He appeared fairly friendly and amiable. The woman behind him caused Jenkin to be shocked. This woman was beautiful, but...Jenkin couldn't sense her aura at all.

"She is a Highgod, and a Highgod Fiend?" Jenkin instantly noticed the Fiend medallion, while at the same time he noticed the Fiend medallions of the other two. Jenkin now began to understand why this metallic lifeform dared to roam the Infernal Realm without danger.

Because a Highgod Fiend was present.

With mild interest, Linley glanced at this slightly pudgy yet very friendly looking youth.

"Hey, you can sit over there." Bebe said casually.

Delia asked, "Why did you ask us to give you a ride?" Not only was Linley curious; Delia and Bebe were curious as well.

Jenkin said hurriedly, "Milords, my name is Jenkin. As to why I asked you to help out, actually, this story starts from when I first entered the Infernal Realm. When I entered the Infernal Realm, I was tossed out by the Redbud Army, and I joined a very ordinary tribe. I imagine you all know that earning money in a tribe is a very slow affair. In ten thousand years, you'd probably only earn a few dozen inkstones."

"A few dozen?" Linley frowned slightly.

When he had lived in the Black Dragon Tribe, every ten thousand years, there was more than a thousand inkstones to be earned. However, Linley immediately realized that this was because of the Gerrard Black Dragons. Otherwise, other tribes wouldn't have allied to attack them either. Ordinary tribes who had to rely on forging divine artifacts or divine gems to earn money really were limited to just a few dozen inkstones every ten thousand years.

"Also, in the Infernal Realm, battles are very frequent. An ordinary tribe might survive for a million years or even longer, but it also might be destroyed in just a few thousand years." Jenkin said bitterly. "If I was an ordinary citizen, perhaps after defeat in battle, I could join another tribe. But I am a God. I was forcibly recruited to become a warrior for the tribe. In every battle, the majority of the casualties occurred amongst the warriors!"

Linley nodded slightly.

When he had been in the Black Dragon Tribe, a tribe with a fairly powerful backer, whether or not one became a warrior was a matter of choice. Clearly, they didn't care too much about warriors. But for many of the weaker tribes, Gods were forcibly recruited to become soldiers.

"Within ten thousand years, I experienced being in two tribes." Jenkin shook his head. "I realized that this can't continue. I was barely lucky enough to survive the first battle, but would I have that sort of luck again? After planning for a long time, I quietly slipped out of the tribe and began to head towards the Amethyst Mountains. However, my tribe was tens of millions of kilometers away from the Amethyst Mountains, and there are a very high amount of bandits on the way. All I could do was wait for the skies to become completely dark before carefully advancing.”

Linley, hearing this, began to understand.

At the same time, he could imagine how much hardship this Jenkin had suffered on the way over.

“Why are you going to the Amethyst Mountains?” Bebe asked.

Jenkin said hurriedly, “I heard of them and learned that the Amethyst Mountains have ‘amethysts’ in them. I wanted to go harvest amethysts. Amethysts are very valuable. I can make six or seven thousand inkstones by selling one. This is much better than just staying in a tribe.”

Linley immediately began to laugh. “You’ve heard of it? But do you know about the regulations regarding mining in the Amethyst Mountains?”

Linley had read some general information regarding the Infernal Realm. Naturally, he knew about the famous ‘Amethyst Mountains’ of the Redbud Continent. Because of this, Linley was actually planning to make a tourism trip while passing through the Amethyst Mountains.

The Amethyst Mountains had a circumference of hundreds of thousands of kilometers. It was the only area in the Redbud Continent which produced amethysts.

"Requirements?" Jenkin shook his head. How could people in the tribes learn of these things?

"How could just anyone be allowed to mine in a precious place like this? These areas are jointly guarded by multiple major clans." Linley said with a calm laugh.

Jenkin's face became unsightly, but he said hurriedly, "Impossible. The Amethyst Mountains is such a precious area and so vast. How could a few clans completely seal it off?" Many people were still able to sneak into some precious areas at the risk of losing their lives.

"Of course, there is another method. Pay five thousand inkstones, and you can enter to go mine." Linley said with a calm laugh.

Harvesting amethysts was extremely hard. Sometimes, a thousand years would pass without being able to encounter any. But of course, if you were lucky, you might find several on one trip.

"Five thousand inkstones?" Jenkin's face turned ashen. He had only been in the Infernal Realm for ten thousand years. His entire networth was less than a hundred inkstones.

The metallic lifeform moved like a flash of light, streaking at high speed towards the east.

Within the living room of the metallic lifeform, Linley and Delia were seated facing each other, while Bebe and Jenkin were seated facing each other. Everyone was chatting casually.

“My homeland? It is a far more complicated place than yours.” Jenkin’s face was all smiles right now, so very different from the look of dread it had when he had been fleeing and travelling. “In addition, my homeland’s continent is fairly large. From the north to the south, it stretches at least a hundred thousand kilometers.”

Linley nodded slightly. The Yulan continent, from north to south, stretched only twenty or thirty thousand kilometers. Jenkin’s homeland was indeed much larger than the Yulan continent.

“Our place was primarily divided into three forces. The first type included the human societies, the second included the beastmen clans, and the final one included the aquatic races! There’s all sorts of religions there. Haha, I’m afraid you are going to laugh at me when I say this, but I actually had my own church amongst the humans and amongst the beastmen!”

Jenkin laughed. “Those beastmen had no idea that the Deity they worshipped was actually a human.”

Linley, Delia, and Bebe had been bored with their journey, and so they were happy to listen to Jenkin tell them some tales from his own material plane. It had to be said that Jenkin's material plane, although not having as many complicated secrets as the Yulan continent, had far more people, Saints, and religions, all of which engaged in battle, while the various races warred against each other as well.

"Oho! I had no idea." Bebe chortled. "So in your own material plane, you were actually such an amazing figure."

Jenkin's story did indeed have a rather 'legendary' feel.

"Alas." Jenkin sighed. "But when one stands at the pinnacle of the continent, one feels lonely!"

Linley nodded slightly.

Actually, the vast majority of the experts who left the material planes for the Higher Planes did so out of loneliness!

"I knew very well how dangerous the Infernal Realm was, but I still chose to come. However, the degree of danger here in the Infernal Realm is far greater than I ever imagined." Jenkin said gratefully, "If it hadn't been for you three helping out, I wouldn't even have been able to come up with five thousand inkstones."

Jenkin wasn't able to scrounge up five thousand inkstones, but to Linley's group, five thousand inkstones was like a single hair on the body of nine bulls. While chatting with him, Linley's group had felt that Jenkin was a fine fellow, and so Bebe had magnanimously agreed to help Jenkin pay that five thousand inkstone fee.

The tens of millions of kilometers passed without incident. Roughly a month or so later, Linley's group arrived at the legendary Amethyst Mountains!

"This is the Amethyst Mountains?" Linley stood in front of the metallic lifeform. Peering through the metallic lifeform's translucent windows, he could clearly see the vast, borderless Amethyst Mountains.

The Amethyst Mountains covered a great expanse of land, with a circumference of hundreds of thousands of kilometers. In the Infernal Realm, a circumference of hundreds of thousands of kilometers actually wasn't too extravagant an amount of land, but it still stretched as far as one could see with the naked eye. In a single glance, all one could see was endless mountains, stretching off into the distance.

At the same time, a white fog floated above the Amethyst Mountains.

The strange thing was, it was only possible to see the fog. It wasn't possible to see the Amethyst Mountains.

"Indeed, as it was said in the books, the Amethyst Mountains, despite being a mountain range, is also known as the 'Fog Sea'. From the outside, one can't see so much as a single rock. All one can see is an endless amount of white mist." Linley sighed as he spoke, while the nearby Jenkin, Delia, and Bebe all stared, spellbound, at the beautiful sight before them.

An area of hundreds of thousands of kilometers, completely covered by coiling white mists. The light of the Blood Sun shone down from the skies into the white mist, creating brilliant scenes and colors that were indeed pleasing to behold.

"How strange." Delia exhaled in surprised. "This large mountain range of hundreds of thousands of kilometers is actually completely wrapped by countless amounts of white mist, in a way which is so tight. The mist has persisted for countless years without dissipating. It truly is odd." Delia couldn't understand it at all.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe had at least learned some things from books regarding the Amethyst Mountains.

As for Jenkin, he was completely lost.

"This is the Amethyst Mountains?" Jenkin still couldn't believe that this fog-shrouded area was the Amethyst Mountains.

"Let's go. We're heading down now." Linley, with a thought, made the metallic lifeform disappear into thin air. Linley, Delia, and Bebe all flew downwards, while Jenkin was caught slightly offguard at first, but he then quickly stabilized himself and also hurried downwards.

The surface of the Amethyst Mountains was covered by the Fog Sea.

Outside the Amethyst Mountains, however, there was a veritable flood of people flying about. The number was so staggeringly high that it could be described as shocking to hear. Many Deities remained at the borders of this Fog Sea, hoping to be lucky enough to encounter amethysts.

On the surface area in the perimeter outside the Amethyst Mountains, within Linley's line of vision, there were at least three ancient castles.

As Linley's group of four drew near, immediately, two middle-aged men dressed in black uniforms flew over. They couldn't help but glance in Delia in surprise, clearly noticing that she was a Highgod Fiend. In their hearts, they were puzzled. "A Highgod Fiend would come here to harvest amethysts?"

Highgod Fiends, when serving as escorts, would receive compensation far greater than what they could receive by mining amethysts. Generally speaking, only Demigods and Gods would come harvest amethysts.

After realizing that Delia was a Highgod Fiend, the two immediately put on a noticeably better attitude. One of them, a golden-haired man, smiled and said, "Might I ask why you have come?"

Bebe laughed and said, "The three of us are just going in to take a look. This kid here is coming to harvest amethysts."

"Oh?" The golden-haired man nodded. "The Amethyst Mountains are jointly governed by our eighteen clans. But of course, we won't stop outsiders from going in. Whether for the purpose of tourism or for mining amethysts, all who enter will each pay five thousand inkstones."

Linley nodded slightly. The rule of paying an entrance fee of five thousand inkstones was a rule that had persisted for countless years.

Even the record books had noted this.

"What if you don't have inkstones?" Jenkin suddenly asked.

"Don't have them?" The middle-aged man glanced at him sideways, then laughed calmly. "If you don't have any, that's fine as well. We can still let you in, but we won't give you a writ of passage, so when you come out...you will have to pay us three amethysts!"

"Writ of passage?" Linley raised an eyebrow.

The golden-haired man nodded. "Right. Everyone who pays five thousand inkstones can receive a writ of passage. When you come out, as long as you return the writ of passage to us, you can leave."

Linley's group now understood.

"If you want to pay five thousand inkstones, please come to the centralized entrance point." The golden-haired man pointed to a distant, gaudily built palace gate.

Actually, the Amethyst Mountains were very vast. One could enter them by any point through the air or the land.

"Remember. The writ of passage you receive has to be returned. If you want to flee...." The golden-haired man smiled. "Then you will suffer the attacks of the experts of our eighteen clans. Heh heh. Just a reminder, that's all."

Linley laughed calmly. "Thank you."

Immediately, he led Delia, Bebe, and Jenkin towards that entrance.

"Boss, that fellow seems to be rather arrogant. He keeps on saying 'eighteen clans' this and that." Bebe muttered.

"Bebe, don't mind him." Linley himself knew exactly how powerful these eighteen clans were. "The Redbud Continent has only a single amethyst mining area. This is an astonishing treasure site. You know how much an amethyst is worth. Can you imagine how many amethysts the Amethyst Mountains produce?"

Bebe was startled.

Amethysts? Every single Redbud Castle and Blacksand Castle had a large amount of amethysts for sale, so many that one couldn't even count them all.

"The 'Amethyst Mountains', which produces an inexhaustible amount of amethysts, is truly a treasure site! The wealth of any of the eighteen clans is far greater than that of the Boyd clan's." Linley sighed in amazement. "For the eighteen clans to be able to monopolize this treasure site, the Amethyst Mountains, has to mean that they have the support of an Asura. And what's more, most likely there is more than just one Asura behind them!"

The Amethyst Mountains was the only amethyst production site within the Redbud Continent, but the Redbud Continent had nearly twenty prefectures, which meant nearly twenty Asuras.

If one just spent a little bit of time thinking about it, one would understand that the power of these eighteen clans had to be so great that not even a Seven Star Fiend like Elquin, much less an ordinary Highgod Fiend, would dare cause trouble for them!

At the entrance to the Amethyst Mountains.

"Alright, twenty thousand inkstones!" With a flip of his hand, Linley retrieved two long azurite strips.

The lady dressed in the long black uniform casually brought out four identical looking seals, giving one to each person in Linley's group.

"Thank you, Mr. Linley." Jenkin said gratefully. Actually, on the way over from the metallic lifeform, Jenkin had discovered...that amongst Linley's group, the one who made the decisions was not the Highgod Fiend, Delia, but rather it was Linley.

"Let's go."

Linley flew directly into the air, heading alongside Delia and Bebe towards the foggy sea.

The light of the Blood Sun shone down on the gently flowing sea of fog, creating dazzling colors and one beautiful scene after another.

"So beautiful." Delia laughed in a very happy manner. "Linley, look at that!" Delia pointed deeper into the Fog Sea, where tufts of white mist, under the light of the sun, formed winged horses that were galloping in the air.

"Vast and endless...it is so comfortable just looking at it all." Linley laughed. "Let's go take a look inside."

As he spoke, Linley began to fly deeper in, but right at that moment...

"The four of you, halt." A voice rang out.

Linley's group of four came to a halt, puzzled. Turning, they saw a youth dressed in a black uniform armor fly over. "Can it be that you don't know how dangerous this Fog Sea is? Why are you running rashly towards the Fog Sea?"

"Danger?" Puzzled, Linley pointed towards the others in the distance. "Aren't there people in the Fog Sea already?"

As Linley saw it, if others could enter, then he should be fine to enter as well. In addition, those books he had bought regarding the Infernal Realm had given a brief description of the Amethyst Mountains. But of course, those books were not very thick, and they only devoted a few pages to each prefecture.

"Let me give you a warning." The youth said solemnly. "The 'Fog Sea' of the Amethyst Mountains is very bizarre. Visibility within it is very low.

Generally speaking, Gods only can see for a hundred meters within it. Therefore...no matter what, within the Fog Sea, everyone will stay only in the outer reaches. If you are a God, you cannot enter more than a hundred meters!"

Linley's group began to listen carefully.

The youth said solemnly, "Everyone who goes in deeper, so deep that they can no longer see the outside, will never be able to come out again!"

Linley's group was greatly shocked.

"Unable to come out?" Bebe called out in surprise. "How is that possible? It's just white mist. Although visibility is low, if we fly in a straight line from within, why can't we fly out?"

"You won't be able to fly out!" The youth said solemnly. "As long as you are within the outer perimeter of the Fog Sea and can still see the outside world, you will be able to fly out. But if you are unable to see the outside world, you'll be finished. Therefore, you must be careful when mining amethysts!"

"Even if there are amethysts just ten meters in front of you, no matter what, don't pass through into that dangerous region! As soon as you enter it, you won't be able to leave!"

The youth said solemnly.

Linley frowned as he looked towards the large number of Deities hovering at the borders of the distant Fog Sea, and he immediately began to understand. "Right. If the Fog Sea wasn't dangerous, then these Deities probably would've charged deep into it long ago to find more amethysts. Why are they still at the border then?"

Linley was now certain that the Fog Sea definitely did have dangers within.

"Remember. At all times, make sure you don't go into the forbidden area, even if there is a heap of amethysts hovering in front of you. Don't go in." The youth finished, then left.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe looked at each other. They couldn't help but feel amazed at the marvels of nature.

"Delia, we aren't here to harvest amethysts, just to take a look around. Come. Let's go to some other places." Linley didn't care too much. He immediately led Delia and Bebe to fly around the borders of the Fog Sea, while Jenkin temporarily continued to follow Linley's group.

Linley's group walked for a while.

"The captain's luck isn't bad. He actually discovered amethysts just now. I've been here twenty years, but I haven't found a single one yet. Hey, Olivier, have you gotten anything yet?" At this moment, there was a small team of ten or so people gathered together.

His hair was black mixed with white, and his robe was gray. It was Olivier, who had also come from the Yulan continent.

Olivier shook his head. "Bad luck."

"Don't be discouraged. Come, let's go drink a few cups. My treat." Their leader, the captain, said with a laugh.

The team flew towards the outer regions of the Fog Sea, drawing near the entrance, where a number of restaurants were located.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 31, Blessing, Curse

Olivier's group had in total twelve people. They entered a restaurant, then headed to a corner of the restaurant and sat down at three round tables.

"Captain, you found an amethyst. Don't be stingy." Someone called out.

"Same old rules!" The leader, the big-bearded captain, laughed loudly. "Each person a bottle of Norcha [Nuo'si'sha]. If you want to drink more, buy it yourself." Immediately, the big-bearded captain called out in a high voice, "Hey, hurry up! Twelve bottles of Norcha!"

Norcha was a fairly good brand of wine. One bottle cost around ten inkstones, while twelve cost a hundred and twenty.

Generally speaking, whoever amongst them found an amethyst would invite others to celebrate with them. After all, mining amethysts was a matter of luck. If your luck was good, you'd find one every few days. If your luck was poor, a thousand years could pass without one.

Seizing the bottle of wine, Olivier took a gulp, but his forehead was faintly creased in a frown.

"Almost thirty years, but I haven't found a single amethyst!" Olivier was very annoyed. Raising his head, he took another large gulp.

After arriving in the Infernal Realm, Olivier's luck had been pretty good at the start. After reaching the level of God, he had managed to scrape up ten thousand inkstones to take the Fiend trials, and had been lucky enough to pass, becoming a One Star Fiend. But who would have thought that he had failed on his very first mission?

In addition, while fleeing wildly, he had become accidentally separated from his good friend Bachelor.

Olivier had originally been travelling with Bachelor. After having worked hard to scrape up ten thousand inkstones to take the Fiend trials, he had planned to accept missions, but he failed in his very first one. Thus, in reality, Olivier hadn't made any money at all. After having failed, his total wealth all together was just a pitiful few hundred inkstones.

Use a few hundred inkstones to return to a city? Impossible!

Fortunately, at that time, the mission point was fairly close to the Amethyst Mountains, and he had heard of the place before, and so he had carefully spent decades to stealthily make his way here. Per the rules of this place, as he had been unable to pay the five thousand inkstone fee, he had to pay three amethysts before departing.

"Forget about three amethysts. I haven't even found one. It's been almost thirty years." The more Olivier thought about it, the more miserable he felt. Raising his head, he took another large gulp of wine, draining half of it. "This damn place...there's no way to take on missions here either."

If he wanted to go back safely, he would have to have enough money.

To have enough money, for Olivier, currently only a God, the only choice was to harvest amethysts.

"Olivier, hey. You aren't the only one to not yet find a single amethyst, you know." Someone nearby said. "Don't be discouraged. Last time, didn't we run into that unlucky fellow who had been here for ten thousand years without finding an amethyst?"

Olivier forced out a smile.

He had to stay on good terms with these people.

Harvesting amethysts in the Amethyst Mountains wasn't necessarily safe. This wasn't a city, after all!

In the Amethyst Mountains, if one was lucky enough, one might acquire a pile of amethysts all at once, but many people, upon seeing this fortune, might kill the person who acquired it and rob them of it. This was very normal. Thus, many Gods would form into small teams.

Olivier's group of twelve was one such team. At least, they were able to protect themselves.

Tens of thousands of kilometers away from Olivier, Linley's group of four was traversing the boundaries of the Fog Sea. Linley's group hadn't come here to harvest amethysts, just to enjoy the scenery.

"Jenkin, you don't have to follow us. You can go harvest your amethysts. We'll just stroll around the Amethyst Mountains for a time. In a day or two, we'll probably leave." Linley turned to glance at Jenkin and said casually.

Jenkin felt gratitude in his heart towards Linley's group.

"Mr. Linley, the three of you have shown me, Jenkin, such benevolence. I truly don't know how to repay you. In addition, after you leave, who knows how long it will be before we meet again? What's more, mining amethysts is purely a matter of luck. Perhaps by staying alongside the rest of you, Mr. Linley, I'll be able to run into some amethysts." Jenkin jested.

"Not bad, kid. You are a loyal friend." Bebe slapped Jenkin on the shoulders, pretending to be wizened and experienced.

Linley laughed and nodded. "Fine, then. We'll accompany you in mining amethysts. I want to see if in the next day or two, we'll be lucky enough to acquire one."

The white mist billowed about, and Linley glanced at the boundless white mists. "Let's go. Let's go inside the white fog. Remember, everyone. No matter what, keep your eyes peeled on the outside. Make sure that you are able to see the outside." As he spoke, Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Jenkin all entered the white fog.

Linley stared into the white mist in surprise. "This white mist is so cool and refreshing." The temperature in the white mist was very low. When it encountered the skin, it felt like ice cubes.

But Linley's group didn't mind.

"Boss, hurry up." Bebe actually walked backwards into the mist, his eyes focused on the outside. "I can still see the outside. Keep heading in..." Bebe chuckled as he constantly flew backwards, and Linley and the other two naturally followed him in.

Everyone flew very slowly. After flying only roughly eighty meters, Linley's group unconsciously came to a halt.

"Huh? How strange!"

Linley couldn't help but begin to frown.

"Whooooosh." In the boundless white fog, there was a gentle sound of blowing wind, but although the sound of the wind was very quiet, Linley still felt his head begin to grow dizzy. Linley furiously shook his head, forcing himself to stay clearheaded.

Delia and Bebe were trying hard to stay clearheaded as well

As for Jenkin, he was already beginning to grow dizzy and was unable to tell the directions. Linley immediately grabbed him while retreating slightly.

Only now did Jenkin become clearheaded again. Upon becoming clearheaded, Jenkin was shocked. "What happened just now? I thought I heard a 'whooshing' wind sound, and then I felt the world begin to spin. I felt so dizzy." Jenkin felt shocked and terrified.

"This Fog Sea is extraordinarily bizarre." Bebe muttered in praise.

"Linley, we'd best be careful. We're just here to look around, not to harvest amethysts. Don't let anything happen." Delia pulled at Linley's hand as she spoke.

Linley held Delia's hand and looked at the concern in Delia's eyes. After having experienced the golden magma pool, Linley didn't want Delia to be in any more danger again, and so he immediately laughed and nodded, "Don't worry, we won't go any deeper into the Fog Sea."

"Hey, you guys." Suddenly, a muscular man with short jade hair flew over. Laughing, he said, "You guys, be careful. Don't get trapped inside. You won't be able to get out."

"Excuse me, friend." Jenkin smiled as he spoke. "I'm curious about one thing. Why is it that if one goes deep into the Fog Sea, one won't be able to come out? If I leave my clone outside while I go inside, since I can sense the direction and location my clone is in, shouldn't I be able to come out?"

Hearing this, Linley's eyes couldn't help but light up.

His words made sense.

If one's clone was outside, one wouldn't lose all sense of direction. There shouldn't be any problems.

“Hey, don’t ask me, I don’t know either. You can talk all you want, but reality is what matters.” The jade-haired man pursed his lips and laughed. “If you aren’t afraid, you can place your clone outside and use your own body to go inside and test it. But in every case I’ve ever heard of, not a single person who went in has ever made it out alive, regardless of what method was used.”

The jade-haired youth, finished with his words, said, “Alright, you guys, best of luck.” After speaking, the jade-haired youth flew off into the distance.

Linley turned his head, once more staring into the boundless white mist.

Suddenly, Linley was startled. “Hey, that’s...” From afar, a ray of violet light flashed out, and Linley immediately moved over there. Sweeping out with his hand, he grabbed that ray of violet light. It was an amethyst. Linley couldn’t help but laugh.

He hadn’t expected that he would be so lucky.

“Boss, is that an amethyst?” Bebe immediately drew near as well.

“Right. Jenkin, here you go.” Linley, with a flip of his hand, tossed the amethyst over to Jenkin. Linley already had a large number of amethysts. He wouldn’t care about one or two.

Jenkin knew that Linley was very rich. How could an ordinary person buy a metallic lifeform?

Jenkin didn't waste any time with words, immediately storing the amethyst, then laughing, "Mr. Linley, your luck really is excellent. As soon as you arrived, you acquired an amethyst. I've heard of people who've spent a thousand years without finding one."

"That's only for people with bad luck. For those with good luck, they'll find one every few days." Linley said disdainfully.

"Boss, since your luck is good, I refuse to believe mine will be bad." Bebe's eyes were shining as he stared at his surroundings. "I'm going to harvest amethysts as well!"

"I'll try my luck also." Delia laughed.

As Linley's group began to tour and explore the Fog Sea, Olivier's group had flown back to the borders of the Fog Sea once more. The twelve of them separated slightly, maintaining a distance of less than a hundred meters. Everyone quietly waited...waited for amethysts to fly out.

"Amethysts? Who knows how long it will be before I get one."

Olivier was currently controlling his 'divine darkness clone' by making it train. His divine light clone had already reached the God stage, but his divine darkness clone was still at the Demigod stage. Olivier was hurriedly trying to increase the power of his divine darkness clone.

"The current level of darkness-style divine power I have is too low. Once it rises and becomes on par with my light-style divine power, with my fusion of 'light' and 'darkness', how could any ordinary God be a match for me?" Olivier thought to himself, while at the same time carefully inspecting the Fog Sea.

The Blood Sun set. The Violet Moon rose into the skies.

When night passed, the Blood Sun once more rose into the skies. A new day had arrived.

During this entire day, Olivier's group of twelve had stayed in their original positions, virtually not moving at all. Those who came to harvest amethysts were all extremely patient. It was normal for them to wait up to a hundred years or a thousand years in the same location.

"Huh?" Olivier looked suspiciously at a distant spot of violet light.

"Swoosh!" A ray of violet light rapidly flashed towards Olivier. Olivier was instantly overjoyed, and almost immediately, he charged forward. After having been in the Fog Sea for nearly thirty years, Olivier knew what the safe distance was.

The others were all farther away from the violet flash. How could they get there faster than Olivier?

"Is that?"

While drawing closer, Olivier found himself stunned. It wasn't a single amethyst flying towards him; it was an entire collection of amethysts, fused tightly into a dense cluster...a small pile of amethysts!

"There has to be at least ten thousand here!" Olivier was stunned.

In the Fog Sea, it was true that occasionally, a pile of amethysts would fly out. There had even been cases of a million amethysts flying out all together in one clump. However, that had caused a massive slaughter to erupt. After all, a million amethysts represented billions of inkstones.

To Gods, this was an enormous fortune.

"So many amethysts?" With a wave of his hand, Olivier collected all of the amethysts into his interspatial ring. In the moment he stored it, he became clearly aware of the number. There was exactly eighteen thousand amethysts, worth over a hundred million inkstones! This was a true fortune!

"I hope no one else noticed." Olivier prayed silently.

But when Olivier turned his head, he felt shock in his heart. Because those eleven people were staring at him!

"Olivier, your luck wasn't bad." The captain pursed his lips and grinned. "Although I couldn't see exactly how many there were, I expect there were at least over ten thousand. The finder gets a share, but shouldn't you take it out so we twelve brothers can divide it equally?"

Olivier's face changed. Twelve people divide it equally?

This was something he had gotten himself.

Olivier ground his teeth. "How about this. Each of you can get eight hundred amethysts! The rest are mine. You also know that there were roughly ten thousand. With twelve people, I shall get just a bit more."

"No need for you to divide it up. Remove the blood binding on your interspatial ring and let us inspect it, and then we can divide it up." Immediately, some spoke out.

"Remove the blood binding?" Olivier understood in his heart.

The people of the Infernal Realm wouldn't truly be so fair.

"Alright, Jenkin. No need to accompany us any further. You've already accompanied us so far. Continue with your amethyst harvesting. We'll leave now." From not too far away, a voice rang out. When this voice entered Olivier's ears, it caused Olivier to have a very familiar feeling.

This was a familiar person's voice!

"Mr. Linley, be careful on your journey." Another voice rang out.

Olivier was instantly shocked. "Linley?" Olivier turned to look at the source of the voice, and within the hazy white mist, Linley, Delia, and Bebe were currently flying together. Bebe glanced over towards him as well, and then chuckled, "Boss, look, a group of people are surrounding one person, and, hey, that guy...hey, boss, that's Olivier!!!"

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 32, Violet Light Rising to the Heavens

Surprised, Linley turned to look as well. "It really is Olivier!" But currently, Olivier was surrounded by a group of people. Sweeping them with his gaze, Linley felt quite calm. "These eleven are all Gods. Nothing to fear. However, why are they all staring at Olivier? Can it be that Olivier has received some sort of treasure?"

While thinking this, Linley began to fly towards Olivier, and Delia and Bebe were naturally by his side.

"Haha, Olivier, what's going on?" Bebe chortled. "Need us to help out?"

Olivier saw Linley's group of three fly over, and he immediately recognized them. "Linley, his wife, and that Bebe." Olivier couldn't help but laugh bitterly to himself. As he saw it, Linley in the past had only been a Demigod. After dozens of years had passed, Linley would at most be a God.

"The three of you came at such a time!" Olivier sighed to himself.

At such an urgent moment, Olivier hadn't carefully inspected the strength of Linley's group. After all, in Olivier's mind, Linley's group of three consisted of just three Gods. But there were eleven Gods surrounding them!

"The three of you!" Suddenly, a God came to stand and block in front of Linley's group. "This affair is between us and Olivier. The three of you had best leave."

Suddenly...

"Swoosh!"

A figured flashed by, and a blurred leg shot out like lightning, smashing viciously against the chest of that God. The ribs splintered and caved downwards, while that God was knocked flying deep into the Fog Sea like a sand bag. It must be understood, that was the Fog Sea!

One couldn't enter the Fog Sea beyond the 'danger area'. That kick sent him flying dozens of meters, but at the critical moment, that God immediately let out a furious roar and forced himself to come to a halt.

"You...!" The God pointed angrily at the straw-hat wearing Bebe.

"Me what, me?" Bebe stared at him, then barked back. "Me and my Boss were flying over, minding our own business, when you suddenly blocked our way. Who else was I supposed to kick besides you? Punk, I showed mercy just now. Otherwise, I would've kicked you to death with one kick!"

The eleven Gods couldn't help but feel enraged, and yet at the same time, they felt shock as well.

Bebe's kick had simply been too fast! Although it was at a close distance, the man hadn't been able to block at all. Actually...Bebe himself was naturally talented at the Shadowshape Doppelganger technique, and he was also a divine beast Godeater Rat, with an extremely powerful body and who was naturally fast.

"Aren't the three of you going a bit too far?" The leader, their 'captain', said.

Linley and Delia didn't speak, but Bebe glanced sideways at him. "Too far? Can what I did be considered going 'too far'? I was actually extremely courteous just now. If I really wanted to go too far, do you think any of you eleven would still be alive?" Bebe swept his gaze across the eleven, as though looking at eleven prey animals.

"Captain, that woman, that woman is a Highgod Fiend!" A divine sense suddenly rang out in the captain's mind.

"Highgod Fiend?" The captain was greatly shocked.

Because it was clear from the manner in which Linley's group had flown over that Linley was the leader, many of them hadn't paid attention to that seemingly fragile woman. But when they carefully inspected her, they discovered...that they couldn't sense any aura from Delia at all.

A Highgod! And a Highgod Fiend!

Not just the captain; the others discovered this as well.

"Hey, how come you all went mute?" Bebe, as a divine beast 'Godeater Rat', was naturally filled with savagery and battlelust. He was hoping for a good fight, and he stared viciously at the eleven. "Didn't you guys say I was going too far? C'mon, I'll show you what going too far really means!"

"No need!" The captain immediately called out, while at the same time, the look on his face turned humble.

"Huh?" Bebe glanced at him.

The captain forced out a smile. "Since the three of you know Olivier, we won't disturb Olivier in the midst of his reunion with you." And then, the captain looked at the others. The eleven Gods, as though by tacit agreement, immediately flew away at high speed.

In the twinkling of an eye, only Linley's group and Olivier remained.

"They fled really fast!" Bebe pursed his lips as he spoke.

Olivier was greatly shocked. "They fled?" That pile of amethysts, to Gods, was very enticing, as Olivier well knew. Three mere Gods definitely couldn't make eleven Gods flee. Olivier swept Bebe, Linley, and then Delia with his gaze.

Olivier was greatly shocked. "This Delia, she has actually become a High, Highgod?"

"Olivier, long time no see." A warm, gentle voice rang out. Linley, Delia, and Bebe flew towards Olivier.

"Olivier, it seems as though you're in pretty sorry shape." Bebe teased.

Olivier recovered from his astonishment. His face filled with gratitude, he said, "Linley, I truly do need to thank you this time. If it hadn't been for you, I really would have been in trouble this time!" Olivier knew very well that if it hadn't been for Linley's group, the other eleven definitely would have attacked.

At this point, he had only reached the God level in his divine light clone. In terms of power, there were some amongst the eleven who were more powerful than him.

"Can it be that you received a priceless treasure, causing them to feel greedy and so join forces against you?" Linley asked.

Thinking of this, Olivier let out a low sigh. "Just now, suddenly, a pile of amethysts flew out from the Fog Sea. This is an enormous fortune. However, blessings and disasters come together. I acquired this pile of amethysts, arousing their murderous intent."

Linley nodded in understanding.

Linley suddenly thought of a person. "Olivier, you know Bachelor, right?"

"Bachelor? You met him?" Olivier was overjoyed. "How is Bachelor doing? He should be doing better than me. During our last mission, we were separated."

Seeing the look on Olivier's face, Linley understood that Bachelor and Olivier definitely were on very good terms.

"He is dead." Linley said directly.

"Dead?" Olivier was startled.

Linley let out a low sigh. "Roughly twenty years ago, the two of us accepted the same escort mission. We got to know each other during the mission. However...while escorting, we suffered an ambush from an expert, and Bachelor was struck by an attack and killed."

Linley still clearly remembered the scene of how Bachelor had been smashed to death by a boulder. Now, thinking back to it, it all seemed a matter of course. That Volcano Titan was Phusro, an ultimate expert with the power of an 'Asura'. Using some boulders to kill Gods was simplicity itself.

Olivier was silent for a moment, then let out a low sigh. "Yet another one dead!"

Linley, Delia, and Bebe's hearts trembled. Although this phrase, 'yet another one dead' was a simple one, this phrase contained within it many stories, which they could easily imagine.

"The Infernal Realm is a place of survival of the fittest. Battles and slaughters are normal in the Infernal Realm." Linley said. "From the smallest tribes and bandit groups to the most powerful Six Star Fiends, Seven Star Fiends, and even Asura-level experts, struggles continue unabated."

"Right. Survival of the strongest." Olivier nodded.

"Linley, the three of you seem to have done much better than me in the Infernal Realm." Olivier laughed. He had also noticed the Fiend medallions on their chests, and knew that Delia was a Highgod Fiend. "However, what are you doing here?"

Olivier didn't believe that Linley's group was here to harvest amethysts.

"We helped someone on the way over, so we brought him here. At the same time, we wanted to do some sightseeing in the Amethyst Mountains. I've heard that the Fog Sea is extremely beautiful and is one of the great marvelous sights of the Infernal Realm." Linley laughed.

"You came here for sightseeing?" Olivier didn't know what he should say.

When even staying alive was a problem for a person, one would force himself to come up with ways to grow stronger. Only when one was in no danger would one think about sightseeing.

Just based on the fact that Linley had come from sightseeing, Olivier was certain that Linley's life was a rather leisurely one these days.

"Right. The scenery here really is excellent." Olivier could only agree.

"Huh, what's going on?" Linley turned his head, puzzled. From afar, violent energy ripples were spreading out. Delia, Bebe, and Olivier all looked over. Even angry roars could be heard coming from there, as well as bellows.

"Kill that white-robed punk. He has a pile of amethysts!" That roar rang out from afar.

Instantly, many people nearby were drawn forward.

"Everyone, quick, kill that white-robed punk!"

"Ah, it was seized by the red-robed guy!"

From afar, angry roars continued unabated. In an instant, over a thousand people flooded over, causing utter chaos.

Even Linley's group of four was shocked.

"A pile of amethysts?" Olivier's expression was rather priceless. He himself had acquired a pile, after all.

"Come, let's take a look." Bebe said eagerly.

Linley nodded. Most of the people here harvesting amethysts were Gods or Demigods. His power was enough to not fear the likes of them.

By the time Linley's group of four drew near, the violent battle sounds had died down, as a pursuit had begun instead! A group of people were chasing after a green-robed man who wielded a long black spear, who was frantically fleeing at high speed.

Linley's group swept this many people flying about in front of them.

"It seems that pile of amethysts was taken by the green-robed man." Linley said with a calm laugh.

"It really is quite insane." Bebe muttered. "It's just a pile of amethysts. Is it worth getting so worked up?"

Olivier said, "That pile of amethysts...each amethyst is very small, and so a small pile represents more than ten thousand amethysts. That's worth seventy or eighty million inkstones. To Gods, this is indeed a huge fortune."

Bebe was utterly disdainful.

With a networth of over two hundred billion, how could he care about an amount like that?

"But of course, that bit of money isn't much in the eyes of a Highgod Fiend." Olivier continued.

"Ah! A pile of amethysts! Him, kill him!" In another direction, yet more angry shouts could be heard, and instantly, from afar, a wild series of battles could be heard to start.

"Bang!" From yet another direction, exploding sounds rang out.

Linley frowned. "Wait. Something's wrong here."

Linley could clearly sense that right now, there were many different areas which were emanating with the sounds of violent energy ripples. Clearly, battles were going on everywhere. Generally speaking, one, two, or even dozens of amethysts couldn't cause these Gods to battle like this. Only if a large pile of amethysts appeared would this happen!

Acquiring amethysts was a matter of luck.

But now, battles were occurring in many areas.

"What is going on?" Delia was puzzled and frowned. "Can it be that there are many areas with piles of amethysts flying out?"

Delia's guess was correct!

Right at this moment, the entire Amethyst Mountains seemed to suddenly become generous. In multiple areas, large numbers of amethysts flew out, sometimes by the piles. Each pile had at least a thousand amethysts, while the largest had more than a million amethysts flying out in a clump.

Utter chaos!

So many amethysts caused the Gods to go insane.

The Amethyst Mountains covered a circumference of hundreds of thousands of kilometers. Around the Amethyst Mountains, there were eighteen ancient castles scattered in different locations, each of which was the base for one of the eighteen clans. But right now, there were people hovering in the air above all eighteen castles.

"Milord, so many amethysts have charged out. The Amethyst Mountains seem to have gone wild." In the air above a castle, a black-robed man and a violet-robed man were hovering in the air, staring at the Fog Sea. The black-robed man spoke respectfully.

The violet-robed man stared at the Fog Sea, a look of delight appearing on his face. "Haha...violet light rising to the heavens! It truly is violet light rising to the heavens! After so many years, the 'Fog Wave' of the Amethyst Mountains has finally once more descended, haha..." The violet-robed man was overjoyed.

Right now, looking at the Fog Sea from outside...

Deep within the Fog Sea, an eye-piercingly brilliant violet glow had risen into the skies, piercing straight through the foggy clouds. It was incomparably dazzling.

"Rumble..."

The 'Fog Sea' covering the entire Amethyst Mountains suddenly exploded wildly, crashing outwards in every direction like bellowing waves. In but the blink of an eye, the wild waves violently expanded by nearly ten kilometers, expanding all the way outwards until they nearly reached those eighteen castles.

As for those people who had originally been at the borders of the Fog Sea harvesting amethysts, they weren't able to react at all before being 'devoured' by the Fog Sea.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 33, The Strange Fog Sea

The Fog Sea had a circumference of hundreds of thousands of kilometers. It must be understood that Linley's homeland, the 'Yulan continent', had a circumference of only thirty thousand kilometers. It was less than a tenth of the Fog Sea in size!

The people who had been originally harvesting amethysts at the borders of the Fog Sea, all together, were over a hundred million in number. But of course, a hundred million Deities, in the vast, endless Infernal Realm, was nothing at all.

These hundred million people were all swallowed up, leaving behind only the overseeing staff of the eighteen clans at the outer perimeter, as well as the staff of those eighteen castles.

"Haha...one can harvest for a trillion years without getting as much as we will today!" A violet-robed figure standing in the air above one of the castles was filled with eagerness, and he barked towards the people below, "Send the order. All oversight squads are to go collect amethysts. Any who take them for themselves, upon being discovered, are to be put to death!"

"Yes, milord!"

From within this castle, a flood of people flew out, numbering more than a thousand. They dispersed into the air around the Amethyst Mountains. The uniformed oversight squads also began to quickly harvest amethysts in accordance with the order. The staff members of the eighteen clans all began to wildly harvest.

Whoever harvested more and faster would earn more!

Outside the roiling fog banks, a large number of figures could be seen scurrying about, and many amethyst stones which flew out at high speed were collected into interspatial rings.

"So many amethysts?" A bald man dressed in a uniform muttered, while waving his hand, snatching a flying pile of amethysts into his interspatial ring. "Is this harvesting? This is just grabbing money. I really want to get some for myself."

The subordinates of the eighteen clans were all astonished and envious, but they didn't dare to take any for themselves.

Because after each harvesting, their interspatial rings would be inspected. They weren't permitted to take so much as a single amethyst for themselves.

"How many amethysts will the clan acquire this time? I've already collected more than a hundred thousand amethysts by myself. Our clan alone has at least a hundred thousand people like me. Good heavens, doesn't that mean there will be more than ten billion amethysts? That represents more than a hundred trillion inkstones!" A simple calculation made by those uniformed harvesters frightened them out of their minds.

What's more, they had only been harvesting for a short while.

The Fog Sea continued to roil about, with large amounts of amethysts shooting out at high speed everywhere.

It was indeed a fact that the rewards the eighteen clans had reaped over a trillion years would not be as much as they would reap from the Fog Wave of today.

"All of you, hurry up!" Those higher level staff members shouted. "Hurry up and harvest them! Don't let the other clans take them away!" As they shouted loudly, they would occasionally deign to reach out and snatch some amethysts as well. After all, sometimes a single pile of amethysts had hundreds of thousands of amethysts in them.

That represented a fortune of trillions of inkstones!

Grabbing money! This money making speed was simply too ridiculous.

No wonder the eighteen clans were so excited about this 'Fog Wave'.

The Fog Wave brought the eighteen clans enormous wealth, but at the same time, the Fog Wave swept those pitiable Gods and Demigods all into the depths as well. Because of the sudden expansion by nearly ten kilometers, the people who had been within the Fog Sea's borders were all now nearly ten kilometers within it.

A hundred meters was the danger line. Ten kilometers?

None of them would be able to return!

Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier had been chatting and laughing about going to a restaurant to eat. But who would have expected that the Fog Sea would suddenly expand?

It must be understood that normally, the Fog Sea constantly roiled about, and Linley's group was within the borders of the Fog Sea. They weren't able to notice that the Fog Sea had expanded. In addition, the actual expansion of the Fog Sea was simply too fast. In but an instant, Linley's group of four entered the danger zone!

They didn't actively go in, but the Fog Sea had expanded. Ten kilometers deep into the Fog Sea?

At a hundred meters distance, their heads would go dizzy.

Ten kilometers?

"Whoooooosh." That low, rumbling wind constantly rang out, and one attack after another hammered against their souls. Most Gods, upon falling into this environment, would immediately have their minds turn chaotic, but as Linley has a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, he was able to remain clear-minded.

Linley had trained for twenty more years after parting with the Volcano Titan, Phusro.

During these twenty years, Linley had refined a large amount of amethysts and further strengthened his soul, while at the same time he had worked diligently to repair the flaw in the soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. By now, the strength of the 'patch' over the flaw was excellent.

"What's going on?" Linley fought to stay clear-minded.

"Boss, my head feels miserable." Bebe frantically shook his head.
"However, I can still maintain my awareness." Bebe suddenly closed his eyes, then opened them again, trying to keep himself awake.

Linley turned and saw that although Bebe had been able to maintain his clear-mindedness, Delia and Olivier...

Although Delia had reached the Highgod level, Delia didn't have a soul-protecting divine artifact, and what's more, she had fused with a divine spark to become a Deity. Although she had absorbed some Golden Soul-Pearls, under the attack of the strange sound of the wind, she was beginning to turn woozy.

"Lin...Linley...I....my head hurts..." Delia forced out a few words from her lips.

Linley immediately grabbed Delia by the hand. He understood what Delia was going through. In this sort of environment, staying clear-minded was already very hard, much less using divine sense to speak. Delia was only just barely able to say a few words. Even her eyes were occasionally clear, occasionally lost.

"Boss, Olivier has lost consciousness." Bebe grabbed Olivier by the hand, afraid that Olivier would drift away from their position.

"Olivier isn't able to stay conscious?" Linley was secretly shocked. Olivier had a mutated soul, and yet even he wasn't able to stay awake?

Linley stared at the surroundings. The visibility within the Fog Sea was very low, and Linley's group was only able to just barely see past a hundred meters. Linley forcibly suppressed his dizziness as he looked around himself, but no matter where he looked, all he saw was white fog."

"Boss, there's white fog everywhere. We can't see the outside." Bebe called out in alarm.

Linley couldn't help but think back to what that person had said when they had arrived: "If you go so deep in as to be unable to see the outside world, you won't be able to leave!"

"Boss, will we be unable to leave?" Bebe also suppressed his dizziness as he spoke. Bebe had a soul-protecting divine artifact. Although its level wasn't as high as Linley's, at least Bebe's soul-protecting divine artifact was an undamaged one.

"Unable to leave?"

Linley's face suddenly changed. "Bebe, have you realized that something's wrong?"

"Wrong?" Bebe didn't understand.

"Haven't you noticed that even if we don't use our divine power to control our bodies, we still won't land?" Linley said. Just now, Olivier had been unable to stay conscious, and yet he was still floating. This was because this area had no gravity at all.

"There really is no gravity." Bebe immediately realized.

Linley ground his teeth, forcing himself to ignore the pain and sense the strength of the wind around him. "All I can feel is that there are surges of wind gently pushing us around, constantly drawing us in." Linley pointed towards their front. "If we don't resist, we will probably enter the dangerous area."

"Therefore, we need to move towards the opposite direction." Linley said.

"Boss, the direction of the wind just changed." Bebe suddenly called out in alarm.

Indeed...

The direction of the wind was chaotic and disordered. Sometimes it would be here, other times it would push there. This immediately caused Linley and Bebe to feel stupefied.

"Swish!" Suddenly, a violet light flashed over.

"Amethysts." Bebe reached out, storing the violet light into his interspatial ring. "Boss, this pile of amethysts, although not large, has at least several thousand within it."

Linley didn't care about amethysts. He was pondering how to leave!

Linley's face suddenly turned ashen. "No one who has entered the Fog Sea has ever been able to leave! If one really was able to so easily exit the depths of the Fog Sea, there probably would have been an entire pile of Highgods harvesting amethysts within it, but even those eighteen clans just quietly wait outside. Clearly, this is a place where you can enter but cannot leave!" Linley immediately deduced this fact.

But this deduction caused Linley to feel miserable, because the strange wind sounds were still causing Linley's head to feel woozy and extremely painful.

"Bebe, forget about everything else. Let's charge straight in front." Linley ground his teeth.

At this time, nothing else mattered.

"Alright." Bebe nodded.

Immediately, Linley held Delia's hand while Bebe pulled Olivier along. The two headed straight forward. The white fog was hazy...and there was no gravity. Linley's group wasn't even able to determine where 'up' and 'down' was, much less the four cardinal directions. They could only blindly charge forward.

"Amethysts!" From afar, some more amethysts flew out. When they drew near Linley, Linley waved his hand and drew in the amethysts, immediately storing ten amethysts into the Coiling Dragon ring while the rest were stored into his interspatial ring.

The Coiling Dragon ring instantly refined those ten amethysts.

"Hey?" Linley's face revealed a hint of delight. "I didn't expect that while absorbing soul essences, the wooziness would weaken!"

However, after flying for a while, the 'whooshing' wind came to an end.

"We finally flew out of that strange area." Linley and Bebe all had small smiles on their faces, while at this moment, Delia and Olivier woke up as well.

"Linley, what happened?" Delia asked. "Just now, even thinking was difficult. Um, the surrounding area is all white fog. I can't see the outside!" Delia was shocked as well.

As they were speaking, Linley's group flew several dozen more meters.

Suddenly...

"BANG!" Very suddenly, a terrifying gravitational force enveloped them. This gravitational force was applied to every part of their body, including their blood vessels, heart, and even...soul!

Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier all suddenly suffered this terrifying gravitational force. For a moment, they were stunned. At an astonishing speed, the four of them were all drawn deep into the Fog Sea. Moments later, the four regained consciousness.

"This is the Supergravity Field!" Linley hurriedly said through mental messaging. "More precisely speaking, this is the Law of the Earth's Profound Mysteries of Gravitational Space." This sort of gravity was simply too ridiculous. Linley hadn't been able to resist at all. At most, he was able to reduce his speed. All four of them were working hard to reduce their speed.

"Gravitational Space?" Delia looked towards Linley.

"It's slightly different." Linley said hurriedly. "Gravitational Space is just one type of powerful gravity which generally applies throughout one's body. It doesn't have any effect on the soul. But this damn place..." Linley couldn't help but shake his head as he spoke.

It seemed as though that surge of strange energy even had a strange, strong attractive force to souls.

"A gravitational affect that works on souls?" Linley felt that this was utterly senseless.

The white fog was everywhere. Linley's group was only able to see so much. Right at this moment, however, an amethyst flew over at such high speed that Linley wasn't able to react at all. In the same instant it arrived at Linley, suddenly...

"CRUNCH!"

The amethyst actually pierced directly through Linley's 'Pulseguard Armor', then just barely pierced through Linley's body. After having pierced through, though, the speed of this amethyst dropped dramatically, and it didn't have sufficient momentum to resist that gravitational field. Immediately, the terrifying gravitational force caused it to halt, then reverse direction and move faster.

Linley was astonished. A single amethyst passing through his body hadn't caused too much damage, but..."The speed of this amethyst was too astonishing. This sort of striking power caused even my 'Pulseguard Armor' to be unable to withstand it."

"Boss, there's people over there." Bebe sent through a soul message.

Linley's group of four struggled to resist the attractive force and slow down, but someone next to Linley flew past them at astonishing speed, not resisting at all. Because...his skull had been riddled with gaping wounds.

"He's dead." Olivier sent through a mental message.

Linley nodded slightly. "He should have been killed by those suddenly appearing amethysts, which shot through his head!" In the white fog, visibility was lowered to a hundred meters. Given the astonishing speed at which the amethysts shot out at, capable of resisting that gravitational effect and also piercing through the 'Pulseguard Armor', not even Linley was able to react in time.

Linley was lucky. He had been struck in the chest.

But the other person had been struck on the head by a pile of amethysts, instantly dying!

"Delia, behind me!" Linley immediately barked, while at the same time Dragonforming!

"Olivier, you hide behind me as well." Bebe said.

Linley's face was grave. This Fog Sea was an extraordinary place. First, that bizarre wind, which should have been present within the 'chaotic region', but now it was the 'gravity region'. The gravity was so powerful that not even Highgods were able to resist it. More importantly...

Both of these regions were able to affect the soul.

"The place where amethysts are formed. How many secrets are contained within these Amethyst Mountains?" Linley was puzzled, but suddenly Linley's face changed dramatically. "Amethysts!" From afar, a fairly thick ray of violet light appeared, instantly striking towards Bebe's body.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 34, Highgod

Within the Fog Sea, Linley's group of four was flying at high speed. They were still only able to just barely see within a hundred meters of themselves. This ray of violet light's sudden appearance caused everyone to be alarmed.

A hundred meters distance, at the speed the violet light travelled, was not enough to allow one to dodge.

"Boom!" A low, rumbling collision sound.

The violet light smashed viciously against Bebe's waist, and Bebe was knocked flying backwards. This fairly thick ray of violet light was actually an entire pile of amethysts, and the collision force from the pile of amethysts actually caused Bebe to temporarily hurtle downwards at high speed, pulling away from Linley's group.

Olivier had been right behind Bebe, but Bebe had smashed right into him. This sudden collision caused Olivier's body to shudder and a hint of blood spurt out from his lips.

"Bebe!" Linley and Delia both turned to look.

Bebe was holding his stomach. Following the gravitational pull, he flew back towards them, and Olivier did the same. They came to a halt alongside Linley. Baring his fangs, Bebe pursed his lips and said, "Boss, the striking power of those amethysts really is quite strong. It smashed straight into my stomach! Ouch!"

Olivier wiped away the blood from his lips in astonishment.

Just now, that amethyst had easily pierced through Linley's body, and what's more, it had been travelling at such speed despite the gravitational pull. One could imagine how astonishing the speed was. And yet, an entire pile of amethysts had struck onto Bebe's stomach, but hadn't harmed Bebe at all.

Bebe had only been knocked into Olivier, and yet the force of that collision had caused Olivier to vomit blood. One could imagine how powerful the concussive power of those amethysts were! Linley actually laughed and joked, "Bebe, your belly hurt for a moment, but you got an entire pile of amethysts out of it?" Linley naturally knew how powerful Bebe's defense was.

Olivier stared in astonishment at Bebe. "Bebe, the striking power of those amethysts was so great, and yet you...?"

Bebe delightedly raised an eyebrow. "What, is it so strange? Are you kidding? Don't you know who I am? I'm Bebe! Hey, Olivier, who told you to stand over there? Hurry up and get behind me." Bebe suddenly barked. After having seen what happened just now, Olivier understood how powerful Bebe was, and he immediately moved to stand behind Bebe.

Linley and Delia were in a line, while Bebe and Olivier were in a line.

In the boundless Fog Sea, Linley's group was unable to truly resist the gravitational force. All they could do was allow it to carry them in deeper.

"Mountain peak!" Bebe cried out in surprise.

Linley turned his head. Indeed, an entire mountain peak was smashing towards him.

A mountain peak smashing towards him?

Linley suddenly twisted his body, managing to force himself to one side. "Hey, how did I dodge this?" Linley was rather surprised. If it had been amethysts shooting at him, he wouldn't have been able to resist at all. But Linley instantly realized. "This mountain isn't moving!"

"We arrived at the Amethyst Mountains. So we were dropping this entire time!" Linley only now realized what direction they had been going in.

Under the pull of the gravitational force, Linley's group brushed past the mountain peak and continued to drop at high speed. This astonishing gravitational force caused all of them to drop astonishingly quickly, and the further down past the mountain peak they went, the vaster the mountain became. Linley suddenly, clearly noticed a large mountain rock flash past his eyes.

No time to dodge!

"Bang!" Linley's group smashed straight into this mountain boulder, halfway down the mountain. Although they had smashed into the mountain, the astonishing gravitational force still dragged down at them.

The four were sent tumbling downwards by the gravity.

As their bodies continuously rolled downwards, Linley felt dizzy, especially after his head had hit the mountain rock.

"Delia!" Linley immediately grabbed the downwards tumbling Delia, while at the same time he viciously clawed at a protruding mountain rock, fixing himself onto the mountain.

Bebe immediately grabbed a mountain rock as well, no longer rolling downwards. As for Olivier, he continued to roll downwards, quickly disappearing.

"Pant, pant!" Linley panted a few breaths, then raised his head to look at Bebe. "Bebe. Where's Olivier?"

"He fell down." Bebe said hurriedly. "I didn't have the chance to catch him."

Linley turned his head to glance at Delia. Delia wasn't injured either. Only now did Linley calm down and look at his surroundings. At the moment, the three of them were halfway down this mountain, and the area around them was covered in white fog. Linley's group couldn't see the bottom of the mountain at all.

"Olivier probably fell down into the bottom." Delia said. "Let's go down?"

"Down. Let's go down." Linley could still sense that astonishing gravitational force. "Be careful. The gravity is too powerful. However, the stones of these Amethyst Mountains are sturdy as well." Linley gripped the protruding stone and sighed in astonishment as he spoke. The rocks of the entire Amethyst Mountains were all a dark red color.

Previously, when Linley had smashed head on against the mountain rocks, the mountain rocks actually hadn't shattered!

"Linley, look. Amethysts!" Delia laughed. Halfway down the mountain, there were one or two amethysts scattered about as well.

"This place is the Amethyst Mountains. Naturally, there's many amethysts here." Bebe muttered, while at the same time punching hard against the mountain rocks. The dark red mountain rocks only shuddered, and a small crack appeared. Bebe stared in astonishment. "My full force punch wasn't able to smash it apart!"

As he spoke, Bebe withdrew that black dagger with a flip of his hand.

"Crackle..." The black dagger forced its way down into the rock, cutting a large scar into the stone. Within the rock, aside from the dark red stone debris, there were scattered amethysts as well.

"So there's actually amethysts within these rocks." Bebe laughed. And then, he shook his head. "Only, it's so complicated. My dagger can even break through Highgod artifacts, but this rock...I was only able to chop a chunk of it off. What's more, the amethysts are embedded into the rocky fragments. Getting them out will be complicated."

"Let's go. Forget about the amethysts. Let's go down first."

Linley led them downwards.

The Amethyst Mountains were completely covered by white fog.

However, the outside world had never been able to know what the true appearance of the Amethyst Mountains was like. This was because no one who passed into the Fog Sea and entered the Amethyst Mountains had ever been able to escape. Linley's group was currently walking on the Amethyst Mountains, and had even arrived at the base.

"It seems the white fog is thinner here!" Bebe said, looking around himself.

The density of the white fog at the base of the mountains was lower. Linley's group was now able to see to a distance of two hundred meters.

"Olivier!" Linley immediately saw that nearby figure. "Bebe, Delia, let's go over."

Olivier was currently looking around in concern. He was surrounded by that bewildering white fog. He had rolled all the way down, in the end landing at the base of this mountain peak. However, in the nearby area, he wasn't able to see any people at all. All he could see was some bloodstained corpses, their bodies shattered from the fall.

"Best to wait here for Linley and them." Olivier didn't run about wildly. After all, the area around him was covered with white fog. If he ran about, he would very possibly be separated from Linley's group.

"Olivier." Linley's voice rang out.

Olivier felt a surge of joy in his heart. He immediately turned and saw Linley's group of three running over. In this damnable place, being together with friends and helping each other made one feel more confident.

"Why aren't there any others here?" Bebe looked around as well, saying in a disdainful manner.

"Don't be impatient." Linley laughed.

"Swoosh!" Suddenly, from above, multiple figures descended at high speed.

"Bang!" "Bang!" These multiple figures didn't stop at all, smashing viciously against the ground with a hollow, deep thudding sound. One could imagine how strong the collision force was. Linley's group of four looked at these five newcomers.

Bebe covered his mouth, beginning to laugh.

The five of them had fallen in terrible condition. Even their faces were scratched open. The five woke up after a while, then hurriedly began to use their divine power to repair their wounds while rising to their feet.

"Did the four of you enter from the outside as well?" The leader of the five, a green-haired man, spoke out.

"Of course we came from outside." Bebe laughed as he responded. "Just like you, we fell down from up above. However...we were a bit better off than you. We weren't so unlucky as to smash into the ground." As he spoke, Bebe continued to cover his mouth and laugh.

The five couldn't help but have awkward looks appear on their face.

"Bebe." Linley couldn't help but bark out. Bebe was simply too talented at causing trouble.

However, the five weren't too angry either. In this strange place, it was better for everyone to remain united. They, too, had discovered that Delia, a Highgod Fiend, was present. Their attitude naturally became all the more friendly towards Linley's group.

Linley glanced at the surrounding area. "Let's go. We can't always stay here. Let's go to some other areas and take a look."

Linley's group of nine began to walk through the Amethyst Mountains. In but a short while, they encountered over a hundred people. Everyone had entered from within the Fog Sea. Naturally, they formed into a unit. This small unit was actually led by Delia.

Because...Delia was the only Highgod!

This grand group of a hundred-plus people carefully made their way through the Amethyst Mountains.

"The gravity here really is powerful. Even walking is so difficult." A voice came from behind.

"It really is weird. Even the 'Gravitational Space' of a Highgod would at most be at this level, but this gravity is in effect throughout the entire Amethyst Mountains. That's weird. Even the most powerful of Highgods can't set up such an enormous, large-scale 'Gravitational Space'.

A conversation was going on in the rear. Walking in the front, Linley agreed. This sort of gravity truly was too astonishing.

"Huh?" Linley's face changed. "Everyone, halt!" Linley said loudly. Immediately, the hundred-plus people came to a halt.

"What's going on?" A question from behind.

But Linley just looked up ahead. In front of them, two figures could be seen. Just now, those two figures had flown past them, but when they reached a few dozen meters away from Linley, they suddenly came to a halt.

"So fast." Linley was secretly surprised. "Under the gravity of the Amethyst Mountains, they are still able to travel so quickly. These two are very powerful."

The two hesitated a moment, then began to draw near. The two both wore long black robes. Only, one of them was a man with long silver hair, while the other was a woman with long brown hair.

"You came from the outside world?" The brown haired woman said coldly.

"Highgod?" Linley's group was astonished. There were virtually no Highgods amongst the amethyst harvesters. However...the two in front of them were actually both Highgods.

Linley was secretly startled. "Who are these two people?"

The brown-haired woman and the silver-haired man were both studying Delia, especially upon seeing the Fiend medallion on Delia's chest. Immediately, the brown-haired woman said, "My name is Garlan [Jia'lan]. I don't know who this Highgod Fiend is...?"

"My name is Delia." Delia said with a smile.

The silver-haired man laughed as well. "Delia, hello. My name is Jarrod [Jia'luóde]! The Amethyst Mountains are extremely dangerous. Since you, Delia, are a Highgod Fiend, how about you join with us? With the three of us joining forces, the chances of us staying alive will be higher."

"Staying alive?" Delia was stunned.

Linley couldn't help but be startled as well. So the situation really was dire!

"These Amethyst Mountains are filled with many dangers. Even these two Highgod speak of 'staying alive'..." Linley couldn't help but feel a sense of pressure. At this moment, the group of Gods behind Linley immediately grew nervous and started chatting amongst themselves. None of them were idiots.

Hearing the words of the silver-haired man, they understood that the Amethyst Mountains definitely were very dangerous.

"Might I ask if I can bring a few people into the group?" Delia asked.

"You cannot." The brown-haired woman said with utter decisiveness. "It is very dangerous right now. We aren't even certain of our ability to protect ourselves. How can we take on these additional nuisances? Delia, hurry up and choose. If you are willing to join us alone, with the three of us joined together, we should be able to survive this crisis."

"No need." Delia shook her head and refused politely.

The two Highgods couldn't help but be stunned.

"Travelling with them, the only thing that will happen is that they will slow you down. They will be your doom!" The silver-haired man, Jarrod, said hurriedly.

"Hey, why all the pointless chitchat?" Bebe barked unhappily. "So what if she doesn't join you?"

The silver-haired man couldn't help but glance at Bebe.

"There's no need. Thank you for your good intentions." Delia said in refusal.

The silver-haired man and the brown-haired woman glanced at each other, shaking their heads.

"If you aren't willing, then forget it. I just want to warn you of one thing." The brown-haired woman looked at Delia. "Beware the amethyst beasts!" After speaking, the brown-haired woman and the silver-haired man immediately flew away at high speed, instantly disappearing into the mist.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 35, Amethyst Beasts

The brown-haired woman, 'Garlan', and the silver-haired man, 'Jarrod', flew away side by side at high speed.

"That Delia is truly an idiot." Jarrod cursed softly. "A venerable Highgod Fiend who spends her time with a group of Gods and is unwilling to leave them. She is absolutely looking for death."

"Enough talk. That Delia wants to die. What can we do about it?"

Garlan shook her head. "What's more, it's hard to say if even we ourselves will be able to endure this crisis. Let's hurry up and go far away from those monsters."

Jarrod seemed to have just remembered the monsters as well. He couldn't help but shudder, then hurriedly said, "Right, let's hurry up and leave." The two increased their speed still further.

Linley's group of people was currently in a state of chaos.

"Just now, those two Highgods said that the Amethyst Mountains are very dangerous. Are we going to actually keep going forward? As I see it, let's not run about wildly. Let's halt here."

"Just because we don't run about, does that necessarily mean we'll be safe here? Didn't you see those two Highgods run away? If it was safe here, why wouldn't the two Highgods stay here?"

Linley was currently frowning as he stared into the white fog. "Amethyst beasts? Those two said 'beware the amethyst beasts'. Even Highgods are so frightened of them that they flee. Then we..." Linley turned to look at Delia, Bebe, and Olivier.

"Let's separate from this group of people." Olivier said. "If we stay with them, we'll have a great deal of trouble."

Linley turned to look at those people.

"Mr. Linley, are you, are you going to abandon us?" Immediately, someone spoke out.

"Lord Delia, we are all under your command. No matter what, don't abandon us."

"Lord Delia..."

These Gods and Demigods were afraid that Delia would leave. If she did, who then would protect them? With a Highgod Fiend by their side, they would feel safer.

"Shut your mouths." Bebe snarled at them. "Quiet down."

In the Infernal Realm, when a lethal crisis had descended, who would be so bored as to waste time protecting others?

"Why are you shouting towards us? You are just a God. On what basis are you causing such a ruckus?" Many people looked at Bebe unhappily.

Bebe was instantly enraged.

"Quiet!" A low growl rang out.

Everyone turned to look at the speaker. It was Linley! Linley was currently frowning as though trying to hear something. These Gods and Demigods slowly began to hear a low, growling sound, but the sound was very weak.

But moments later, the growling sound grew stronger. Clearly, some monsters were drawing near at high speed!

"Beast growls?" Many people began to feel astonished.

Linley immediately sent out with his divine sense, "Delia, Bebe, Olivier, let's flee!" As Linley spoke, he immediately began to flee, and Delia, Bebe, and Olivier didn't hesitate, immediately following Linley and flying at high speed.

"Follow Lord Delia!" Immediately, people began to call out while chasing after them.

The hundred-plus people nervously began to gallop forward at high speed from behind.

However, Linley's group of four were extremely fast. Despite the astonishing gravity, Linley and Bebe's tough bodies were able to resist the gravitational pull while still running at high speed. Delia was a wind-style Highgod, also very fast. The slowest was Olivier, but he was a light-style God, adept at speed!

The hundred-plus others were slowly falling behind them.

However...

"Roaaaaaaaaar!" "Roaaaaaaaaar!"

The angry roars reverberated in the skies, while at the same time drawing near at high speed. The speed was so fast that it was actually far faster than the likes of Linley and the others.

"Such astonishing speed." Linley felt greatly shocked. The monster, when running, actually was causing the earth to tremble. Those powerful earth vibrations caused his heart to grow panicky. "Roaaaaar!"

"Roaaaaar!" The bestial roars grew closer and closer, as though coming from directly behind them.

"Aaaah! What sort of a monster is that?!"

"Kill the monster, kill it!"

"Aaargh, die!"

"Aaaaah!"

"Lord Delia, save us, aaaaah!"

Bellows and fierce screams rang out from behind them.

Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier couldn't help but turn to look. As they did, they were shocked.

Its body looked like that of a ferocious lion. It was four meters tall and more than ten meters long. This ferocious beast's entire body was made out of metal and stone, and its entire body glistened with a violet light. The divine weapons of those Gods, when landing on its body, weren't able to harm it at all!

The strange thing was...

On its head, there were three sharp horns that were positioned in the shape of a triangle, while on its back, there were over a hundred sharp spikes that covered its entire back!

"108 spikes!" Linley could immediately tell. "And its entire body emanates an amethyst aura. Its entire body glistens with a violet light, and in coloration and aura, it seems very similar to amethysts. Can it be... that its entire body is made out of amethysts?"

While fleeing, Linley was guessing to himself.

The amethyst beast chased after them; two of them, in fact. These two amethyst beasts opened their vicious maws, as though wanting to ‘crunch’ and bite these Deities in half, then swallow the upper half of their bodies into their bellies.

“Roaaaaaar!” The amethyst beast’s blood-red eyes swept across the area, and it swept out its fierce claws casually.

“Bang!” A divine artifact was smashed aside, and then a Deity’s body was smashed as well. The Deity’s head wanted to fly away, but under the powerful gravity, it was extremely hard to fly. The amethyst beast opened its maw to devour the head, directly swallowing the Deity’s head into its stomach.

In the blink of an eye, nearly twenty people had died.

“Flee!”

“The monster isn’t afraid of soul attacks, and it isn’t afraid of material attacks either!”

The short battle had caused the hundred-plus men to no longer have the courage to fight back. They had delivered full-force blows to the bodies of those amethyst beasts, but hadn’t been able to injure them at all. These amethyst beasts didn’t respond at all to soul attacks either! At the same time, the amethyst beasts were easily slaughtering them.

Flee!

They only had this choice left.

The lucky survivors frantically fled in every direction. No matter how powerful the amethyst beasts were, there were only two of them. With so many people fleeing in every direction, how many of them could the amethyst beasts kill?

"Bang!" "Bang!"

The two amethyst beasts suddenly spat out quite a few divine sparks from their mouths. Clearly, these divine sparks belonged to those people they had killed and devoured.

"It seems the two amethyst beasts are unable to digest divine sparks. Thus, they had to spit them out." Linley guessed to himself.

The crimson eyes of the two amethyst beasts stared around the area, and violet steam came out from their nostrils. Their gaze then fixed upon the distant, fleeing Linley and the other three. "Roaaaaaar! Chase!" A low, indistinct voice rang out, and the two amethyst beasts immediately charged towards Linley's group.

They flew like the wind, they moved like the thunder!

Despite the powerful gravity of the Amethyst Mountains, the two amethyst beasts still moved as fast as lightning, drawing closer and closer to Linley's group with astonishing speed.

Linley, who had been paying attention to the amethyst beasts at all times, couldn't help but feel startled. "Those two beasts. There's so many people here, so why are they focused on us?" Through his earlier observations of the battles between the amethyst beasts and the Gods and Demigods, Linley had become certain that these beasts were not easy to deal with!

Material attacks and soul attacks were all ineffective.

"But it's hard to say if it's just that those material attacks and soul attacks weren't strong enough." Linley understood this principle. "However, even the combined attacks of those Gods hadn't been able to wound the two beasts. Even if I were to attack, I probably still wouldn't be able to deal enough damage."

"Boss, those two beasts are drawing near." Bebe said frantically.

"Don't worry about me." Olivier said frantically through a mental message. He was the slowest of the four, dragging them down.

"Shut your mouth!" Bebe growled, then suddenly reached out and clutched Olivier. And then, Bebe's speed rapidly increased.

Linley and Delia increased their speed as well.

Linley still remained nervous. "Those two beasts are still slowly drawing near us." The two beasts, emanating violet steam from their nostrils, continued to gallop forward at high speed, constantly reducing the distance between them and Linley's group. Fifty meters. Forty meters. Thirty meters...

"Less than ten meters now." Linley seemed to be able to sense the hot steam coming from the nostrils of the beasts.

"Roaaaaar!"

Suddenly, one of the two amethyst beasts rapidly increased its movement speed, instantly jumping forward and moving like a bolt of violet light, instantly arriving in front of Linley's group. Two amethyst beasts, one behind them, one in front of them. Linley's group was caught.

Linley's group was forced to come to a halt, and Bebe placed Olivier down as well.

"The situation seems grim." Delia frowned.

"Boss, let's split them up. One for each of us." Bebe actually licked his lips as he spoke.

"Fine." Linley nodded.

But the two amethyst beasts were actually both staring at Delia. One of them let out a growling, stuttering sound. "High...Highgod...eat!" And then, one of the amethyst beasts transformed into a ray of light, pouncing directly towards Delia.

Delia wielded the Spear of Cortez in her hands. Bowing suddenly, her entire body seemed to arc like that of a longbow, and then with a massive thrust, the long spear shot forwards.

"Swoosh!"

The long spear thrust out, moving at maximum speed, causing even space to crack around it.

Elemental Laws of the Wind – Dimensional Attack.

"Crunch!" The Spear of Cortez actually stabbed into the amethyst beast's body, and the amethyst beast fell down from the skies. The Spear of Cortez immediately returned to Delia's hands, leaving behind a hole in the body of the amethyst beast.

"Crackle..." The hole quickly healed, as though it had never been wounded.

"Roaaaaar!" The amethyst beast immediately began to roar angrily, while the other amethyst beast did the same.

Linley and Bebe exchanged a glance. At virtually the same instant, they leapt off from the ground. Their two powerful bodies exploded forth with astonishing strength, shooting out like arrows towards each of the amethyst beasts. Linley's right fist, carrying boundless power, smashed towards the amethyst beasts.

The amethyst beast roared angrily, swiping out with its fierce claws.

“Bang!” Linley’s draconic scale covered right fist and the sharp claws collided violently.

Linley and the amethyst beast were like two colliding meteors. Both of them were actually sent flying back by that astonishingly powerful counter-force from the collision. The amethyst beast was knocked to the ground, and its scarlet eyes were filled with astonishment. As for Linley, the very instant he landed on the ground, he leapt up and shot out like a gust of wind.

“Haha...” Linley’s dark golden eyes were filled with a hint of excitement.

Ever since he had absorbed that drop of Sovereign’s Might, Linley hadn’t encountered a foe whose body was comparable to his.

Linley’s entire body was filled with tens of thousands of tons of power. His draconic claws were like blades. Covered by dimly glowing blue light, his palm slashed down, transforming into countless illusions and creating clear ripples in space. The amethyst beast bellowed, immediately using the horns on its head to charge towards Linley!

Linley’s eyes exploded forth with power, and he howled with rage...

“BANG!” His palm collided with one of the spikes, which was forcibly shattered as Linley’s palm continued to chop down towards the amethyst beast’s skull.

Profound Truths of Velocity – Bewildering Shadow!

Linley was knocked flying backwards by the force of the collision, while with a 'boom', the amethyst beast was knocked down to its knees by the power of the blow.

"What a tough horn." Linley looked at his right hand. The draconic scales covering his right hand actually showed a hint of blood beneath them.

This amethyst beast had been completely enraged. "You...you will...die!" Its low, gravelly voice echoed out from its bestial throat, while at the same time, the broken horn on the amethyst beast was slowly regrowing. However, clearly, the damage to the broken horn wasn't as easily repaired as the damage to the other parts of its body.

"It seems I underestimated you."

With a flip of his hands, Linley wielded the adamantine heavy sword in one hand and Bloodviolet in the other.

"Come!" Linley launched off the ground, charging forward once again.

Olivier was currently watching this go on, stunned. Linley and the amethyst beast were battling each other as though they were two meteors smashing into each other time and time ago. As for Bebe, his battle with the other amethyst beast was also as wild and as exciting to watch.

"They...they..."

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 36, The Storm Caves

These amethyst beasts had easily slaughtered those Gods and Demigods. This was enough for Olivier to understand how powerful they were. When they had been wrapped into the fog, Bebe had been struck by a pile of amethysts, and from this, Olivier had already gotten a sense of how powerful Bebe's body was.

Bebe was a divine beast, and he had a connection to Beirut. Olivier could understand why he was so powerful

But Linley?

"Linley is also...his body is actually able to go head on against that amethyst beast." Olivier watched this scene, completely dumbfounded. He had originally believed that as he himself had spent a few short decades of hard work to reach the God stage, he should be considered fairly impressive and perhaps had even surpassed Linley.

But in reality...

The difference between him and Linley was very great!

"This monster doesn't fear soul attacks!" Linley's furious roars rang out. He was thrown far away, but he then immediately flipped up and climbed to his feet. In disbelief, Linley said, "My full strength attack, 'Voidwave Sword'...this beast had no reaction to it at all!"

"Boss, just use physical attacks!" Bebe called out.

"Fine." Linley stored away his adamantine heavy sword and once more leapt forward, pouncing towards the amethyst beast like a giant eagle charging downwards. Linley's Bloodviolet once more executed the 'Bewildering Shadow' attack, chopping down with no mercy whatsoever towards the amethyst beast.

The amethyst beast, afraid of that attack, dodged.

"Bang!" Bloodviolet struck against the amethyst beast's flank, chopping down at least half a meter.

However, as soon as Linley withdrew the sword, the wound immediately regenerated.

"Boss, this freak isn't afraid of soul attacks, and even when I use physical attacks, it will recover from it, no matter how heavy the injury was." Bebe was helpless as well. Linley couldn't help but glance at the horn he had shattered, but the amethyst beast's shattered horn was now already completely regrown.

Linley couldn't help but to laugh bitterly.

"Even the most powerful of Highgods, when receiving my 'Voidwave Sword', would at least have a response to it, even if he didn't fear it. But this amethyst beast didn't react to it at all, while its body is so hard, it can compare to a Highgod artifact. And it can rapidly regenerate!"

Linley was utterly speechless. This sort of freak was completely invincible!

"No wonder even those two Highgods chose to flee instead." Linley thought to himself, while at the same time, once more clashed viciously against the amethyst beast.

With a sword chop, Linley shattered one of the spikes of the amethyst beast, while he himself was sent flying away by the amethyst beast's claws. In mid-air, his body twisted, and he landed on the ground on his feet.

The amethyst beast roared in agony. Clearly, the broken spike caused him great pain.

"Roaaaar!" The beast currently battling Bebe came to a halt, raising his head and emitting a roar.

The amethyst beast currently battling Linley also came to a halt. After staring at Linley for quite some time, it seemed to have finally realized that Linley hadn't been wounded at all. In the end, it finally gave up, emitting the same low angry growl.

The two amethyst beasts glanced at each other, then the amethyst beast who had been battling Linley looked at Linley. In a low, gravelly voice, it said, "Body, not bad!"

The amethyst beast battling Bebe also glanced at Bebe.

"Swoosh!" "Swoosh!"

The two amethyst beasts transformed into two rays of violet light, running far away at high speed.

"Linley, are you alright?" Delia walked over, and Linley smiled and said, "Of course I'm alright. However, I must say, those two amethyst beasts really were formidable. They are utterly without flaw. But of course...they don't know soul attacks."

"Linley, what happened with those two amethyst beasts? Why did they leave?" Delia asked, puzzled.

The nearby Olivier spoke out. "Perhaps, the two amethyst beasts realized that fighting with you had no benefit for them at all, and instead they continuously were injured. Thus, they gave up and left." Olivier reasoned.

Wasn't that the case?

Linley and Bebe hadn't been injured at all, and even if they were slightly nicked, they could use their divine power to heal it. Naturally, the two amethyst beasts had no interest in continuing in this sort of battle.

"Boss, I knocked a few rocks loose from its body. They seem to be amethysts." Bebe grabbed up a few violet jewels from the floor. While Bebe had battled the amethyst beast, he had been using his black dagger to chop down on it. This was a godspark dagger. Naturally, it was able to chop a few jewels apart.

Hearing this, Linley immediately looked towards those two broken spikes on the ground.

He absorbed them directly into his Coiling Dragon ring, and indeed, those two violet jewels were immediately refined, and a large amount of soul essence was withdrawn, leaving behind only some detritus.

"Indeed, these amethyst beasts are completely made out of amethysts." Linley felt stunned. Amethysts were filled with soul essence. These creatures completely made out of 'amethysts'...how much soul essence did they contain?

"Boss, what are the results of your investigation? Are they amethysts?" Bebe asked. He held that violet jewel, not completely certain of its identity.

"It is indeed an amethyst." Linley nodded.

Bebe, Delia, and Olivier, although expecting this answer, were nonetheless surprised.

Delia frowned. "Where did this freak come from? It doesn't fear soul attacks, and its entire body is so tough. What's more, it immediately heals from any wounds." It had to be said that this sort of monster could be described as unbeatable. Or perhaps, more accurately, as extremely hard to kill.

"But I noticed that the creature's intelligence seems to be very low."

Bebe said.

"It is indeed low. When we were fighting, all it knew how to do was to use its fierce claws and its fangs to launch basic attacks. It didn't know any profound mysteries at all." Linley had noticed this as well. "However, they are capable of speech!"

Everyone nodded slightly. The amethyst beast had afterwards said the words, 'body, not bad'. Everyone remembered this.

"Let's go. Let's take a look and see if there's a way for us to leave these Amethyst Mountains." Linley recommended.

Immediately, they all headed out once more. However, the area around them was covered in white fog, and Linley's group didn't know what places were dangerous. Still, by walking on the ground, at least Linley's group knew the general direction they were moving in. They continued moving forward in a straight line.

As Linley's group of four was moving forward, Jenkin was following three other Gods, carefully traversing these Amethyst Mountains. His luck had been excellent. He had safely arrived within the Amethyst Mountains, and up till now, he hadn't encountered any amethyst beasts.

"I wonder how Linley and the other two are doing." Jenkin said to himself quietly.

"Whoooosh." A powerful wind sound could be heard from up ahead.

"Let's go. Let's go take a look together." One of the Gods immediately called out. All four of the Gods, Jenkin included, drew closer to the origin of the sound. Moments later, Jenkin's group saw the source of that violent wind sound.

"This is..."

Jenkin and the other three stared, slackjacked.

A hundred meters away, on the ground, there was a straight crevice that was dozens of meters long. Deep within the crevice, there was a cave that was roughly ten meters long. A howling wind was emanating from within this cave, and countless flashes of violet light were also spurting out from within the cave.

The speed at which the violet light moved was simply astonishing.

"So the amethysts flew out from here." Jenkin said in amazement. However, he didn't realize...the Amethyst Mountains had more than one location like this one.

The countless amethysts were blasting in every direction. Because they all moved in different directions, when they flew into the Fog Sea, they naturally covered the entire area. However, because their directions were different, some actually flew in slanting lines that were virtually parallel to the walls of the crevice, which was sunken in.

Thus, many of the amethysts smashed directly into the walls. Many of them embedded themselves deep into the crevice walls, but many others just lay there at the bottom of the crevice.

The cave was at the center of the crevice. There were countless amethysts lying everywhere else.

"How...how many amethysts is this?"

The four Gods stared, slackjacked. Amethysts usually weren't very large, and so a small pile of just a few dozen centimeters could contain over ten thousand. However, this area that was littered with trenches definitely had to calculate the number of amethysts in the 'hundreds of millions'. Every single amethyst was already very valuable. How much would so many amethysts be worth?

The four Gods were all stunned when they calculated the wealth.

"We...we're rich!" A God suddenly regained his senses.

"Haha, we're rich!" Jenkin was excited as well.

One of the four Gods hurried straight towards one of the straight trenches below. The other three, reacting slightly slower, also immediately ran downwards. The four didn't want to kill the others. After all, the amount of amethysts was simply too great...so great that their greed was completely satisfied!

But as they drew near the trench, the four came to a halt.

Because...

Large numbers of amethysts were slamming against the walls of the crevice, knocking loose the amethysts already embedded in the walls of the crevice, which fell back into the crevice. These amethysts were shooting out at a speed that was simply astonishing. If the four of them were to fly down, they would most likely be shot full of holes by those amethysts.

"What to do?" The four Gods all hesitated.

When they had fallen downwards, they had witnessed that shooting power of the amethysts. It must be understood that by then, the amethysts had already flown for a period of time, and their shooting power was actually lower than at first. But these amethysts that were shooting out from the cave were at the peak of their power and speed.

If they jumped into the crevice, they would definitely die!

"Use divine artifacts." One God advised. With a flip of his hand, he retrieved a whip. Lashing the whip out, the whip instantly elongated, coiling down like a python towards the cave.

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

A large number of amethysts smashed into the whip, and the divine artifact was actually cracked apart by the force of the collisions.

The God's face couldn't help but turn white. The divine artifact had been destroyed!

It must be understood that the amethysts were even capable of breaking through Linley's 'Pulseguard Defense', and that was when they had already travelled a long distance. For the amethysts that were shooting out from the cave, even Highgod artifacts would be shot through! How could a God artifact possibly withstand them?

Jenkin and the other three were stunned.

"Motherf*cker, so many amethysts are in front of us, but we can't take them." One of the Gods cursed.

Actually, there were amethysts scattered everywhere throughout the Amethyst Mountains. Only, the amount that was scattered about was fairly small; the amount that the four had picked up was only around a hundred amethysts. Within the crevice, however, there were thick layers of them.

A random grab would pick up an enormous amount of them.

"Forget it. Life is more important." Jenkin shook his head helplessly.

The other three sighed helplessly as well.

As the four of them were about to give up, suddenly...

The 'cave' which had been constantly blasting our amethysts suddenly stopped, and the sound of the wind came to a halt as well. In the entire crevice, not a single amethyst was blasting out, leaving behind only a floor full of amethysts.

"This....this..." Jenkin and the other three were stunned.

"Ah! Down, go down!" The four Gods excitedly hopped into the crevice."

"With these amethysts, I, I..." Jenkin's mind was in a tumult. At the same time, he wildly began to collect large amounts of them into his interspatial ring.

"Hey, Jenkin?" A voice rang out.

Jenkin turned. It was Linley's group of four.

Linley's group had been attracted by the sound of the wind as well, but as they drew near, the sound of the wind had abruptly halted. As Linley drew near, they had discovered the crevice full of amethysts as well, as well as Jenkin and the other three, who were wildly collecting amethysts.

"So many amethysts?" Linley was shocked.

Bebe, Delia, and Olivier were stunned as well.

"Goddamn, compared to these amethysts, a fortune of two hundred billion is nothing!" Bebe's eyes were shining.

But just as Bebe was about to jump down into the crevice...

"Rumble..."

The cave, which had already stopped shooting amethysts out, suddenly gave birth to a powerful gravitation attraction force. The strength of this gravitational force actually caused space to tremble, creating a spatial vortex. The spatial vortex within the cave instantly absorbed all of the amethysts within the crevice, along with Jenkin and the other three Gods as well.

"Lord Linley..." Jenkin, in that instant when he was being sucked into the cave, stared straight at Linley, his eyes filled with a hint of despair and resignation. However, he wasn't able to resist at all.

The strange thing was, this astonishing gravitational force really was like a whirlpool. It only affected the entire crevice, but outside of it, it didn't have any influence at all.

"Crackle..." The cave continued to swirl and absorb...

Within the crevice, the only things that were remaining were those amethysts that had been deeply lodged into the sides of the walls. As for amethysts which had been knocked loose, not a single one remained.

Seeing this scene, Linley couldn't speak for a long, long moment.

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 37, The Rescue

The cavern whirlpool continued to swirl, its powerful sucking force enveloping the entire area near the crevice. As for Linley and the rest of the four who were outside the crevice, they watched with blank stares and slack jaws. Jenkin and the other three Gods had actually been swallowed into the cave, unable to resist at all. This sight was simply too astonishing.

Linley stared at the cavern whirlpool, his face turning solemn.

Olivier's eyes narrowed, and he said softly, "Linley, just now it seemed as though the cavern was completely inactive, and just moments ago, there was a thick layer of amethysts in the crevice. How come, all of a sudden, such a powerful, bizarre suction force appeared?"

Linley felt similarly stunned and frightened. "This is the Infernal Realm. If I were to use my 'Bewildering Shadow' attack at full strength, I too can cause space in the Infernal Realm to ripple, but...the simple suction power of this cave created a spatial whirlpool. This devouring power..."

When a sword chopped down, a spatial crack or ripple would appear, focused on the sword.

Simple suction which resulted in a spatial whirlpool...this sort of suctioning force was simply too frightening.

"Most likely, not even a Highgod could resist that sort of suction force." Linley said to himself.

"Hey, Boss, why were there so many amethysts in that crevice just now?" Bebe said, puzzled. "Also, there's quite a few amethysts embedded deep into the walls of the crevice. Where did all those amethysts come from?" Bebe and the others hadn't witnessed the cave spewing forth amethysts.

"Let's stay far away from this place." Delia said, gnawing on her lips. "I keep on having the feeling that this place is a bit too weird."

"Well spoken. Let's move farther away."

Linley led Delia and the others farther away from the crevice, but after travelling dozens of meters, Linley's group came to a halt. Linley suddenly turned his head to stare towards the crevice. Frowning, he said, "Hey? How come that suction sound is gone?"

"Right, there's no sound any longer." Bebe directly headed back, moving closer to the crevice, then turned his head towards Linley and said in surprise, "Boss, hurry over and take a look. The suction in the crevice ended. It's calm again."

Linley, Delia, and Olivier's eyes were filled with puzzlement, and they drew near as well.

Indeed...

The large crevice was very quiet and seemed very ordinary. If they hadn't seen what they had seen earlier, Linley's group wouldn't have suspected that this crevice was dangerous.

"It is as though there is no danger here." Delia said after looking for a while.

"Rumble..." Very suddenly, like the roaring of a vicious beast, a terrifying howling sound instantly exploded forth, while at the same time, countless flashes of violet light came out in dense clusters from the cave hole. The dense clusters of amethysts sprayed wildly in every direction.

Some rose to the heavens, some shot towards the horizon. Countless rays of violet light disappeared past the white mist above.

However, many amethysts scraped the sides of the walls as they shot out. Because the angle was too narrow, they struck the sides of the crevice, and then with metallic clanging sounds, many amethysts collided with the amethysts already embedded into the walls, and then fell backwards, landing into the crevice.

Moments later...

The crevice was covered with a thick layer of amethysts.

This sudden scene caused Linley's group to be shocked as well. Soon, they began to understand many things.

"Oh. I get it. Those Gods and Demigods who were harvesting amethysts at the edges of the Fog Sea...those amethysts most likely flew out from and came from this type of cavern." Bebe immediately said in a jubilant voice. "There are so many amethysts flying out in such density. Look. That ditch is filled with a thick layer of them.”

Linley kept his silence.

Ever since they had entered the Amethyst Mountains from the Fog Sea, Linley had gotten a thorough lesson in the astonishing gravitational power held within the Amethyst Mountains. This was a gravitational force which even Highgods would find hard to resist, but those amethysts had been able to withstand it and then fly out.

They had even been able to pierce through his Pulseguard Armor, and that was after they had already flown for a long time and slowed down.

“What secrets are held within these Amethyst Mountains?” Linley looked towards the cave, continuously spewing forth amethysts.

“Whether blasting out or swallowing in, the power is monstrous...if a Highgod was capable of such explosive power and shoot his energy with such force, he would be utterly invincible.”

An expert capable of such explosive power could, with a casual toss of an amethyst, riddle the opponent’s head with holes.

“Deities are not capable of such great power, but the world is. It exists in nature!” Linley sighed in his heart.

Olivier, Bebe, and Delia were also sighing in amazement. But, right at this moment, from afar, an angry howl could be heard. This angry howl, to Linley’s group, was an extremely familiar sound, because...it was the angry howl of an amethyst beast!

"Amethyst beast!" Linley's face changed, along with the faces of the other four. At the same time, they turned to stare towards the direction the sound came from.

From afar, two figures were fleeing with great difficulty, while behind them was a ten-meter long, mighty amethyst beast. The amethyst beast bellowed continuously as it used its sharp claws, fangs, and horns on its head to attack wildly. The two fleeing figures were in dire straits!

"It's actually them." Linley couldn't help but be surprised.

Those two people were actually the two Highgods which Linley had met earlier when first arriving at the Amethyst Mountains; Garlan and Jarrod.

The brown-haired woman, Garlan, and the silver-haired man, Jarrod, currently appeared to be in extremely sorry shape. They were very unfortunate. They had actually encountered an amethyst beast. But of course, they were also very fortunate. After all, they had only encountered a single amethyst beast.

"Roaaaar!" The amethyst beast opened its maw wide, biting down towards Garlan.

Jarrod let out a furious shout, and a black flaming longsword in his hands struck down viciously towards the amethyst beast's mouth. The amethyst beast, despite not being afraid of material attacks, would still find it painful to be struck by a divine artifact on the mouth.

The amethyst beast immediately shut its mouth, at the same time lowering its head, using its horn on its forehead as it gored towards Garlan.

"Clang!" The flaming longsword stabbed into the amethyst beast's forehead, but it only sank a little bit in.

"Roaaaaaar!" The amethyst beast was only all the more maddened, and its two eyes were like scorching red flames. It actually only gored towards Garlan even faster. "Chiiiiiiiiiii..." As its speed increased, the horn tore through the air and created an ear-piercing whistle. The amethyst beast was actually trying to use its horn to smash Garlan's head apart.

Garlan's face changed dramatically.

"Bang!" A warblade suddenly appeared, smashing viciously down upon the amethyst beast's forehead. The attacker was Jarrod, who grabbed Garlan and borrowed the bounceback force of this blow to flee at high speed.

"Run faster. Stop wasting time with that beast." Jarrod said mentally.

"I know we can't waste time with it, but you know how fast that thing is. Its speed is faster than us. I don't want to waste time with it, but it keeps on bothering me." Garlan felt both furious and helpless. She wasn't able to find any weaknesses in the amethyst beast.

Jarrod felt helpless as well.

The beast didn't fear soul attacks or material attacks, and it was extremely fast. How could there actually be a creature like this in the world? It was completely unbalanced. Fortunately, however, this sort of amethyst beast possessed a very low level of intelligence, and wasn't capable of using any profound mysteries of the Laws.

"Roaaaaaar!"

A violet blur flashed towards Jarrod and Garlan in pursuit, and the two of them could all but sense that extremely heated breath of the creature making contact with their skin.

"This amethyst beast is too fast." Jarrod and Garlan both felt helpless.

Suddenly, a surge of wind came.

"Dodge!" Jarrod pushed Garlan hard, making the two of them dodge in separate directions.

"Slash!" A fierce claw slashed past Jarrod's body, and instantly, half of Jarrod's arm was ripped off as blood sprayed everywhere. The amethyst beast immediately raised its head and bellowed in excitement.

"Roaaaaaaar!" At the same time, the amethyst beast bounded into the air, planning to seize the opportunity to kill Jarrod.

Jarrod's shattered left arm was rapidly regrowing.

"Motherf*cker, how can this monster's speed be so fast." Jarrod was almost at the point of tears.

When Garlan saw this, without hesitating at all, she immediately scurried forward, and Jarrod also immediately moved at high speed towards Garlan. When the two of them joined forces, they actually were able to just barely keep themselves alive, but if they were to try and fight solo, if one of them were to die, the other would be unable to stay alive either.

"Garlan, what should we do? This monster is even capable of telling the difference between me and the doppelgangers that I created. Can it be that I'm going to have to sacrifice a divine clone?" Jarrod frantically sent a mental message.

"Unless all other choices are gone, don't use that technique that will make you sacrifice a divine clone." Garlan sent back.

Using the 'Doppelganger' technique in front of an amethyst beast was useless. The amethyst beast was actually able to tell the original body from amidst the hundreds of doppelgangers. This was simply inconceivable.

Thus, generally speaking, amethyst beasts were indeed very hard to deal with and very troublesome.

"Someone's here!" Garlan and Jarrod instantly noticed from the corner of their eyes the nearby group of four. Linley's group. Upon seeing Delia in particular, their eyes immediately lit up.

"It's that Highgod Fiend named Delia!" Garlan and Jarrod were overjoyed. Not hesitating at all, they immediately flew at high speed towards Linley's group. As they saw it, if a Highgod Fiend were to join forces with them, the situation would be much better.

"This Delia is actually still with those Gods. Those Gods are quite lucky to still be alive." Garlan and Jarrod, while charging towards Linley's group, couldn't help but think this.

Garlan and Jarrod's speed was inferior to that of the amethyst beast.

Thus, when running and fleeing, they naturally suffered one 'caress' after another from the sharp claws of the amethyst beast, causing Garlan and Jarrod's bodies to be covered with bloodstains and wounds.

"What a pain." Bebe muttered.

"Bebe, come, let's shoo the amethyst beast away." Linley sent.

Linley and Bebe almost simultaneously moved forward, quickly moving past Garlan and Jarrod's forms, causing the two to be shocked. "Are these two Gods looking to die?" As they dodged past, they turned to look...

They saw a devilish purple sword shadow slash through the air and land on the amethyst beast's horn, forcibly chopping through it! "Slash!" It chopped down into the amethyst beast's tough skull, causing the amethyst beast such pain that it howled in agony.

At that same moment...

“Slash!” Bebe’s black dagger also forcibly rammed into the amethyst beast’s chest, carving out a large chunk of amethyst.

In great pain, the amethyst beast wildly clawed down with its two ferocious front claws towards Linley and Bebe’s heads, as though by reflex. It was as though it wanted to make Linley and Bebe’s heads explode. However, Linley and Bebe both immediately moved to dodge.

With two thudding sounds, the sharp claws still clawed down upon their shoulders.

Linley and Bebe’s bodies shuddered, and they were knocked backwards multiple meters.

The amethyst beast stared in astonishment towards Linley and Bebe with its big red eyes. Linley and Bebe actually hadn’t been wounded at all. The amethyst beast’s sharp claws hadn’t been able to leave behind any damage on Linley’s draconic scales or Bebe’s body.

The amethyst beast stared at Linley and Bebe in confusion. It actually let out a growl, then turned and immediately fled.

Garlan and Jarrod, these two Highgods, stared slackjawed at this scene. “The monster...fled?” They had never heard of an amethyst beast being forced to flee. When battling against amethyst beasts, it was always the Highgods who got the worst of it.

After all, how many people had bodies as tough as Linley and Bebe’s?

Garlan and Jarrod exchanged a glance, their eyes filled with amazement. They had never before held Gods in much consideration, but just now, these two Gods had actually forced that amethyst beast to flee.

"Thank you, the two of you, for helping us. The two of us definitely will not forget this kindness you showed us." Garlan immediately said sincerely.

Bebe glanced at her sideways, muttering unhappily, "Helping you? You ran all the way over to us. If we didn't do something, the amethyst beast would have started to attack us next."

Garlan and Jarrod couldn't help but let out awkward laughs.

When they had run over to Linley's group, they had been hoping for Delia to assist them. After all, the amethyst beast would attack humans whenever they found them. By dragging others down with them, everyone would work together to face the threat. In this regard, they had indeed acted wrongly, and so Garlan and Jarrod naturally felt embarrassed.

"We were forced to do so and had no other options. I hope you won't blame us." Jarrod hurriedly said.

Jarrold and Garlan knew that in the Amethyst Mountains, Linley and Bebe would be of much greater use in the Amethyst Mountains than Highgods like themselves. Jarrod and Garlan, while speaking, also secretly inspected Linley and Bebe's shoulders. They couldn't help but feel astonished.

“These two actually took the attack of an amethyst beast head on without suffering any wounds? What sort of bodies do they have?!”

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 38, Juvenile Beast

Although they were astonished, Jarrod and Garlan, in dread of the power of Linley's group, behaved extremely properly.

"Hey, Garlan. You two should have been in these Amethyst Mountains for quite some time, right?" Bebe laughed as he asked. Garlan and Jarrod glanced at each other, their eyes revealing a look of resignation.

Garlan let out a sigh. "Right. We have been here a long, long time. At least a hundred million years."

"Over a hundred million years?" Linley's group was stunned.

A hundred million!

A simple phrase, but a truly extravagant figure. Linley was only in his second century, and was a very long distance off from a hundred million years.

Jarrold said sourly, "In the past, Garlan and I also encountered the 'Fog Wave' situation, and thus we were unwillingly brought into the Amethyst Mountains. That day, the amethyst beasts were also very excited. They killed many people, but the two of us were lucky enough to survive. Back then, I was a God, while Garlan was a Demigod...after so many years, Garlan and I have both reached the Highgod level. But because too much time has passed, the two of us couldn't be bothered to calculate it exactly. However, the hundred million year mark passed long ago."

Linley was shocked.

To grow from a Demigod to become a Highgod, for most people, an extremely long period of time would be needed.

"Can it be that you don't want to leave?" Linley looked at them as he spoke solemnly. "Or can it be that these Amethyst Mountains really are, as the legends have it, a place where one can only enter but not leave."

When he had heard people speak of this at the edges of the Fog Sea, Linley had only half-believed it.

As Linley saw it, none of the amethyst harvesters had entered the Fog Sea. How could they know what the situation was for the people inside of it? Even though he himself had entered the Amethyst Mountains, Linley still clung to a few shreds of illusory hope.

He believed that he still had a chance to leave.

"Right. Once you come in, you cannot leave." Jarrod said with great certainty.

"You really can't leave?" Linley was stunned.

Was he to forever be trapped here?

The nearby Delia glanced at Linley, knowing that Linley wanted to go to the Indigo Prefecture and visit the elders of the Baruch clan. Delia immediately asked, "Jarrod, why are you so certain? The Amethyst Mountains are so enormous. There definitely are many people here. Not a single person has ever left?"

The brown-haired woman, Garlan, said consolingly, "I know you aren't willing to accept this, but this is the truth."

"First of all, the gravity in the Amethyst Mountains is very powerful." Garlan said. "Generally, Highgods aren't able to resist the gravity at all."

Delia and Linley both nodded slightly.

Delia was a Highgod, but she was unable to resist this gravity. Although Linley's body was tough, he still couldn't resist the gravity and fly outside.

Garlan continued, "The Amethyst Mountains have existed for so long. Many of the people who entered this dangerous area early on have already reached extremely high levels of power, most likely comparable to Five Star Fiends, Six Star Fiends, or even more. There once was an exceedingly powerful Highgod who was actually able to resist the gravity and fly towards the outside.

Linley frowned.

"He was able to resist the gravity, but when he reached the area filled with those strange winds, he was affected and his head went dizzy. Although he was able to maintain his clarity, he stayed in mid-air for decades without being able to find a way out!" Garlan said.

Bebe said in astonishment, "Decades? In that area which made the mind go dizzy?"

"Right. However, that area is very bizarre. It isn't just a simple confusion; even the soul is affected, and so there's no way to fly out." Garlan shook her head as she spoke.

Linley couldn't help but feel his heart clench.

Even an expert who could resist the gravity couldn't fly out. What could Linley do?

That Jarrod asked, puzzled, "Afterwards, it was quite strange. That expert abandoned leaving the Amethyst Mountains, but not long after that, he completely disappeared for no reason."

"Disappeared for no reason?" Linley's group of four was shocked.

Garlan nodded. "Right. Not just him. Afterwards, everyone who reached an exceedingly high level would suddenly disappear. Nobody knows if they died or fled, or if something else happened." Garlan and Jarrod were very mystified as well.

Linley frowned. These experts who were at the Six Star Fiend or Seven Star Fiend level of power wanted to leave but had failed. There's no way they could have left under their own power.

"Whether they died, left, or were controlled, there has to be some sort of mechanism here behind the scenes controlling everything." Linley said to himself.

Linley stared at the Amethyst Mountains.

Linley kept on having this feeling that the Amethyst Mountains, in and of themselves, were very strange. 'Soul essence' was one of the most important components of a soul, but the Amethyst Mountains actually produced amethysts. This was inconceivable.

In addition, there was that white fog which perpetually covered the area, that strange wind sound, that astonishing gravity...

And also, that cave which occasionally suctioned in and occasionally blasted out!

All of these things made him uneasy.

"Garlan, Jarrod." Bebe suddenly pointed towards the distant crevice. "Do you see that place which constantly blasts out amethysts? What's going on with the cave in that crevice? Occasionally it blasts things out, and occasionally it stops, and then occasionally it starts swallowing things in. What is that about?"

"Don't go to that place." Garlan said hurriedly. "Those places are what we call 'Demonic Amethyst Lairs'. In total, the entire Amethyst Mountains have 108 of these Demonic Amethyst Lairs.

"108 total?" Bebe stared. "This strange place actually has so many?"

Garlan said hurriedly, "Right. These Demonic Amethyst Lairs is the source for blasting out amethysts. They'll normally blast out amethysts as well, only in fairly small numbers, unlike today where they blasted them out in extravagant numbers. Also, when the Demonic Amethyst Lairs stop blasting out, don't be greedy and try to enter the crevice to snatch amethysts."

"I know." Bebe snorted. "I personally watched those four be swallowed into the cave. That poor Jenkin..." Bebe's eyes were filled with a hint of sadness.

"Someone was swallowed in?" The nearby Jarrod let out a surprised sigh, then immediately said, "Those who were swallowed in were definitely newcomers who didn't know these things. Of the three 'blasting', 'resting', and 'swallowing' stages of the Demonic Amethyst Lairs, the 'blasting' stage is the longest, the 'resting' stage is the shortest, while the 'swallowing' stage is in the middle. Not only is the 'resting' stage short, the length of each rest is different. There's no pattern or regularity at all, and no one who knows how dangerous it is would dare to jump in.

Linley's group of four nodded slightly.

They themselves had witnessed this. The 'blasting' stage was quite long, while the 'resting' stage was mere seconds.

"To harvest amethysts isn't too hard. During the 'resting' stage, all you need to do is use an 'Elemental Doppelganger' or an 'Elemental Hand' in order to snatch some up." Garlan laughed calmly.

Linley immediately understood.

Right. For example, the 'Essence of the Earth' could form a long hand to snatch some up. Even if the 'swallowing' stage suddenly began, there wouldn't be much of a loss.

"Jenkin and those three...ugh." Linley sighed in his heart. "But at that time, they didn't know anything about these Demonic Amethyst Lairs. When they saw the blasting halt, they were overjoyed and went to collect amethysts."

"Haha...actually, what's the point of collecting amethysts?" Jarrod chuckled, shaking his head. "No matter how many amethysts you have, they are nothing but a waste of time, here in the Amethyst Mountains. None of us will go and do so...it isn't as though we can exchange them for azurites and inkstones."

Linley's group was stunned.

"Right. If you can't get out, what's the point of having all those amethysts here in the Amethyst Mountains?" Olivier shook his head as well.

For experts like Linley and Olivier who weren't content with normal lives and who liked to challenge powerful foes, having them forever stay in one place and never leave was an absolute torture.

"Whooooosh." The faint sound of a blowing wind could be heard.

Linley's group of four, along with Jarrod and Garlan were resting at a spot halfway up that very same mountain peak.

None of them knew where amethyst beasts might be located, so they figured they might as well stay and rest where they were.

Just as Linley's group was chatting regarding the Amethyst Mountains, suddenly...

"Roaaaaar!" "Roaaaaar!"

"Aaaaah! Kill!"

A large number of bestial roars and battle sounds rang out, constantly echoing within the mountain forests. Upon hearing the roaring sounds, the faces of Linley's group of six changed.

"Very many amethyst beasts!" Linley looked towards the origin of the sounds. Just from the sounds alone, Linley was certain that there were an extremely high number of amethyst beasts.

"There's at least a few dozen of those amethyst beasts." Jarrod said hurriedly. "We need to leave immediately."

Linley instantly chose a direction. "We'll go that way." None of them wanted to encounter those amethyst beasts, and they immediately followed Linley at high speed. If two or three amethyst beasts came,

Linley's group could just barely fight them off when working together.

But if several dozen came...

They would definitely be finished. Even Linley and Bebe, when faced with the group attacks of those amethyst beasts, would be in peril.

"Hurry up." Linley urged them, as the faint sound of furious roars could be heard from the white fog behind them.

"You are so slow." Bebe immediately grabbed Olivier by the hand, and Olivier, borrowing Bebe's strength, caught up.

"They really are fast!" Jarrod and Garlan were greatly shocked. The speed of Linley's group wasn't the slightest bit slower than the two of them, a pair of Highgods. Linley and Bebe in particular...when their powerful bodies exploded forth to maximum speed, they were actually slightly faster.

They ran the entire time. A long time later, the furious roars could no longer be heard behind them.

"Whew. We're finally safe." Bebe waved his hand, putting on his straw hat, crouching onto a nearby boulder. "Hey, let's rest here. The amethyst beasts went in a different direction from us. They won't be able to catch us."

Linley and Delia sat down on one side as well, next to each other. Olivier casually found a place to stand.

Jarrood and Garlan had smiles appear on their faces. Garlan laughed, "Everyone, don't be impatient. The Fog Wave will only last one day. That's today. These amethyst beasts will just wildly run around. After today, the amethyst beasts will go back, and we will be able to live for countless years in peace."

"If every day was like today, life would be utterly miserable." Bebe muttered.

"Bebe. Even you're afraid." Linley pursed his lips, grinning.

"Anybody would feel a headache when faced with these unkillable freaks." Bebe said helplessly.

Just as everyone was chatting casually...

"Hey, everyone, look. What's going on over there?" Bebe pointed into the distance.

Linley's group stared into the distance, and saw that in the distance, the boundless white fog was actually moving towards one direction at high speed. The white fog disappeared, increasing Linley's line of sight and visibility distance. In the blink of an eye, all of the white fog within several meters of here completely disappeared.

Linley, Bebe, and the rest of the six stared, slack-jawed.

The six of them, halfway up that mountain peak, could clearly see to a distance of three or four kilometers. There were actually countless clusters of amethyst beasts now filling their gaze. The ones they could see numbered over a thousand, while others were deeper into the white fog.

"This...this..." Linley's group was scared silly.

Two amethyst beasts were already so hard to deal with. A thousand amethyst beasts?

"There's people! Oh, they've been surrounded." Jarrod and Garlan's faces changed. Linley looked carefully as well. Indeed...

Within an encirclement of amethyst beasts, there were hundreds of people.

Within the group of amethyst beasts, there was a larger one that was seven meters tall and twenty meters long; an amethyst behemoth. But what was most eye-catching wasn't the enormous amethyst beast, it was that there was another amethyst beast that was standing on the amethyst behemoth's head.

This juvenile amethyst beast was just one meter long. Compared to the amethyst beasts, it was nothing more than a speck.

When Godeater Rats battled, they might increase in size a bit, at which point they would be about on par with this juvenile amethyst beast. Logically speaking, this sort of juvenile beast should be hidden away and protected in a lair.

However, upon seeing the juvenile amethyst beast, Linley's group shuddered, and not from the cold.

Because at this moment in time, the juvenile amethyst beast's mouth was wide open. Boundless amounts of white fog were being swallowed into the mouth of this juvenile amethyst beast. Moments later, within an circumference of ten kilometers, there was no white fog left at all. The strange thing was...the white fog in the other area didn't come fill the gap.

The juvenile amethyst beast rubbed its little stomach, and then its clear voice shook the world. "Haha, humans, the surrounding white fog is under my control. If you want to enter the white fog and flee, that will no longer be possible. All of you, prepare to become food." The voice was as clear as that of a child's, but the words were so fluid.

Linley's group was shocked.

This was because the amethyst beasts they had encountered, when speaking, only stuttered. Their intelligence was low as well. But this juvenile amethyst beast was different.

"Haha, kiddos, kill them for me!" The juvenile amethyst beast shouted delightedly.

Immediately, the countless amethyst beasts all began to roar while charging towards those hundreds of surrounded people. Those hundreds of people all wildly executed their most powerful attacks. Linley could immediately tell that these hundreds of people were, amazingly, all experts. Those attacks they launched and the profound mysteries contained within caused even Linley to be astonished.

For a moment, the entire world was filled with thunderclaps, angry roars, and constant sounds of battle!

"Monster, die!" One man, a short silver-haired person who wielded a long spear, transformed into a ray of white light, glowing like the sun itself as he pierced through the air, striking straight towards the adorable juvenile amethyst beast.

The juvenile amethyst beast grinned wickedly. Casually waving a hand, a ray of violet light shot out, striking into the silver-haired man's body. The silver-haired man fell down from mid-air, immediately dying!

"Oh, you were looking for death?" The juvenile amethyst beast said disdainfully.

Linley's group was shocked.

"A soul attack!" Bebe said, stunned. "And it contains strange profound mysteries within."

"This amethyst beast is capable of using the Laws in its attacks?" Linley's face changed.

The juvenile amethyst beast definitely was no ordinary creature. It was completely different from those other ordinary amethyst beasts.

“Those humans should all be Highgods. Like me, they’ve been here a very long time.” Garlan said, stunned. “The one who was killed just now by that small monster was a very powerful Highgod. And he was killed in one stance. That small monster’s power...” Garlan found himself at a loss for words.

What sort of power was this?

The power of an Asura?

“Let’s hurry up and leave.” Linley said hurriedly.

“Too monstrous. Let’s go.” Bebe agreed.

Immediately, Linley’s group turned and left.

In the distant battlefield, that little juvenile beast who stood atop the head of the amethyst behemoth waved his hand, and a ray of violet light shot through the body of another powerful Highgod, killing him right away. And then, he suddenly turned his head to look towards Linley’s direction, muttering, “Oh? I was preparing to deal with you later. I didn’t expect that after watching for just a short period of time, you’d be so scared that you’d run.”

And then, the juvenile amethyst beast called out loudly, “Kiddos, pursue!” The clear voice shook the heavens.

Instantly, countless amethyst beasts immediately began to roar, and countless amethyst beasts began to gallop at high speed in the direction in which the little juvenile beast was pointing its claw at. On the ground, the only thing left was a few corpses. Those hundreds of Highgods were all dead!

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 39, Fleeing For Their Lives

Countless amethyst beasts galloped forth, and even the mountains they galloped past began to tremble and shake. Countless bellows rang out, echoing like thunder. The loudest voice, however, was a clear call which filled the heavens. “Kiddos, quick, catch them, quick!!!”

Linley’s group couldn’t help but turn their heads. They all knew that was the voice of the juvenile amethyst beast.

Linley ran as fast as lightning, running forward like a meteor as he scurried through the empty landscape of the Amethyst Mountains, occasionally leaping down from mountain cliffs, occasionally using his draconic claws and feet to quickly rappel up mountains. Due to the powerful gravity of the Amethyst Mountains, there was no way one could fly at all.

“Quick, quick!!!” While sprinting forward, Linley frantically shouted through divine sense.

Of the six of them, the back of the pack was led by Olivier and Garlan. Olivier was, after all, just a God, and his body wasn’t as strong as Linley’s to begin with. Garlan, meanwhile, trained in the Elemental Laws of Fire, and thus didn’t have any advantage in speed.

“Haha, you won’t be able to flee!” The juvenile amethyst beast said delightedly.

Linley’s group ignored all else, frantically charging towards the white fog. As long as the opponents weren't able to see them, they would be safe.

"Swish!" As it opened its mouth, the juvenile amethyst beast swallowed a large amount of white fog into its belly, and the area Linley's group was in had no white fog at all now. The juvenile amethyst beast said delightedly, "Haha, I want to see how you will keep running. Hey, kiddos, move faster!"

The group of amethyst beasts had been many kilometers away from Linley's group. After chasing for so long, though, they were less than a kilometer away.

After all, the amethyst beasts were astonishingly fast.

"Whoosh!"

Moving like the wind, flashing like lightning, Linley's group continued to sprint at high speed. However, behind them, those rays of violet shadows flashed towards them in pursuit, giving Linley's group a sense of pressure.

"These amethyst beasts really run fast." Bebe said frantically.

"There's people up ahead." Linley's eyes suddenly lit up. Up ahead, roughly a hundred meters away, ten-plus figures were fleeing in panic at high speed while looking backwards occasionally. It seemed as though they were terrified. In terms of speed, Linley's group was much faster than them.

Linley immediately understood. "These people have probably heard the roars of the amethyst beasts and want to flee. Only, their speed is too slow." At the same time, Linley suddenly had a plan.

"Turn!" Linley suddenly sent a mental message.

After speaking, Linley leapt off from the ground, shooting out like an arrow from a bow towards the distance. Delia, Bebe, and the others naturally followed Linley, turning slightly as they continued to spring. The direction in which Linley was sprinting was different from those ten-plus distant figures.

As for the amethyst beasts, they were continuing to chase and press the attack.

Part of the amethyst beast wave charged towards those ten, who had also just arrived in the Amethyst Mountains today. Most of them were Gods, with the rest being Demigods. In the face of the amethyst beasts, that bit of power was nothing, rendering them unable to resist.

"Roaaaaaar!"

"Roaaaaaar!"

The wild amethyst beasts roared while sprinting forward on their four sturdy limbs. The speed of those ten was simply too slow, and they were trampled flat by those many amethyst beasts. The amethyst beasts intentionally trampled them, stepping directly on their heads.

“Crunch!” Their heads were trampled and shattered, and their divine sparks rolled out.

This made those amethyst beasts all the more excited, and they roared while continuing to gallop. Only on the day of the Fog Wave were they given a chance like this. Once this day came to an end, they wouldn't have this chance again. Naturally, they would have to go a little crazy today.

“Haha, you can keep running, but let's see who runs faster!” The juvenile amethyst beast stood atop the head of the amethyst behemoth, delightedly laughing.

Currently, Linley was less than a hundred meters away from the amethyst beast wave behind them.

Moments later, the distance was reduced to fifty meters.

Thirty meters....

Twenty meters...

“What should we do?” Jarrod said frantically through divine sense. He could sense the heat of those scorching breaths reaching his body, and could smell that thick, odorous body odor. The odor of the amethyst beasts. Jarrod hated this sort of smell.

“Shut your mouth!” Bebe shouted back through divine sense. “Keep running for your life! Flee if you can!”

Linley silently continued to sprint at high speed. The Amethyst Mountains were extremely broad, and there were many mountain peaks. Naturally, this sort of road was not easily traversed. Occasionally, there would be a mountain range, while occasionally there would be a gorge. Linley's group climbed the mountains upon reaching them and charged down cliffs upon reaching them. When they reached the end of the gorge, they would then clamber back up.

In short, they couldn't hesitate!

If they hesitated, they would be caught.

"Haha, you are about to die!" The juvenile amethyst beast was very excited.

The amethyst behemoth he was mounted on waved its sharp claws, swiping towards the fleeing Garlan, at the back of the pack. This seven meter tall amethyst beast was the most powerful of those countless amethyst beasts, capable of easily breaking apart Garlan's Highgod artifact.

"Garlan." Jarrod frantically grabbed Garlan.

But the speed of those sharp claws was simply too fast. At the moment of death, Garlan's body suddenly released another 'Garlan'. Clearly, this was Garlan's divine clone. With a 'slash' sound, one of the Garlan's was ripped apart by the claws, and a divine spark flew out wildly.

Jarrood couldn't help but feel astonished and furious.

"I lost a God-level divine clone." Garlan didn't have time to feel sad. Right now, it would be wonderful if she could even survive.

Sprinting at the front, Linley knew how dangerous the situation had become. He could all but sense the shadow of that amethyst behemoth drawing near. Suddenly, Linley saw what was coming up ahead, and he couldn't help but feel surprised. "There's a gorge up ahead!"

He didn't hesitate at all!

Moving like the wind, Linley, Delia, Bebe, Olivier, Garlan, and Jarrod, the six of them, threw themselves forward into the fog-shrouded gorge. Even though they didn't know what the situation was inside the gorge, none of them hesitated at all.

"Chase, chase!!!" The juvenile amethyst beast was very excited. Mounted on the amethyst behemoth, he leapt down as well.

The many amethyst beasts wildly leapt into the gorge, which was extremely wide. From one side of the gorge to the other was a distance of dozens of kilometers. In the white fog, it was completely impossible to see the other cliff.

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" The wind howled as they all descended.

Linley's group of six not only didn't resist the astonishing gravity, they actually intentionally used their divine power to accelerate their descent.

The six of them descended lightning-fast. This gorge was dozens of kilometers deep, but given the astonishing speed of Linley's group, they arrived at the bottom in almost an instant.

The ground of the gorge was made from tough rocks.

Not only had they resisted the impact of gravity, they had even accelerated. Smashing into such hard rocks at such speed...even the body of a Highgod would be injured.

"Swoosh!" When they were only ten meters away from the ground, Linley suddenly, frantically slowed down, landing on the ground like a gust of gentle wind. As for Delia, she gracefully disappeared, her body transforming into a gust of wind, then reforming into a solid body.

Olivier, Jarrod, and Garlan had their own tricks as well to slow down. This was very ordinary.

But Bebe? Bebe ignored everything, viciously smashing straight into the ground.

"Bang!" The ground trembled, and Bebe sank twenty or thirty centimeters into the ground. Given the toughness of the rocks of the Amethyst Mountains, one could imagine how strong the smashing force was for him to sink so deep into the ground.

But Bebe was completely unharmed.

Nobody praised Bebe, because there was no time!

"Flee!" Linley's group of six wildly sprinted forward.

The amethyst beasts didn't have any divine power, nor did they know any profound mysteries of the Laws. Thus, they dropped down at a very normal pace and did not accelerate. By the time they landed, of course they smashed hard into the ground.

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

Like meteors slamming down, each amethyst beast smashed hard into the ground, then immediately began to chase forward, as though the impact of the collision hadn't had any effect on them. The juvenile amethyst beast was constantly shouting in anger, "Quick! The distance between us and them just increased!"

When descending, Linley's group of six had been faster, and thus the distance between the two groups had increased to fifty meters again.

Linley's group of six, hearing the smashing sounds, could imagine in their minds the terrifying scene of those countless amethysts beasts pursuing them. Their hearts couldn't help but tremble, and all of them continued to sprint for their lives. If they truly were caught, just the trampling of those countless amethyst beasts would be enough to finish them off.

"There's a lake up ahead!" Linley immediately saw that within the white fog, there was a lake.

Linley's group of six didn't hesitate at all, immediately entering into the waters of the lake. When being pursued, even if there was a mountain of knives or a sea of flames in front of them, they would still charge through. After all, if they hesitated and tried to find an alternative route, they would slow down and thus be caught by the amethyst beasts behind them.

In that instant...

Many amethyst beasts appeared at the sides of the lake. Standing atop the head of the amethyst behemoth, the juvenile amethyst beast frowned and said unhappily, "They went into the water? Could it be that they know that I hate water? Hmph, none of these will be able to escape."

Immediately, the juvenile amethyst beast said loudly, "Kiddos, all of you go down and seize those people!"

"Roaaaar!" "Roaaaar!" "Roaaaar!"

Immediately, countless amethyst beasts began to roar in anger, and the ones in front threw themselves into the lake. With repeated 'plop' 'plop' sounds, they went in, while at the same time, many other amethyst beasts, including the juvenile one, surrounded the shores of the lake.

"Surround this entire lake." The juvenile beast ground its teeth. "Hmph, I want to see how they can possibly escape. Not a single plaything I set my eye on has ever been able to escape!" As it spoke, it wrinkled its little nose.

Linley's group of six, entering the lake, had actually discovered a narrow underwater path. They continuously advanced through it. This little narrow pathway was actually headed upwards. The first part of it was underwater, but the second part was above water. Linley's group quickly reached the end of the pathway.

This little pathway was a canal that led to a mountain cave.

"I didn't expect someone would be capable of carving out such a large, meticulous cave." Jarrod was overjoyed.

Only now did Linley's group let out sighs of relief. Carefully inspecting the cave, they saw that this had clearly been excavated out by others. Linley couldn't help but feel overjoyed. "The stones of the Amethyst Mountains are incomparably tough. What sort of power would be necessary for someone to carve out such an enormous cave, and how much time must it have taken?"

Bebe, using his godspark dagger, had only just been able to break apart that rock.

"Linley, will the amethyst beasts be able to discover us here?" Delia was still somewhat worried.

"It's fine." Linley said consolingly.

Garlan's face was covered with a smile that was born from having escaped a crisis. She said, "Delia, don't worry. Although those amethyst beasts are very powerful, they don't understand any profound mysteries or natural laws, and they don't appear to know how to use divine sense either. These small pathways which are hidden within the wild grass in the bottom of the lake are so well-hidden, they won't easily be able to discover them."

Linley's group nodded slightly as well.

After they had charged into the water, they had naturally immediately spread out their divine senses to investigate the surrounding area. When they had passed by that hidden little pathway, the divine senses of the group had naturally discovered it.

"Right. What have we to fear? Even if they discovered that hidden little passageway, the passageway is so narrow, while those amethyst beasts are so huge. Would they be able to fit?" Bebe said disdainfully. The amethyst beasts were physically quite large. There was no way they would be able to squeeze in.

"Bebe speaks the truth. It's fine. Everyone, we can rest here." Linley said.

"No, it's useless." Jarrod shook his head helplessly. "No matter how small the tunnel is, the amethyst beasts will still be able to enter. Amethyst beasts are capable of changing their bodies."

"Changing their bodies?" Linley couldn't help but feel shocked.

If they really were able to change their bodies, it would be terrible.

Garlan nodded somberly as well. "Right. However, amethyst beasts can't freely change their size to expand or contract. Rather...for example, they can make themselves shorter, to a height of one meter, but their length will multiply. To be more precise, their total body size doesn't change."

Linley began to understand.

These amethysts beasts were like 'water', capable of changing into multiple configurations, but the overall size remained the same.

Linley stared at the tunnel and said slowly, "All we can do is hope that we won't be discovered. Once we are, we won't even have a place to run."

"Don't worry." Garlan's laughter was very brilliant. "We won't be so easily discovered. In addition, once the Fog Wave ends, these amethyst beasts will all disappear. By then, we won't be in any danger, and will be able to live a long, leisurely period of time."

Linley blew out a breath, saying quietly to himself, "I hope that today will pass safely. Once today passes, it will be safe."

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 40, Life in the Amethyst Mountains

Within the gorge, a large number of amethyst beasts were surrounding the shores of the lake, and the juvenile amethyst beast was standing atop the head of the amethyst behemoth, staring at the lake.

One amethyst beast after another left the waters of the lake and returned to the shore, all of them hanging their heads.

“All of you are idiots. You can’t even find a few people who fled in there.” The juvenile beast was furious.

Not a single amethyst beast dared to make a sound.

The juvenile beast considered things. “We’ve wasted a great deal of time by the lake already. The Fog Wave day is about to come to an end. We can’t keep wasting time like this.” The juvenile amethyst beast immediately let out a loud shout. “Kiddos, let’s go. We’re leaving this place. Let’s keep killing humans.”

“Roaaaaar!” Instantly, countless amethyst beasts let out excited roars.

They wanted to kill as well. After all, countless years would pass before a Fog Wave, and only on such days were they permitted to come out. Their time on this day was very valuable. If they wasted it all here, they would feel that it hadn’t been worth it.

Roaring, the countless amethyst beasts followed the juvenile amethyst beast away.

“Hmph. Hmph. I’ve memorized those people. I hope you are still alive when the next Fog Wave comes. At that time, I’ll definitely take good care of you.” The clear eyes of the juvenile amethyst beast had a hint of craftiness flash through them.

While continuing on their path of carnage, the many amethyst beasts spread throughout the area. Many humans were caught and killed. Many Deities had been brought in by the Fog Wave, numbering over a hundred million, but they were slaughtered to the point where less than one in ten survived. The survivors, even including those who had originally already been present within the Amethyst Mountains, numbered less than ten million.

After the Blood Sun went down and the Violet Moon rose, the day of the Fog Wave ended.

But of course, because the Amethyst Mountains were perpetually shrouded by that white fog, nobody could see the Blood Sun or the Violet Moon.

However, the Amethyst Mountains operated as if by clockwork. The number of amethysts being blasted out by those 108 Demonic Amethyst Lairs dropped down, returning to their normal state. The forces of the eighteen great clans outside the Amethyst Mountains came to a halt, while feeling excited for the number of amethysts they had procured.

Within the Amethyst Mountains, those amethyst beasts immediately headed back, quickly disappearing within the amethyst mountains. There had been so many amethyst beasts, but now, there were very few Deities remaining.

Linley's group, due to being within that cave, wasn't certain of the passage of time. They waited for well over ten hours. Not until the next day did they emerge from the lake.

By the shores of the lake in the gorge, Linley's group of six sat there, resting.

Jarrold's face was covered in excitement. Gratefully, he said, "The day of the Fog Wave has finally ended. After this day, we'll be able to live for yet another hundred million years in peace. I didn't expect that I, Jarrod, would be able to survive two Fog Wave days in a row."

"To be able to survive, even losing a divine clone is worth it." Garlan felt very happy as well.

Linley looked at Jarrod and Garlan. He could tell that the joy they felt sprang from the bottom of their heart. He couldn't help but feel puzzled, and he asked, "Jarrod, within these Amethyst Mountains, our visibility is limited to one or two hundred meters. It's always covered by white fog, and we can't go out. Don't you care about this at all?"

Linley's words caused a feeling of agreement in the hearts of Bebe and Olivier.

In the Amethyst Mountains, aside from the day of the Fog Wave, there was virtually no danger at all. But to forever be bound by that powerful restrictive force and not even be able to fly, while at the same time only being able to see to a distance of a hundred meters? To be limited to this situation for a long time would indeed be very boring and painful!

Jarrold and Garlan exchanged a glance. Both of them began to laugh.

Jarrold looked at Linley. "Linley. It isn't that we don't want to go out. It's that there is no way out of this damnable place. Since we can't go out, what else can we do? We'll just quietly enjoy life. At least I still have Garlan."

Garlan's face turned slightly red. From the gaze she shot at Jarrold, the deep love she bore could faintly be seen. After all, after having been with each other for almost an eternity, they were no longer able to be separated from each other.

"I refuse to believe we can't leave." Bebe harrumphed. "Let's head straight out. If we can't fly, then we'll walk to the ends of the Amethyst Mountains. Keep walking! I refuse to believe we can't walk out. If we walk to the ends, I'll burrow into the ground and leave by the ground!"

The ground outside the area of the Amethyst Mountains wouldn't possibly be so hard.

"You won't be able to make it out!" Garlan urged. "The gravity of the Amethyst Mountains isn't just 'up' or 'down'. It is as though the entire Amethyst Mountains is exerting gravity in every direction. No matter whether you are on the ground, underground, or in the air, you'll still be affected by the gravity of the Amethyst Mountains!"

"What?!" Linley was shocked.

He himself had read the descriptions of the profound mysteries of the Laws in that book. With regards to the 'Gravitational Space', he knew that it was equivalent to creating a 'Gravitational Space' in a certain area. But Linley had never heard of causing an entire area to have a gravitational pull in every direction.

The Amethyst Mountains were like a giant magnet.

No matter whether one was under, to the side of, or above the mountains, one would still suffer the gravitational pull.

"Also, aside from gravity, there's that strange wind region. There's no way at all you can leave that region." Jarrod said, then laughed. "Delia, Linley, thank you so much. Garlan and I will leave now."

After Jarrod and his wife left, Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier didn't give up. Although they had heard what Jarrod had said, until they had witnessed it for themselves, they wouldn't give up. Immediately, the four of them began to head out through a straight line.

The gorge which Linley was in was tens of thousands of kilometers away from the borders of the Amethyst Mountains.

The gravitational power of the Amethyst Mountains was simply too great, and Linley's group didn't travel that quickly either. It took them half a month before they reached the edges of the Amethyst Mountains.

However, as Linley's group tried to continue travelling forward, a terrifyingly strong gravitational force immediately affected their entire body, instantly pulling them back into the Amethyst Mountains.

It was very bizarre!

Standing on the stones at the border of the Amethyst Mountains, Linley's group felt fine. But as soon as they took a single step towards the front, they would suddenly sense that gravitational force tug them back to the Amethyst Mountains.

Linley had never heard of such a bizarre gravitational pull.

Within a Gravitational Space, the power of the gravity would pull downwards. But this gravity actually centered around the Amethyst Mountains and pulled in every direction.

They couldn't even take a single step outside the Amethyst Mountains. How would they leave?

Linley's group racked their brains, spending an entire month at the borders, but with nothing to show for it. In the end, helpless, they had chosen to give up. The four chose a mountain hollow that was only a few hundred kilometers away from the border and began to live there.

Within the mountain hollow, Linley's wind, earth, and fire clones were all training, while Linley's original body accompanied Delia.

Linley was casually seated on the ground, his back resting against the stone wall. Delia was resting against Linley's side as well. Delia raised her head to look at Linley. Delia, in her heart, understood that Linley had always desired a life full of excitement. If they truly had to spend eternity here within the Amethyst Mountains...this was simply unimaginable.

Delia still remembered that month they had spent at the borders of the Amethyst Mountains, constantly testing.

Actually, simple tests could have been completed in a month.

However, because Linley and Olivier didn't want to give up, they had frantically come up with one idea after another to test things out. They all wanted to leave here and return to the Infernal Realm. However, after persisting for a month, Linley had finally given up. Delia understood that in his heart, however, Linley still couldn't accept it.

"Linley, do you truly want to leave?" Delia said softly. "Perhaps you can use a drop of that blue water drop?"

Linley turned to look at Delia, shaking his head slightly.

Linley had told Delia and Bebe about the 'Sovereign's Might' over the course of the twenty years they had spent in training after the Volcano Titan, 'Phusro', had departed. They all knew...that Linley's final trump card was the 'Sovereign's Might'.

By using the Sovereign's Might, he definitely would be confident in his ability to resist the gravitational pull.

But how could he use it?

Linley shook his head. "Even by using Sovereign's Might to resist that gravitational pull, it's hard to say if I'd be able to fly out of the chaotic region. Delia, you should know as well that there were previously Highgods who could resist the gravitational pull, but upon reaching that chaotic region of strange sounding wind, they still were unable to fly out."

"If I use the Sovereign's Might and am still unable to get out? That would be disastrous."

"In addition, Sovereign's Might is extremely precious. We can't waste it. Unless something extremely important happens, it can only be used at the point of death." Linley understood that if used at a critical moment, the Sovereign's Might could not only save him, it could also save Delia and the others.

This was a game-changing treasure. How could he easily use it up?

"But being here for a trillion years...can you withstand it?" Delia said softly.

Linley stretched his hand out, taking Delia into his arms. Gently, he said, "Delia, it's just a trillion years. Jarrod was able to withstand it. Why can't I? By your side, even if I have to spend eternity here, I would be willing."

Delia felt moved in her heart, and Linley held her all the more tightly.

"Linley, what do you think Sasha and Taylor are like now? What is going on in the Yulan continent?" Lying in Linley's arms, Delia said softly.

Thinking about his son and daughter, Linley couldn't help but smile. "They should be doing quite well. Who knows if they are missing me."

Delia laughed as well. Lifting her head up, she looked at Linley. Pursing her lips, she said, "Of course they miss you, their father. However, most likely Taylor and Sasha won't have imagined...that their powerful, almighty father is trapped inside a mountain range in the Infernal Realm, and will most likely be here for countless years."

Linley couldn't help but laugh as well.

But then, it turned into a sigh. He turned his gaze towards the white fog, as though seeing through it to the Yulan continent. "We are living in the Infernal Realm now. The Yulan continent is too far away from us."

Living in the Amethyst Mountains, Linley's mind was very calm. His original body didn't need to train in any Laws, while Delia had reached the Highgod realm and thus didn't train. Linley spent every day with Delia, and the two of them lived a leisurely, quiet life.

But of course, Linley's earth, wind, and fire divine clones continued to train.

Bebe and Olivier were training as well, while occasionally sparring.

Linley's 'Elemental Laws of the Wind', due to focusing on gaining insights into the 'Sound Waves' and 'Music' profound mysteries at the same time while fusing them, improved at a very slow rate. As for the 'Elemental Laws of Fire', this was Linley's weakest aspect, and so naturally he trained very slowly.

Only in the 'Profound Laws of the Earth' and its 'Worldwalking' profound mysteries, which Linley wasn't fusing with any other profound mysteries, did his training speed improve rather quickly.

Living peacefully like this, fifty years quickly passed. Over the course of these years, because he was living in the Amethyst Mountains and constantly was affected by the gravity here, Linley had begun to master the basics of the 'Gravitational Space' profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth. However, 'Gravitational Space' was an extremely difficult profound mystery, and so Linley primarily continued to focus on Worldwalking.

Before entering the Amethyst Mountains, Linley had spent nearly twenty years on Worldwalking.

Now that he had spent fifty more years, Linley finally reached the level of mastery in Worldwalking.

Within the mountain hollow, Linley's divine earth clone, Bebe, and Olivier were together.

"Boss, you really are formidable. You even achieved mastery in Worldwalking!" Bebe said in celebration.

"The Worldwalking profound mystery is naturally connected to the ‘Essence of the Earth’, and it belongs to one of the simpler types of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth. Despite that, however, I still had to spend over seventy years before breaking through.” Linley sighed.

In the past seventy years, Linley’s greatest improvement had been in the soul!

In the Amethyst Mountains, there was no lack of amethysts!

Even on the grounds of the Amethyst Mountain, if one went in serious search of amethysts, in a single day one would pick up more than ten thousand. If one went to the Demonic Amethyst Lairs, even though they didn’t spew out as many amethysts as they did during the Fog Wave day, when they were in the ‘resting’ phase, the number of amethysts in the crevice weren’t that many, but if one used a giant elemental hand to grab some, most likely in a short period of time, one would be able to seize a million.

Once, when Olivier and Bebe were bored, they had made a trip to the crevice and had spent half a month there, pulling out over a hundred million amethysts. Afterwards, bored, they had come back. In the Amethyst Mountains, these amethysts were simply too worthless.

Others found it hard to refine amethysts, but Linley was different.

After constantly refining amethysts and strengthening his soul, Linley was far more powerful than he had been fifty years ago. After all, during these fifty years, his soul had been continuously growing.

“Now that you have the Worldwalking ability, the Amethyst Mountains are even safer than before.” Olivier sighed. “These rocks are still part of the world. By using the Worldwalking ability, you can fuse with the rocks and pass through them. When the next Fog Wave comes, due to having the Worldwalking ability, you will be better able to preserve yourself.”

Linley nodded slightly.

Only a tenth of Deities trained in the Laws of the Earth, and in that portion, fairly few mastered ‘Worldwalking’. Jarrod and Garlan were unfortunate; neither of them had trained in the Laws of the Earth. They knew that training in Worldwalking was excellent for staying alive in the Amethyst Mountains, but training wasn’t something you could do just because you wanted to, even if you had all the time in the world.

“Boss, give it a try. How does Worldwalking work out?” Bebe’s eyes were gleaming.

Linley laughed. “I wanted to give it a try to begin with.”

Immediately, Linley let himself calm down, then executed the Worldwalking ability. Linley could sense himself completely merge into the boundless elemental essences of the earth. The stones here were naturally filled with earth elemental essences. Linley easily passed through the stone, moving at high speed through it.

“The Boss disappeared. Worldwalking really is interesting.” Bebe laughed.

In Olivier's heart, he sighed with praise. "Linley truly is formidable. He has three divine clones, and now he has mastered Worldwalking." However, in Olivier's heart, he didn't feel too bad, because in the past few years, he had finally reached the God level in the Laws of Darkness.

The first time using Worldwalking was indeed extremely marvelous.

Linley willingly allowed himself to pass through the stone. "Using Worldwalking really is interesting. However...the Amethyst Mountains is filled with gravitational force. Even when using Worldwalking, my speed is still not fast enough." Even though his body had completely merged with the earth elemental essences, he was still affected by the power of the gravitational pull.

Linley continued to move forward, traveling for several thousand kilometers.

Suddenly...

"Hey?" Linley suddenly discovered that deep within the rocks of the Amethyst Mountains, there was an empty cave. This cave had no exits at all, but it was within the center of a mountain. It was quite strange.

With but a thought, Linley's body re-solidified within the cave.

"The cave is quite large." Linley carefully inspected it. The cave was over ten meters tall and tens of meters wide, but it didn't have any tunnels nearby. This cave was completely sealed off. Linley could also sense that this cave should have been naturally formed.

There wasn't a single hint of carving or structuring!

"Naturally formed. How curious." Linley sighed in amazement.

"Hey, kid of the Four Divine Beasts clan, why'd you end up running over into my place?" Suddenly, a clear voice rang out. Linley's soul shuddered in fright, and he turned...

That adorable juvenile amethyst beast was standing there, raising its little head and staring at Linley, eyes filled with guile. "I didn't expect this at all. I thought I'd have to wait until the next Fog Wave before I'd have the chance to come make trouble for you. But you actually ran over to my place."

"Flee!" Linley didn't hesitate at all, immediately using the Worldwalking ability.

"Bang!"

Linley slammed hard into the wall, unable to leave.

"You came on my turf, and you thought you would leave, just like that?" The juvenile amethyst beast snorted, eyes filled with self-delight. "Hmph, hmph. Countless of years of boredom, but today, a fun toy has arrived. How should I play with him?"

Linley felt misery in his heart. He had only come to this completely sealed off cave through using the Worldwalking ability. How had he ended up running into this little juvenile amethyst beast?

Book 15, Priceless Treasure – Chapter 41, Trapped Five Hundred Years

Within the cave inside the Amethyst Mountains. Only Linley and the juvenile amethyst beast were present.

“Just now, when I entered, there clearly was nobody inside this cave. I am certain that this juvenile amethyst beast definitely wasn’t present. How could he have suddenly appeared without me not sensing anything at all?” Linley’s heart was filled with disbelief. He didn’t dare to believe that this was all real!

What he was now facing was the leader of those countless amethyst beasts – the little juvenile amethyst beast.

“What should I do?” Linley was pondering on how to flee.

The walls of this large cave, as well as the floor, were faintly circulating with a violet light. Even if he were to use Worldwalking, he wasn’t able to go through this barrier at all so as to merge with the stone.

No way to run!

“Hey, kid, what are you thinking about? Are you actually still thinking about running away?” The juvenile amethyst beast’s clear eyes stared at Linley, and his lips curved upwards slightly. “Forget it. Once, an extremely powerful Highgod, roughly at the level you would consider a ‘Seven Star Fiend’, came here. In front of me, though, he still behaved obediently!” The juvenile amethyst beast raised its little head arrogantly.

Linley was secretly shocked. Even a Seven Star Fiend was no match for this juvenile amethyst beast?

"My name is Linley. Might I ask who you are?" Linley's attitude was very respectful.

The juvenile amethyst beast coughed on purpose, then said, "Listen up. My name is Reisgem [Lei'si'jing]. I've previous adventured in other planes, and I've also engaged in battles in Purgatory. I am a mighty Commander in Purgatory!"

"Commander of Purgatory?" Linley felt utterly lost.

What was a Purgatory?

When he had read the books regarding the geography of the Infernal Realm, Linley had never heard of a place called 'Purgatory'.

"You don't know about Purgatory?" The juvenile amethyst beast stared, and then nodded in understanding. "Oh, right. You are just a God. Even many Highgods don't know about that place. It makes sense that you don't know...hmph, talking to you really is a waste of time. You don't even know what being a 'Purgatory Commander' represents, hmph!"

The juvenile amethyst beast was very unhappy.

Linley could only smile helplessly. He didn't even know why this juvenile beast named Reisgem was talking about these things.

"Now, how should I punish you?" The juvenile amethyst beast stood up, his meaty little paws rubbing his chin as he strode back and forth within the cave, appearing to be in deep thought. "Play the game of smashing stones? Same as the last guy, who I smashed to death?"

Hearing this, Linley's heart trembled.

The game of smashing stones? Smashed to death? Linley could completely imagine what this juvenile amethyst beast was capable of doing.

"No, no good." While still walking back and forth, the juvenile amethyst beast continued to mumble. Hearing the mumbling of the juvenile amethyst beast, Linley's heart was very cold.

"This juvenile amethyst beast named Reisgem is a terrifying figure who possesses enormous power and yet the heart of a child." Linley's heart was panicking. Lowering his head to look at the floor, he saw the faint violet light circulating through it.

This was just a layer of something which Reisgem had silently covered the floors and the walls of the cave with, but Linley couldn't budge the violet light at all. Just from this, Linley was certain of the great power of this juvenile amethyst beast. In addition...he had watched the juvenile amethyst beast personally attack, and easily kill a powerful Highgod.

"Right now, I only have my divine earth clone here. I'm far too weak." Linley secretly sighed.

The Sovereign's Might and his weapons were all on his original body. He didn't have a single thing on his divine earth clone. At present, he didn't have any ability to fight back at all.

"This juvenile amethyst beast..." Linley carefully inspected this juvenile beast. Compared to the amethyst beasts, he was very similar. His entire body was violet, and his head and back also were covered with a large number of spikes, in total 108 spikes. The same was true for the body of the amethyst beasts.

The juvenile amethyst beast suddenly was jubilant, and excitedly began to jump around. "Haha, I have it!"

Suddenly...

The juvenile amethyst beast's face froze, then out of the corner of his mouth, he muttered, "I'm not even allowed to have fun." And then, the juvenile amethyst beast raised his head to look at Linley, his face turning cold. "Kid, I'm in a really bad mood right now, so I'll have to vent it out on you. Hmph. If you are too useless, I'll just kill you."

"Mr. Reisgem, you don't even care about Seven Star Fiends. Why must you act against me, a mere God?" Linley had a very bad feeling. This juvenile amethyst beast most likely didn't have any good intentions.

The juvenile amethyst beast snorted. "You shut your mouth! Screw your mommy, if it weren't for the fact that I have been ordered to remain in the Amethyst Mountains for countless years before being allowed out, why would I care about a mere God like you? Although you are a little weak, at least you are alive. You can play with me.” As he spoke, the juvenile amethyst beast flipped his little claw out, and immediately, a black stone that was emanating waves of violet light appeared, hovering in front of him.

Linley couldn't help but carefully inspect that black stone.

The black stone was very small, only the size of a finger, but it emanated with lines of violet light. Waves of an unusual aura spread out from within it.

“Go.” The juvenile amethyst beast waved its little paw.

Immediately, the black stone hovered to above Linley, and then one ray of violet divine power after another flew out from the black stone, landing down like multiple chains. There were, in total, 108 rays of violet divine power.

The 108 rays of violet divine power all flew out from within the black stone, forming circles and reconnecting at the ground beneath Linley's feet. The 108 curved lines of violet divine power formed a complete globe, while Linley was right in the center of it.

“Haha, let's begin.” The juvenile amethyst beast cracked his lips into a grin.

Immediately, the 108 rays of violet divine power quickly began to flash and move at high speed, and it was no longer possible to tell that there were 108 rays of divine power. Linley could only see that the area around him was a globe of violet light, while he himself was within it.

"Crackle..."

Within the globe of violet light, it was as though electric sparks were flashing with violet light.

One surge after another of strange power was being created.

"Aaaaaah!" Agonized, Linley immediately curled into a ball, hovering in the center of that violet sphere. With a strange 'crackle' sound, Linley's skin and bones were pressed down so hard, his body was caving in.

Linley could clearly sense that the surrounding violet light was creating surges of 'repulsive force'. Every single part of the violet light was generating that repulsive force, and all of it was focused on his body.

Repulsive force was pressing down on Linley from every side.

It was as though Linley was being constantly compressed, as though the sphere was trying to compress Linley himself into a ball. This sort of terrifying pressure carried with it extreme pain.

"This Reisgem has mental issues!" Linley cursed in his mind.

Working to raise his head, he saw that roughly two meters away, that black stone was hovering. The source of this violet light was that black stone.

"Kid, given my usual temper, you would definitely die. However, today, I suddenly feel benevolent and merciful." The juvenile amethyst beast stared at the violet globe as well as Linley, who was being compressed. "I've supplemented the divine power of that black stone. It should be able to roughly maintain this 'Gravitational Space' for ten thousand years. If in ten thousand years, you are able to leave that place, I'll spare your life. But, if you wait until the divine power is exhausted without being able to leave, then I will..." The juvenile amethyst beast stretched out his meaty claws. "Kill ya!"

Within the globe of violet light.

Even his bones were cracking from the pressure. The massive agony was causing Linley's entire body to twitch, but Linley could still clearly hear the words of that juvenile amethyst beast. Linley immediately struggled to hiss out, "Gravitational Space? This is a Gravitational Space? Impossible!!!" That terrifying repulsive force was so strong that Linley found it hard to even open his mouth.

Only, Linley truly didn't understand it. Because, he had never heard of a Gravitational Space capable of generating a repulsive force.

A Gravitational Space should have a terrifying attractive gravitational force!

"Right, this is a Gravitational Space, one of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth. There's nothing 'impossible' about it!" The juvenile amethyst beast snorted. "But of course, this is a 'Gravitational Space' that was created after fusing the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' and the ‘Gravitational Space’, and it also has a little something special added into it...let me remind you, if you want to escape, all you have to do is be able to grab that black stone.”

After speaking, the juvenile amethyst beast lay down on the ground, then suddenly raised his little head to stare at Linley. “Oh, right. Even though it might hurt, don’t make any noise. If your noise wakes me up, I’ll kill you.”

Linley could only forcibly endure the pain wracking his entire body, not daring to make a sound.

“Huff!” “Huff!”

A soft snoring sound filled the cave.

Linley was in a great deal of pain. The repulsive force wasn’t any weaker than the astonishing attracting force from the Amethyst Mountains. When applied throughout his entire body, he was in so much pain he could die. In addition, this wasn’t his original body, capable of Dragonforming.

He was in such pain, yet he couldn’t make any noise...and the juvenile amethyst beast was just lying there, sleeping!

“He’s just toying with me!” Linley cursed in his heart, but moments later, Linley tried to force himself to calm down. “What I need to do right now is to escape this violet globe. To leave, I have to first take that black stone.” Linley raised his head to stare at the black stone that was emanating those rays of violet light.

"But this repulsive force is too great, while I'm squeezed in the center of this violet globe. I can't move at all." Linley laughed miserably.

Linley then gritted his teeth, struggling to raise his hand upwards.

"Crunch!" The powerful repulsive force from above forced Linley's right arm down, smashing it against Linley's shoulder, causing the bones in both the shoulder and the arm to shatter.

"Let's see if the 'Essence of the Earth' will work." Linley gave it another try.

One try after another. Linley did everything he could think of, but was completely unable to overcome the repulsive force, which was simply too strong.

"It seems I'll have to use that final method." Linley forced himself to calm down.

In magic, once someone understood the art of gravity, if one fell into another person's Gravitational Space, if the opponent's mastery was weaker than one's own, one could ablate the gravitational force.

"This repulsive force is very powerful because it relies on fusing the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' and the 'Gravitational Space'. Then if I am able to fuse those two profound mysteries, I should also be able to ablate the repulsive force and retrieve the black stone." Linley, after thinking through this, immediately tried to ignore the pain wracking his body and force himself to lose himself within the 'Laws of the Earth'.

Linley only had a basic understanding of the Profound Truths of Gravitational Space.

He had already achieved mastery in the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World'.

Linley immediately focused all his attention into this, beginning to struggle to gain insights on how to merge these two profound mysteries. Only, both the 'Gravitational Space' and the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' were extremely difficult profound mysteries, and the amount of time it would take would definitely be very long.

Within the mountain hollows, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier were in a state of shock.

"Boss, your divine earth clone was captured by that juvenile amethyst beast?" Bebe said frantically. "Then what should we do?"

Delia was worried and frantic as well.

"Nothing else I can do." Linley shook his head, looking at Delia. "Delia, for now, I won't be able to accompany you. My original body also needs to completely focus on gaining insights into the Laws of the Earth and work hard along with my divine earth clone."

Delia immediately nodded.

Linley's divine clone was in a life-threatening crisis. How could Delia be so selfish as to have Linley keep her company?

"Ten thousand years?" Linley mused. "Can it be that this amethyst beast thinks that I won't be able to merge these two profound mysteries, even in ten thousand years?"

Linley's original body immediately began to train, while at the same time, it also constantly absorbed the soul essences from amethysts, constantly strengthening his soul.

This was because due to his soul being simply too powerful, in terms of visualization speed, Linley's original body was actually slightly faster than his divine earth clone. The original body and the clone were completely focused on the Laws of the Earth and on visualization...

"Fuse. How should I fuse the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' and the 'Gravitational Field'?" Linley's understanding of the 'Gravitational Field' was constantly rising, but as for fusing, Linley didn't even have a basic idea of how to accomplish that.

.....

Within the mountain hollow, Delia and Bebe looked at the distant Linley, seated in the meditative position. They were both worried.

"The Boss has been training for nearly five hundred years now. Why hasn't he reacted at all?" Bebe said.

“Don’t be impatient. Linley will definitely succeed.” Over the past five hundred years, although at first, Delia was frantic with concern, by now, although she was still worried, she had calmed down.

This was because, as Linley had said, if he truly was unlucky and failed, at most he would just lose a divine earth clone.

Linley's divine earth clone and original body were both absorbed in training in the 'Laws of the Earth'. Although he constantly increased his understanding with regards to 'Gravitational Space', he hadn't been able to even find the initial steps of fusing the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' and the 'Gravitational Space'!

The most important part of fusing two profound mysteries was in the initial steps. Once one found the initial steps, everything else was just a matter of time. But if one hadn't even found the initial steps, then no matter how much time you spent, it would be useless.

Linley exhausted all his mind and efforts on trying to decipher the way through which he could fuse these two profound mysteries.

But the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' and 'Gravitational Space' were both high-class profound mysteries. It wasn't too hard to fuse the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' with the 'Essence of the Earth', but fusing the 'Gravitational Space' with it was extremely hard.

"This doesn't work!" After having spent thirty years without even finding the first steps to fusing these two profound mysteries, Linley started to panic. "If I'm just stuck here, I can spend ten thousand years without being able to improve at all. I can't let this continue!"

"The conditions this juvenile beast has set truly are not easy ones." Only now did Linley understand how difficult a task this was. Grinding his teeth, Linley immediately made his decision. "Then I'll try doing it in a roundabout way!"

His divine earth clone continued to train hard in attempting to fuse the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' and the 'Gravitational Space'.

As for Linley's primary body, he attempted to let the Gravitational Space and the Essence of the Earth fuse!

The Essence of the Earth had been fused with the Throbbing Pulse of the World long ago. If he could fuse Gravitational Space with the Essence of the Earth, then it might be possible for him to use that fusion to then draw the Gravitational Space and the Throbbing Pulse of the World closer to each other.

By drawing them closer together, he would begin to be able to take those first steps.

Upon having broken through the first few steps, a wide road would lie ahead of him!

The 38th year of Linley's bitter training.

"Letting Gravitational Space and the Essence of the Earth fuse is much simpler." Linley had spent eight years time in allowing these two profound mysteries to gradually fuse.

Because the Essence of the Earth and Throbbing Pulse of the World were already completely fused, through the Essence of the Earth, Linley felt some confidence in his ability to fuse the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Gravitational Space.

The 46th year of Linley's bitter training!

"This roundabout method has finally succeeded." Linley had finally begun to fuse the Gravitational Space and the Throbbing Pulse of the World . With a beginning, it would be much easier in the future.

Although he had begun to fuse them, and his original body and divine clone were simultaneously training, Linley would still have to take an extremely long amount of time and break through the bottleneck in order to fuse the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Gravitational Space, these two profound mysteries.

This year was already the 206th year of Linley's training!

In addition, the reason why it was so fast was because Linley's original body's soul had absorbed a large amount of amethyst soul essences and had become extremely strong.

On the 206th year of Linley being trapped here. Within the cave in the Amethyst Mountains.

"Snoooooore. "Snoooooore."

The gentle nasal sound echoed in the room. The juvenile amethyst beast still lay there, occasionally wrinkling his nose in his sleep, appearing quite adorable.

In the middle of that violet globe, Linley's entire body was covered with bloodstains from that tremendous pressure, but currently, a look of delight was on Linley's face. "I've finally fused those two profound mysteries." After having spent fully 206 years, and with his original body and divine clone training together, he had finally fused those two profound mysteries.

At present, Linley could actually completely fuse the Throbbing Pulse of the World, the Gravitational Space, and Essence of the Earth together, because the three profound mysteries already had a common element connecting them together.

"However, I still have to wait to actually get out before being happy." Linley didn't waste any time.

Raising his head to look upwards, he stared at the black stone glowing with violet light which hovered above him.

"Repulsive force?" Linley frowned.

Although he had already begun to fuse the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Gravitational Space, Linley still didn't quite understand how repulsive force could be generated!

"What is it all about? How to counter this repulsive force?" Linley felt quite frantic. To be able to counteract this repulsive force, at the very least, he himself would have to be able to generate a Gravitational Space filled with repulsive force. Only when he had completely understood this would he be able to counteract!

But how?

Linley didn't know!

"That 'Reisgem', the juvenile amethyst beast, said that as long as those two profound mysteries fuse..." Linley suddenly was stunned.

He remembered the words that the juvenile amethyst beast had said; "This is a 'Gravitational Space' that was created after fusing the Throbbing Pulse of the World and Gravitational Space, with a little special something mixed in..."

"A little special something mixed in?" Linley murmured.

The attack power of a certain technique depended partially on the profound mysteries themselves, but how to apply the profound mysteries was also very important.

For example, in the Infernal Realm, there might be two Seven Star Fiends who had both fused four types of profound mysteries, but they might use them in different ways. Naturally, their attacks would be different! A particularly ingenuous way in which they used the attacks might cause the power of the profound mysteries to increase many tenfold!

"To be able to cause gravity to generate a repulsive force? How?" Linley carefully inspected the violet light surrounding himself.

However, no matter how much time he spent looking, all he saw was violet light. Linley couldn't see anything at all.

"What is it, exactly?" Linley repeatedly pondered. "How to use gravity and change it into a repulsive force?" An attractive force and a repulsive force were completely separate types of force. No matter how he pondered it, Linley couldn't understand how to change between the two.

How could Linley have known?

That when the juvenile amethyst beast said ten thousand years, it was because he was confident that for an ordinary God, it was virtually impossible to exit the violet sphere within ten thousand years.

To fuse two profound mysteries in ten thousand years wasn't too hard!

Some geniuses could do it in a century.

However, this violet sphere had a special quality. It wasn't the profound mysteries! Rather, it was a very special type of usage of the profound mysteries, something which Reisgem felt the most proud about.

"How to use it, exactly?"

Ignoring the agony, Linley shut his eyes and constantly visualized and hypothesized in his mind.

His divine earth clone and his original body were completely absorbed into this. They constantly analyzed and pondered, time and time again...

and time flowed on.

The 482nd year Linley had been trapped here!

After two centuries of painstaking thought, Linley had already come up with quite a few powerful ways of using and fusing the Throbbing Pulse of the World and Gravitational Space. However, Linley still couldn't come up with a way to convert the 'attractive force' to the 'repulsive force'.

"What to do?"

Linley was extremely frantic. After pondering for two hundred years, he still hadn't come up with the way by which a repulsive force could be generated.

"I've already thought of everything, but it's useless. I've thought of everything. What to do? What to do?" Linley stared at the violet light around him. He couldn't help but feel angry. "Can it be that it really will have to be as I told Delia, that I'll just give up this divine earth clone?"

Linley didn't want to give up his divine earth clone!

It wasn't because the divine earth clone represented a life, and it wasn't because of the divine earth clone's powerful soul attack.

It was because...

"The vast Earth!" In Linley's mind, the image of that man, dressed in long white robes, with a long white beard. "Grandpa Doebling..."

It was Grandpa Doebling who had guided Linley onto the path of training in earth-style magic. Linley also knew that Grandpa Doebling had always wanted to break through the Saint level to become a Deity. Only, Grandpa Doebling didn't have the chance to. Linley himself had trained so hard and had finally become a Deity in the Laws of the Earth, and now had entered the Higher Plane of the 'Infernal Realm'!

Linley sometimes thought to himself: "Grandpa Doebling, if he knew that I had become a Deity of the earth-element and had entered the Higher Planes, he would definitely be very happy."

His divine earth clone didn't just represent a life to him.

It was something which Linley felt Grandpa Doebling had entrusted him with!

He didn't want to give it up!

"No, I cannot give up! The Laws of the Earth. I will continue to train in them. I definitely will not permit the divine earth clone to die." Linley constantly told himself this, and then stared at the juvenile amethyst beast. "It's been less than five hundred years. The juvenile amethyst beast gave me ten thousand years. I still have more than nine thousand years left. I will definitely succeed, definitely succe..."

Midway through his sentence, Linley came to a halt. He stared at the sleeping juvenile amethyst beast.

Or, to be precise, he was staring at those 108 spikes on the back of the juvenile amethyst beast!

Linley stared, stunned, as though he had lost his wits. He muttered to himself, "108? Flat?"

Linley's mind suddenly had thoughts flash through like lightning, and then, Linley shut his eyes. At the same time...

Within Linley's mind, he visualized rays of divine power forming, exactly 108 rays of them. First, he organized them in sequence like the way those 108 spikes on the juvenile amethyst beast's back were organized, and then constantly visualized rearranging them, trying to see what special effects might be generated.

The 108 rays of divine power were simply too complex.

After spending fully half a month visualizing, Linley felt overjoyed. "Indeed. With a different sequence, the power of the gravity will increase a hundredfold." Linley knew very well that while normally using a 'Gravitational Space', at most one would be able to impact another person's movements, but the impact wouldn't be extravagant.

But by organizing the power in such a manner, the maximum limits of the attractive force had increased a hundredfold! Most likely, even Highgods would be rendered unable to fly.

"That's not right. It's still not as powerful as the gravity here in the Amethyst Mountains.” Linley refuted this mentally. “And wait. The gravity of the Amethyst Mountains isn’t focused downwards. Rather, it is like a sphere, absorbing in all directions. No matter where one is, one will be drawn towards the Amethyst Mountains.”

Linley opened his eyes, and in front of him appeared the violet light which had formed into a sphere. He just looked at it...

“Flat? Sphere?” Linley murmured, but slowly, a light appeared in Linley’s eyes. “Right! Sphere!!! It isn’t a simple flat surface!”

“Crunch!”

The ‘shackles’ binding Linley’s thoughts just shattered.

“Haha, so that’s how it works. Haha, how could I have not realized this? However...to mentally go from visualizing a flat surface to a sphere is incomparably more difficult.” Linley could completely imagine how difficult that must have been. If visualizing the effects on a flat surface had to be done a thousand times, then the visualization and hypothesizing needed for a sphere would be a thousand to the third power! A billion times!”

A thousand versus a billion!

The difference was too great.

What’s more, Linley had spent far more than just a thousand times visualizing all sorts of possible scenarios for a ‘flat surface’. Thus, the number of visualizations needed for the complicated sphere would naturally also be far more.

“If I truly had to blindly exhaust all possible calculations on ways to align the 108 rays of divine power, even if I spent a trillion years, I might not be able to finish it.” Linley understood using this sort of technique wasn’t just a matter of calculating everything out; it required certain insights.

“However, fortunately I know that the true trick of it lies in the sequence of those spikes on the juvenile amethyst beast’s back.” Linley opened his eyes, carefully inspecting the 108 spikes on the back of the juvenile amethyst beast, working hard to memorize the lengths and locations of those 108 spikes.

The 108 rays of divine power in Linley’s mind were constantly changing, while at the same time, Linley also began to circulate 108 rays of divine power around his body.

All sorts of calculations and visualizations. Linley’s divine power around his body began to be ordered as well. As time went on, the repulsive force actually began to lessen, or, to be precise...the repulsive force didn’t lessen, but Linley was able to counteract part of the repulsive force. As Linley’s calculations and visualizations came closer and closer to the true path, the amount of repulsive force counteracted increased even further.

“Huh?” The juvenile amethyst beast suddenly opened his eyes, staring at Linley. He was tremendously shocked. “This...this kid actually...?”

The violet amethyst beast immediately stood up, so angry that his nose was crooked. "It's only been five hundred years, but this punk has actually begun to approach a basic understanding of the ultimate technique of myself, Lord Reisgem." The juvenile amethyst beast watched as the earthen light around Linley's body circulated, the profound mysteries of the Laws contained within the light.

"Right. That's how you do it!" Linley, overjoyed, opened his eyes.

In the instant he opened his eyes, he saw the juvenile amethyst beast staring at him, filled with anger.

"Mr. Reisgem, I've finally reached your requirements." Linley smiled. Although at present, some repulsive force remained, that was primarily because the juvenile amethyst beast was using 'Highgod' level divine power. While the type of technique they used was the same, of course the juvenile beast's would be somewhat more powerful.

But after the counteracting, the remaining amount of repulsive force no longer had much power.

Linley easily flew up and stretched out with his hand, snatching the black stone emanating the violet light. Immediately, the violet sphere of light collapsed.

The juvenile amethyst beast stared furiously at Linley. "You little punk. You actually were able to understand this technique of mine?"

"Actually, I must thank you, Mr. Reisgem. If it hadn't been for the spikes on your back, I wouldn't have been able to break through so quickly."

Linley was currently in quite a good mood. The juvenile amethyst beast instantly understood. "Your mommy! So it was I myself who helped you!" But the juvenile amethyst beast also understood...that even though Linley had seen the spikes on his back, how many people would have been able to connect them with Gravitational Space?

The juvenile amethyst beast knew very well that this sort of unique Gravitational Space was his innate ability. Combined with the spikes on his back, the power was extremely great.

"I'll keep my promise. Kid, you can leave now." The juvenile amethyst beast said discontentedly.

"Then, Mr. Reisgem, I'll leave now." Linley was very courteous.

"Ugh, after you leave the Amethyst Mountains, I won't be able to see you again. I was planning on spending some time messing with you." The juvenile amethyst beast curled his lips as he spoke with resignation.

"Leave the Amethyst Mountains?" Linley was stunned. He turned to look at the juvenile amethyst beast.

The juvenile amethyst beast glanced at him, snorted, then said, "I might as well tell you. You've already mastered my ultimate technique. This Gravitational Space technique is capable of nullifying the gravitational pull of the Amethyst Mountains. As for the soul-affecting influence of the wind sound, hmph, with that stone, you won't be afraid either."

"The black stone?" Linley lowered his head to look at the stone in his hand.

"All you need to do is bind it with blood...argh, your mommy! The more I talk about it, the angrier I get. I'm not wasting any more words on you. Hurry up and beat it." The juvenile amethyst beast was very unhappy.

Linley's heart was filled with questions. "Bind the black stone with blood?" But although puzzled, Linley still dripped a drop of blood onto the black stone. After doing so, the black stone merged into Linley's body, fusing directly with Linley's soul. Linley could now feel the strange, marvelous properties of this black stone.

"This black stone...?"

Linley could sense that the black stone contained within it an extremely dense power. Only, the power was too deep and hidden. Aside from that, Linley could also sense 108 rays of spiritual energy circulating within it, constantly changing positions.

Linley realized, to his astonishment...

That the technique he had developed after spending so much time pondering was just one of the most basic, superficial types of techniques.

"What on earth is this black stone?" Linley was astonished. At the same time, he glanced in amazement at the juvenile amethyst beast. "Although this juvenile amethyst beast said he was going to torment me, he actually gave me this black stone. This black stone definitely isn't an ordinary item." Linley didn't understand it at all.

Why did the juvenile amethyst beast do this?

"Thank you, Mr. Reisgem." Linley immediately said gratefully.

"Hmph." The juvenile amethyst just turned his head away.

Linley didn't waste any more words. He immediately executed the Worldwalking ability and left the cave.

The juvenile amethyst beast sat down onto the floor of the cave. Suddenly...the stones of the cave walls began to move transforming into an enormous face.

"Gem-Gem, what, are you mad?" The stone face actually opened its mouth and spoke.

"Hmph. Right. I'm mad." The juvenile amethyst beast, 'Reisgem', said angrily. "Also, don't call me Gem-Gem! I finally got a toy, and I had just come up with all sorts of ideas to torment him, but you actually didn't let me, and then even gave him such a gift."

The lips of the stone face moved slightly. "Gem-Gem, don't be mad. Back in the day, I owed a debt to the clan leader of the Four Divine Beasts clan..." But halfway through the sentence.

"I told you, DON'T CALL ME GEM-GEM!" The juvenile amethyst beast bellowed, and then let out a snort and slammed straight into the wall, merging into the wall and disappearing.

“After all these years, he’s still like a little kid.” The stone face on the wall said helplessly, and then disappeared, the wall returning to its normal appearance.

Book 16, Starmist Sea– Chapter 1, Black Stone

The Amethyst Mountains were covered by that unfeeling, icy mist. Within the mountain hollow, Delia was currently seated quietly, her eyes closed. Today was as peaceful as always.

“Delia, Bebe!”

Suddenly, a voice rang out.

Delia, who had been quietly meditating, couldn’t help but be startled. She immediately opened her eyes and turned to look over. Right now, Bebe’s worried voice rang out as well. “Boss, why did you stop training? How is your divine earth clone doing? Did you succeed, or is it...?”

By the time Delia looked over, she saw that the sky-blue robed Linley, his original body, was already standing in front of her.

“What’s the situation?” Delia walked over, asking with concern.

Linley felt a surge of warmth in his heart. Nodding, he said, “Everything is fine. Right now, my divine earth clone is on the way back, and will arrive soon. Delia, Bebe, I’m sorry. I’ve made you worry during this period of time.” Linley didn’t know whether to laugh or to cry right now.

He didn’t know if he should say that he was lucky, or if he was unlucky.

He had just been testing Worldwalking for the first time when he had encountered the juvenile amethyst beast. However, because of this, his power had increased greatly. Indeed, blessings and disasters could be hard to differentiate.

Suddenly, footsteps rang out from afar. It was Olivier.

“Linley, you successfully escaped, right? I can tell just by the look on your face.” Olivier laughed loudly.

Linley nodded slightly.

“Boss, you successfully escaped. This is a cause for celebration! Although we might be stuck here a very long time and need to be a bit sparing with the wine, today, we absolutely still have to celebrate this joyous occasion.” With a flip of his hand, Bebe retrieved several bottles of fine wine.

Wine was extremely precious in the Amethyst Mountains.

Within the Amethyst Mountains, perhaps not even hundreds of millions of inkstones would be enough to trade for a single bottle of wine. After all, in the Amethyst Mountains, harvesting amethysts was simply too easy. Wine, on the other hand, was gone after being drunk. The Amethyst Mountains didn't have any materials that could be used for making wine.

“Haha, today, drink as much as you like.” Linley laughed loudly. “Even if we drink up all the wine we have, it doesn't matter!”

Bebe immediately stared. “Boss, you can be happy, but you can't be so wasteful.”

Olivier was somewhat astonished as well. Delia looked suspiciously at Linley, asking, “Linley, are you preparing to abstain from alcohol?”

“Haha...” Laughing, Linley shook his head. “That’s not it. It’s because I’ve already found a method by which I can take you all out from these Amethyst Mountains.”

“Leave the Amethyst Mountains?” Bebe, Delia, and Olivier couldn’t help but be stunned.

After so many years, nobody who had entered the Amethyst Mountains had been able to leave on their own. Olivier and the others had tested it out as well, but weren’t able to leave the Amethyst Mountains at all. But Linley was now saying...

Delia, Bebe, and Olivier knew what sort of person Linley was. They knew that Linley wouldn’t lie.

But leaving the Amethyst Mountains, this was simply too unbelievable.

“Boss? You tellin’ the truth?” Bebe was filled with doubts, and he asked again.

“Linley, you’d better not be making me happy for nothing.” Olivier chuckled, but his eyes stared hard at Linley with a hint of expectation in them. If anyone else had said this, Olivier probably wouldn’t even pay them any mind, but it was Linley who said this.

Linley wasn't the sort of person to lie!

"Linley, you have a way to deal with that astonishing gravity?" Delia went straight to the heart of the matter. If one wanted to leave the Amethyst Mountains, first, one had to deal with that astonishing gravity. The gravity of the Amethyst Mountains was something which not even most Highgods could nullify while flying.

"Don't worry. If I said we can leave, that means we can leave." Linley said with absolute certainty.

Bebe, Delia, and Olivier all had a hint of excitement on their faces.

"Boss, how would we leave?" Bebe asked.

Linley smiled. "Fine. I'll give you a demonstration, as otherwise, you probably wouldn't believe it." Linley's original body was capable of borrowing divine power from his divine body. Immediately, Linley's body began to circulate with a surge of divine earth power, and he immediately activated it based on the insights he had gained.

Geomagnetic ripples spread out from Linley's legs, stretching out into the earth.

"Crackle..."

At the same time, the ground within a hundred meters began to ripple strangely. Linley smiled as he looked at Delia, Bebe, and Olivier. "What do you think?"

"Huh?"

Delia and the others were astonished. To their amazement, they discovered that the effect their body suffered from the astonishing gravitational force of the Amethyst Mountains had been weakened by more than 90%. Although the remaining amount of gravity pull was considerable, it was no longer enough to prevent the three of them from flying.

Delia, Bebe, and Olivier easily hovered up from the ground.

"Linley, what's this?" Olivier couldn't help but find this unbelievable.

"Right." Bebe's face was filled with astonishment. "Garlan and Jarrod had told me that even if one mastered Gravitational Space, it would be useless here in the Amethyst Mountains. Up till now, nobody has been able to nullify the gravitational force like you."

Although some experts were powerful enough to fly despite the pull of gravity, that was just relying on pure power, unlike Linley who was using profound mysteries.

"Do you believe me now?" Linley didn't explain further.

"I believe you, I believe you." Olivier's face was covered with delight, the many years of unhappiness all washed away.

"Boss, what about that strange wind region?" Bebe asked hurriedly. That chaotic region was the true culprit behind so many experts being trapped here.

Linley laughed calmly. "No need to ask. When we leave, I'll deal with it." Linley still remembered clearly how the juvenile amethyst beast, Reisgem, had said that in the area of the strange wind sound, by relying on this black stone, he would be able to pass through it.

"I have to spend some time giving a thorough review of this black stone." Linley said quietly to himself.

After exiting the cave, Linley had been in a hurry to come back, and hadn't analyzed the black stone. However, even that cursory glance he had given it had shown that the black stone had astonishing aspects to it. In particular, it held within it an aura that made one's heart tremble, and the spiritual energy within it constantly changed. All of these things attracted Linley's interest.

"But of course, I still need to spend some time preparing, and get a thorough understanding of the method we'll use to leave." Linley laughed. "The Amethyst Mountains are very safe. In the Infernal Realm, it's very, very rare to find such a safe training area."

"Indeed, aside from the flaws of the white fog here limiting visibility to a hundred meters, the astonishing gravity, and the boring, dull lifestyle... in the Amethyst Mountains, aside from the day of the Fog Wave, it really is quite safe in here." Olivier nodded as well.

Right at this moment, the returning divine earth clone finally sprouted out from the stone, fusing into Linley's original body. Delia and Bebe, upon seeing this, finally let out sighs of relief.

"Haha, Boss, let's celebrate!" Bebe, having received two pieces of good news in a row, was naturally in an excellent mood.

After Linley's group of four celebrated, Linley began to focus on his analysis of the black stone.

"This black stone contains within it an earth-type aura, and it also has a spiritual aura. It really is odd." Linley carefully inspected the black stone, his heart filled with questions, and then he laughed. "Perhaps the black stone has some connection to amethysts." Amethyst-top stones were naturally earth-style.

However, amethysts contained spiritual energy as well. This was quite similar to the black stone.

"Only, the aura of the spiritual energy in this black stone causes one's heart to tremble..." Linley said to himself.

The black stone also held within it those 108 constantly fluctuating spiritual energy auras. These 108 spiritual energy auras were moving into constantly changing configurations, causing Linley to feel utterly delighted. The configurations he himself had developed thus far were just the basics.

But within the black stone, the naturally transforming configurations were on a deeper level.

Linley immediately calmed down and began to analyze the methods by which one would use this Gravitational Space technique. Although seemingly simple, controlling it for one's own use was very complicated. It was much like how Linley had seen those 108 spikes on the back of the juvenile amethyst beast, but truly understanding the configuration had required a very long amount of time.

Right now, this was the difficulty which he faced.

However, Linley was absorbed by it...

"When Boss trains like this, he pays no attention to time at all." Bebe muttered, not for the first time. In fact, he had complained like this innumerable times.

Delia laughed and glanced at him. "Bebe, calm down and train. It's just been twenty years. It went by in a flash! Look at Olivier. As soon as he started meditating, he hasn't woken up a single time. If you are so impatient, when will you be able to make a breakthrough?"

Bebe pouted but didn't speak.

"Heeey." Bebe's eyes suddenly lit up. "The Boss woke up." Delia hurriedly turned to look towards where Linley was seated in meditation. Right now, Linley's eyes were open, and his face was all smiles. "So the black stone can even be used in such a manner. I truly am a fool."

Linley turned and urged, "Bebe, come over."

"What for?" Bebe didn't quite understand.

"Get a feel for my Gravitational Space." Linley said.

Bebe raised his head, then immediately walked over. Disdainfully, he said, "Gravitational Space? Give it your best shot. I, Bebe, have a really powerful body. Your Gravitational Space won't be able to harm me, no matter how powerful it is." Bebe was fully confident, and indeed, precisely because of his tough body, Linley had asked him to come.

"Get ready." Linley immediately began to use it.

"Crackle..."

Geomagnetic ripples spread out from Linley's feet, spreading out through the earth and continuously transforming from within it. The strange thing was, the black stone was currently floating within Linley's sea of consciousness, and the 108 rays of spiritual energy within the black stone were moving in exactly the same manner as the geomagnetic ripples.

It was as though the two were moving in accord.

"Haha, the gravity is quite something, but it's nothing to me." Bebe said delightedly, but suddenly, Bebe's face changed. He frantically shook his head. "Boss, stop playing around. My head feels miserable."

Linley immediately halted.

"How does that feel?" Linley laughed while looking at him. This was all as Linley had predicted it would be.

Bebe stared at Linley in surprise. "Boss, just now, my head felt so dizzy. That feeling was just, just like how when I heard the strange wind sound in the Fog Sea. It was that sort of feeling. My head felt extremely miserable. How'd you do it?" Bebe somewhat didn't dare to believe it.

"This is the effect of a treasure I received." Linley explained.

Actually, in the later stages of his analysis of the black stone, Linley had discovered this. It was at this point of the analysis that Linley realized why the juvenile amethyst beast had said that with this black stone, he wouldn't have to worry about the influence of the strange wind sound. It was because the special effect of the strange wind sound and the soul-effect of the black stone were identical!

Linley suspected...

"Perhaps, within these Amethyst Mountains, there is an extremely large 'black stone', capable of impacting and spreading out to a range of hundreds of thousands of kilometers." Linley guessed.

"Linley, what are you testing out?" Delia walked over as well.

Bebe turned his head and grinned. "Delia, the Boss is now extremely powerful, and I even daresay that we definitely won't have any problems in leaving the Amethyst Mountains." After having tasted this technique, Bebe was now completely confident in Linley.

Delia's eyes lit up. Walking over to Linley, she said, "Linley, shall we head out now?"

Linley frowned slightly. "No rush. Delia, the Infernal Realm has too many dangers hidden within it. We should wait until we are a bit stronger before heading out. Right now, I've only fused two types of profound mysteries. However, I am confident that I should be able to fuse three types of profound mysteries very soon!"

"Fuse three types?" Delia and Bebe were both surprised.

There were quite a few experts who had fused two types of profound mysteries, but the number who had fused three was extremely, extremely low. It must be understood that many Six Star Fiends had only fused three types of profound mysteries. As for fusing four...even Elquin, the Seven Star Fiend, had only fused four.

With each increase in level, the power would increase tenfold as well! The difficulty, as well, would also increase exponentially.

For example, Linley had fused the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Gravitational Space. To fuse a third type of profound mystery, he would have to have the third profound mystery find a 'joining' location for both of the other two types of profound mysteries, which would be the foundation for the fusing. Only then would fusing become possible.

Finding the 'joining' location, however, was extremely difficult.

For example, Linley had spent a long time looking for a 'joining' point between the Throbbing Pulse of the World and the Gravitational Space without success and without any breakthroughs. Afterwards, he had used the 'Essence of the Earth' to have these two types of profound mysteries find a 'joining point'.

"I'm confident in being able to fuse three profound mysteries, but four?" Linley couldn't help but think of the 'Worldwalking' technique. Up till now, he hadn't had a single insight into how he would fuse Worldwalking with any of the other three profound mysteries. To fuse four profound mysteries, he would at least have to begin fusing Worldwalking with the other three profound mysteries.

But he hadn't even found a joining point; how could he then fuse it with the other three?

Most likely, even after spending ten thousand years, he still wouldn't be able to do it.

"The higher I climb, the harder it becomes." Linley understood.

Book 16, Starmist Sea– Chapter 2, Ten Years of Harvesting

The 'Essence of the Earth' had been fused with the Throbbing Pulse of the World long ago, and had been partially fused with the Gravitational Space. At present, to fuse these three profound mysteries into one, it could be said to be just a matter of time. Linley naturally wouldn't choose to leave first.

The Amethyst Mountains were as calm as always.

As the calm days passed, Linley's understanding of the Laws of the Earth gradually increased, and the degree of fusion of the three types of profound mysteries constantly increased as well. Time silently flowed onwards, and in the blink of an eye, another 120 years passed.

On the surface of the stone, Linley was seated in the meditative position, his body covered by a layer of dust. Suddenly, a surge of energy swirled around his body, sweeping away the dust.

"Just a little bit more, and the three profound mysteries will be fused." Linley opened his eyes and let out a low sigh. Pausing his training, he said, "A bottleneck is hard to breakthrough. Once I am stuck at the final bottleneck, who knows how long it will take? Fusing profound mysteries have two critical points; the first is finding the 'joining point', and the second is the 'final bottleneck'. The amount of time needed for these two is completely unpredictable."

Despite that, however, Linley was still in quite a good mood.

He was just a tiny step away from fusing these three profound mysteries, and his power was now five or six times that of the past, when he had only fused two profound mysteries.

“Originally, when escorting Salomon and his treasure, we had been trapped in that castle of sand. Now, I’m going to create a Blackstone Prison of my own!” Linley smiled, then willed it...

Instantly...

With Linley at the center, divine power surged forth in the area with a circumference of a hundred meters. A large amount of earth elemental essence coalesced, instantly forming a black, completely sealed prison. Not a hint of sunlight could be seen from within the prison, and nothing could be seen at all.

At the same time, within this prison, there was an extremely strong gravity!

Compared to the past, when Linley had only fused two profound mysteries, the power of the gravity now was actually several times greater.

“Hmph. Even a Highgod who falls into this most likely won’t even be able to run out from within it.” Linley was very confident. “Their speed will be lessened, but my speed won’t be influenced at all. I can easily kill that Highgod!”

Blackstone Prison!

A prison formed as the result of the fusion of the Throbbing Pulse of the World, the Gravitational Space, and the Essence of the Earth profound mysteries, while using the mysterious priceless treasure, the 'black stone', as the nucleus.

Within this prison, the trapped person would suffer tremendously powerful gravitational bindings, while at the same time the soul would be impacted as well. The person would be able to use less than a tenth of his total strength. Within this region, Linley definitely could deal with his opponents.

"Unfortunately, the three profound mysteries haven't been completely fused." Linley said to himself.

Linley knew very well that given how hard it was to train in the Laws, to successfully fuse four profound mysteries would take countless years. What he was currently training in now would be, at this point in time, his greatest asset when roaming the Infernal Realm.

"Logically speaking, the Asuras of the Infernal Realm should have fused five types of profound mysteries. As for Seven Star Fiends, most of them have fused four profound mysteries. Only a very few have fused five profound mysteries. Generally speaking, Six Star Fiends have fused three types." Linley hypothesized.

Ordinary Highgods were Four Star Fiends. After fusing two profound mysteries, they would generally be capable of becoming Five Star Fiends.

But of course, this wasn't absolute. This was just a generality.

“Although I’m only one step off from completely fusing three profound mysteries, the effect of my ‘Blackstone Prison’ should be greater than that of four fused profound mysteries.” Linley knew very well that the reason why this technique was so powerful was primarily because of the strange way in which it was used.

This was the way in which the juvenile amethyst beast used Gravitational Space.

108 geomagnetic rays of force, when working together, could actually increase the former upper limits over a hundredfold! When combined with the ‘black stone’ and its support, the power of this technique would definitely doom most Highgods who encountered it.

In normal circumstances, Highgods could easily kill Gods, precisely because they were able to rely on their Godrealm as well as their naturally stronger souls.

Only...

With regards to the soul, Linley had a Sovereign soul-protecting artifact. As for the binding power of a Godrealm, Linley’s Gravitational Space had an even greater binding power. Generally speaking, any Highgods who encountered Linley would indeed be doomed. Actually, this made sense.

He had the ‘black stone’, the ‘soul-protecting Sovereign artifact’, and was very nearly at the point of fusing three profound mysteries.

Although his God-level divine power was rather weak, the three advantages listed above were simply too strong. Most Highgods definitely wouldn't be a match.

"Linley, you are finally prepared to head out." Olivier had waited a long time for this day.

"Sorry." Linley laughed.

And then, Linley glanced at the nearby Delia and Bebe. "Everyone, prepare yourselves!" As he spoke, Linley's body began to circulate with an earthen yellow light, and then a ten-meter long sphere of earthen light emanated out, surrounding Linley and the group of four within it, levitating.

A Gravitational Space didn't have to be flat; it could be made into a sphere. However, this was something Linley had accomplished only after centuries of research.

"Let's go!"

Within the Gravitational Space, Linley easily countered the impact of that gravitational pull. Linley's group of four immediately flew into the air.

"When we came, the gravity was so powerful. But now that we are leaving, I can't feel any gravity at all." Olivier couldn't help but glance at Linley. Sighing, he said, "Linley, of the experts of the Yulan continent who came to the Infernal Plane, I imagine there are very few as powerful as you.”

Olivier couldn't help but be impressed by Linley.

They flew into the white fog ahead of them. Linley's group of four constantly rose upwards, higher into the air.

“We've already left the region of powerful gravity.” Linley had been continuously controlling the gravitational sphere. Naturally, he could sense the changes in gravity outside. “We're about to immediately enter the region of that strange wind sounds, that chaotic area.” Linley reminded everyone.

Delia and Olivier were very careful, because their soul defenses weren't very strong.

“Whoosh!” “Whoosh!”

That wind sound rang out again. Immediately, Bebe frowned, while Delia and Olivier began to feel their heads going dizzy.

Linley immediately activated the 'black stone', and his own spiritual energy emanated out from within the black stone, filling the entire Gravitational Space sphere.

“So it really is the same.” Linley had a smile on his face. Right now, he could easily sense the principles behind the wind sound causing the soul to grow dizzy. Actually, it wasn't the wind; it was a sort of strange spiritual energy ripple. Even when it entered the body through the ears, it would still be transmitted straight through to the sea of consciousness.

Linley shut out that strange wind sound, and Delia along with the others felt much better.

"We'll definitely be able to leave now." Olivier was incomparably excited. After seeing Linley shut out that strange wind sound, he was completely sure of it now. It must be understood that this chaotic region with this strange wind sound was a place which even Highgods found difficult to deal with.

In the chaotic area, Linley's group of four was completely unaffected. Naturally, they headed straight through.

Moments later...

"I see the outside world." Bebe said in surprised delight.

"Me too." Linley immediately dispersed the Gravitational Space.

At this moment, not too far away from Linley, a group of people were standing aloft in mid-air, clearly waiting for amethysts to fly out.

"Ah, two amethysts!" From afar, an excited cry could be heard.

"Haha, I didn't expect that after being here for just half a month, you would be able to get two amethysts. Let's go have a good celebration." From afar, some idle chatter could be heard.

Linley's group of four looked at each other and laughed. These words were very familiar to each other. They were words commonly heard here in the Fog Sea.

They had finally escaped!

"We really did come out." Bebe's face was full of delight.

"Hey, the four of you, be careful. Don't go too deep into the Fog Sea. I saw that the four of you seem to have come from rather deep within. You have got to be careful." A flying God warned Linley's group of four. "If you go past the safe zone, you'll never be able to leave again."

"We know." Linley chuckled in response.

Of course they knew the danger. They themselves really had in fact been trapped within.

"Let's go." Linley's group of four felt quite joyful, and they immediately flew out of the borders of the Fog Sea.

"Linley, when we leave, each of us should pay three amethysts. Let's not return the writ." Delia said through divine sense.

"Why?" Bebe asked.

Linley was puzzled as well, but then he immediately understood. Delia explained through her divine sense, "I'm worried that after each Fog Wave, the eighteen clans will change to a different type of writ. If we take out our writ of passage, they might very well know that we entered during the previous Fog Wave, and will definitely suspect that we came out from within the Amethyst Mountains. Once we are discovered, we'll be in for a great deal of trouble."

Bebe and Olivier immediately understood.

Right. This was very possible.

"If we're discovered, we really will be doomed." Linley could imagine it.

It must be understood that in the Amethyst Mountains, acquiring amethysts was simply too easy. It was like picking money off the ground.

Linley's group of four immediately flew towards the outside perimeter, and instantly, two black-robed men went to greet them. One of them glanced at Delia in surprise, especially upon seeing the Fiend medallion on Delia's chest; this was a Highgod Fiend! It was extremely rare for them to see a Highgod Fiend enter the Fog Sea to harvest amethysts.

Linley couldn't help but feel startled.

"The four of you, where are your writs of passage?" One of the black-robed staff members said.

"We entered without buying them." Bebe replied.

"Oh." The black-robed man replied very naturally, "Same rules as always. Three amethysts each, twelve total for four of you."

With a flip of her hand, Delia produced five amethysts while saying, "My luck was a bit better than yours, so I'll pay five amethysts. How about you three? Bebe, this time, you had pretty good luck as well, right? You got quite a few amethysts, I believe."

"Oh, I'll pay the other seven." Bebe chortled as he withdrew seven amethysts.

Accepting the twelve amethysts, the two black-robed figures glanced at Delia in puzzlement, and then nodded. "You can leave." Clearly, the black-robed men didn't want to make too much of a fuss.

Linley's group of four laughed and immediately flew away, while from behind them came the sound of the two black-robed men chatting.

"That Highgod Fiend entered to harvest amethysts as well. What's wrong with her?"

"Who knows? Perhaps that woman reached the Highgod level while harvesting amethysts."

"Oh, right, that's very possible. It's only been a few centuries since the Fog Wave, but that skinny kid had really good luck. He was actually able to produce seven amethysts."

Linley's group heard these words as they travelled farther away. From afar, Linley's group took out their metallic lifeform and entered it, and it transformed into a ray of black light, quickly disappearing into the eastern horizons.

Within the metallic lifeform.

"Haha, we're rich, we're rich!" Bebe called out excitedly.

"How so?" Linley laughed as he looked at Bebe.

"Boss, a hundred years ago, you said that you had a way to let us leave the Amethyst Mountains, right?"

"Right, so what?" Linley looked at Bebe in puzzlement.

"Since I knew we were going to leave, I began to go harvest those amethysts like mad." Bebe laughed delightedly. "Boss, you don't know this, but I couldn't settle down and focus on training, so I went to harvest amethysts. At a single one of those Demonic Amethyst Lairs, in a single day, I was easily able to acquire millions of amethysts. I was harvesting for ten full years!"

"Millions of amethysts every day for ten years? How many do you have?" Linley, Delia, and Olivier were all shocked.

"Heh heh, can't you calculate it for yourself?" Bebe was extremely delighted with himself. "In the Amethyst Mountains, amethysts are worthless, but in other places, they are quite valuable."

Linley didn't know whether to laugh or to cry.

All of them knew this logic. However, Linley, Delia, and Olivier had only gone to harvest some amethysts earlier on, and afterwards they had focused on their training. Only Bebe, bored, would go harvest so many amethysts.

But ten years of harvesting? This number was simply too extravagant.

On this trip, they no longer encountered any dangers, and Linley's group constantly advanced. The Infernal Realm really was incomparably vast. From the Amethyst Mountains to the Bluemaple City of the Rainbow Prefecture took Linley's team eight full years of time.

"We're here at Bluemaple City!" Bebe celebrated.

All four of them in the metallic lifeform were overjoyed.

"We finally arrived!" Looking through the translucent metal and seeing the beautiful, distant, ancient Bluemaple City, Linley felt a surge of joy. On this trip over, they experienced countless dangers, and only now had they arrived at the Bluemaple City of the 'Rainbow Prefecture'. Now that they had arrived at Bluemaple City, they could begin their journey through the Starmist Sea.

After passing through the Starmist Sea, they would be at the place where Linley's ancestors resided.

The Bloodridge Continent!

Book 16, Starmist Sea– Chapter 3, Saturation

Rainbow Prefecture. Bluemaple City. This was at the southeastern-most point of the entire Redbud Continent. From Bluemaple City, one only would have to fly a few moments before reaching the borders of the vast, boundless Starmist Sea.

Everyone headed from the Redbud Continent towards the Jادefloat Continent of the east or the Bloodridge Continent of the southeast would primarily travel through here, as Bluemaple City was the closest location. Some major trading guilds would also have branches here, resulting in Bluemaple City being far more bustling and active than any of the other cities in the Redbud Continent!

“The gates of Bluemaple City actually have Redbud Army soldiers standing on duty. How strange.” Olivier laughed calmly in praise. At this moment, Linley’s group of four had already entered Bluemaple City and were walking along the roads of Bluemaple City.

“Bluemaple City is an extremely developed and bustling city. Trade has caused many merchant’s guilds to depart from this location. There are also many experts who wish to go to other continents who set out from here as well. It makes sense for some Redbud Army soldiers to be stationed at such an important location.” Linley said, while at the same time scanning his surroundings.

Linley was in an excellent mood as he enjoyed the views of Bluemaple City, which were different from Royalwing City.

How could Linley not be in a good mood? After all, they had taken a big first step on their journey to the Indigo Prefecture.

"Linley." Delia sent quietly through divine sense.

"Huh?" Linley turned to look, puzzled. Delia gestured with her eyes towards Bebe, and only now did Linley notice that Bebe seemed to be in a rather strange mood.

Upon arriving at Bluemaple City, the normally lively Bebe actually hadn't said a single word.

He was wearing his straw hat, which covered half his face. He paid no attention at all to the surrounding architecture or people. Bebe just walked quietly. It was hard to tell from the look on Bebe's face as to what he was thinking, but seeing this, Linley began to understand.

Most likely, only Nisse's affair could cause Bebe to be like this.

"Bebe." Linley spoke out.

Bebe was suddenly startled awake, and then turned to look at Linley, puzzled. "Boss, why are you calling for me?"

"Are you thinking about Nisse?" Linley lowered his head to look at Bebe.

"Right." Bebe nodded slightly, clearly quite saddened. "Ninny has gone to the Jedefloat Continent. She definitely headed out from Bluemaple City as well." Upon arriving in Bluemaple City, Bebe couldn't help but think about Ninny. And then, Bebe let out a low sigh. "However, she came to Bluemaple City centuries ago."

Bebe raised his head and laughed wryly. "Boss, I'm fine. Ninny went to the Jadefloat Continent centuries ago. It would be very hard to find her. In the future, when I have the chance...well, let's go. Let's head to the Fiend Castle." As he spoke, Bebe led the way.

Linley and Delia exchanged glances, then followed him.

Olivier actually hesitated slightly, as though thinking of something. After Linley and the others had moved some distance..."Olivier, what are you thinking about?" Olivier only now came to his senses and immediately hurried after them.

"Olivier." Linley said.

"Hrm?" Olivier looked towards Linley.

"Have you truly decided to join us to the Bloodridge Continent?" Linley laughed. While on the trip over from Bluemaple City, he had chatted about this with Olivier. "The Starmist Sea is vast, and it's hard to say what sort of dangers we'll encounter on the trip over."

Olivier laughed calmly. "Linley, in the Infernal Realm, I have no particular goal or target. It's fine for me to just adventure with you for a time. What's more, although the Starmist Sea has dangers within it, we have you, a powerful expert, right?"

Powerful expert?

As Linley and Olivier chatted on the street, given how densely populated the streets of Bluemaple City were, quite a few people nearby overheard them. Those people couldn't help but glance sideways at Linley, either disdainfully or with amusement. Clearly...none of them viewed Linley as a powerful expert.

Because Linley was a God!

In the vast Infernal Realm, Gods could only be considered ordinary people. They couldn't be considered powerful experts at all.

Linley noticed the glances of the nearby people, and he really didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. "Olivier, since when did you become the type of person to say these sorts of things?" Olivier should be that sort of person who was solemn and icy, and not the type of person to joke around like this. However, Linley understood that the reason was because Olivier now viewed him as a true friend.

In a foreign land, people from the same homeland were especially near and dear.

In the Infernal Realm, of course they would be closer to each other, as they were both from the Yulan continent.

The Fiend Castle. The Fiend Castles everywhere were all the same.

Per the usual norms, Linley's group arrived on the second floor of the Fiend Castle. There were a row of rooms on the second floor, one of which was meant for One Star Fiends to take on assignments. Linley's group of four thus entered one of the empty rooms.

Within the room, there was a golden-haired, violet-robed woman.

The violet-robed woman raised her head and glanced at the four of them, then said calmly, "Speak. What sort of mission do you want?"

"The four of us wish to take on a two star mission, hopefully one which is heading from Bluemaple City to 'Nishan City' of the Bloodridge Continent." Linley said.

Nishan City belonged to the northwestern corner of the Bloodridge Continent. From the Redbud Continent, most would first arrive at Nishan City.

"Bloodridge Continent? Wait a moment." The violet-robed woman glanced at Linley with her blue eyes, then closed them momentarily before opening them again later. When she did, a thick scroll appeared within her hands, which she flipped open while saying, "From Bluemaple City to the border city, Nishan, of the Bloodridge Continent, within the next month, there are 13,043 different types of missions, with 1836 of them being two star missions. Choose for yourself." As she spoke, she placed the thick scroll in front of Linley.

Linley's group of four was stunned.

Over ten thousand choices?

"Linley, when we came over from Royalwing City, there were only eleven missions, three of which were two star." Delia sighed in shock.

The violet-robed woman said calmly, "Every day, there's a large number of people heading from Bluemaple City to the Bloodridge Continent, the Jadefloat Continent, or the Starmist Sea. However, most of them are self-guided merchant caravans. There aren't that many real missions being issued. Despite that, it's normal for there to be over ten thousand."

Linley flipped through the two star missions.

"Boss, which one should we choose?" Bebe was seeing stars after looking through so many. He didn't know which one to pick.

Linley turned to glance at the others. "This time, I'll pick a simple, easy one."

After their most recent experience, Linley didn't dare to choose those missions which recruited an entire pile of Fiends. The more Fiends that had been invited, the more complicated a mission would be. However, if there were too few Fiends, the trip would be more troublesome and there would be more danger.

Thus, Linley chose a two star mission that was employing a group of Two Star Fiends.

"This one." Linley decided.

"This one?" Bebe leaned over to take a look, then muttered, "There's almost no payment. To go all the way through the vast Starmist Sea for just fifty thousand inkstones..." Last time, the escort mission's reward was two hundred thousand inkstones. But of course...

On that mission, the mission givers, the white-horned elder and the black-horned elder, had both died. Linley's group had failed the mission and thus had gotten nothing.

"If we can't get paid, what's the point?" Linley laughed.

Delia laughed as well. "Bebe, you care about this?"

Bebe had harvested amethysts for fully ten years. The fortune he was in possession of was most likely comparable to the entire fortune of the Boyd clan.

"I'm just saying." Bebe mumbled.

Linley was actually musing secretly that the higher the compensation was, the more hidden dangers would most likely be held within this mission. How could the last escort mission be considered a two star mission? Those people who had been employed on that mission had been all but throwing their lives away. Aside from Linley's group, who had been lucky enough to be spared by Phusro, all of the other hired Fiends had died, with only Learmonth being able to escape thanks to his power.

"Give me the Fiend medallion for a moment." The violet-robed woman said.

After finishing the paperwork, Linley's group of four left the Fiend Castle, while at the same time they now knew when they were going to leave. It was going to be in three days! One of the reasons why Linley chose this mission was precisely because it was starting in three days.

Linley's group of four first enjoyed a meal, then purchased a great deal of delicacies and wine which were pre-stored, then headed to a hotel.

The next three days, they spent within a private courtyard in the hotel.

"After six hundred years of training, I've improved quite a bit in earth and wind. Only, my progress in my divine fire clone has been too slow." Seated in the courtyard, Linley was pondering his training.

During the six hundred years he had spent in the Amethyst Mountains, his divine earth clone had made the most accomplishments, while his divine wind clone had also finally, completely fused the 'Sound Waves' and 'Music' profound mysteries, while also reaching the later stage in the simpler 'Essence of the Wind' profound mystery. However, the Elemental Laws of the Wind had in total nine profound mysteries, and the further along he went, the slower it was...

As for the divine fire clone, in six hundred years, he had only gained a basic understanding of the 'Flamebody' technique, and had yet to reach the God stage.

Linley shut his eyes.

Within his sea of consciousness, above the sea, three bodies were seated meditatively. They were the earth-yellow robed Linley, the light green robed Linley, and the fire-red robed Linley. The three Linleys formed into a triangle, and above them was the rainbow sword-shaped soul.

Beneath the sword-shaped soul was a black stone.

At the same time, threads of golden fog was being absorbed into the sword-shaped soul. Only, the absorption speed was already very slow.

"Hm?" Linley frowned, opening his eyes. "Over the past six hundred years, I've placed many amethysts into the Coiling Dragon ring to refine and absorb them. After six centuries of nonstop absorption, the rate of absorption is now growing slower and slower."

This situation had only begun in the past few days. In the past, the absorption speed had never lessened before.

"Can it be that the amount of soul essence a soul can take in has a limit?" Linley wondered.

And then, Linley nodded slightly. It made sense that there was a limit. Otherwise, if a soul could constantly strengthen nonstop, what would the end result be?

Linley wasn't sure.

Although absorbing soul essences could allow one's soul to strengthen and even seemingly improve in quality, in truth, this was a form of 'quality' that came from 'quantity'. It was much like a bottle; if you filled it with too much gas, the gas might compress and even be forced to liquefy due to pressure.

This was an example of quantity changing quality.

But there was still a limit, because if you kept on filling the bottle with gas, even after the gas liquefies, if the liquid reaches a limit, the bottle will explode...and the soul would shatter.

This was the situation with Linley. His soul had reached a limit and was unable to absorb any more.

If he wanted to strengthen his soul still further, he had to increase the size of the 'bottle' and make it sturdier, allowing it to fill with more gas and to make the liquid denser! This sort of transformation was a true 'qualitative' transformation, but there was only one way to do this; break through to the next level of Deityhood. Advancing from Demigod to God, and God to Highgod!

Even by fusing with a divine spark, the divine spark would allow for one's soul to change.

But of course, becoming a Deity on one's own would result in the descent of the natural Laws, increasing the intrinsic quality of the soul.

This was why many Highgods, even those who didn't absorb soul essences, would have souls which were more powerful than Gods! Linley had absorbed so much soul essence, but his soul power could only be considered the peak of Gods. Compared to Highgods, he was still a bit off.

Three days later, at the gates of Bluemaple City, a large number of people were gathered. There were many groups gathered here, preparing to depart. There were also quite a few Fiend Castle staff members here. Linley's group presented their Fiend medallions for inspection, and a Fiend Castle staff member led Linley's group of four to a metallic lifeform.

"Your people are here." The Fiend Castle staff member said a few words, then turned and left.

"The four of you, I am your employer, Aches [Ai'qi]!" A short, curly golden-haired man laughed. "Wait here a while. The people I've invited are almost all here. When we are all here, we will head into the sea." Suddenly, 'Aches' stared at Delia unblinkingly.

Delia was startled by his stare.

Linley frowned, while Bebe said unhappily, "Hey, kid, what are you looking at? What sort of attitude is this?"

"Highgod, haha, you are actually a Highgod?" Aches was all smiles. "Haha, what a bargain, what a bargain! I didn't expect that amongst the twenty one Two Star Fiends, a Highgod Fiend would be amongst them."

Book 16, Starmist Sea– Chapter 4, Out To Sea

The Infernal Realm's Redbud Continent, Karol Continent, Jadenfloat Continent, Bloodridge Continent, and Muja Continent. These five great continents were essentially formed into a circle, with the inside of this circle being the inner sea, the 'Starmist Sea'. Although it was the 'inner sea', the size of this Starmist Sea vastly exceeded any other continent.

"Splash...." The clear, slightly-violet tinged water of the seas were forming waves.

At the boundless Starmist Sea, even when there was no wind, there would still be meter-high waves.

"Swish!" A rhomboid-shaped metallic lifeform 'boat' was flying at high speed through the waves, making its way forward. This metallic lifeform, transformed into a rhomboid, was nearly fifty meters long and ten meters wide. It had no ceiling, while the metal on each side was transparent.

Linley, Delia, and the others were all admiring the scenery of the Starmist Sea. This was their first time entering the Starmist Sea.

"So beautiful!"

The bottomless, faintly violet sea water. The slender, thin clouds. The clear, cool mist coiling about. Seeing this, Linley couldn't help but have a feeling of vastness in his heart.

"Boss, just now, when we headed out, there were almost no fog clouds above the sea. Now, there is fog everywhere. This is the same as the Amethyst Mountains. Only, it isn't as thick as the fog in the Amethyst Mountains." Bebe raised his head, staring up above. The metallic lifeform advanced upon the surface of the water.

Roughly ten meters or so above the metallic lifeform was the fog.

The fog above the Starmist Sea came in thin strands that posed very little restriction to visibility.

Linley raised his head to look at it. From nearby, a voice suddenly rang out. "Don't underestimate the fog. The 'fog' of the Starmist Sea is extremely dangerous. Upon entering the fog region, you will suffer attack from lightning. The deeper into the fog you go, the more powerful the lightning! Even Highgods dare not fly too high!"

Linley turned to look. The speaker was another God-level Fiend. This God-level Fiend had short black hair which looked like steel needles, and a very thick beard. He was very casually leaning against a corner, holding a bottle of wine and drinking.

"My name is Linley." Linley laughed while looking at him.

"You can address me as Bates [Bei'ci]!" The big bearded man said casually. "This is your first trip to the Starmist Sea, right? Everyone is like this on their first trip. However, in the future, you'll feel bored. After all, there's nothing here but seawater. Occasionally, there will be some irritating bandits. There really are bandits everywhere in the world. So damn annoying."

Linley couldn't help but laugh.

"Haha, there's no need to worry about those bandits." The employer, Aches, walked over, his face all smiles. "This time, our squad has two Highgods. Those small bandit groups...how would they dare offend two Highgod Fiends? As for the more powerful forces, they most likely won't attack people like us."

Olivier glanced at him sideways. "From what you are saying, we should be quite safe?"

"In the Starmist Sea, just based on the fact that we will constantly advance for decades, who knows what will happen?" In the main hall of the metallic lifeform, other Fiends spoke out disdainfully as well.

Linley chuckled.

Danger?

As long as they didn't encounter any Seven Star Fiends or Asura-level combatants, staying alive shouldn't be a problem.

Night. At the front of the boat-shaped lifeform, Linley appeared, having stepped out of his cabin. There were currently quite a few people at the front of the boat.

"Whooooosh."

The metallic lifeform was moving at high speed. The sea wind was very strong, carrying a knife-like force. Ordinary people would have died from the sea wind alone. To Deities, however, this sea wind didn't impact them much. Linley didn't chat with these people. He came to a half-rest, leaning against the semi-translucent metallic planks, enjoying the night scenery of the Starmist Sea.

The water of the Starmist Sea at night seemed very dark and gloomy, as though an enormous beast was hiding within its depths.

"We've been in the sea for a full year. However, I don't feel as though we've advanced very far." Linley sighed in his heart. This 'Bates' had spoken the truth. After spending a long time in the Starmist Sea, one would feel bored. After all, they were always surrounded by boundless water.

Although the metallic lifeform flew very quickly, one couldn't notice it.

"Linley." A voice rang out from behind. Linley turned, and saw that it was Delia. Delia sat by Linley's side as well. Half-reclining, she took Linley's hand. For some reason, she began to laugh.

"Why are you laughing like a fool?" Linley laughed as well.

"I'm just thinking. Back when we met for the first time at the Ernst Institute, who would have imagined that there would come a day where the two of us would be adventuring in the Starmist Sea of the Infernal Realm? Fate really is a strange thing." Delia sighed.

Linley couldn't help but laugh as well.

"Linley, look. There's thunder in the distance." Delia pointed to the distance as she spoke.

Linley turned to look as well...

Indeed, in the distance, the thin fogs in the sky had a large amount of lightning snaking down from within.

"The scene is quite beautiful. We've been in the Starmist Sea for so long, but we've never seen a sight so interesting." Linley laughed, then sighed.

"Lightning!" Several people nearby began to cry out in alarm.

Not wasting words at all, almost all of them scurried back into the cabin like startled rabbits.

Linley and Delia turned to look, puzzled, only to see their employer, that Aches, stare at them while sending a mental message, "Hurry up and come in. The Starmist Sea is about to storm. Quick!"

"Storm?"

Although Linley and Delia were both puzzled, they still flew back into the metallic lifeform. Upon returning to the metallic lifeform, Linley and Delia immediately stared through the translucent metal towards the lightning. Everyone else was doing the same.

“Crackle...” From within the mist, countless electric snakes were shooting out, with the storm area growing greater and greater.

Moments later, lightning bolts began to rain down from the skies above this metallic lifeform. Linley was greatly shocked. “In the blink of an eye, it expanded over a thousand kilometers.” Deities had a very long field of vision. For the lightning storm to expand so quickly truly caused Linley’s group to be astonished.

“Swoosh!” The metallic lifeform Linley’s group was riding immediately completely sealed itself while turning around at high speed, fleeing backwards.

“Crackle...”

In the air above Linley’s group, as well as in the air above the nearby areas, countless lightning serpents were crackling about. The area of lightning bolts was rapidly expanding, and the speed of the expansion was far faster than the metallic lifeform’s flying speed.

“I hope we can escape this storm region.” Aches said softly.

Linley and the other Fiends all looked upwards through the translucent metal. At present, the lightning bolts had already spread across an extremely large area, and the entire world seemed to be covered by them. The originally sparse, dark clouds, under the illumination of the lightning serpents, seemed so gaudily visible.

"Rumble..." A low sound rang out.

Countless lightning bolts struck out, and even the fog began to swirl. In mid-air, countless lightning bolts and clouds began to revolve around each other, as a vortex that was over ten thousand kilometers in size began to form. This enormous lightning vortex was so dazzling to behold, and the light from it even made the faces of Linley and the others bright.

"Rumble..."

The enormous ten thousand kilometer vortex actually caused the sea water below them to suddenly also form into a ten thousand kilometer whirlpool. The power of this vortex was simply astonishing. One could imagine how much force this vortex had to contain, for it to be able to cause the water within ten thousand kilometers to form into a whirlpool.

For ten thousand kilometers, sea water swirled, with the waves of the ocean rising to dozens of meters, actually touching the fog above.

"Swish!" The metallic lifeform Linley was aboard frantically tried to pass through this region, seizing every moment to escape the center of the vortex.

"The power of this vortex really is something. Even the metallic lifeform is trembling." The big-bearded Bates sighed. Linley could also clearly sense the tremors from throughout the metallic lifeform.

"Why don't we fly up higher?" Bebe said with a frown. "Although we'll be hit by lightning in the fog, if we don't go too deep in, the power of the lightning shouldn't be too great. The power of this vortex is simply too enormous."

The entire metallic lifeform was being shaken so powerfully by the vortex that it was almost turning backwards.

"Motherf*cker, we actually encountered a Fogsea Storm. Our luck is terrible." Aches cursed softly, while at the same time working hard to direct the metallic lifeform to advance.

"Enter the fog above us right now?" The other Fiends in the metallic lifeform laughed. "When there is a Fogsea Storm going on, countless bolts of lightning will gather together and charge into the fog. The power of these lightning bolts is tremendous. Not even Highgods can take on those bolts of electricity. If you want to die, that's fine, but don't doom the rest of us as well."

In the entire metallic lifeform, aside from Delia, there was one other Highgod. The bald youth laughed calmly. "We noticed it early, and the eye of the vortex is fairly far from us. We aren't in the central region of the vortex, so for now it won't be too dangerous. However, the final wave of attacks in a Fogsea Storm is truly frightening."

"The final wave?" Bebe looked at him, puzzled. Linley, Delia, and Olivier weren't too sure either.

The bald youth said, "The Fogsea Storm first forms into a vortex, and then will drag everything in towards it. At most, it will put us in a sorry state; it won't actually kill us. However, at the final stages of a Fogsea Storm, countless lightning bolts will swirl about in the sky, and then wildly stab down below! If you are struck..." The bald man chuckled.

"Even I, if struck, would die." The bald youth said.

Linley was secretly shocked. Raising his head, he looked at the vortex formed from countless lightning bolts. "The power of these lightning bolts truly is great. That bald youth is a Highgod, but not even he can take a hit from them. Now, Linley understood why the metallic lifeform was fleeing."

It was because the closer one was to the center of the vortex, the denser the attacking lightning bolts and the higher the chance one would be struck.

Actually, this Fogsea Storm was a natural phenomenon of the Starmist Sea, because the fog of the Starmist Sea was very unique. It would naturally absorb the electric power of the world, and so anyone who entered the fog would have the fog release lightning bolts upon them.

But, since they knew this, nobody would be so stupid as to enter it and be struck.

With no one entering the fog, the amount of lightning accumulating in the fog would naturally increase, until at a certain point, it would have to release it.

That was what a Fogsea Storm was.

The process of a large amount of electricity being released!

"No time. We won't be able to escape the perimeter of the Fogsea Storm." Aches sighed, then turned to glance at everyone. "Everyone, be careful. Don't get hit. Remember, when the lightning bolts come down, no matter what, don't go into the water."

Linley and the others understood that water conducted electricity.

In an area of ten thousand kilometers, when countless lightning bolts capable of killing a Highgod rained down, they would probably strike down all the way into the depths of the sea! Entering the sea thus meant death.

"I wish everyone good luck!" The bald youth said.

"Good luck!" Others called out as well.

"Good luck!"

Everyone's face was solemn. In the Infernal Realm, people often teetered between the brink of life and death. Only, each time, nobody dared to be complacent! This time, however, it was completely a matter of luck. The lightning bolts were just less than a hundred meters above them. When they struck down, there was no time to dodge at all.

"Boom!" "Boom!" "Boom!" "Boom!"

Linley raised his head to look...

Instantly, within ten thousand kilometers, countless lightning bolts suddenly came smashing down like the rain in a dense cluster. In this instant, the entire world became eye-piercingly bright!

They struck the sea in the blink of an eye, and within ten thousand kilometers, more than a large half of the numerous metallic lifeforms were struck.

Linley's group was lucky. The closest lightning bolt actually struck the surface of the sea. Every single lightning bolt carried an astonishing amount of power, striking down into the depths of the sea like a sharp arrow. Every single lightning bolt only had a small amount of electricity dissipate and spread across the surface of the sea.

The vast majority of the energy was so condensed that it plunged straight through into the depths of the sea.

"Crackle..."

However, even the remnants of electrical power that were on the surface of the waters caused Linley's metallic lifeform to violently shutter.

"BANG!" The metallic lifeform exploded.

Linley's group just hovered above the water. Only now did they let out sighs of relief. On the surface of the water beneath them, there was still a electricity circulating, only, everyone knew that this wasn't much of a threat to them.

"We're safe." The employer, Aches, cracked a smile.

The Fiends all let out sighs of relief. They laughed.

"Haha. Safe!"

"Motherf*cker, I got my life back!" After having dodged this trial, they all began to grow relaxed.

But Linley only stared into the distance. Just now, when those countless bolts of lightning had struck down, there had been another metallic lifeform not too far from Linley's group's, but that one had been unlucky. It had been struck and immediately exploded apart. Quite a few people died on the spot, while the rest had fled for their lives.

Linley had no idea how many people had died within this region of ten thousand kilometers.

"I seem to have saw someone flying in the sky just now, ignoring those striking lightning bolts." A puzzled voice rang out.

Just now, when lightning bolts had rained down like the apocalypse, someone had dared fly in the skies?

All the Fiends nearby, Linley included, turned to look. The speaker was the big-bearded man, Bates. Frowning, he said, "I shouldn't have seen wrongly. It was a person, and he seemed to be carrying a weapon. I don't know if it was a sword or a saber."

Book 16, Starmist Sea– Chapter 5, That Powerful Man

When a Fogsea Storm occurred, trillions of lightning bolts would slam down. Not even a Highgod could withstand it. What sort of power was this?

And yet, this Bates was claiming that someone dared to fly in that sort of situation?

“Haha, Bates, is it that you dodged this tribulation and thus were so overjoyed that you started to spout nonsense? You saw that Fogsea Storm as well. Even extremely powerful Highgods capable of withstanding this sort of lightning wouldn’t be so wild as to fly in the air.” A green-haired Fiend laughed while speaking.

Linley and the others all nodded slightly.

In this sort of environment, most likely only someone as powerful as a Seven Star Fiend or an Asura would dare fly.

“If you don’t believe me, then forget it.” Bates chuckled, clearly not caring. “But I definitely didn’t see wrongly just now. I don’t believe that I was just seeing things.” As a God, how could he be seeing things?

“Boss, it’s just flying in lightning. You and I can both do that. What’s the big deal?” Bebe’s voice rang out in Linley’s mind. “So what if that thunder hit me? What can it do? When we were in the castle of sand, Boss, you were hit by that Highgod’s full-power lightning attack but weren’t hurt at all.”

Linley laughed.

Lightning bolts?

His original body had first absorbed a drop of that golden blood, and then absorbed that drop of liquefied Sovereign's Might as well as its powerful energy. His body was so mighty that it had already exceeded most Highgod artifacts. Linley was actually confident as well in his ability to resist those lightning bolts.

"Bebe, make sure you don't start bragging." Linley sent to him.

Bebe chortled. "Got it, Boss. I'm not that sort of person who brags wildly." The two chatted through their spiritual link, and so others couldn't overhear.

"I also saw that just now, someone was indeed flying within the lightning." Suddenly, a voice rang out.

"Oh?"

Linley couldn't help but be surprised. He turned to look. Not just Linley; the other luckily surviving Fiends also turned to look. The speaker was that young bald Highgod. He nodded and said, "And I saw clearly that on his back, he had a saber or a heavy sword type of heavy weapon."

The bald youth was a Highgod. His words were much more convincing than Bates'.

"There really was a person?"

"If Lord Boff [Bo'fei] said it was so, how could it not be?" Someone immediately replied.

"How would I, Bates, lie about this? Even Lord Boff says the same." Bates immediately was rather self-delighted.

The bald youth was named 'Boff'. The bald youth turned to look at Bates, staring at him. "Bates, just now, there were countless bolts of lightning descending. That was a life and death moment. I was confident, which is why I was able to be slightly distracted and look at my surroundings. In that sort of situation, how could you also be paying attention to the distance?"

Bates was startled.

At a critical moment, how could he dare be distracted?

Bates laughed in a silly manner, his beard fluttering up. "I only look into the distance after dodging past through bolts of lightning. Only, at that time, the person had already flown far away. That's why I didn't see clearly, only that he had a weapon on his back."

"Oh." The bald youth said.

"Alright, everyone. We all safely passed through this trial, which is a source of joy. Haha...but we still need to continue on our journey." The employer, Aches, chuckled. At the same time, the metallic lifeform which had transformed into a rhomboid ship once more appeared on the sea.

Linley and the others immediately entered the metallic lifeform.

"Swoosh!" The metallic lifeform immediately broke through the waves and advanced.

Within the metallic lifeform, the Fiends were all in an excellent mood after having survived. All of them were loudly laughing, drinking wine, and chatting. The walls of the hall were all translucent, and so everyone could look through the metal walls to see the sea outside. Currently, the surface of the sea was still faintly crackling with electric sparks, but the power was clearly much weaker now.

"How is it that in the center of the vortex, there is still lightning crashing down?" At the side of the main hall, Olivier, staring at the outside, suddenly spoke.

"There's still lightning?"

Linley and the others immediately turned to look. Through the translucent metal, they could immediately see that in the location which had been the center of the vortex, the vortex had already disappeared, but in the location above that spot, thick bolts of lightning were crashing down wildly at one location.

The metallic lifeform constantly advanced forward, drawing closer and closer to that location.

"How truly odd. I've never heard of lightning continuously striking down after a Fogsea Storm." Immediately, people began to murmur, although none of them were worried for their safety, because the lightning was concentrated on one spot. There's no way it would hit them.

Linley suddenly stared.

"Someone's there!" As they drew near, Linley immediately discovered that in the area where the lightning was continuously crashing down, there was a man standing on the surface of the sea.

The distance was too great, and Linley could only just barely make out his figure. The thick bolts of lightning crashed down, but the figure didn't dodge at all.

"Ah, there's someone beneath the lightning!" Others discovered as well.

"That's the location where the center of the vortex had been. The lightning is so powerful...not even those legendary Seven Star Fiends should be able to take on that lightning head on." The other Fiends were shocked. However, they had all only heard of Seven Star Fiends; after all, meeting a Seven Star Fiend was extremely rare.

"Hey, Aches, hurry up and go closer and let us take a look?" Immediately, everyone began to urge him.

In the Infernal Realm, everyone worshipped strong experts. Someone who dared to stand in the middle of a Fogsea Storm and actually draw lightning bolts down upon himself was definitely someone worthy of adoration. Aches said magnanimously, "Fine, I'll immediately direct the metallic lifeform over. However...at most, we'll draw within one kilometer. Any closer, and we'll probably irritate that lord."

As he spoke, the metallic lifeform headed closer towards that location.

One kilometer's distance, for Deities, was extremely close. Deities could clearly see an ant at that distance.

Currently, bolts of thunder that seemed as thick as a hundred lightning bolts combined were constantly crashing down upon that person in the sea. That person was thin, but he stood there, ramrod straight. His pitch black long hair fell to his shoulders, and it casually fluttered in the wind.

Linley could clearly tell that this person was carrying a warblade, and his head was raised as he stared towards the lightning.

"Crackle..."

Countless bolts of lightning crashed viciously upon his forehead, and then crackled across his entire body. However, the man just stood there unmoving like a mountain. Occasionally, his eyes would emit two rays of cold, netherworldly scarlet lightning which would crash into the fogs up above, causing the lightning descending from the fog to grow even stronger.

"So powerful!" Linley's heart clenched.

The power of the crashing lightning caused even space itself to shudder, but that person was completely unharmed.

Everyone in the metallic lifeform was holding their breaths. An expert like this was too frightening.

"Firing lightning from his eyes?" Linley began to understand. This person should be a person who trained in the Laws of Lightning.

"He should be someone who trains in the Laws of Lightning." The calm Olivier spoke out.

The others were all startled into wakefulness, and the big-bearded Bates nodded as well. "Lightning, after crashing down, would normally dissipate, but this person is constantly attacking the sea of fogs, drawing down 'punishment' from the sea of fogs time and time again...but as far as I can tell, he seems to be enjoying the punishment."

"He is training." The bald youth, Boff, said.

Everyone nodded.

For someone who trained in the Laws of Lightning to come personally experience the powerful lightning bolts of a Fogsea Storm was indeed an excellent training method. However, this sort of training method was generally only doable by a powerful expert.

"Let's go." The employer, Aches, laughed hurriedly. "All we are doing is watching him as he stands there. If his lordship finishes his training and sees us here, if he is angry, we'll all be in trouble." As he spoke, Aches ordered his metallic lifeform to leave.

Everyone began to laugh.

Experts had their own pride. Unless there was some sort of special situation, they would rarely vent their anger on weaker people.

The light of the Blood Sun slightly penetrated the thin fog, shining downwards. The waves billowed, and the metallic lifeform rode the wind, breaking through the waves and advancing.

Linley and Delia were seated at the head of the ship.

"It's been two years since we've entered the sea. In the sea, there are far fewer bandits than on the continents." Linley sighed. "On the Redbud Continent, every so often, we'll run into bandit teams. In the Starmist Sea, however, we'll only run into them once every two months."

Delia nodded.

And then, Delia laughed. "Linley, you really are such a jinx. Whatever you mention ends up happening."

"What?" Linley turned to look as well.

Indeed, in the distance, beneath the waters of the sea, there were figures floating. At the same time, an enormous, fierce green python that would require three or four men to wrap their arms around it broke out of the surface of the sea. It was at least a hundred meters along. This giant python, comparable to the size of a massive dragon, came smashing towards the metallic lifeform, which immediately halted.

Linley couldn't help but laugh and shake his head. With a flip of his hand...

"Roaaaar!" A ten meter high earthen yellow bear appeared out of nowhere. The great bear grabbed that green python, bellowing as it ripped the python into two pieces.

Actually, the only reason why the opponents had created this elemental construct was to make the metallic lifeform come to a halt.

"Heh heh, I didn't expect us to encounter bandits. The Starmist Sea is incredibly boring. Finally, something interesting has come." Laughter rang out from within the metallic lifeform as quite a few Fiends came running out.

An entire group of Fiends were outside the metallic lifeform.

Right at this moment, a hundred figures were hovering in front of the metallic lifeform. Only, they immediately noticed Delia.

"A Highgod Fiend?" The hundred bandits immediately felt that the situation had become thorny.

"Hey, why are you afraid? Are you afraid just because you saw we have two Highgod Fiends?" The big-bearded Bates was the type of person who only feared the world was too orderly, and thus he called loudly.

Linley's group of four was very relaxed. These hundred plus figures didn't have a single Highgod amongst them. They posed no threat at all.

"Disperse." The leader, a balding man with fish scales on his forehead growled.

Right at this moment...

Linley and quite a few others could sense a terrifying power, and they immediately turned to look. Only, Linley's group only saw a bolt of lightning crash down from the heavens, surrounding a person. Linley found out, to his amazement, "It is him!" It was the expert whom they had encountered a year ago, who had taken on the lightning bolts of the Fogsea Storm head on.

At the same instant this figure descended, his right fist smashed down hard from the air.

"Bang!"

The fist smashed into the empty air, but a terrifying explosive sound rang out, while at the same time, with the fist at the center, circles of ripples spread out, forming curved lines which twisted, passing by Linley's group and striking that group of bandits who had wanted to flee.

Silently...

All of the bandits who were struck trembled, and then fell down and slowly sank into the water.

With one attack, over a hundred bandits had all died!

Aches, Bates, and the others all stared, slack-jawed. Linley had seen Elquin, Bluefire, the juvenile amethyst beast, and other powerful experts, and so he had quite a bit more experience than them. Naturally, he wasn't too shocked. Only, Linley was puzzled. "In the Infernal Realm, there are an uncountable number of bandits. Generally speaking, experts can't be bothered to deal with them. But this person...why?"

This was indeed puzzling.

At the same time, Linley took a careful look at this person, who was now close to them. His face seemed to have been sculpted by a carving knife, and his gaze was as fierce as a blade. He himself gave off a baleful, sharp aura, and every single strand of hair seemed like a thin strand of steel. As they fluttered in the wind, they actually carried a strange sound with them.

The man lowered his head, glancing down at the sinking corpses of the bandits, sneering coldly. "Bandits and thieves all deserve death!"

After speaking, the man moved, once more flying into the fog above and moving at high speed through the fog. Everyone who entered the fog would suffer the attack of lightning bolts, and so wherever this figure passed, countless lightning bolts flashed.

"His speed is so fast. He is so powerful." Olivier said softly.

The group of Fiends came to their senses moments later.

"Ahhh! All those bandit corpses are sinking. So many divine sparks and interspatial rings!" The big-bearded Bates immediately howled in grief, and all the other Fiends only now realized this as well. However, all of the corpses had sunk down long ago.

There were quite a few people living at the bottom of the seas as well. To Deities, being in the water or on the land didn't make much of a difference.

The Fiends immediately began to regret it.

"Haha, if they're gone, then forget about them. Look at all of you. Haha, let's head off." Aches laughed. "The sea region up ahead has an extremely powerful bandit force. They live there, on Knifeblade Island. Let's make sure we take a roundabout path away from that damn place."

As he spoke, Aches once more took control over the metallic lifeform, which headed out at high speed!

Right now, though, Linley was still thinking about that man's appearance. "This expert who trains in the Laws of Lightning should have the power of a Seven Star Fiend.” Linley calculated silently.

Book 16, Starmist Sea– Chapter 6, Knifeblade Island

Knifeblade Island. Its circumference was nearly ten thousand kilometers. On the island, a single mountain peak stood by itself, appearing like the blade of a knife rising into the heavens. Thus, this island was named Knifeblade Island.

Knifeblade Island was the lair of an extremely powerful group of bandits. Everyone passing through the Starmist Sea would actively move away from it. But despite that...the forces of Knifeblade Island were spread out and on the prowl. Upon finding a target, they would immediately lead a group of people to attack in unison.

“Rumble...” The waters of the ocean bellowed as they struck upon the beaches of the island.

A bolt of lightning crashed down. After the electric sparks dissipated, a person appeared standing at the beach. It was the grim looking man who carried the warblade.

The grim eyes of the man came to a rest on the distant, eye-catching mountain peak. He murmured, “Knifeblade Island. This is the second place!” And then, the man strode forward, his body flashing with each step which took him hundreds of meters as he instantly entered the depths of the island.

The mountain peak had a large number of bandits living there.

This grim looking man was dressed in a long black robe, and he strode forward boldly, seeming to not care at all about the power of these bandits.

"Who is it!" Within the mountain forests, someone shouted loudly.

A very large number of bandits lived here at Knifeblade Island. Naturally, people would discover this black haired man, but the black haired man didn't even look at the person who had shouted, continuing to move hundreds of meters with each step.

The bandit's face changed, and he immediately shouted loudly, "Someone is invading the mountain!"

"Someone is invading the mountain!"

That ringing roar filled the entire mount peak. The bandits who had been resting or training were all startled awake, and the entire Knifeblade Island became a hubbub of activity. Immediately, quite a few pirates began to move towards the sound. Naturally, some of them would run into the black haired man.

But the black haired man still didn't care at all, continuing to move forward.

"Over there!" Immediately, people discovered him.

"Halt!" Others shouted.

But the black haired man still travelled hundreds of meters per step, constantly moving towards the mountain peak.

"Kill!" Not hesitating at all, the many bandits gathered in the surrounding areas all immediately bellowed, brandishing their cruel, merciless weapons. Flashes of fiery red light, earthen yellow light...all sorts of elemental Law based attacks began.

The black haired man's facial expression didn't change at all.

"Crackle..."

A strange sound rang out. The black haired man's speed didn't slow down at all, moving a thousand meters in three steps.

"Hey? How come this person isn't reacting at all?" Quite a few bandits didn't understand at all.

"BANG!"

Very suddenly, thirty bandits suddenly exploded, their flesh and blood splattering everywhere and their divine sparks landing to one side. The lucky survivors were so terrified, their faces turned white. Only now did they realize that the person had attacked just now.

Only, the speed was too fast. They hadn't seen it at all.

The Elemental Laws of the Wind, Lightning, and Light were all very suited for speed. How fast someone would be depended on their accomplishments.

But to reach a level of speed where not even these Gods could sense anything at all was simply terrifying.

From the base of the mountain to the gates of that castle within Knifeblade Island, he only took, in total, twenty eight steps. He killed six hundred and twenty eight people. Given the amount of chaos he was creating, the three leaders of Knifeblade Island naturally came out as well, and the elites of Knifeblade Island were currently all on the walls of the castle.

Knifeblade Island had in total three leaders, a hundred Highgods, and over ten thousand Gods. In the society of bandits, they could be considered a supersized power.

At this moment, those hundred Highgods were all surrounding the three leaders. They were on top of the walls of the castle, staring down at the black haired man.

"Who are you, that you have come here to wantonly commit slaughter here?" A grim silver haired man said in an icy voice. He was the chief leader of Knifeblade Island, 'Acketts' (A'ke'ci), and was also the number one expert of the entire Knifeblade Island. Acketts could already tell that the black haired man was not easy to deal with.

"Why has this person come to make trouble for us bandits?" Acketts didn't understand.

The ultimate experts of the Infernal Realm generally didn't want to bother with bandits.

The black haired man slowly raised his head. His face was pale, and his eyes stared at Acketts like daggers. "My name is Lomio Bornesen [Lu'miao Bo'er'nuo'sen]!"

Acketts frowned. Lomio Bornesen?

He hadn't heard of this name before.

The black haired man said calmly, "I heard that Mr. Acketts, the leader of Knifeblade Island, had already become a Six Star Fiend long ago. Today, I have two reasons for coming to Knifeblade Island. The first reason is to challenge you, Mr. Acketts!"

Acketts couldn't help but narrow his eyes as he weighed this Lomio with a viperous gaze.

Him being a Six Star Fiend was back before he became a bandit. After so many years had passed, not many people knew whether or not he now had the power of a Seven Star Fiend. This was also the reason why nobody in Knifeblade Island dared to offend him. Nobody wanted to offend someone who was possibly a Seven Star Fiend."

"This person dares to challenge me. Then...he most likely is confident in being able to challenge a Seven Star Fiend!" Acketts was calculating mentally.

Moments later...

"Brothers, join forces and kill him!" Acketts instantly spread out his divine sense to the hundred Highgods nearby, including the other two leaders. The group of Highgods simultaneously drew out their weapons and immediately used their most powerful attacks.

"Swoosh!"

The black haired man instantly rose into the heavens.

"Acketts, you truly disappoint me!" A cold voice rang out from the skies, while at the same time, countless bolts of lightning appeared, and countless electric serpents actually began to swirl about as though in a vortex. The eye-catching electric serpents radiated light, glowing on the faces of each person of the castle.

Acketts and the others were all shocked.

"Boss, this looks like a Fogsea Storm." The second leader, 'Dimon' (Dai'man) said in alarm by Acketts' side.

Indeed, this was the scene of the Fogsea Storm, with countless lightning bolts appearing and circling about.

"Boss, what should we do?" The third leader, 'Nieles' (Ni'li'si), was worried as well.

Acketts face was sinister. He knew that once those countless lightning bolts snaked down, most likely ninety percent or more of the hundred Highgods present would all be killed. These were the elites of Knifeblade Island. Acketts immediately shouted loudly, "Lomio, since you've challenged me, then come!"

As he spoke, a pair of short, deep green awls appeared in his hands.

"This is the saber attack I have just developed. If you can withstand this blade, I will spare your life!" The cold voice rang out from the heavens, where many lightning bolts snaked around in the vortex. Seeing this, Acketts only let out a cold snort, his entire body faintly beginning to gleam with a green light.

At the same time, Acketts' entire body began to turn bizarrely blurred as a fog enveloped his entire body.

"So you have some ability." The calm voice rang down from the vortex above.

"Boom!"

The vortex from the large amount of lightning bolts suddenly began to spin, and a large amount of lightning concentrated at one point. Instantly, from that point, a ray of fierce electric saber light blasted out, carrying boundless power as it ripped through the skies and chopped downwards.

Acketts' entire body was enveloped by that fog, and on the surface of the fog, a strange wind-wheel appeared, frantically spinning.

"Crackle..." One crack after another was appearing in space.

"The most powerful defense of the Boss." The second leader, 'Dimon', and the third leader, 'Nieles', watched this from afar in nervousness. Their Boss trained in the Elemental Laws of Water. The defensive power of the Elemental Laws of Water was that it was both unyielding and soft, and could definitely be considered amongst the most powerful of defensive Laws.

"Boom!"

The lightning saber flashed, chopping down upon the foggy wind-wheel.

"Bang!" The wind-wheel exploded, transforming into two deep green awls which fell to one side. The fog dissipated as well. The faint green light covering Acketts body swiveled like a protective membrane over Acketts. He wanted to flee, but the speed of that lightning saber was simply too fast, and it directly chopped onto his body.

It paused for only a moment.

But then, the lightning saber flash still managed to chop through the membrane.

"Bang!" And then, the explosion. Acketts' entire body blew apart, and three divine sparks actually fell to the ground, along with an interspatial ring. The lightning saber flash transformed into a warblade, and the black-haired man, Lomio Bornesen, once more appeared.

“Interspatial ring!”

The other two leaders, Dimon and Nieves, immediately stared at that interspatial ring.

Acketts had been in control of more than half of the wealth of Knifeblade Island, all of which was stored in his interspatial ring.

The black-haired man, Lomio, stretched his hand out and took the interspatial ring. This sight caused the facial muscles of the watching bandits to twitch and convulse. Lomio looked at the three divine sparks. “Six Star Fiend? He did indeed have the power of a Six Star Fiend. If I hadn’t made that breakthrough just a year ago, it wouldn’t have been so easy to kill you today.”

Lomio turned to look at the others.

Dimon and Nieves, as well as the other Highgods, felt terror in their hearts. Their leader, Acketts, was dead. Who could overcome this Lomio? In addition, to an expert on Lomio’s level, a hundred Highgods wouldn’t be able to do anything to him at all in a group battle.

“Mr. Lomio, the Boss is dead because his strength was inferior to yours. You’d best leave.” Dimon suppressed his anger.

The black haired man swept them with a glance, then continued. “I told you, I have two reasons for being here today. The first was to challenge Acketts. This is already completed. The second reason..." The black haired man's lips curved upwards. He was laughing.

This cold, callous man was actually laughing. His smile appeared quite pleasant, only, the group of bandits all felt their hearts shudder.

"The second reason is to destroy Knifeblade Island!" The black haired man, Lomio, said, his voice turning cold!

"Flee!!!"

An explosive shout instantly rang out, and the two leaders as well as the group of Highgods immediately scattered in every direction. The large amount of bandits on Knifeblade Island all immediately scattered as well.

"BOOM!" A large number of lightning bolts blasted out.

Of the hundred Highgods, fifty two corpses immediately collapsed. But of course, of the fifty two corpses, many had Highgod-level divine clones as well and so they continued to flee.

"They ran quite fast." The black haired Lomio laughed coldly. Right now, all of the bandits of Knifeblade Island had fled. Only corpses remained!

"The second place is done! Time to start with the third target..." The black-haired man transformed into a ray of lightning, disappearing into the horizon.

The second leader, Dimon, was currently leading thirty six Highgods and thousands of Gods. They were mounted on ten metallic lifeforms, advancing in an awe-inspiring sight. While fleeing, in order to prevent themselves from being all taken in one engagement, the second leader and the third leader had led their forces fleeing separately.

"What sort of horrible luck is this? We were doing perfectly fine when such a monstrously powerful bastard appeared!" Dimon's rage knew no bounds.

"The vast fortune we built up!" Dimon's heart ached. The leader, Acketts, and that interspatial ring which had fallen after his death! The fortune stored there exceeded what he and the third leader had, combined.

The Highgods around them all had ugly looks on their faces.

"Second leader, there's a metallic lifeform up ahead." Immediately, a subordinate reported in.

Dimon looked out through the metallic lifeform towards the outside world. These bandits were people who normally waylaid and robbed people to begin with. Right now, they were in an especially foul mood and had bellies full of fire. Dimon didn't dare to vent his anger on that black-haired Lomio, but he did dare to do on these travelers.

"Kill them. Kill them all, don't spare a single one!" Dimon said viciously.

Dimon's group had been slaughtering everyone in their path as they headed to another island.

Linley's group was leisurely resting within the metallic lifeform, and Aches was chuckling. "We went over ten thousand kilometers away from Knifeblade Island. There should be no problem."

"Is Knifeblade Island so powerful? You seem very afraid of them." Bebe said.

"Knifeblade Island has more than a hundred Highgods alone, and I hear that long, long ago, their leader was a Six Star Fiend. According to legend, he now has the power of a Seven Star Fiend. You tell me, is he powerful or not? Even those two other leaders are only slightly weaker than the chief leader." Aches said with some fear.

Linley was secretly astonished.

A bandit group actually had a Seven Star Fiend within it?

"Hey?" Linley looked through the translucent metal windows to the side. "Why are there ten metallic lifeforms, and each one so enormous? It seems as though there are hundreds of people in each metallic lifeform, for a total of thousands of people all combined. Can it be that there is large trading caravan passing through the Starmist Sea?"

Suddenly...

The ten metallic lifeforms suddenly separated while flying at high speed. Moments later, Linley's group of just twenty or so people were completely surrounded by a dense network of people who had come out from every single metallic vessel.

Linley's group was momentarily stunned.

"Even if they want to waylay us, there's no need for them to use thousands of people against our little group." Linley felt numb as well.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 7, Hidden Expert

In the vast Starmist Sea, ten large metallic lifeform vessels were completely surrounding a small metallic lifeform vessel. Thousands of people flew out from within the metallic vessels, all of the bandits staring at Linley's pitiful little group. Clearly, they didn't feel any concern about the group of twenty-plus in front of them.

"Finished. We're all finished!" Aches' entire body was shaking slightly, and his face was ashen.

The other God-level Fiends, upon seeing the countless experts surrounding them, all felt their hearts turn into blocks of ice. They felt so cold! The God-level Fiends all felt despair in their hearts. Thousands of bandit Gods were surrounding them. They didn't have any chance at all.

"Boss, this will be troublesome." Bebe's face was solemn.

Linley nodded slightly. Not just troublesome. When engaging in group attacks, the more people there were, the more terrifying the attacks would be. The other side had thousands of Gods, after all.

"There are even people beneath us." Linley glanced downwards and saw that beneath the surface of the sea, there were hundreds of bandits. These bandits seemed to be worried that Linley's group would flee down into the depths.

"We're finished." Some people were already in despair.

The big-bearded Bates had a solemn look on his face. He said in a low voice, "Thousands of Gods, and also Highgods. There are too many of them. Each person will have to rely on their own abilities. I wish everyone the same thing I wished you during the Fogwave Storm – Good luck!"

"Everyone, good luck." The bald man, Boff, said in a low voice as well. Although he was a Highgod, in a situation like this, he wouldn't be able to help the others.

Within the metallic lifeform was utter, deathly silence.

"Everyone."

Everyone all turned their heads to look. The speaker was Aches.

Their employer, Aches, said in a solemn voice, "This time, I invited you all to come, but I didn't expect that this would result in everyone being trapped within a calamity of certain death. I am sorry!" Aches bowed very slightly.

"Motherf*cker, even if we die, let's kill a few of them!" Someone began to bellow.

"Right, if they want to kill me, it won't be so easy. I even survived the goddamn Fogsea Storm. I won't die so easily!"

The insides of the entire metallic lifeform began to bellow with shouts.

But Linley's group of four was silent.

"Rather strange." Linley looked towards the outside. On the Fog Sea, those countless Gods were clustered all around them. "So many Gods are gathered, but none of them are attacking? What is causing them to hesitate?"

"Boss, we...?" Bebe looked at Linley.

"At a time like this, there's no need to pretend any longer." Linley said with resignation through his divine sense. By now, if they kept hiding their power, they'd probably be killed.

Suddenly...

A powerful bolt of lightning snaked its way out from the bottom of the sea, bellowing as it struck towards Linley's metallic lifeform. With a colossal 'boom' sound, the entire metallic lifeform transformed into smithereens, while Linley and the others all immediately began to hover above the sea.

Linley and the other twenty plus people were like a flock of sheep trapped by a pack of wolves. They floated in the air pathetically.

"Haha..." The thousands of bandits all immediately began to laugh loudly. At present, the second leader of Knifeblade Island, 'Dimon', led thirty six Highgods towards the front of the group, and these ordinary God bandits all immediately respectfully withdrew.

Dimon waved his hand gently, and all of the thousands of Gods immediately fell silent.

Linley and the others immediately looked towards Dimon.

"This person should be the leader of these bandits." Linley stared at Dimon, calculating mentally. "Behind him there are thirty six Highgods. This bandit leader most likely has the power of a Five Star Fiend or even a Six Star Fiend."

Linley began to grow careful.

At present, he didn't have enough confidence in his ability to battle with a Six Star Fiend.

"Rumble..." The ocean water rolled out in waves.

Dimon and the other Highgods were up ahead, stepping on the waves, their eyes faintly red.

"Haha, I didn't expect there to be two Highgods here." Dimon began to laugh wildly, his eyes locked onto that bald youth, Boff, while occasionally glancing at Delia. "Do you know who I am? I'll tell you. I'm the second leader of Knifeblade Island!"

Dimon had an evil smile on his face, but his red eyes carried a strange look in them.

The group of bandits all knew that once their second leader, Dimon, smiled in this manner, it meant he had gone insane and had just turned into a monster!

"Milord of Knifeblade Island." Aches hurriedly called out loudly in supplication. "We are only ordinary travelers. I hope you can spare us, milord. We are willing to offer you our wealth."

"Wealth?"

Dimon, hearing this, couldn't help but think of the death of Acketts' and how his interspatial ring had been taken away. That was the fortune of Knifeblade Island. Dimon was still unable to accept this matter. Dimon stared with bulging eyes at Aches. "Wealth. How much wealth can you possibly have? Do you think I care about your money? Ever since I fled from Knifeblade Island, I encountered three groups of people on the way over and killed them all."

Immediately, Dimon pointed at Linley's group. "And you, will be the fourth group!"

Linley and the others, hearing this, frowned.

"These people fled from Knifeblade Island?" Linley began to understand.

"That bald man and that bitch. Those two are Highgods. The four of you, go deal with them." Dimon turned to glance backwards as he spoke calmly. Immediately, four Highgods flew out, and Dimon immediately then shouted, "Brothers of the second mountain, this time, it's your turn. Kill them all!"

Immediately, a group of Gods that had been waiting this entire time immediately came charging out. Last three time, it hadn't been their turn to attack, and so they had already become quite impatient.

"Kill!"

"Kill!"

All of them were so excited that their eyes were red. Seven or eight hundred Gods, under the command of the four Highgods, charged forward all together. The other bandits all watched from afar. Sending out eight hundred plus people to kill this small group of around twenty was already more than enough.

The eight hundred people charged forward, walking on the waves, with thousands watching around them. This sort of mental pressure was enough to cause Linley and the others to feel unable to breath.

"Everyone, protect yourselves." The bald youth, Boff, said in a low voice.

Knifeblade Island's side had four Highgods, two of which were virtually flying shoulder by shoulder, simultaneously emitting two draconic roars. Two white icy dragons emerged from the surface of the sea, charging straight towards Boff as the two Highgods continued to advance.

The other two Highgods stared at Delia, attacking her at the same time.

Linley's gaze grew cold, and Bloodviolet appeared in his hand.

"Linley, let me give it a try." Delia's voice rang out in Linley's mind. Linley turned and saw that Delia was wielding the Spear of Cortez. Her waist swiveled slightly, and then shot backwards the other direction, and the spear in her hand shot out...

"Swish!" With a green flash of light, it arrived in front of a Highgod.

That person struggled to dodge, but unfortunately, the Spear of Cortez, infused with the 'Dimensional Attack' profound mysteries, was simply too fast. The Highgod was only able to make his head avoid the attack, but with a 'crunch' sound, the Spear of Cortez pierced straight through the Highgod's right chest.

The other Highgod wanted to use this opportunity to attack Delia, but suddenly, in front of him a Deathgod Golem appeared!

"Hmph!" The Deathgod Golem's right leg lashed out viciously, smashing straight out towards the skull of that Highgod.

"Clang!" The Highgod immediately used his divine artifact to dodge, but he was still sent knocked flying backwards from the collision.

The Highgod flipped in the air and stabilized himself, but his face changed dramatically and he stared at the Deathgod Golem in astonishment. "A Deathgod Golem!"

Actually, the attack of these four Highgods was nothing much. The truly terrifying scene was that of those eight hundred Gods, especially in close range. The seven hundred Gods actually began to brandish the divine artifacts in their hands, and countless dazzling rays of light shot out, piercing towards each of the twenty-plus figures.

“Roaaaaaar!”

Linley immediately Dragonformed, forcibly taking on several blows aimed at Delia. A few God-level attacks wouldn’t do anything to Linley at all.”

Bebe helped the nearby Olivier as well.

Despite that, however, the eight hundred Gods still killed six of the Fiends. Bellowing, the bandits charged forward into close combat. The dense group of bandits swarmed forward, and everyone engaged in a wild battle, with Linley, Bebe, and Olivier all using their most powerful attacks.

Linley and Bebe went without saying. As for Olivier, he had reached the God level in both the Laws of Light and the Laws of Darkness. As someone who had a mutant soul who had fused light-type and darkness-type divine power, each of his sword blows reached a new threshold in speed and also contained a strange, pure power.

He slaughtered a person with each sword.

“Huh?” From afar, Dimon’s face suddenly changed as he stared unblinkingly at Olivier.

"A Soul Mutate!" Dimon could immediately tell.

Olivier's fusion of light-type and darkness-type power had yet to reach Learmonth's level. Learmonth was capable of reaching the level of having the two types of divine power fuse to the point where occasionally the Destruction-type aura shone and occasionally the fire-type aura emanated.

But Olivier could not.

"Haha...we suffered such a great loss at Knifeblade Island, but I didn't imagine I would encounter this Soul Mutate." Dimon felt a surge of fire build up in his heart. "If, if I offer him..."

Dimon began to grow excited.

But the battle scene was causing Dimon to frown again. Not only did Linley, Bebe, and Olivier slaughter at high speed, there was another person who was terrifying. Strange 'swish' 'swish' 'swish' sounds could be heard as one God after another fell nonstop.

A black shadow flashed without stopping. Those seven hundred bandits were reducing in number at an astonishing rate as they all fell down lifelessly.

Miserable screams continued unabated, but nobody could resist.

Linley brandished Bloodviolet, effortlessly killing an oncoming God while at the same time glancing at astonishment towards the shadow which flew about at high speed. "I didn't expect that he was actually hiding his power. Nobody realized this!"

"Brothers of the second mountain, return!" Dimon's face was filled with anger, and he immediately roared.

Immediately, the lucky survivors retreated, but in this blink of an eye, their numbers had been reduced to four hundred, with the vast majority having been killed by this person who had hidden his power.

"Oho, how boring. They actually fled." The figure reformed atop the waves. It was the big-bearded 'Bates'.

At present, Bates' aura was mysterious and mighty. He was a Highgod!

"He was hiding and suppressing his aura!" Linley said to himself silently. Generally speaking, when investigating someone's power, one did so by sensing someone's aura, and from it judged if someone was strong or weak. If one wasn't able to sense it at all, it meant that the target was a level more powerful. By this, Linley was capable of judging who was a God and who was a Highgod.

He couldn't sense a Highgod's aura.

But sometimes, a powerful Highgod was capable of intentionally releasing just a weak aura to intentionally cause others to be unable to correctly judge his power.

"Haha..." Dimon was so angry, he started to laugh. "I didn't expect that in your group, there was a third Highgod, and seemingly the most powerful of the group at that." Dimon was currently in a terrible mood, and so had engaged in slaughter the entire way over.

Upon encountering this Bates, a tough bone to chew, Dimon was naturally angry.

"The most powerful of the group?" Bates looked at his surroundings. The bald 'Boff' was currently heavily injured, while Delia had been able to hold her own by relying on the Deathgod Golem.

The big-bearded Bates laughed while looking at Dimon. "Hey, leader of Knifeblade Island? I trust you understand that if you want to deal with us, even if you succeed, you will probably lose a majority of your men. You won't get anything good in exchange for the loss. I can't be bothered to kill those weak little Gods either. How about we go our way and you go yours?"

Immediately, the luckily surviving God-level Fiends all grew excited.

"Bates, uh, Lord Bates!" Aches had some ability and was still alive. He was currently looking at Bates in excitement. "Lord Bates, I truly must thank you this time. I, I, when I reach the Bloodridge Continent, I'll definitely increase your remuneration." At present, Aches was so excited, he didn't know what to say.

As Aches saw it, as long as Dimon wasn't an idiot, he wouldn't waste the lives of his subordinates.

"Remuneration?" Bates laughed. "Fine, fine, but, it has to be double that of Boff's!"

"Definitely double." Aches said hurriedly.

Bates then glanced at Dimon. "Hey, are you done with your considerations yet? Why are you standing there like a fool?"

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 8, Blackstone Prison

Although Bates had asked the question, he himself was quite confident. He understood very well the habit of these bandits: Abuse the soft targets, fear the hard ones!

Even though the bandits might be able to kill all their targets, they would consider the cost-benefit ratio and if it was worth it! Right now, in Linley's group, Bates was too powerful. Even Linley, Bebe, and Olivier could easily kill Gods. They were clearly a tough bone to gnaw.

To kill Bates and the others, the bandits would definitely lose quite a bit.

"It'll definitely be fine. The bandit leader won't be so foolish." The God-level Fiend with green-hair, Tam [Tai'mu], had a rare smile appear on his face.

"We'll definitely live." A nearby short, muscular man also said in a low voice.

Aches' eyes were filled with hope as well.

"If we can avoid battle, that would be best." Linley said to himself. However, he didn't dare to relax, continuing to stare vigilantly at the nearby bandits. Currently, Linley's side had fourteen lucky survivors, all of whom were waiting for the reply from the enemy leader, Dimon.

The bandit forces were awaiting Dimon's response as well.

"Second leader? Kill them or no?" The Highgod behind Dimon asked softly.

The bandits were somewhat unwilling to give up. The other side only had a few people, while they had thousands, thirty plus Highgods, and their powerful second leader. The enemy had killed nearly three hundred of the Gods. Were they to be allowed to leave, just like that? The bandits weren't willing!

Dimon narrowed his eyes, staring at the distant Bates, and then glanced sideways at Olivier. "A Soul Mutate..."

Dimon was calculating while glancing at Bates. "This Highgod expert is clearly one who trains in the Laws of Darkness and specializes in speed as well as hiding his aura." Dimon was very surprised as well, because he hadn't discovered Bates had been hiding his power at first.

"The profound mysteries he is training in should focus in subterfuge and speed. His attack power should probably be somewhat lacking." Dimon said to himself.

If the opponent was very powerful, there was no need for Bates to negotiate with him at all.

Thousands of people surrounded those ten-plus. All was silent. Everyone was waiting for Dimon's decision. Then, very suddenly...

"Kill!!!" Dimon suddenly howled angrily.

The looks on the faces of Aches, Tam, and the other Gods immediately froze. Even Bates' face changed.

"Attacking?" Linley frowned.

Dimon's eyes were gleaming red, and he bellowed, "Brothers, all of you, charge together. Kill, kill them!"

"Kill!" First came the group of Highgods behind Dimon. At their fastest speed, they charged forward. Instantly, as waves bellowed, elemental behemoths appeared out of nowhere, and the Highgods either charged forward astride the heads of elemental pythons or were hidden beneath the foggy waves.

The combined attacks of over thirty Highgods...the aura alone made Linley feel it was hard to breath.

In unison, those thirty plus Highgod brandished their weapons, blasting out soul attacks. All sorts of half-translucent flashes of light shot out towards Linley's group.

"Terrible!" Linley's face changed dramatically.

These thirty-plus Highgods were less than a hundred meters away from Linley's group. A soul attack moved much faster than a person. Everyone was only able to move very slightly. The combined soul attacks of these three Highgods were aimed at three people...

Bates, Boff, and Delia!

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

"Careful!" In that dangerous moment, Linley, by Delia's side, suddenly pulled her aside while also trying to move away.

"Bang!" "Bang!"

Even though he dodged as best as he could, six soul attacks still slammed onto Linley.

Thirty or so Highgods attacking three people. Ten soul attacks were aimed at Delia and Boff, while ten more were aimed at Bates. Linley dodged as best as he could, but six Highgod soul attacks still struck him!

"Bang!"

The six soul attacks directly entered Linley's consciousness, smashing heavily against his soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. Like eggs smashing onto a rock, they shattered upon collision. These Highgods were all fairly weak Highgods, and so their soul attacks were quite rudimentary.

Only now did Linley breathe a sigh of relief.

"Linley." Delia couldn't help stare unblinkingly at Linley in worry.

"I'm fine." Linley revealed a smile.

The six hundred years of training he had spent in the Amethyst Mountains, especially his absorption of so many amethysts and their soul essences, caused his soul-protecting Sovereign artifact's flaw to rapidly heal. After six hundred years, the flaw had already a thin membrane appear.

Although it wasn't as strong as the other parts of the soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, its defense was still excellent.

Linley wasn't too bad off, but Boff and Bates were in trouble.

The bald youth, Boff, was also struck by several soul attacks. He directly crashed down from the skies, while at the same time, another Boff dressed in a black robe flew out. It was Boff's divine God clone.

"Swish!" Bates was extremely fast.

Facing those ten soul attacks, he actually dodged the majority and was only struck by two. These two soul attacks caused Bates' face to turn ashen. He didn't have a soul-protecting divine artifact.

After all, even someone as mighty as a Seven Star Fiend wouldn't have a soul much stronger than that of most ordinary Highgods. At most, their defense would be a bit stronger. If they took too many soul attacks head on, they would definitely be finished.

The big-bearded Bates glanced sideways at Linley. "This Linley...he really is hiding his power. He was hit by multiple soul attacks but he is fine. He really lives up to the name of being a descendant of the Four Divine Beasts clan." Bates, having seen Linley's Dragonform, had already guessed Linley's status.

"Big brother!"

Nearby, a desolate cry.

Linley turned. It was one of the God-level Fiends who had come with them. That skinny, tall, silver-haired man, Wilburn [Wei'er'bo'en], was crying out in grief, his tears already flowing down.

What had happened was that although Bates had dodged the majority of the soul attacks, one of them had struck upon the unfortunate elder brother of Wilburn. How could Wilburn's brother possibly withstand the soul attack of a Highgod?

What's more, Wilburns' older brother had fused with a divine spark to become a God. He immediately died.

"Wilburn should have a close relationship with him." Linley saw how heartbroken Wilburn was, and he said to himself. At this moment, nobody went to console Wilburn. Linley immediately focused his attention on those Highgods.

"Haha, I didn't expect you to have some ability." Those Highgods laughed loudly.

"Brothers, let's do it again."

These thirty-plus Highgods all liked to engage in combo attacks.

"Linley, if you still refuse to act, then I'm going to stop bothering about this and leave." A voice rang out in Linley's mind. Linley could immediately tell that the person who sent the message was that big-bearded Bates. "Linley, I didn't expect you to be a Highgod as well who was hiding his power. Even I didn't see through you."

Linley was stunned.

He was a Highgod? How come he didn't know?

"A venerable core disciple of the Four Divine Beasts clan. I recognized you as soon as you transformed. You are going to keep hiding your strength? I, Bates, am not skilled at other things, but I'm highly talented in fleeing for my life. I'm not able to deal with thirty six Highgods, especially that leader. If you don't make your move, I'm leaving. I'm not the sort to sacrifice his life for others!" Bates sent through divine message.

Bates valued his own life quite highly.

"Haha, kill them!" From afar, Dimon shouted in joy.

"Got it, second leader."

The thirty-plus Highgods were fully confident, once more waving their weapons.

“Linley!” Bates once more sent his divine sense over.

“Time to prepare for a slaughter.” Linley sent back to Bates. At the same time, within Linley’s sea of consciousness, beneath his rainbow-colored soul, with that black stone at the center, a large amount of spiritual energy began to spread out. At the same time, a large amount of elemental essence began to condense.

Linley stared calmly at the thirty-plus Highgods, their weapons raised.

Strangely, powerful surges of earth-style divine power rippled out like the waves of the sea, spreading out to a range of two hundred meters. The curvature of the ripples was identical to the changing curvatures of those 108 rays of spiritual energy of the black stone.

Within a range of two hundred meters.

Those thirty six Highgods suddenly found that suddenly, a tremendously powerful gravitational force was affecting them. This enormous gravitational force instantly caused them to be unable to continue to fly, and they began to sink downwards!

“Ahhh!” The thirty six Highgods began to cry out in alarm.

"Whoooooosh."

The countless amounts of earth elemental essence had already completely solidified. A completely black, totally sealed prison had formed, with everyone within two hundred meters being caught within the black prison. Those thirty six Highgods were naturally trapped within as well.

Blackstone Prison! The thousands of Gods outside were all stupefied and stared slack-jawed.

But within the Blackstone Prison...

"What...what is this place?" The thirty six Highgods all stared in astonishment at the surroundings. They were surrounded by dark walls, with corridors and rooms present. They could already tell that they were in a different place, and they could sense the powerful gravity.

The gravity was simply too extravagant.

Even Highgods were unable to fly.

"Crunch!" A black shadow flashed past, and a Highgod collapsed.

"Haha, this is excellent." Bates was incomparably excited. Linley's side was all surrounded by earth-style divine power, and they weren't restricted by the gravity at all. Their speed was like normal.

The thirty six Highgods, however, had their speed drop to a very low level. Bates, however, wasn't impacted at all. Also, those thirty six Highgods had all been separated...

It was a massacre!

"This damn place....break!" A Highgod angrily smashed towards a black wall, which rippled like water but wasn't damaged at all. This was a Blackstone Prison formed from three types of profound mysteries. In terms of defensive strength, it was comparable to Linley's former Pulseguard Armor.

"Motherf*cker, how should we leave?" The Highgod was extremely frantic.

Suddenly...

"Hi." A voice rang out.

The Highgod turned to look and saw a strange shadow emerge from the walls. He only saw a pair of cold, dark golden eyes appear, and then his head went dizzy and he lost all consciousness.

"Killing in this environment really is easy." Linley laughed calmly.

The Blackstone Prison wasn't just capable of trapping people and applying powerful gravity; the black stone itself also contained that sort of special soul affecting property, much like the strange wind sound of the Amethyst Mountains. As Linley attacked, he immediately used his spiritual energy to use the black stone to affect the soul.

When the opponent was dizzy and unconscious, Linley would naturally kill them effortlessly with one attack.

.....

"Urgh!" A Highgod was greatly shocked and immediately used a soul attack.

A black light flashed by, and the Highgod's head immediately blew apart as a divine spark flew out.

"Haha, he's so slow." Bebe laughed loudly.

Under this sort of profound gravity, their speed was slowed and they weren't even able to dodge. All they could do was use soul attacks, but upon encountering Bebe, this person still died.

But of course, if he encountered Linley...he'd be even worse off. He wouldn't even have a chance to use a soul attack.

.....

"Brothers, material attacks, all together!" In the instant the Blackstone Prison formed, Dimon immediately bellowed angrily.

Immediately, the thousands of Gods immediately wielded their weapons, and thousands of tightly clustered material attacks shot out. Earthen yellow, light blue, green, golden yellow...all sorts of colors shot out as attacks roared forth towards the Blackstone Prison.

However...

"Whoosh!" The Blackstone Prison, strangely enough, began to sink down from the surface of the sea into the depths.

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

Of the thousands of attacks, only a few hundred struck the Blackstone Prison. The combined attacks of a few hundred Gods, against this Blackstone Prison formed from three types of profound mysteries and which was comparable to something completely formed from Pulseguard Armor, only caused the walls to tremble lightly, and then immediately return to calmness.

It hadn't been damaged at all!

Linley's Blackstone Prison wasn't too far off from that Castle of Sand.

"Huh?" Dimon was shocked.

But suddenly, the entire Blackstone Prison bizarrely vanished, revealing twelve people within it. It was Linley's group. Although all of this took time to describe, roughly only ten seconds had passed before the Blackstone Prison formed, then vanished.

The only difference was, those thirty six Highgods had all been killed.

"Im...impossible!" Dimon's face changed dramatically.

Thirty six Highgods, all dead in the blink of an eye. How was this possible?

"There's an expert who trains in the Laws of the Earth." Dimon understood that just now, the black stone castle that had formed had a powerful earth aura. In the blink of an eye, thirty six Highgods had been killed. "That expert most likely isn't the big bearded fellow. There's another hidden expert in that group."

Dimon was startled.

He didn't know what was going on with this little squad. It originally only had two Highgods, which was already quite formidable, but then first Bates popped out of nowhere, and now it seemed yet another powerful figure had appeared.

"Haha..." Bates laughed loudly. "Now, the only Highgod left is you. Heh heh, my turn..."

How could Dimon dare to take them head on?

Dimon wasn't completely confident in being able to deal with Bates' power, and what's more, there was another hidden figure who was even more powerful than Bates, who trained in the Laws of the Earth!

Flee!

Without saying a word, Dimon immediately turned and fled, while secretly cursing, "This squad only had twenty or so people. Why are there so many experts hidden within it?"

"That black stone castle actually resulted in thirty six Highgods dying so quickly within it. It definitely was formed by a Six Star Fiend, or possibly a Seven Star Fiend!" Dimon was extremely certain. "Forget it. Why obsess over it? At least I discovered a Soul Mutate this time. I can be considered to have made an accomplishment!"

While thinking this, Dimon fled far away.

"The second leader fled."

"Quick, flee!"

Those thousands of Gods were all frightened and fled as well. Just now, their combined attacks had been unable to budge the Blackstone Prison, and that was with the Blackstone Prison being so huge as to have hundreds of attacks strike it. If it had been a Highgod, perhaps only a few attacks would have landed.

Moments later, they all disappeared without a trace, leaving behind only twelve lucky survivors.

“Just now, who was that expert who created that black stone castle?” The lucky survivors and Aches immediately looked around, only all of the surviving Fiends were puzzled. Bebe, Olivier, and the others all intentionally looked around in confusion as well.

“Hey, who was it?” Bebe looked puzzled. “We actually have such a powerful expert here? I admire him so very much. Tell me, who is it?” Bebe continuously looked around at the others.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 9, Emotions

The waves of the sea rolled on. There was nobody left around them.

The twelve lucky survivors had strange looks on their faces.

Seeing Bebe continuously 'search' for that hidden expert, the big-bearded Bates cursed silently to himself: You know who it is, yet you put on such a show.

He immediately laughed loudly, "Bebe, if that expert doesn't want to reveal himself, how can you know? Right?"

"Right." Bebe nodded.

The bald youth, Boff, had a calm look on his face. His divine Highgod clone was dead, leaving behind only his God clone. He said calmly, "No need to look for him. Perhaps that expert isn't even amongst us and is an expert who was hidden near us and helped us, then left. This isn't impossible.

It was indeed possible for those Seven Star Fiends and Asura-level experts to escape the notice of these bandits, but under normal conditions, would an Asura-level expert be so bored as to help them?

Unless there was someone they cared about present.

"That might indeed be the case." Aches' face was all smiles. "Everyone, let's not waste any more time. Let's hurry off." Aches was a very skilled person. Regardless of whether or not that expert was in their squad, since he didn't want to show himself, Aches naturally wouldn't pursue the matter and possibly make that person unhappy.

Aches was delighted from the bottom of his heart.

His squad had such an expert with it. What would they have to fear on their journey?

"Oh no!" Aches suddenly laughed bitterly.

"What is it?" The others looked at him.

Aches laughed bitterly. "That was my last metallic lifeform, and it's already been destroyed. However, we've gone less than 10% on this journey. What should we do?" Aches looked at the surrounding people. "Who here has a metallic lifeform to lend me? I can buy it. Or perhaps I can pay for all of the expended divine jewels on the way."

Everyone glanced at each other.

Metallic lifeforms were fairly high level items. Generally speaking, God-level Fiends weren't able to buy them.

"Only prepared a few metallic lifeforms?" The big-bearded Bates chuckled, then waved his hand. Immediately, a metallic lifeform floated above the sea while transforming into a ship. "Aches, this metallic lifeform doesn't have any divine jewels within it. You can fill it up yourself.”

“Hmph, he’s an expert, yet he’s so stingy.” Bebe muttered.

The big-bearded Bates immediately turned to look at him. He couldn’t help but stare at Bebe, then glanced at Linley. Only, he simply laughed, then sent through divine sense, “Hey, Linley...you are an expert of the Four Divine Beasts clan. You are a Six Star Fiend, right? Or are you a Seven Star Fiend? Why are you hiding your status?”

Six Star Fiend? Seven Star Fiend?

“I’m actually a One Star Fiend.” Linley sent back through divine sense.

“One Star Fiend?” Bates rolled his eyes, then turned and flew towards the metallic lifeform. “Hey, let’s hurry on our way. Prepare to head out.”

Only now did Linley return to his normal human form.

“I told the truth but he didn’t believe it.” Linley shook his head, laughing to himself. And then, he couldn’t help but sigh. “The power of this Blackstone Prison is indeed great. One part of it is the profound mysteries, but the other part is the special trick in exerting the profound mysteries. How could there be such a powerful trick?”

Linley didn’t understand it.

Just the special trick to using it could cause the upper limits of the gravity strength to multiple hundredfold. Most likely, even fusing another profound mystery wouldn't result in such an extravagant increase in power.

"Also, if I were to try and extrapolate it from scratch, most likely even after countless years, I still wouldn't be able to do so." Linley knew very well how hard it would be to develop this completely on his own. After all, who could have come up with using 108 rays of divine power? In addition, the 108 rays of divine power could be set up in countless configurations, and in most of them, they were very weak.

But who would have imagined that under certain circumstances, they would produce such an effect?

Before Linley learned this technique, only the juvenile amethyst beast could use it, and the juvenile amethyst beast was a 'divine beast'. This technique was his innate, ultimate technique! When using it, the power was even more extravagant than Linley's execution.

"Rumble..."

The metallic lifeform pierced through the waves and advanced.

Within the metallic lifeform, everyone was chatting, drinking wine, and laughing. Only, occasionally, some of them would intentionally glance at the others, pondering who was most likely to be that secretive, ultimate expert.

"Who was that expert?" The green haired man, Tam, was very curious.

At the same time, with a rather excited gaze, he glanced at every single lucky survivor nearby. When his glance fell upon the silver-haired 'Wilburn', he shook his head slightly. If Wilburn was that expert, he most likely wouldn't have let his big brother die.

Tam continued to look at them, one by one.

"Shouldn't be them. I know these ones." Tam then turned to look at the big-bearded Bates, who stared at him. "What are you looking at?"

Tam immediately laughed awkwardly.

However, Tam knew that Bates trained in the Laws of Darkness and so wasn't that expert.

"Can it be them?" Tam then glanced sideways at Linley's group, looking at each of them. Upon seeing Linley, he paused slightly. "That shouldn't be right either. I saw him use that violet longsword. He seems to train in the Elemental Laws of the Wind. Not him either!"

Although Deities would train in more than one type of Elemental Law, when they engaged in battle, they would generally use their most powerful profound mystery. They had seen Linley utilize the Elemental Laws of the Wind, and thus were certain that Linley was a wind-style Deity. They didn't think about anything else.

"Linley."

A voice rang out in his mind. Linley himself was at the side of the main hall. He was staring at the outside through the translucent metallic metal. Hearing this sound, he immediately replied with divine sense, "Bates, why have you kept on chatting with me these past few days?"

"Hmph. Ever since that day when I revealed my true power, those kids have been very careful when chatting to me. It's really boring." The big-bearded Bates said.

Linley chuckled. Bates was someone who liked a lively atmosphere.

"Hey, look. That Wilburn kid has had a gloomy face the past few days. He seems to have been turned into a cripple. I didn't expect that that short big brother of his was so important to him." Bates sent with divine sense yet again.

Linley turned to look at Wilburn. This Wilburn was someone who also valued emotional relationships. If either Linley or Wharton had died, the other would probably be very heartbroken as well.

"Wharton. When I didn't let him come to the Infernal Realm, that was the right decision." Linley sighed in his heart.

The many dangers of the Infernal Realm had been far greater than he had imagined. However, after six hundred years of training in the Amethyst Mountains, he already was confident in his ability to protect himself. Regardless of whether it was a 'Fogsea Storm' or those Knifeblade Island bandits, there wasn't much of a threat to him.

Night. The sea wind blew drearily.

Linley walked to the front of the ship. Although the metallic lifeform moved very quickly, Linley still walked very stably atop it.

"Huh?" Linley looked towards the front of the ship in surprise. "There's someone here!" Tonight, aside from himself, there was actually someone else who had come to the front of the ship long ago. It was the silver-haired youth, Wilburn, who was leaning against the railings.

Linley found to his astonishment...

Wilburn's face was covered with tears. He was quietly staring into the distant seas. Who knew what he was thinking about?

"Wilburn." Linley sat down as well.

Wilburn was startled. The tears on his face immediately dried and vanished, and he looked as cold and emotionless as ever.

"Thinking about your elder brother?" Linley stared into the dark waves up ahead, but spoke very directly.

When Wilburn heard this, the muscles on his face couldn't help but begin to tremble slightly.

"You had an elder brother, while I, I have a little brother." Linley let out a long sigh. "His name is Wharton! However, this time, when I came to the Infernal Realm, I didn't let him accompany me...and in the blink of an eye, nearly seven centuries have passed. I wonder how my little brother is doing."

Nearly seven hundred years.

It had only taken Linley, in the Yulan continent, a few decades to become a legend. In the Infernal Realm, he had spent nearly seven centuries. Seven centuries...how many things could happen in such a period of time? Linley didn't know. How were his family members in the distant Yulan continent doing?

"My elder brother and I have been in the Infernal Realm for tens of thousands of years." Wilburn suddenly said.

Linley was somewhat astonished. Wilburn was actually speaking.

However, Linley still listened carefully. Given how heartbroken Wilburn was, he would indeed feel better after speaking out.

"My elder brother cared greatly about me. I still remember what it was like back in our homeland, that material plane." Wilburn's gaze drifted away as he returned to his memories. "My elder brother was fairly honest and simple, while I was fairly arrogant! When I was young, because of my arrogance, I didn't have many friends. Only, my elder brother always cared about me."

"Afterwards, when I grew up, because of a certain matter, a rupture appeared in the relationship between myself and my elder brother." Wilburn said bitterly, "I killed my elder brother's fiancée!"

Linley was startled.

Seeing the look on Wilburn's face, Linley could imagine that the situation back then must have been very complicated. Otherwise, given how much Wilburn cared about his brother, he wouldn't have done such a thing.

"From that day onward, my elder brother stopped meeting with me. As for myself, I became all the more arrogant. Because of some complicated matters, in my anger, I attacked the Imperial palace and killed that detestable Imperial crown prince, and even the Emperor. That night, blood flowed into a river.."

"Only, the power of the Imperial palace was also very strong. They actually had eight Saints! I killed five of them, but was badly injured as well. I could see death coming for me."

"I had given up. After all, I had killed that Imperial crown prince and that dogshit Emperor. I was willing to die. Only, at that moment, my elder brother appeared. He saved me! Doing so meant that he was directly opposing the Empire!" Wilburn thought back to the events of that year.

Wilburn shook his head and said bitterly, "Actually, back then, I had killed my future sister-in-law by accident. I had always felt guilty towards my elder brother.."

"After killing the Emperor, things became extremely troublesome. The elder chairman of the Empire's magus association normally never got involved in matters, but after learning about this, he would definitely intervene."

Wilburn sighed. "Thus, we immediately fled, and then immediately found the Planar Overseer to go to the Infernal Realm!"

"You came here as Saints?" Linley was shocked.

Wilburn nodded. "Only after arriving did we learn...how dangerous it was. For Saints in the Infernal Realm...this place is a nightmare..." As he spoke, Wilburn turned silent, and his tears began to quietly cascade down again.

"Enough of that." Wilburn shook his head. "After arriving here and experiencing the myriad dangers of the Infernal Realm, my elder brother and I understood that death could descend at any moment. I always hoped that if we were to die, I should be the first to die. I didn't want my elder brother to die...because in my entire life, he was the only true family and friend I have ever had!"

Linley glanced at Wilburn, then sighed to himself.

However, Linley himself didn't feel too sad. He had experienced too much, here in the Infernal Realm. He had seen these things often. Those Fiend trial participants, only a few dozen survived from a thousand participants. For the people who had come to the Infernal Realm, how many of them were 'ordinary'?

Linley quietly sat there.

At some point in time, Wilburn returned to the ship's cabin. Linley continued to sit there and stare at the waves of the sea.

Tonight, only a tiny hint of a crescent of the Violet Moon remained. The entire Starmist Sea seemed so dark and gloomy. The waves of the sea seemed like part of some incomparably enormous monster.

"The Infernal Realm is just like this Starmist Sea. It is incomparably vast, and it devours one living creature after another. Only a truly powerful expert can remain here in the Infernal Realm and reach the pinnacle. Experts die, and only still more powerful experts can live!" Linley stared into the boundless waters in front of him. For some reason, he felt his heart tremble slightly.

The dark sea waters were vast and endless.

Linley quietly sat there at the head of the boat, silently staring into the boundless sea, not a single hint of light in his eyes.

Perhaps a long time passed, or perhaps just a moment later...

Linley opened his eyes.

In Linley's mind, illusory rays of divine power actually were forming. The rays of divine power formed into the 'Blackstone Prison'. The 'Throbbing Pulse of the World', 'Gravitational Space', 'Essence of the Earth'...all sorts of profound mysteries were fusing into his soul.

Dawn.

Linley stood up as well. Staring at the Blood Sun, blurry behind those thin clouds, he had a hint of a smile on his face.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 10, Ganmontin

By the time Linley's group once again entered the metallic lifeform and headed further into the Starmist Sea, the second leader of Knifeblade Island, 'Dimon', travelled by himself deep into the bottom of the Starmist Sea, arriving within a nameless gorge.

"Hmph. If it weren't for the fact that my elder brother died while I myself am not aware of where the Lord Commander lives, how could you have ended up getting a share of the glory!"

Staring at the gorge, Dimon felt hatred in his heart.

And then, Dimon transformed into a shadow, easily passing through the nameless gorge. Within the gorge, there were some strange plant creatures at the bottom which were colorful to behold. Sometimes, a few oceanic magical beasts would even pop up at the bottom of the sea, but Dimon paid them no mind at all.

Moments later...

Dimon arrived at the gates to an underwater estate, located deep within the seabed gorge. There were two guards at each side of the gate.

"Halt!" One of the guards immediately barked.

Dimon laughed calmly. "What, you don't even recognize me?" As he spoke, Dimon moved somewhat closer. The two guards only now began to laugh, one of them saying, "So it is second leader Lord Dimon of the Knifeblade Island." Although that was how they spoke, clearly, they didn't hold Dimon in much regard.

Although their strength wasn't that great, their master was incredible.

"Go make a report to your master. I want to meet him. This is an important matter!" Dimon said seriously.

The two guards exchanged glances.

"It seems there really is an important matter. You can go make the report."

The other guard said, "You can just wait here. I'll go report this to our master." As he spoke, he entered the estate. After a long while, the guard came out. "Lord Dimon, my master invites you. Please come with me!"

Dimon snorted inwardly. "Just because you are somewhat stronger than me!"

This estate was extremely large, and it was very luxuriously decorated. Moments later, Dimon arrived within the main hall. The entire main hall was surrounded by sculptures and all sorts of paintings, which seemed to be telling an ancient story. Dimon, in his heart, knew: "Hmph, these are all about the boastful affairs of himself, Ganmontin. So what if he's gone to Purgatory. Such arrogance!"

Although he said this in his heart, Dimon was still rather envious.

"Dimon, where's your elder brother, Acketts?" A calm voice came out from the front.

At the throne in the front of the main hall, a green-haired man whose forehead was covered with fish scales was seated, dressed in a green cloak with golden trimmings. The green-haired man's eyes glowed with green light, and his lips had a violet tint. He himself gave off an extremely devilish aura.

"He died!" Dimon said sorrowfully.

"Acketts died?" The green-haired man immediately stood up in shock, then hurriedly asked, "How is that possible? Your elder brother was a Six Star Fiend who trained in the Elemental Laws of Water. His defense was the highest amongst our group. Who was capable of breaking his defense?"

"It was a black-haired man known as Lomio Bornesen!" Just mentioning this name caused Dimon to feel terror.

That day, the black-haired man's body had transformed into countless bolts of flashing lightning in the sky and caused something akin to a Fogsea Storm. And then, with but one blade blow, he had killed Dimon's elder brother.

"Lomio Bornesen?" The green-haired man on the throne frowned. "How come I've never heard of this person? What does he train in?"

"He trains in the Laws of Lightning." Dimon said, "This person came to our Knifeblade Island, then transformed into countless bolts of lightning and caused something identical to a Fogsea Storm, creating an enormous lightning vortex above our Knifeblade Island. It was too terrifying!"

"There's actually such an expert."

The green-haired man frowned. "It seems I must go report this to the Lord Commander!"

And then, the green-haired man looked at Dimon. "Dimon, can it be that you've simply come to tell me about this?" The green-haired man had decided immediately in his heart that no matter what, he couldn't make an enemy out of this Lomio Bornesen. Someone capable of killing Acketts in one blow was too terrifying.

"Lord Ganmontin!" Dimon's face had a hint of a smile appear on it. "I've come to bring you some good news."

"Speak." Ganmontin said.

"Although I've never met the Lord Commander, I've heard my elder brother say that the Lord Commander had always been collecting some divine beasts with extremely powerful innate abilities, or talents who have mutated souls." Dimon grinned as he spoke.

"Yes, there is such a thing." Ganmontin said calmly.

"This time, although our Knifeblade Island was attacked, while I was fleeing, in the Starmist Sea, I actually encountered a talented Soul Mutate!" Dimon said hurriedly. "He's definitely a Soul Mutate genius. I personally saw him use a combination of darkness-type divine power and light-type divine power!"

"What!"

Shocked, Ganmontin immediately stood up.

Soul Mutates were extremely rare. In addition, geniuses like them were extremely terrifying in the future!

For example, an expert who was Soul Mutate, upon reaching the Highgod level, just based on the fact that he had fused two different types of divine power, would have the strength of his attack increased tenfold! When a person used fused divine power, even if he used the same type of profound mystery, the power would be ten times that an ordinary person's!

And in addition...only Soul Mutates were capable of fusing the profound mysteries of two different types of Elemental Laws!

For example, Learmonth had later merged the profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of Fire as well as the Way of Destruction.

When profound mysteries belong to different types of Laws were fused, the power would be even greater by far than when two profound mysteries of the same type of Law was fused!

For example, if Linley's 'Throbbing Pulse of the World' was capable of being fused with the 'Dimensional Attack' profound mystery of the Elemental Laws of the Wind, then the power...would be comparable to fusing three profound mysteries of the same type of Law!

If he also fused two types of divine power when using the attack, the power would increase tenfold yet again.

A Soul Mutate only had to fuse two different types of profound mysteries together, and his power would immediately become comparable to that of a Seven Star Fiend.

However, ordinary Highgods would have to fuse four profound mysteries to reach the Seven Star Fiend level!

"Where is he?" Ganmontin said hurriedly.

Dimon said helplessly, "I didn't have the ability to bring him here."

Ganmontin's face immediately changed, and he sneered, "So even you, a Five Star Fiend, were unable to bring him back. It seems this Soul Mutate has already reached the Highgod level. I expect he has already fused profound mysteries as well...what, do you want me to go die?"

Ganmontin knew very well his own limits, as a Six Star Fiend.

Although he was specialized in attacks, against a Soul Mutate, especially a Soul Mutate at the height of his power, he had no confidence.

Soul Mutates were monstrously powerful.

Two different types of divine power, when fused, would make the power of even an ordinary profound mystery increase tenfold! If they were able to fuse three different types of profound power, the strength would increase a hundredfold! If they were able to fuse four...the power would continue to compound.

However, the more types of divine power one trained in, the lower the chances one would have of having a soul mutation. For example, a person capable of using three types of divine power, even if he underwent a soul mutation, would have nearly a 100% chance of dying during the process. In the entire history of the Infernal Realm, there had only been an extremely infinitesimally small number of Soul Mutates.

Virtually all of the successful ones fused two types of divine power to become Soul Mutates. For example, when Olivier's soul had mutated, he had been in a coma for months.

In the countless years the Infernal Realm had existed, only a single person had fused three types of divine power!

As for having four different types of divine power and yet still fusing them, despite the passage of countless years, not a single such person had appeared in the countless planes of the multiverse.

Normally speaking, when people were discussing Soul Mutates, they referred to people who fused two different types of divine power.

For example, Linley had earth, wind, and fire-type divine power. Even if he were to undergo a soul mutation, his chance of death would be almost 100%! After all, in the countless years the Infernal Realm had existed, this sort of genius had only appeared once.

"Dimon, it's not too likely that one is going to be able to control that sort of mighty Soul Mutate." Ganmontin laughed coldly.

"No. That Soul Mutate is only a God." Dimon said hurriedly.

"Only a God?" Ganmontin was overjoyed.

The weaker the target was, the easier to control.

"Huh?" Ganmontin suddenly frowned. "Just a God. How is it that were unable to bring him back?"

Dimon explained, "Lord Ganmontin, the Soul Mutate is only a God, but...he is currently within a squad which has two experts."

"Experts. How is their strength?" Ganmontin asked hurriedly.

"One of them trains in the Elemental Laws of Darkness. By my calculations, he should have the power of a Five Star Fiend, perhaps closing on that of a Six Star Fiend! As I saw it, he specializes in speed, assassination, and hiding his aura." Dimon said disdainfully.

Ganmontin laughed calmly. He wouldn't even care about an ordinary Six Star Fiend.

"And the other?" Ganmontin pursued.

Dimon looked rather awkward. "Actually, I didn't discover that other person either. However, he should be hidden in their group. In terms of power...I can't say."

"Eh?" Dimon frowned. "Explain in detail what the situation was like."

Dimon immediately explained in detail. After hearing Dimon's explanation, Ganmontin nodded slightly. "The attack of hundreds of Gods actually managed to cause the black stone castle to tremble. It seems its defense isn't that powerful, and it also covers a fairly small area...based on my calculations, at most this person is a Six Star Fiend!"

Ganmontin had already calculated this out.

The opponent wasn't too much of a threat.

"I can break through that black stone castle with one sword blow." Ganmontin laughed calmly.

Dimon advised, "Milord, how about we first go inform the Lord Commander...that way, there won't be any chance of failure."

"A mere Six Star Fiend? How can the Lord Commander personally get involved for this?" Ganmontin laughed coldly. "This sort of affair, I alone can handle easily." Ganmontin was very confident. He trained in the Elemental Laws of the Wind, and he specialized in two things; attacking and fleeing!

Even against a Seven Star Fiend, he was confident in his ability to flee.

For a battle like this, it was better to first prepare for defeat than to prepare for victory. Only then would one not have to worry about any problems.

"Do you know where that squad is?" Ganmontin looked at him.

Dimon smiled. "Milord, don't worry. I've made the arrangements long ago. In addition, it's only been less than half a month. Even if something happens, finding them will be easy. After all...this is our turf."

"Excellent." Ganmontin nodded in satisfaction. "Don't worry. Once I collect that Soul Mutate and offer him to the Commander, I will definitely report your contributions to the Lord Commander as well."

"Thank you, milord." Dimon said hurriedly.

But in his heart, Dimon was still furious. If he had known how to go find the Commander, would he have come to report all of this to Ganmontin? If he had enough power to seize Olivier, he wouldn't need to let Ganmontin take the credit either.

The sea waves rolled on. Linley and Bebe were seated together at the end of the ship.

"Boss, why have you always been staring at the sea lately?" Bebe asked, puzzled.

Linley chuckled, first setting up his Godrealm to block out sound, and then explained, "Bebe, recently, I feel as though there are some problems with my 'Blackstone Prison'. I know that the answer lies within this vast sea...the waters of the sea flow on casually and contain unfathomable transformations. My Blackstone Prison is too rigid. Although it is able to distort and reform, that expends divine power. Also, it isn't able to easily deflect outside power."

Bebe just listened. He couldn't help but stare at Linley.

"Why are you staring at me?" Linley laughed as he looked at Bebe.

"Boss, didn't you say that you've already fused three types of profound mysteries?" Bebe said hurriedly.

During the past few days when Linley had been staring at the sea, he had gained a sudden insight and had managed to completely and perfectly fuse the 'Essence of the Earth', 'Throbbing Pulse of the World', and the 'Gravitational Space', these three great profound mysteries. The power of his 'Blackstone Prison' had once more increased. By now, even against a Six Star Fiend, Linley had confidence in winning.

"So what if I have?"

Linley sighed. "The Blackstone Prison is still insufficiently perfected. Actually, if I were able to infuse the Profound Mysteries of 'Vitality' of the Laws of the Earth with the other three, it would perfectly balance and strengthen the power of my Blackstone Prison. By that time, the Blackstone Prison would regrow and regenerate without end. Even a Seven Star Fiend would find it hard to break it."

"Only, fusing four types of profound mysteries is too hard. In addition, 'Vitality' should be a fairly unique type of profound mystery in the Laws of the Earth."

The vast earth was deep and gave birth to countless lifeforms, and thus it possessed profound vitality.

Linley knew a few special details regarding the Profound Truths of Vitality, only...Linley had yet to be able to gain a basic understanding of it.

"Boss, don't be too greedy." Bebe pursed his lips and said. "You've fused three types of profound mysteries."

Linley laughed. Actually, this didn't have anything to do with greed. Linley simply pursued perfection and wanted to continuously improve himself.

"Huh?" Right at this moment, Linley was suddenly shocked. "Below!"

"Bang!" The metallic creature, which had been advancing at high speed, once more exploded, and everyone within it now hovered in mid-air, their faces covered with puzzlement. In particular, the big-bearded Bates. He roared angrily, "Motherf*cker! This metallic lifeform was mine!"

Linley carefully stared at the surface of the sea.

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

Two figures broke through the surface of the sea, leaping into mid-air. One of them was a grim looking green-haired man who was dressed in a green cloak with gold trimmings, and who had fish scales over his forehead. The person by his side was a familiar figure to Linley's group. It was the second leader of Knifeblade Island. Dimon.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 11, So It Was Him

The waves of the sea rolled about. The green-haired Ganmontin and the second leader Dimon both stood there in mid-air, staring calmly at Linley's group.

"That's the leader of the Knifeblade Island group." The employer, Aches, immediately recognized Dimon. The others recognized him as well, and as they did, their hearts sank...as the second leader of Knifeblade Island, Dimon's power was obvious.

And yet, right now, Dimon was seemingly following behind that green-haired man, as though he were a subordinate.

"Boss, trouble's coming." Bebe sent through divine sense.

"No rush. Let's wait and see." Linley watched Ganmontin calmly. At his current level of power, Linley was more than capable of fighting against most Six Star Fiends. More importantly...Linley had that Sovereign's Might. If he used Sovereign's Might to attack...

Even a Seven Star Fiend was nothing to fear!

"Hey, leader of Knifeblade Island, what's your name? I forgot. But you fled last time, fellow. Why are you back this time?" The big-bearded 'Bates' barked unhappily. "What, last time, when we spared your life, you didn't feel gratitude, but instead came back and actually brought someone else over? Fine then, today, we'll just deal with both of you."

Ganmontin and Dimon didn't say a word.

Ganmontin's flashing green eyes swept past Linley's group. He carefully inspected every single person to see who was the legendary hidden expert. As he looked, Ganmontin couldn't help but frown. "Aside from those two Highgods, it seems there isn't a third Highgod!"

During the last battle, Boff had lost a Highgod clone and was now just a God.

The entire squad only had two Highgods. One was Delia, and the others was Bates.

"The situation isn't good." Ganmontin was an expert who had entered Purgatory before. Naturally, he wouldn't drop his guard. "This hidden expert can actually escape even my notice. It seems his power isn't any lower than mine. At the very least, his ability in hiding his aura is quite powerful."

Ganmontin thought rapidly, then came to a decision.

"Dimon, the Soul Mutate you spoke of. Which one is it?" Ganmontin sent through a divine message to Dimon.

The reason he had brought Dimon was solely to have him point out the Soul Mutate. Dimon looked towards Olivier while saying through divine sense, "Lord Ganmontin, it's that man with the long gray cloak who has hair that is black streaked with white."

Ganmontin's gaze immediately rested upon Olivier, a crafty look flashing through his eyes.

Linley's group was puzzled. The two had destroyed their metallic lifeform, but hadn't said a single word. What were they intending, exactly?

"You, greenie! Why are the two of you blocking our path? If you want to say something, hurry up. We don't have time to waste with you!" Bebe, wearing his straw hat, wasn't afraid at all, and he loudly shouted towards Ganmontin.

Ganmontin began to laugh.

"Haha..." Ganmontin emitted an ear-piercing laughter, the sound of it bizarrely causing the area within hundreds of meters to echo, while outside of this area, no sound could be heard at all. The sound of the laughter bored directly into the skulls of Linley's group.

"This is the 'Profound Truths of Sound' of the Elemental Laws of the Wind." Linley immediately recognized it.

The Profound Truths of Sound fused the 'Sound Waves' and 'Music' profound mysteries. Linley had already completely fused them. This Ganmontin actually used this to 'ambush' them, but clearly, the power of Ganmontin's laughter wasn't too great.

"How painful." Aches, Tam, and the others all held their heads.

As for Linley, Bebe, Delia, and Olivier, they weren't as bad off.

Ganmontin glanced at the people who his laughter hadn't affected, then chuckled. "Everyone, I am Ganmontin! Today, I have only come to take a person away. I don't actually want to harm the rest, and I hope you won't block me either."

Take someone away?

Linley was puzzled. "Who in our group is worth this sort of high-level figure coming out?" For Ganmontin to be capable of having Dimon by his side like a manservant meant that his power was definitely greater than Dimon's, most likely at a Six Star Fiend level or perhaps even a Seven Star Fiend level.

"Take someone away? Who?" Bebe asked.

"Right. Who are you taking away?" Aches asked as well. This group all felt nervous, afraid that they would be selected.

Ganmontin smiled as he said, "The person I am taking away is him!" As he spoke, he reached out with his right hand and pointed towards Olivier!

Instantly, everyone turned to look at Olivier!

"Me?" Olivier's face changed, and his eyes were filled with disbelief. He had only been in the Infernal Realm for a few hundred years and he hadn't offended any powerful foes. Why would they take him away?

"Olivier!" Bebe called out in surprise.

Linley and Delia both began to frown, while Aches, Tam, and the other Gods let out sighs of relief.

"Why is this person taking Olivier away?" Linley's thoughts flashed through his mind. Olivier had spent the vast majority of his years in the Infernal Realm in the Amethyst Mountains with Linley. He had never encountered any ultimate experts. The only thing special about Olivier was..."

His soul mutation!

"Could it be that the reason he wants to take Olivier away is related to the fact that Olivier is a Soul Mutate?" Linley couldn't help but guess this.

"Hey, why do you want to take away Olivier? Olivier is one of us. You want to take him away just because you say so? Absolutely no way!" The big-bearded Bates snorted. Bates' words caused Linley, Bebe, and the others to feel joy.

"This Bates is a fine fellow." Linley said to himself.

Ganmontin laughed loudly. "Oh, so his name is Olivier. I can tell you plainly..." Ganmontin swept Linley's group with his gaze, his eyes slowly turning cold. "Today, Olivier must leave with me. If anyone wants to stop me, there will only be one result...death!"

Ganmontin's green glowing eyes, violet lips, and cold voice caused everyone to feel their hearts tremble.

"He's using the Profound Truths of Sound yet again." Linley said to himself. "This person can utilize the Elemental Laws of the Wind quite freely."

Ganmontin, seeing that the Gods seemed to be rather in dread of him, then immediately began to smile again. "But of course, if you don't block my path, I naturally won't kill you. Right now, I'll give you all a chance... aside from Olivier, the others can all leave safely. Everyone can leave now!"

"Leave?" The God-level Fiends all hesitated.

"I'll count to ten. If by then there are people still remaining, that means they are my enemies. The result will be..." Ganmontin suddenly made a serpent-shaped longsword which gleamed with green light appear in his hands. He casually waved the sword, which blurred while causing the world to be filled with a beautiful sound.

"Slash!"

Space itself had a large crevice split open within it, while at the same time, the sword blur carried what seemed like countless wind blades, charging downwards towards the sea like thousands of soldiers in an army. "Boom!" The sea rumbled, and instantly, the water beneath that point for hundreds of meters around turned into a massive hole that was dozens of meters deep.

Moments later, the surrounding water filled the gap, and immediately a series of waves could be heard.

Aches, Tam, Wilburn, and the other Gods all had very ugly looks on their faces. Linley, Bates, and the others all had solemn looks on their faces. The Infernal Realm's planar walls were very stable. To slash open a crevice within the Infernal Realm was proof of having displayed terrifying power.

"One!" Ganmontin smiled as he spoke. "Two. Three..." Ganmontin's counting speed was unhurried, and his voice wasn't loud, but hammered down upon the hearts of every single Fiend present.

Those God-level Fiends glanced at each other, all hesitating.

"Everyone, no need to waste your lives for me." Olivier said bitterly.

Immediately, the employer, Aches, was the first to turn towards Olivier and say apologetically, "Forgive me." As he spoke, he immediately flew away. As Aches left, immediately the other Gods all left as well.

By the time Ganmontin counted to ten, Boff and Wilburn flew away as well. They were all God-level Fiends, of no use at all.

"Nine!" Ganmontin's gaze once more swept the five remaining figures. "Everyone, if you don't leave now, you won't have the chance later." But the five didn't pay him any mind at all.

"Ten!"

Ganmontin had counted to ten, but five were still remaining. They were Linley, Delia, Bebe, Olivier, and Bates!

As for Aches, Tam, Wilburn, and the other seven, they had all flown far away. From a distance of three kilometers, they stared towards this scene. Aches said softly, "Everyone, don't be worried. I expect that the mysterious expert who used the Blackstone Prison last time should be one of those three; Linley, Bebe, or Olivier. When that expert attacks, perhaps he will be able to defeat Ganmontin!"

The other six felt their hearts firm up. In the Infernal Realm, very few people would choose to throw their lives away.

Their choices were correct.

"Who knows which one of them is the expert." Wilburn said softly.

"I hope he can defeat Ganmontin." Boff said as well.

Right at this moment, above the boundless Starmist Sea, Linley's group of five was hovering above the surface of the sea, standing opposite from Dimon and Ganmontin.

After counting to ten, Ganmontin was already feeling extremely unhappy. Prior to this, he had used the 'Profound Truths of Sound' through his laughter to test Linley's group. As early as then, he had expected that the hidden expert should have been one of the people in front of him, but who would have imagined that none of these people left.

He had counted from one to ten, but his ploy of his had no effect at all. Whether or not those seven Gods left had no affect on him at all.

He, Ganmontin, wanted to get the hidden expert to leave!

If he could avoid battle, he would! After all, he had no way to discover who the opponent was. Ganmontin was even wondering..."Could this hidden expert be a Seven Star Fiend? Could it be that when resisting the forces of Knifeblade Island, he was hiding his true power?"

"Hmph. Who cares what you are. If you hide yourself like a coward, I imagine you can't be too strong."

Ganmontin wielded his green serpentine longsword, grinning. "I didn't expect the four of you are really chivalrous. You are actually willing to die for Olivier. Since that's the case, I'll oblige you." Ganmontin laughed as he looked at Bates. "Your power isn't bad. The first one I'll deal with is you."

Bates' face changed slightly.

"Linley, if you don't act, then I'm going to leave." Bates hurriedly sent with divine sense. "I'm not a match for that old fellow!"

"Ganmontin!"

entire body was covered with azure-golden draconic scales. Beneath the dazzling light of the Violet Sun, he was very eye-catching. Those two dark golden eyes stared at Ganmontin. It was the transformed Linley!

"Ganmontin, today, you'd best leave. I don't want to fight you." Linley said.

Linley wasn't completely certain of his ability to win this battle, but if he had to, he would use the Sovereign's Might. However, Linley was rather unwilling to.

"So it was you!" Ganmontin was shocked. He stared at Linley in surprise, and then began to laugh loudly. "I didn't expect that a core member of the Four Divine Beasts clan was hidden in your group. I am Ganmontin. Might I ask who you are?"

"Linley!" Linley said calmly and directly.

"Haha, Linley." Ganmontin laughed loudly as he spoke. "Today, I've come here not for myself, but for my Lord Commander."

"Commander?" Linley was stunned. He couldn't help but think back to what the juvenile amethyst beast he had met back in the Amethyst Mountains had said. "Back then, that juvenile amethyst beast had said that he was a commander in Purgatory!" A commander of Purgatory was a position which Linley had yet to fully understand.

But given the power of the juvenile amethyst beast, Linley could guess.

"As a member of the Four Divine Beasts clan, I imagine you wouldn't want to ruin the affairs of my Lord Commander." Ganmontin laughed calmly as he spoke. Ganmontin was very self-confident. Even the clan leader of the Four Divine Beasts clan most likely wouldn't offend his Lord Commander. Ganmontin laughed as he looked at Linley.

"Ganmontin, I'd like to ask you to leave." Linley said calmly.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 12, A Great Battle

"It's Linley!" From afar, the onlookers, including Aches and the other Gods, were all shocked. They hadn't expected that the hidden expert was Linley!

"It was actually him!" Wilburn stared at the distant, Dragonformed Linley.

For now, let us ignore the shock of Aches and the rest of the seven. Ganmontin, hearing Linley's words, couldn't help but feel a surge of rage. Glancing sideways at Linley, he began to laugh from rage. "Oh, Linley, what? You don't even care about my Commander at all? What audacity!"

'Dimon', the second leader of Knifeblade Island, could tell that the situation was turning bad. He immediately retreated. "I can't suffer the backlash from a battle between these two."

"It isn't audacity." Linley looked at Ganmontin. "Ganmontin, I definitely will not permit you to take Olivier away. Although I don't wish to fight you, if you truly insist on forcing him to leave, then I will be forced to."

"Hmph!"

Ganmontin felt yet another surge of rage. He had already given Linley a great deal of face by saying so much.

"Haha..." Ganmontin continued to laugh as his rage built up. "If that's the case, then I shall..." As he spoke, Ganmontin suddenly lifted up the green serpentine longsword in his hand and filled it with wind-style divine power. The entire sword began to tremble and emit a clear ringing sound of windchimes.

The sword-hymn reverberated within a hundred meters.

Beneath Linley's feet, rays of earth-type divine power radiated out as well, merging into the surface of the sea below. With the 'black stone' in his sea of consciousness as the core, 108 rays of earth-type divine power began to move in accordance with a pattern. The area within three hundred meters began to tremble as countless amounts of earth-type divine power coalesced.

Ganmontin, suffering this astonishing gravitational pull, found to his astonishment that his body was beginning to sink down.

At the same time, a large amount of earth elemental essence and divine power took shape. In the blink of an eye, an enormous Blackstone Prison appeared, floating on the surface of the water. Although Dimon had retreated into the distance early on, Ganmontin and Linley were both now already trapped within that Blackstone Prison.

Linley's ultimate attack, formed from three fused profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth and with the 'black stone' at the nucleus: Blackstone Prison!

"The scope is larger than last time." Dimon sucked in a cold breath. "It seems last time, this Linley really was hiding his true power." But how could he know that in reality, during this period of time, Linley just so happened to break through a bottleneck and completely perfect his fusion of those three profound mysteries?

Within the Blackstone Prison was utter darkness. The only light came from the faint earthen yellow glow coming off those pitch-black walls. As a Highgod expert, even though it was pitch-black, Ganmontin could still see clearly.

"What a terrifying gravity!" Ganmontin's face changed greatly. And then, Ganmontin gnashed his teeth, summoning the divine power in his body. With regards to flying speed, as an expert in the Elemental Laws of the Wind, Ganmontin was quite proficient. The better one's flying ability was, the better one was able to resist powerful gravity.

"Hmph!" Ganmontin's body finally, barely left the surface of the ground. He hovered into the air.

"Not bad. In my Blackstone Prison, you are actually barely able to fly." A sound of praise rang out. A figure, with a 'whoosh', appeared within Ganmontin's line of vision. It was the Dragonformed Linley. Linley had already been prepared for Ganmontin being able to just barely resist the gravity.

Ganmontin was an expert in flying, and his power was that of a Six Star Fiend or a Seven Star Fiend. Him being capable of this was in line with Linley's expectations.

Ganmontin immediately landed.

"I truly am in admiration of you, to reach such a level in your training of the Laws of the Earth." Ganmontin laughed as he spoke, but at the same time, his right fist suddenly struck out with the green serpentine longsword in his hand. His target – the floor of the Blackstone Prison beneath his feet!

Linley's face changed, and he launched himself forward, immediately charging towards Ganmontin, an adamantine heavy sword suddenly appearing in his hand.

"Slash!" An astonishing crack in space appeared, and the floor of the Blackstone Prison was cut open as well.

Ganmontin's body immediately sank down as he fled through the giant crack beneath him.

"I didn't imagine that he actually escaped." Linley willed the large Blackstone Prison to vanish.

"Rumble..." The waves of the Starmist Sea rolled on and roared.

Ganmontin hovered there in mid-air as him and Linley stared at each other.

"I need to modify and improve the Blackstone Prison." After that last experience, Linley now had an idea as to a flaw of the original Blackstone Prison. The Blackstone Prison had a circumference of roughly three hundred meters and had many corridors and rooms and what not. If Ganmontin were to chop open a wall next to him, even if he broke through, he would find yet another wall.

However, Ganmontin had directly struck down at the floor beneath his feet.

The Blackstone Prison was only so large. It was a single-story edifice. By chopping down into the ground, Ganmontin had managed to escape.

"In the future, not only must the scope of the Blackstone Prison be large, it also needs to have nine levels, with the opponent trapped in the fifth floor. That way, even if he breaks through the floor, he will still have four more levels to go!" Linley said to himself.

Olivier, Bebe, Delia, Bates, Dimon, and the distant onlookers all held their breaths as they watched. None of them knew if Ganmontin was stronger, or if Linley was stronger.

"How difficult to deal with!" Ganmontin's eyes narrowed.

With a 'whoosh' sound, within a thousand meters, over a thousand 'Ganmontins' appeared, each one of them having a smile on his face. "Haha, Linley, with so many Doppelgangers, can you possibly find my true body?" As he spoke, the thousand 'Ganmontins' began to fly through the air with a whooshing sound.

Linley didn't move at all.

His earth-style divine power, however, radiated out to three hundred meters, naturally including the nearby Delia, Bebe, and Olivier. The power of this gravitational pull didn't have much of a difference compared with the Blackstone Prison, only, it didn't have any prison 'walls' to block movement.

Gravitational Space!

Of the thousand plus 'Ganmontins', whenever some of them flew into the Gravitational Space, they would immediately begin to sink down, unable to resist the powerful pull of gravity.

"Ganmontin, just give up. There's no way you'll be able to take Olivier away!" Linley said clearly. "Your Doppelgangers aren't able to resist the power of my Gravitational Space. Only your true body is just barely able to do so."

Indeed...

Those Doppelgangers all sank into the sea, with only the true Ganmontin just barely able to stay aloft.

"Linley, I have never seen a gravitational pull so powerful as yours in this Gravitational Space." Ganmontin said, and then he immediately flew backwards, outside of the range of Linley's Gravitational Space. Linley didn't try to block him either, instead just watching.

Linley actually hoped that this Ganmontin would leave.

"Whoosh!" Ganmontin suddenly flew into the sky, into the thin fog above the sea. Immediately, lightning began to strike towards Ganmontin.

"Eh?" Linley frowned. "Why did he fly into the fog?"

Bebe raised his head as well. "Does this Ganmontin have some mental problems? He wants to let the lightning strike him?" The power of the lightning within the 'fog' of the Starmist Sea increased as one flew higher. Ganmontin had already flown to a height which was roughly his maximum.

That sort of lightning was only capable of inflicting some mild wounds.

"Swoosh!" Ganmontin flew in a straight line.

It must be understood that the farther one was from the gravitational pull area, the weaker the gravity would be. Ganmontin had flown so high that the Gravitational Space set up at the surface of the sea, at the height he was in, didn't pose much of an effect at all.

Ganmontin flew directly towards the air above Linley's head.

And then...he dropped down in a straight line!

Gravity pulled downwards, and so Ganmontin's downwards speed reached a new height!

"You want to play like this?" Linley laughed calmly.

In the area around them, the constantly fluctuating rays of divine power suddenly returned to Linley's body, swirling around it. At the same time, with Linley at the center, a roughly hundred-meter, enormous sphere took shape, forming a unique, sphere-shaped repulsive force region.

Ganmontin had been full of confidence, but as soon as he entered the repulsive sphere...

"Huh?" Ganmontin immediately sensed a surge of powerful repulsive force impacting his entire body. He had been dropping at high speed, but now, his speed virtually slowed down to nothing. Sensing this sort of repulsive strength, Ganmontin was so shocked the look on his face changed. "How could a Gravitational Space be like this?"

Ganmontin had never heard of a Gravitational Space actually possessing repulsive power!

Although shocked, Ganmontin still frantically resisted that repulsive power and forced himself to descend, while at the same time brandishing out the green serpentine longsword in his hand. The longsword was covered by a layer of indistinct green illusions and also rang out with that sound of wind chimes. The sword shadow which seemed slow but was actually fast slashed through the sky, and wherever it passed, space itself split apart. A ray of flashing green light from his illusory sword instantly pierced through the heavens and appeared in front of Linley's eyes.

Blood Drop Sword!

Ganmontin's face was savage as he unleashed his most powerful sword attack.

His body was suffering the effects of the repulsive force, but his sword energy attack wasn't impacted much.

"So fast." Linley hurriedly worked hard to dodge.

But one's body movement speed was indeed inferior to the speed of that sword light. "Clang!" The sword light viciously struck Linley's draconic scale-clad left shoulder. With a clear ringing sound, Linley's draconic scales on his left shoulder actually shattered, with three scales breaking open and hints of blood oozing out.

"What?" Ganmontin stared, slack-jawed.

His most powerful material attack had actually only caused the opponent to bleed slightly.

Linley glanced at his arm, his gaze turning cold. He immediately wielded the adamantine heavy sword, moving towards Ganmontin at high speed like a bolt of lightning.

Ganmontin, astonished and frightened by that scene, immediately flew back and retreated. Given the repulsive force, his fleeing speed was quite fast!

"Gravitational force!" Linley willed it, and immediately, that hundred meter sphere shaped space's repulsive force suddenly transformed into attractive force. In addition, the range changed from a hundred meters to two hundred meters. Ganmontin was trapped within this indistinct sphere shaped region.

The powerful gravity drew Ganmontin closer and closer to Linley.

“What level of combatant is this Linley? My most powerful attack actually only broke a few draconic scales!” Ganmontin frantically tried to throw off the power of the gravity and escape, but the gravity was too strong...although he was able to just barely resist it, his flying speed was slow.

More importantly...

Linley's speed was unaffected, and he immediately caught up!

“Die.” Linley's adamantine heavy sword in his hand clapped down in a light, breezy manner, while at the same time, an illusory, earthen yellow sword shadow flew out from the adamantine heavy sword, striking directly into Ganmontin's body.

Laws of the Earth – Voidwave Sword!

Ganmontin was shocked, but under this astonishing gravity, his speed was too slow. “How can this gravity be so monstrously strong? Even Asuras shouldn't be capable of this. Can it be that he is a hidden Asura-level combatant?” Everyone had their own specialty, and there were some people who specialized in gravity.

But gravity so powerful that Ganmontin, a Six Star Fiend, was only barely able to resist it was truly too extravagant.

"Haaargh!" Ganmontin launched a backhand sword blow, and that indistinct faint green sword shadow shot out as well.

The light green sword shadow and the light earthen yellow sword shadow collided!

After a momentary stalemate, the light yellow sword shadow collapsed, and the remaining amount of the light green sword shadow immediately charged towards Linley. Linley was too close to Ganmontin, and wasn't able to dodge at all. The light green sword shadow immediately shot into Linley's body.

"Huh?" Linley's body shuddered slightly.

"Haha...his soul attack is actually weaker than mine!" Ganmontin was overjoyed.

Linley's Gravitational Space and his terrifying defense had scared Ganmontin out of his wits. Unexpectedly, his attack which he had only wanted to use to block Linley's had actually easily broken through Linley's soul attack.

"Haha, go die." Ganmontin actually release two more sword blows downwards. Generally speaking, if a person's soul attack was strong, his soul defense would also be strong. Seeing how weak Linley's soul attack was, he knew that Linley's soul defense couldn't be too powerful either. Although Ganmontin's accomplishments in soul attacks was inferior to that of his accomplishments in physical attacks...

His soul attacks still outstripped Linley's!

The two light green sword shadows shot towards Linley at high speed. Linley didn't have time to dodge at all.

And Linley didn't dodge. "Haha..." Linley laughed loudly, flying at high speed towards Ganmontin, ignoring those two light green sword shadows which flew into his body. He immediately rushed straight in front of Ganmontin. "Bang!" He viciously lashed Ganmontin with a kick to his chest.

"Crunch!" Ganmontin was knocked flying, and he spewed out a mouthful of blood.

But after flying not too far away, due to the great power of the gravitational sphere, he was once more drawn closer to Linley. Ganmontin's face changed greatly. "This Linley, he suffered two hits of my soul attack, but he didn't feel anything?" Ganmontin wasn't too specialized in soul attacks, and he also was being drawn closer once more due to the gravitational sphere.

"Here comes another one." Linley immediately drew closer to Ganmontin once more.

"Aaaah!" Ganmontin howled loudly, and suddenly, over a thousand Ganmontins appeared around him.

"EXPLODE!" Ganmontin howled furiously.

"BOOOOOOM!" The thousand 'Ganmontins' all blew apart!

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 13, Unbindable

Within the vast, boundless Starmist Sea, within that gravitational sphere that extended two hundred meters around Linley in every direction, Ganmontin's thousand or so doppelgangers all blew apart. "Bangbangbang..." It was as though the world itself was about to collapse, as wild energy waves lashed out in every direction!

Ganmontin was very nearly at the Seven Star Fiend level of power. With such an enormous number of doppelgangers simultaneously exploding within this globe, ordinary Gods at least would definitely not be able to withstand it.

"Not good." Olivier's face changed.

That Bates immediately emanated a black energy aura, instantly covering Olivier, Bebe, and Delia behind it.

"Bang!" The powerful explosion came crashing over, causing the black aura over their bodies to flicker and shake.

"Bates, I'm fine." Bebe said disdainfully.

At the same time, Bebe and the others stared at the center of the explosion, where Linley's blurry figure could be seen. Linley was currently turning to stare at them, clearly worried about the shockwaves from the explosions striking them.

"This is the moment!" Ganmontin's original body immediately seized the opportunity, frantically resisting the gravitational pull and striving to fly away at high speed. He wanted to flee out from the Gravitational Space, and after flying outside of it, given his speed, he would easily be able to throw off Linley.

"Quick, quick!" Ganmontin frantically increased his speed, while that gravity clutched at him like countless ropes that were tightly entangling him.

"Who the hell is this Linley? His gravity control is actually at such a level, and the scaled armor on his body is so powerful." Ganmontin was furious. Linley's Gravitational Space and powerful body defense just so happened to perfectly counter him.

But although he was furious, Ganmontin still seized the moment when Linley was distracted to flee.

"Boss, we're fine, but don't let that Ganmontin escape!" Bebe hurriedly used his divine sense to speak to Linley frantically.

"Right, Ganmontin! I can't let him escape!" Linley was startled awake. He immediately turned to look at Ganmontin, who currently had already reached the borders of the Gravitational Space. Before Linley had a chance to react, Ganmontin leapt out from the borders of that gravitational sphere.

As soon as he left that Gravitational Space, he was like a bird who had been given the skies.

Ganmontin was incomparably excited and rejoiced. "Haha, I finally escaped!"

Linley stared at Ganmontin. His lips cracked into a smile, while at the same time, he gently chanted, "Grow!"

The two hundred meter sphere of Gravitational Space suddenly expanded once more, increasing to a sphere of gravity that was four hundred meters!

It must be understood that previously, when creating his Blackstone Prison, Linley was already capable of easily reaching three hundred meters. The two hundred meter diameter was far from being Linley's limit.

"I finally escaped that damn place. That Linley is actually such a monster. I'd best go back for now." Just as Ganmontin was rejoicing, very suddenly...that terrifying gravitational force once more covered his entire body, with those invisible forces once more entangling him tightly.

Sensing this force, Ganmontin's face instantly turned white, without a hint of blood.

"What?" Ganmontin was stupefied.

He was very fast, but under that gravitational pull, he wasn't even at a tenth of his normal speed. How could he possibly escape Linley's pursuit? Last time, he had used the exploding doppelgangers to distract Linley, but this time, Linley wouldn't be distracted again.

“Can it be that I am going to die today?” Ganmontin turned to look, but all he saw was Linley’s dark golden eyes. Those two dark golden eyes were currently drawing nearer to him. Within the Gravitational Space, Linley’s speed was far greater than his!

Although this took time to describe, in reality, less than a second had passed since Linley had expanded his Gravitational Space.

“You won’t be able to flee!” Linley’s voice rang out in Ganmontin’s mind, echoing.

“Whoosh!” Linley’s right fist struck out like an aquatic dragon leaving the seas, seeming to carry a force that was mighty enough to shatter the earth itself. It howled as it tore through the air, and wherever his fist passed, even the space of the Infernal Realm itself began to shudder, creating spatial cracks.

Linley’s powerful muscles and body had bestowed upon him incomparably vast strength. If he were to use a long-distance attack based on the Laws, this massive physical strength wouldn’t be able to be used, but once he entered close combat, Linley’s mighty body, having been transformed by the ‘golden drop of blood’ and ‘Sovereign’s Might’, was capable of releasing astonishing might.

This was his most powerful punch, one which fused the ‘Essence of the Earth’ and the ‘Throbbing Pulse of the World’ and connected it with his mighty physical strength!

Ganmontin felt his vision blur as a draconic scale-covered fist suddenly swung at him. Ganmontin immediately launched a backhand blow with his sword. The sword seemed to move slowly but was actually extremely fast. Before the fist arrived, the green serpentine sword was already there to block.

“Bang!”

Linley's fist collided viciously against the serpentine divine artifact sword.

“Rumble...” The serpentine sword actually was smashed so hard that it bent. That fist, carrying boundless force, was knocked slightly off-target by Ganmontin's sword, but it still smashed hard against Ganmontin's shoulder. With a ‘crunch!’ sound, Ganmontin's shoulder-blade shattered and he was knocked flying backwards by the blow.

“What terrifying brute strength!” Ganmontin's face changed dramatically. “If he were to land a blow on my head, I would die without question. It was that close!”

Even a divine artifact sword had been bent. This force was simply monstrously powerful. However, after having been lucky enough to dodge that, Ganmontin let out a sigh of relief, but then his face changed greatly, because a flashing, azure-golden streak of light was already moving towards him like a blurred whip.

No, it wasn't a blurred whip!

It was Linley's draconic tail, which had reached an extreme level of speed!

As it turned out, when Linley had smashed out with his right fist, he had also sent his steel-like draconic tail slashing through the air towards Ganmontin's head.

Ganmontin was so terrified that the look on his face completely changed. The longsword in his hand slashed out in a blur, while at the same time, a pleasant flute sound rang out. This strange flute sound caused Linley to unconsciously pause. "Crackle..." Where the sword shadow passed by, space split apart.

"Clang!" The serpentine longsword smashed hard against the draconic tail, and sparks flew everywhere. Three draconic scales on the serpentine tail were shattered, while the strike of the draconic tail couldn't help but miss its mark.

Alas, the power of this blow from the draconic tail was simply too great. Even though it was slightly off-target, it was only just a bit lower.

"WHAP!" The draconic tail smashed viciously against Ganmontin's chest like a chopping blade, and as it passed through his neck, it actually separated Ganmontin's head from the rest of his body. Ganmontin's head immediately flew away, his eyes filled with astonishment.

With a return whipping blow from that azure-golden draconic tail, yet another strike was landed on the headless body.

"Bang!" The headless body immediately blew apart.

"You won't be able to flee!" Linley chased after Ganmontin's head.

With Linley at the center, a terrifying gravitational force pulled out. Every living creature within that gravitational sphere was drawn towards Linley. Ganmontin's head was affected by the gravity as well. "Crackle..." Starting from Ganmontin's head, a neck, shoulder, and chest were quickly growing out...

The power of a head by itself to fight back was simply too weak!

Naturally, he wouldn't be able to resist the gravity, and thus he drew near Linley.

"You won't have enough time!" Linley's right leg just gently kicked out, carrying a massive force capable of shattering a mountain range as it chopped down towards the head like a chopping knife. Linley's right leg seemed to carry a hint of a blade shadow as it gently slashed past the only half-grown upper body.

"No!" A furious, unwilling scream.

"You cannot kill me. If you kill me, the Lord Commander will definitely kill you!" As Linley's leg-blade chopped down towards Ganmontin's head, Ganmontin sent his final divine sense message.

Unfortunately, Linley didn't hesitate at all.

"Slash!" The head was chopped down by Linley's leg, and it blew apart from the blow.

Ganmontin was dead!

With a flip of his hand, Linley retrieved that green divine artifact longsword and interspatial ring, taking them into his hand. At this time, Delia, Bebe, and the others excitedly flew over as well. Linley naturally caused everyone to be overjoyed by his being able to kill Ganmontin.

"Haha, Boss, that Ganmontin was so boastful, but in the end, he still died." Bebe laughed loudly. "Boss, let me take a look and see how much wealth his interspatial ring had within."

"You are still thinking about such things?" Linley smirked as he laughed.

The amount of wealth Bebe had was comparable to the total wealth of some of the ancient clans of the Infernal Realm. This Ganmontin, although powerful, wasn't a Seven Star Fiend. Most likely, he only had a few trillion. Compared to Bebe's fortune, it was like a hair on the body of nine oxen.

"I like counting money." Bebe felt itchy in his heart.

"Linley, just give the interspatial ring to Bebe." The nearby Delia laughed. "If you don't give it to him, he won't give up." Linley laughed, then tossed the interspatial ring to Bebe.

Bebe chortled, then immediately began to investigate the contents of the interspatial ring.

The big-bearded Bates just looked at Linley. He knew that Linley was powerful, but even Ganmontin had died in such a manner. This caused him to be surprised. He couldn't help but sigh, "Mr. Linley, even Ganmontin was in such dire straits in front of you. This truly is admirable."

Linley just shook his head and laughed, looking at the green serpentine longsword. In his heart, he said to himself, "Ganmontin really was unlucky to have encountered me."

It wasn't that Ganmontin wasn't strong enough, nor was it that Linley was too strong.

It was...

Linley was a perfect counter to Ganmontin!

Ganmontin specialized in speed and in material attacks.

In terms of speed, Linley's unique Gravitational Space would cause any expert, no matter how fast, to feel as though he were moving through mud once trapped within. Any expert's speed would be much slower.

As for material attacks, to his misfortune, Linley's powerful body was so strong, only an exceedingly few number of races of the Infernal Realm could compare to him. Ganmontin's most powerful sword attack was only able to break apart two or three draconic scales, unable to influence Linley at all.

"If I were to encounter a Six Star Fiend who specializes in soul attacks, I would be in bad shape." Linley said to himself.

Ultimate experts who were skilled in soul attacks were generally capable of reaching the level of making their soul attacks 'conscious'. For example, the Volcano Titan, Phusro! Even the 'Godslayer Arrows' for sale in the Redbud Castle contained a mind of its own.

These were all from experts who were quite skilled in matters of the soul.

Linley was worried most about this type of expert. Those who specialized in material attacks, however, were perfectly countered by Linley.

"Ah, Boss? There's no way to bind this interspatial ring by blood."

"Eh?" Linley turned and saw that Bebe was looking sourly at the interspatial ring in his hand. The nearby Delia was frowning as well. "This interspatial ring has an owner. Can it be...that Ganmontin has another surviving divine clone?"

In the Infernal Realm, some experts would separate their divine clones into different areas.

But of course, this was only the minority. After all, there were strong divine clones and weak ones. Weak divine clones had to be put in a safe location. But where in the Infernal Realm was truly safe? The weak didn't have the money to buy dwellings within cities, while those experts who roamed all over the place didn't want to let their clones be separated.

In the depths of the sea, within that nameless gorge and the estate within. Ganmontin, dressed in a deep green robe, was shaking, his green glowing eyes staring in front of himself.

"My divine wind clone, destroyed!" Ganmontin ground his teeth, his entire body trembling. "Linley, of the Four Divine Beasts clan? I don't give a damn who you are. I, Ganmontin, will definitely, definitely make you regret it!" Ganmontin now only had his divine water cloner remaining.

In terms of power, Ganmontin's strongest clone was his divine wind clone.

Even his divine wind clone had proved incapable of killing Linley; how, then, would he kill him?

"My only choice is to go beg the Lord Commander!" Ganmontin's eyes flashed with the light of hatred, then he transformed into a ray of green light and immediately flew out of the hall.

In the waters above the Starmist Sea, Linley's group was staring at that green serpentine longsword and that interspatial ring. Bebe muttered, "That fellow actually hid a divine clone. In the past, very few of the many Gods that I've met have done such a thing! So troublesome. We can't even bind his interspatial ring."

"If we can't bind it with blood, then we should destroy it." Linley laughed calmly. "If we leave it untouched, Ganmontin would know where we are located."

Right at this moment...

"Linley, those seven are coming." Delia said.

Linley turned to look. Indeed, Aches, Tam, Boff, and the rest of the seven Gods were flying over. Aches, in particular, had an apologetic smile on his face. The seven of them had watched this battle just now. Only now did they realize that the 'hidden expert' was Linley.

"They actually have face to come back? Hmph." Bebe let out a low snort.

"Lord Linley." The first to fly over was Aches, and he immediately called out in a very friendly voice.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 14, Drifting For Twenty Years

“Oho, so it’s you guys? What are you doing here? I thought the seven of you left already! How come you came back?” Bebe intentionally cocked his head to one side, a mystified look on his face. Immediately, Aches and the other seven felt rather embarrassed.

Although in that sort of situation, it was understandable that they had to consider their own safety, if they had truly just left, that was one thing.

But now that they had come back? It was rather awkward.

In the Starmist Sea, however, where bandits abounded everywhere, given their strength as Gods, how could they safely reach the Bloodridge Continent? Only by relying on the protection of Linley and Bates would they be able to reach their destination. Although relying on Linley’s group to help out was rather awkward, given the other choice was losing their lives, they had to do it.

Aches chuckled, then hurriedly said, “Bebe, we...”

“Oh, I know.” Bebe suddenly had a look of insight appearing on his face. “Aches, originally, you were borrowing Bates’ metallic lifeform. Now that Bates’ metallic lifeform was destroyed by that Ganmontin, you have now come back to compensate him for the metallic lifeform, right?”

“Metallic lifeform?” Aches was flabbergasted.

Bates' eyes lit up. Only now did he remember his metallic lifeform, and he immediately laughed. "Right. I agreed to your request to use my metallic lifeform and allow everyone to ride it. Now, it's destroyed. Aches, you have to compensate me! My metallic lifeform was a high level one, worth eighteen million inkstones!"

"Eighteen million?" Aches stared.

"What, are you not going to pay up?" The face of the big-bearded Bates immediately hardened, as though he were about to attack Aches.

Aches hurriedly said, "Lord Bates, don't worry, I'll compensate you, I'll definitely compensate you, alright?"

"That's more like it." The big-bearded Bates laughed delightedly. His metallic lifeform was actually only worth around eight million inkstones. Now that it had been destroyed, he actually made a profit of ten million inkstones.

Aches felt resignation in his heart. Who the hell had he pissed off, for all these disasters to happen on this trip through the Starmist Sea?

"If this happens a few more times, this entire business trip will all but have been for nothing." Aches sighed helplessly. Actually, the value of the products which Aches had brought was quite high. If he could bring it to the Bloodridge Continent, he would indeed make quite a bit of money.

Unfortunately, the price of metallic lifeforms was high as well.

"Will you be coming with us?" A voice rang out.

Aches and the other seven Deities turned to look. The speaker was Linley. The big-bearded Bates glanced at him, then began to chortle. "Aches, if you want to travel alongside us, you need to first see if Linley agrees or not. I'm not the decision maker here. It's up to Linley."

Aches and the rest of the seven all knew that the most powerful person in this group was Linley!

"Lord Linley, we..." Aches hurriedly laughed.

"If you want to travel along with us, it's fine." Linley laughed calmly as he spoke. When these words came out, Aches and the others all let out sighs of relief. Linley, seeing the situation, couldn't help but laugh. "However, I have to warn you that although I killed Ganmontin, he still has another divine clone left. More importantly...there is a terrifying figure behind him, and that ultimate expert will most likely come looking for me."

"Ultimate expert?" Aches and the rest of the seven couldn't help but look at each other.

The nearby Bebe, wanting to frighten them, added, "That Ganmontin was nothing more than a subordinate of that expert. If you just think about it, you can probably come to the conclusion...that the expert should be on the same level as an Asura!"

"Asura!" Aches, Tam, Wilburn, and the others felt their hearts shake. To a God, the Asuras were invincible figures that were far above them.

The green-haired man, 'Tam', hurriedly said awkwardly, "Lord Linley is so powerful that he should be able to deal with that expert, right?" Aches and the others immediately looked at Linley.

"I don't have any confidence at all of being able to do so." Linley refuted. "Everyone, make your decisions!"

Aches and the other seven looked at each other.

"We'll still follow you, Lord Linley." The seven, in the end, made their decision. If the seven were to roam the Starmist Sea by relying on their own power, there was no way they would be able to safely arrive at the Bloodridge Continent. By following Linley, they would be much safer.

Linley, hearing this, couldn't help but laugh.

"If I can protect you, I will. If I'm not able to, then you'll have to rely on yourselves." Linley laughed calmly. "Alright, let's head out!" Linley waved his hand, and a metallic lifeform appeared on the surface of the Starmist Sea.

Linley knew very well that Aches no longer had any metallic lifeforms.

Since they knew that behind Ganmontin there was this Lord Commander, Linley's group naturally devised a method to make it so that they wouldn't be found. First, Linley destroyed the interspatial ring and even that divine artifact, then took a roundabout route as they advanced towards the Bloodridge Continent.

The Starmist Sea was vast and boundless. Even the most powerful of experts would find it very hard to find someone within the Starmist Sea.

At first, Linley's group had been quite worried, but after advancing for over a year without encountering any danger, everyone relaxed.

The endless Starmist Sea. During their quiet voyage, twenty years quickly passed after their encounter with Ganmontin.

"Rumble..." The waves of the sea rolled on.

The metallic lifeform broke through the waves, with Linley seated outside at the head of the ship, staring at the waves.

"Twenty years!" Linley gripped the wine bottle, casually taking two gulps. "In the Infernal Realm, time really does go by fast. Just traversing the Starmist Sea alone takes decades. By now, we haven't even covered half the distance."

During the past twenty years, at first, Linley was worried about encountering that Lord Commander.

But as time went on, Linley relaxed. After travelling for twenty years, most likely it would be extremely difficult for that Commander to locate them. After all, even Paragon-level Highgods wouldn't have a significantly greater divine sense than normal Highgods.

How then could they find Linley?

"Boss." Bebe suddenly scurried out from the cabin of the ship, his face filled with excitement. "Boss, in the cabin, they were discussing an extremely famous island that we are about to reach. It seems it is called Miluo Island!" During this journey, Linley's group had halted at a few cities before as well.

The vast Starmist Sea had many islands within it, and they were divided amongst ten prefectures as well. Every single prefecture had ten cities, which were all built upon the various islands.

The islands of the Starmist Sea generally had a circumference of ten thousand kilometers, with the larger ones perhaps even a million kilometers, far larger than Linley's homeland of the 'Yulan continent'. This was more than enough land to build a city.

"Miluo Island?" Linley couldn't help but be surprised.

"They say that Miluo Island is very developed and flourishing with trade. There's even some sort of 'Arena' on Miluo Island as well, I hear." Bebe was rather confused about this as well.

Linley, however, remembered that in that book which described the geography of the Infernal Realm, there was a rather weighty description of the 'Miluo Island'.

The Miluo Island was a large island that was hundreds of kilometers in circumference, and was within the 'Silverblue Prefecture' of the Starmist Sea.

Miluo Island was an extremely bustling place with a very large amount of people passing through it. Each day, many merchants and warriors would gather there. Its degree of activity wasn't one whit lower than the ten major cities of the Silverblue Prefecture.

This was a very puzzling thing, actually. An island that was comparable to the ten cities of Silverblue Prefecture?

"Hey, Linley, what are you chatting about?" The big-bearded Bates walked to the front of the ship as well.

"Just chatting about Miluo Island." Linley laughed calmly.

"Miluo Island?" The big-bearded 'Bates' sighed. "This is a very special place. It isn't under the protection of the Starmist Army, nor does it have the protection of any prefectural soldiers, but it is as bustling as any of the large cities. Within the island, there is an independent castle which allows merchants to engage in trade."

The Starmist Army was comparable to the 'Redbud Army'; it was the army of the Starmist Sea.

"Miluo Island has an extremely powerful army within it which protects the rules of Miluo Island." Bates sighed in praise. "The soldiers of this army are all Highgods and are very outstanding. After all these years, Miluo Island has never decayed!"

Linley couldn't help but feel puzzled.

Each prefecture only had ten cities. But this Miluo Island was actually able to entice so many merchants to enter it, and was able to be maintained for so many years. This was indeed quite astonishing.

"Miluo Island has two famous places within it. One is the 'Free Castle', while the other is the 'Arena'. Within the Free Castle, no battles are permitted whatsoever. If any fighting is discovered, the soldiers of the Miluo Island will definitely show no mercy at all! Within the Arena, the onlookers aren't permitted to battle each other. Anyone who violates this will also be surrounded and killed by the army!"

Bates' eyes were filled with amazement and excitement. "Miluo Island is too powerful. Up till now, no one has dared to challenge it."

"So many merchants trade there? Can it be that no one dares to steal there?" Bebe snorted. "I refuse to believe it. Ordinary people don't dare rob the merchants, but can it be that the prefectural soldiers will also be afraid to? For example, the Starmist Army?" The Starmist Army was the army of the Sovereigns.

Could it be that it wouldn't come to deal with Miluo Island?

"I'm not sure about that." Bates shook his head.

"Miluo Island has already existed for countless hundreds of millions of years. There definitely has to be a special reason for all this." Linley had a general idea of some information regarding Miluo Island. However, it was still just a general idea. From this, though, Linley was able to postulate... that someone capable of forming an army composed of Highgods, as well as create a trading location outside of the city, had to be an utterly, monstrously powerful figure.

"Behind Miluo Island there is definitely an astonishingly powerful force." Linley said to himself.

"Hey, just now, I heard you say that in three days, we'll be at Miluo Island?" Bebe suddenly asked.

The big-bearded Bates nodded and laughed, "Right. Three more days. Miluo Island is extremely interesting and fascinating, especially the Arena, and especially the Highgod Arena. The battles there even include some extremely powerful experts. It is so incredible!"

Linley couldn't help but feel a hint of anticipation in his heart as well.

Miluo Island. An independent island within the Starmist Sea. It had no prefectural soldiers of the Starmist Army, and yet it was one of the most bustling places here.

Three days later.

"There's so much activity!" Seeing the enormous island from afar, Linley's group was shocked. Upon seeing Miluo Island's island entrance, they actually saw countless, densely clustered metallic lifeforms heading in that direction.

"At every moment in time, there are a large number of metallic lifeforms arriving." Linley couldn't help but sigh in amazement. "Each day, how many people must be arriving here at Miluo Island? It really is hard to fathom. The amount of activity here at Miluo Island really is no lower than any other island."

On this trip, Linley had seen quite a few cities.

Their degree of activity was roughly the same as this Miluo Island.

"Boss, let's go. Let's go take a look at this Miluo Island!" Once the metallic lifeform drew near and halted at the entrance location, Bebe immediately and excitedly was the first to charge out.

There was no need to pay an entrance fee to enter Miluo Island. Linley's group thus stepped down and entered this legendary Miluo Island.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 15, Miluo Island

Miluo Island was a verdant island. Ancient trees could be seen everywhere, and the fresh air uplifted the spirits of Linley and the others. From afar, they could see the varied buildings, some sumptuous restaurants, and other edifices. The people on the streets were in an endless stream as well.

At present, some members of bizarre races walked past Linley's group. Some were sharp-eared elfin creatures with faintly green skin, while others were enormous whale-warriors whose faces had a rather scaly look. Although upon becoming a Deity, one could transform into a human, some bizarre races had different aesthetic standards compared to humans. Even in human form, they would maintain some of the things they felt proudest about. For example, the tail of a fox-man, or the fish-scales of an oceanic creature.

Linley's group was no longer puzzled by these things. Turning, he laughed as he looked at the nearby Delia and the others. "We've been on the sea for quite a while. Let's first go to a restaurant, and then to the Arena and the Free Castle later." Linley had been curious long ago regarding the legendary 'Arena'. In this place, he would be able to see some of the techniques of real experts. How could he give up a chance like this?

"We'll do as you say, Lord Linley." Aches chuckled as he spoke.

Linley, hearing these words, understood that ever since his battle with Ganmontin, he had already become the acknowledged leader of this squad. This was how things worked in the Infernal Realm. Experts were revered.

"Hey, Boss, look. That squad dressed in blood red armor. All of them are Highgods." Bebe immediately pointed into the distance.

Linley and the others immediately turned to look. Indeed, on the streaming, crowded streets, there were three men dressed in blood red armor, which had some unique patterns atop them. Linley wasn't able to tell what sort of hidden meaning the patterns represented. As the three warriors walked atop the streets, everyone else on the streets intentionally maintained their distance, clearly not daring to offend them.

The big-bearded Bates said hurriedly, "Linley, that's the private army for protecting Miluo Island. No matter what, don't offend them. All of them are Highgods, and they are extremely many in number. Over these countless years, nobody has ever dared to cause trouble at Miluo Island."

"Understood." Linley laughed calmly.

This private army of an island was actually vastly more elite than the Starmist Army or the prefectural armies. In addition, Miluo Island had been bustling for countless years now. Linley couldn't help but feel astonished by the person behind Miluo Island.

"Hey?" The nearby Delia frowned, her eyebrows knitting. "Bates, I remembered that you said before that Miluo Island is divided into the west island and east island regions. In the east island, it seems only the 'Arena' and the 'Free Castle' are restricted. In the other areas, it is fine if battle occurs, so there shouldn't be any members of the island patrol, right?"

Linley's group, prior to coming to Miluo Island, had been warned about the rules of Miluo Island by Bates, who was familiar with them. Only the 'Arena' and the 'Free Castle' of Miluo Island were safe grounds.

"Those aren't patrols. Most likely, those three warriors are on break." The big-bearded Bates laughed as he spoke. "Also, when Miluo Island warriors are on patrol, each squad has ten people, not three!"

While walking and chatting, Linley's group headed deeper into Miluo Island. Miluo Island was simply too vast, with a circumference of hundreds of thousands of kilometers, which was multiple times larger than Linley's homeland of the Yulan continent. Fortunately, Linley's group was capable of moving at a speed that far exceeded mortals, and so to them, this sort of scope wasn't that much.

"This restaurant isn't bad. I ate here last time." The big-bearded Bates pointed at an ancient, classy-looking building in front of them.

"Alright. I'll trust your judgment." Bebe chortled and was the first to rush into the restaurant. Linley's group naturally began to laugh while following him. However, as they walked into the restaurant, Linley was stunned.

By the side of the door, there was an explanation notice:

For those who eat in my restaurant, if they engage in battle, they must pay a fee of ten thousand inkstones. If a chair is broken, a hundred inkstones must be paid. If a table is broken...

“What...what’s this all about?” Linley had never seen this outside of a restaurant before. Olivier, curious, also read through the rules. “How greedy. The chairs and tables are probably worth not even a single inkstone, but they actually want to charge so much. Also, any overturned food needs to be paid at ten times the price?”

Aches laughed. “This is a unique aspect of Miluo Island. After all, in normal cities, battles are strictly forbidden. But in Miluo Island...aside from those two areas, the other areas all permit battle and killing. Or, at least, the patrol soldiers of Miluo Island won’t interfere. But these many restaurants and hotels and other service areas, which have formed into a huge alliance, will interfere.”

The restaurants, hotels, and other service locations had formed an alliance? Linley was somewhat astonished.

“They won’t go too hard on you, but if a battle occurs, then you absolutely must pay enough money. If you don’t pay up, they’ll attack.” Aches sighed in praise. “If I were a store owner, I’d hope for people to engage in battle, and then I would be able to collect money afterwards.”

Special places had special rules.

“How intriguing.” Linley let out a few words of praise, and then headed into the restaurant. The restaurant was very large, and there were quite a few customers present. Linley’s group headed up to the second floor, dividing into two tables. Linley’s table was one seated near a window. Naturally, the fees were covered by Aches.

"The silverfish slices are so tender. They melt as soon as they enter the mouth." Bebe sighed in amazement, hurriedly using his spoon to scoop up yet another piece of fish, delivering it to his mouth while calling out loudly, "Delicious, delicious."

"This Bebe..." Linley and Delia were enjoying this rare chance to eat delicacies as well.

"Did you misspeak? How is that possible!"

"Of course I didn't misspeak! This is absolutely correct. On the sea here from Bluemaple City of the Redbud Continent, every single large-scale bandit force was completely destroyed. Those bandit forces were completely dispersed!"

Hearing this, Linley was shocked. All of the powerful bandit forces from Bluemaple City to here had been destroyed? Who could be so powerful? Linley turned to look, and saw two men drinking wine and chatting amongst themselves. One of them, a man with long golden hair, was speaking with assurance and composure.

"You might laugh at me for saying this, but a good friend of mine became a bandit. He personally witnessed a black-haired man wipe out his Orchid Coral Island. The eleven Highgods on the island, the leader included, all died. That black-haired man only used a single blade attack! My friend and the other ordinary bandits immediately fled in every direction. Most likely, that expert couldn't be bothered to chase down and kill ordinary Gods."

The discussion between these two was overheard by quite a few people nearby, and these people all began to discuss the matter amongst themselves as well. Clearly, the news of many powerful bandit forces being destroyed was no longer a secret.

“This is true. Roughly a month ago, it seems as though one of the Highgods of Blueshark Island’s bandit forces escaped. All the others died.”

Linley’s group, hearing these conversations, couldn’t help but sigh in amazement.

“Destroyed so many bandit forces, all by himself?” Bebe sighed, somewhat surprised. Olivier frowned. “Black-haired man? Everyone, do you still remember that man who resisted those thunderbolts back then that we ran into?”

Linley’s mind immediately drifted back to the scene of the Fogsea Storm, and how that man who carried a warblade on his back resisted the lightning bolts. That man had a head of black hair.

“If it was him, he probably really did have the power to destroy all those powerful bandits.” Linley said to himself. At the same time, Linley also thought of how when they had encountered a small group of ordinary bandits, that black-haired man had immediately attacked and killed them.

Clearly, the black-haired man held a deep hatred for bandits.

Linley’s group chatted while eating.

"Linley, these dishes are excellent. Have a taste." Delia said. Linley couldn't help but to turn and smile at her. But right at this moment..."Bang!" A wild, explosive collision sound rang out on the second floor of the restaurant.

Immediately, the other customers on the second floor were startled. Linley turned to look, and noticed that two people were fighting each other, moving as fast as lightning. "Clang!" Divine artifacts clashed, and then only blurred legs which gave off a fiery glow could be seen, smashing viciously into the chest of the other black-robed man, who was immediately sent flying.

"Swoosh!" The black-robed man was kicked so viciously that he flew as fast as lightning towards the direction Linley's group was in. The man was about to crash into and ruin Linley's table of dishes.

Linley couldn't help but frown, and divine earth power began to gather on his body.

"He actually really is trying to kill me." The black-robed man who was kicked flying was actually overjoyed in his heart. He was planning to seize the opportunity to flee and fly out from the window near Linley's group, but as he came falling down towards Linley's group...

A strange repulsive force activated upon the black-robed man's body. The repulsive force was simply too strong. The black-robed man, suffering this invisible repulsive force, was actually sent flying back the opposite way, accelerating at high speed towards the fiery red figure.

"Slash!"

A fiery red blade shadow chopped down, and actually easily sliced through the black-robed man's head. The black-robed man stared disbelievingly, and then his head blew apart. The impact of the sudden repulsive gravity being applied to the black-robed man had caused him to be in a state of astonishment, and so he had died to a single blow.

"Haha, after so many years, I finally killed you, you bastard." The fiery light surrounding the red-robed man's body vanished. His face was filled with excitement, while at the same time, he stretched out with his hand to collect the interspatial ring and the divine artifact.

At this moment, one of the waiters in the restaurant walked over and said casually, "You should know the rules. All the expenses, combined, total 32,100 inkstones." At Miluo Island, there were very few people who dared to offend their alliance. Thus, there was no need for threats. A waiter coming over with the bill was enough.

The red-robed figure very straightforwardly withdrew thirty thousand or so inkstones, and then left, heading towards Linley's group. Bowing slightly, he said, "Thank you for your assistance. Otherwise, who knows how long it would have been before I would have been able to avenge my enmity."

"You can leave now. Don't bother us." Bebe, still chewing on delicacies, just frowned.

The red-robed man wasn't angry. He immediately left.

"It really is necessary to be careful at Miluo Island. Battles can occur at any point in time." Linley, after having seen this, warned himself. His plan was to next go to the Free Castle to buy some things. It seemed that he needed to be careful. After all, upon revealing his fortune, it was possible that others would lust after it.

After dining, Linley's group left the restaurant, then headed straight for the famous 'Arena' of Miluo Island.

The Arena was extremely large, taking up over a hundred kilometers. The spectators of the Arena weren't permitted to battle each other. If they were discovered to be engaging in battle, they would suffer the assaults of the patrol soldiers of Miluo Island, who would show no mercy at all.

Anyone who wished to watch the battles would have to pay a fee of 100 inkstones.

"The fee really is quite high. The Arena supposedly has millions of seats. If all the seats were filled, just based on this alone, their daily income would be in excess of a hundred million inkstones!" Linley sighed in amazement. "A hundred million inkstones a day...how much is that in ten thousand years?" This was indeed a vast sum. However, only someone with sufficient strength was capable of maintaining it.

Just by looking at the many island guards with blood red armor, one would understand how powerful the force here was.

While passing through the staircases and entering the walkways, Linley's group would often see roving patrols of the island guards. "All of them are Highgods. I've seen over a thousand by now. Who knows how many island guards there are in total?" Linley was secretly shocked.

As Linley's group of experts ran towards the viewing platforms of the Arena, they didn't know that in a different part of the corridors of the Arena, there were some familiar faces!

"Captain, our patrol for today is over. Let's first go out and have some fun. Patrolling bores me to death." Ten island guards, dressed in the same blood red armor, were walking together. They were chatting amongst themselves.

"Go out for fun? Today, we have some things to do when we get back. Next time." A calm voice rang out.

"Oh." The nine others couldn't help but feel resigned. Only, they didn't dare disobey the orders of their captain. They knew exactly how formidable and how powerful their captain was. He was a person who, in the Highgod Arena, had won a hundred battles in a row!

To win a hundred consecutive battles in the Arena was a tremendous glory.

"Cesar, that kid...alas." The captain let out a long sigh. If Linley was present, he would definitely recognize this captain dressed in the blood red armor. Amazingly, he was an expert of the Yulan continent...Tarosse! Only, the current Tarosse had already become a Highgod!

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 16, Familiar Face

The Arena was divided into three levels. The Highgod Arena, the God Arena, and the Demigod Arena. There was only a single Highgod Arena, three God Arenas, and just three Demigod Arenas as well.

“Boss, which level should we visit first?” Bebe hurriedly asked.

“The Highgod battles should be the most exciting. Naturally, we’ll go there.” Linley laughed. The others also were rather more interested in the Highgod battles, and so all of them followed the directions on the walkway and headed directly towards the Highgod Arena.

Moments later, Linley’s group arrived at the vast Arena.

The Highgod Arena. The central dueling area was a round, empty expanse of land that was five kilometers in diameter. Around it was an extremely dense cluster of spectator seats. At a glance, there were nearly a million seats.

“The Highgod Arena is a large one. The other two arenas aren’t nearly as large.” The big-bearded Bates said. Linley’s group headed through the corridors to find some empty seats, then sat down.

Deity-level combatants were able to see to a very great distance. Thus, everyone was able to see clearly across multiple kilometers to view the two men battling in the central dueling area.

Currently, in mid-air, two figures were hovering while staring at each other. One was a muscular, one-horned man. The other was a devilish, bewitching red haired woman. What attracted Linley's attention wasn't these two people who were preparing for combat; it was the edges of the central area. In front of the viewing platforms was one blood red armored warrior after another!

At the edges of the circular viewing platforms, every few meters, there was an island guards warrior.

"There are actually over a thousand island guards here!" Linley inspected them carefully. These people alone represented a force of a thousand Highgods. In addition, these were just the ones who were standing at the edges. It must be understood that other areas, such as the roving patrols going through the corridors, had quite a few island guards as well.

The number of island guards present at this arena was simply astonishing!

"Wow. There's quite a few island guards." Bebe sighed in amazement.

Aches laughed. "This is the Highgod Arena. They are here to prevent the shockwaves from the battle from harming the viewers. Thus, they arranged for so many island guards present. The number of island guards at the God Arena are far fewer, while the Demigod Arena has virtually no island guards present."

"How much damage could shockwaves from a Demigod-level fight cause?" The big-bearded Bates chuckled as well.

While chatting, Linley's group also carefully watched the battle going on in the center of the arena. Two figures, transformed into blurs, were currently battling as fast as lightning. In mid-air, multiple rays of light flashed, while Linley's group continued to watch carefully.

"Rumble..."

The devilish red haired beauty actually brandished forth a red staff, striking down like lightning towards the horned man. "Aaaah!" A desolate scream could be heard, and the horned man was sent smashing away. And then, with a queer 'boom', his body exploded.

"Clarinda, second victory!" A voice rang out.

The devilish red haired beauty flew directly down towards the corridors below the arena.

"Too weak!" Watching this battle, Linley secretly shook his head. "Just by using a slight amount of the rather unique 'Explosion' profound mystery of the Elemental Laws of Fire, she was able to win twice. The quality of the combatants in this Arena is really low." Linley had simply seen far too many powerful experts.

Bluefire, Beirut, Learmonth, Royalwing, Elquin, Phusro...

Even the Ganmontin he had defeated was far superior to these people.

Next to Linley, the big-bearded Bates said softly, "Linley, any Highgods who wish to participate in this arena are permitted to, so of course there will be differences in quality. However, true experts will occasionally appear as well, which is why the ordinary battles will of course be considered by you as uninteresting."

"Occasionally appear?" Linley shook his head, feeling resigned.

The reason he had come was to watch experts do battle. According to their plans, they would only stay for a day or two at this Miluo Island. After finishing their shopping at the Free Castle, they would leave. He didn't have time to wait here for experts to appear.

"Unfortunate." Linley sighed.

"The experts here at the Arena are actually fairly common." Bates said in a hushed voice. "The Highgod Arena has a rule; if one can defeat ten combatants in a row, then all items at the Free Castle will be 10% off. If one wins fifty victories, everything in the Free Castle will be 20% off. But if you win a hundred victories! All items in the Free Castle will be at half price, and in addition, a reward of ten billion inkstones will be given! At the same time, one will be qualified to enter a secret area of the western part of the island to do a special viewing!"

Half price shopping and a ten billion inkstone reward? Linley didn't care too much about those, but...

"A special viewing of a secret area in the western island? What does that mean?" Linley was rather puzzled.

The eastern part of the island was publicly open to anyone, but the western part of the island was forbidden to outsiders. However, Linley had never heard of a 'secret area' in the western part of the island.

"Miluo Island is jointly controlled and run by five great clans. The disciples of these five clans, as well as the island guards, all live on the western part of the island. However, supposedly, the western part of the island has an extremely important hidden area. Only someone who receives a joint invitation from the five clans or someone who wins a hundred victories is qualified to go pay a visit." Bates sighed.

Linley couldn't help but feel curious.

Five major clans jointly managed Miluo Island. Then...what was this so-called secret area on the western part of the island?

"Bates, you've never gone to take a look?" Linley looked at him.

"I would very much like to." Bates shook his head and laughed. "Only, I value my own life rather highly. Winning ten victories, for me, wouldn't be too hard. But a hundred? After all, not all combatants will be very weak. If an expert suddenly appears, won't I be finished?"

"Can it be that nobody has been so lucky as to only encounter weaklings during the hundred battles?" Linley asked.

"Impossible." Bates shook his head. "Even if you are lucky and only encounter weak Highgods during the first 99 battles whom you defeat, at the 100th battle, the five clans will arrange for one of their own experts to go test the challenger! Every single person who was truly victorious in a hundred battles is a true expert, and has at least my level of power.”

Linley nodded slightly.

It made sense. The five clans wouldn’t so casually toss out ten billion inkstones to someone who was lucky but weak.

“The reward alone is ten billion inkstones. The five clans truly are rich and profligate.” Linley said to himself.

“Linley, if you try for yourself, winning a hundred battles would be very easy.” Bates said enticingly. “Generally speaking, someone at the Six Star Fiend level is capable of winning a hundred battles. Lucky Five Star Fiends also have a shot. After all, generally speaking, you might not see a Seven Star Fiend participate in the Arena even so much as once every ten thousand years.”

Linley chuckled. That was of course the case.

Would an almighty Seven Star Fiend care about ten billion inkstones? But of course, as time passed, over the course of ten thousand years, perhaps a Seven Star Fiend might appear to take part.

“Boss, quick, look!” Bebe said urgently.

“Eh?” Linley looked at Bebe, puzzled. Not just Bebe; even Delia and the others all called out, “Linley, quick, look at the person who appeared in mid-air. That’s the person we encountered back then!”

After having seen the first battle, Linley wasn't too interested in the arena battles any longer.

But at this moment, Linley immediately turned to look. What he saw shocked him!

In the wide, empty space, there was a familiar figure!

"Him?" A look of amazement appeared on Linley's face. "Who would have expected that an event which happens perhaps once every ten thousand years is happening right now. Such a powerful expert really has come to participate."

In the empty space of the arena, a cold, callous man, dressed in a long black robe and carrying a warblade on his back was standing there. His long black hair fluttered loosely in the wind. He stood there like a glacier who had existed for countless years, icy and unapproachable.

In his eyes, electric sparks were dancing.

"It's him." Bates cleared his throat and said in amazement, "If he participates, isn't he guaranteed to win a hundred victories?"

The nearby Bebe said, puzzled, "Eh? I remember that he travelled faster than us. Logically speaking, he should've arrived at Miluo Island long before us. He shouldn't be here with us at the same time."

Travelling by himself, that black-haired man was indeed very fast.

But Linley thought back to the conversations of the others in the restaurants.

From Bluemaple City to Miluo Island, all of the larger bandit forces had been destroyed.

"Perhaps it was because he destroyed so many bandit forces on the way. Or perhaps he was training on the way." Linley said to himself.

Linley immediately began to watch the arena carefully. After all, the person battling was the powerful black-haired man.

"You are too weak. Beat it!" A calm voice echoed in the air above the arena. The speaker was the black-haired man. His opponent was dressed in a long white robe, and was a handsome, violet-haired youth who wielded a scepter that was flashing with white light.

The viewing area immediately burst into a commotion. It had been many years since they saw someone so arrogant, to order the opponent to beat it before the battle even began.

The violet-haired youth, hearing this word, couldn't help but feel enraged. "You'll only know after fighting!"

The black-haired man couldn't help but stare at him.

“Swish!”

Suddenly, two bolts of electric light shot out from the black-haired man’s eyes. The speed was so fast that the violet-haired youth wasn’t able to dodge at all. It directly slammed into the violet-haired youth’s body, and the violet-haired youth trembled slightly, then collapsed, never to rise again.

The hundreds of thousands of onlookers were all momentarily stunned.

The entire viewing platform was utterly still.

“Weaklings should not come. If you do, you are looking for death. Next challenger. Someone stronger. I’ll just keep fighting here!” The black-haired man said calmly.

Consecutive battles!

This was an extremely arrogant display, because if one engaged in consecutive battles, one wouldn’t have the chance to choose one’s opponent. Regardless of who the next opponent was, he had to do battle! Even if the next opponent was an Asura, he’d still have to do battle.

But of course, there was no way an Asura would participate.

Thus, as long as one wasn’t completely hot-headed, generally speaking only a true expert would dare to do consecutive battles.

"Lomio, one victory!" A voice rang out from within the arena. "Everyone, right now, Mr. Lomio has chosen to engage in consecutive battles. Any Highgod, no matter who, is permitted to participate. Anyone who is interested can immediately go down below to register. Alright, now, time for the second battle!"

Linley watched without blinking.

He watched straight from the first to the tenth battle!

As for the eleventh battle...it wasn't that Linley didn't want to continue watching, it was that he no longer had the chance to.

This was because every person who wanted to fight in the Arena could only fight ten battles each day. Even if one wanted to fight a hundred battles, one would have to spread it out over ten days. Lomio fought ten consecutive battles, gaining victory easily in each one. His power was so great that the onlookers all found it hard to breathe as they watched.

"Too powerful." Linley's heart was trembling. "This person is very skilled in both material attacks and soul attacks. In addition, from start to finish, he's never even drawn his warblade."

"Lomio." Linley memorized this name.

They went to watch a few battles at the God Arena and the Demigod Arena. Bebe even joined the God Arena and fought ten battles in a row. Given Bebe's power, just by unleashing a bit of his might, he easily won ten victories!

After leaving the Arena, Linley's group headed straight for the Free Castle.

"Bebe, how bored are you? You actually went to compete." Linley laughed.

"Ten victories, y'know. At least I got this medallion. I'll be getting a 10% discount when shopping." Bebe said delightedly.

Linley was speechless. How much money could shopping possibly use up? 10% off was nothing to them. Given the wealth which Linley and Bebe currently had, a discount of 10% was meaningless.

"The Free Castle is beautifully built." Linley looked at the distant, dark green walls and the red-topped ancient castle. This castle's entrance was like a nonstop flood of people.

"This place has many products for sale. Some of the Starmist Sea, some from other continents. It has even more things for sale than the Blacksand Castles of the Redbud Continent." Aches sighed in amazement.

Linley's group immediately entered through the gateway.

At the sides of the entrance to the Free Castle, a man with black hair who was dressed in a long, loose robe was lazily lying down in the grass, holding and nursing a bottle of wine. If Linley had seen him, he would immediately have recognized him – this was an old friend who, like them, had come from the Yulan continent. Cesar!

Cesar currently looked very dispirited.

"Last time? Haha, last time?" Cesar raised his head to laugh loudly, his tears dripping down.

Quite a few people on the streets turned to look at him, but none of them would be so bored as to interfere.

"Eh?" Linley, already at the gateway, suddenly turned to look into the distance. He stared carefully, but around him was a sea of people. "Could I have misheard?" Linley, just now, vaguely felt as though he had heard Cesar's voice.

But there were many people with similar voices, and although Linley looked carefully, he didn't see Cesar.

"I must have heard wrong." Linley shook his head and sighed.

"Boss, let's head in. What are you looking at?" Bebe said, and Delia looked towards Linley as well.

"Let's go in." Linley laughed. He thus entered the Free Castle along with Delia.

But what Linley didn't know was that Cesar was lying in the grass by the road. If Cesar had stood up, Linley would perhaps have seen him, but he was lying down...how could Linley discover him?

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 17, A Confrontation

Miluo Island. A dazzling jewel of the Starmist Sea.

An unofficial force which was actually capable of building up a Free Castle, capable of allowing trade. In addition, it had been in existence for countless years. This was indeed a queer thing. Because of low taxation rates as well as other attractive policies, countless merchants of the Infernal Realm all gathered here. Every day, the number of customers who came to the Free Castle were beyond number.

The Free Castle had a total of six layers. Four of them were publicly available for guests to enter, while Linley's group was currently on the first floor's main hall.

"Fighting is strictly forbidden in the Free Castle as well. It is very safe here. Everyone can go their own ways here and buy whatever they want by themselves. After finishing, we'll gather together." Linley glanced at the people around him and spoke. This group of people had already very naturally taken Linley as their leader.

Everyone agreed. After all, everyone's amount of wealth was different and different things to buy. The group immediately split apart, with everyone heading in different directions.

"Linley, I'll go browsing as well." Olivier said to Linley, and then left by himself to go roam the Free Castle.

The only ones remaining were Linley, Delia, and Bebe.

"Boss, where to first?" Bebe was very excited. He had an enormous fortune on him, and so naturally he looked forward to spending it.

Linley looked around, then saw that at the sides of the main hall, there were sales counters with signs for various items. These sales counters had items which were all quite low-priced, most under a hundred inkstones. Linley remembered how when he had been at the Redbud Castle, there had been three stories, with each story representing a different level of price.

Most likely, this Free Castle was the same.

"I'll head straight for the fourth level. Most likely, the fourth floor has the best items for the highest price." It wasn't that Linley was wasteful of his money; he understood that in the Infernal Realm, the best items cost more money.

Bebe was the first to walk forward, while Linley and Delia followed from behind as they constantly moved up the stairways.

"There's certainly a large number of island guards here." Linley noticed that throughout the Free Castle, those blood red armored Highgod warriors could be seen.

Delia laughed. "With so many island guards present, even if someone wanted to fight, they wouldn't dare."

Linley nodded.

Bebe carefully inspected those island guards. "How many people can possibly resist the combined attacks of a group of Highgods? Most people naturally wouldn't dare to cause trouble!"

"Even if there is an expert capable of resisting the surrounding group of island guards, most likely more island guards would quickly head here. Miluo Island has existed for countless years. Their power is nothing to joke about." As he spoke, Linley led his group into the fourth floor of the Free Castle.

The fourth floor's main hall held an enormous exhibition area with a number of trade items on display within. Every single sign showed exceedingly astonishing prices. The lowest was marked in millions of inkstones, while the higher ones started at a hundred million inkstones. Most Deities wouldn't dare to enter a place like this.

"Boss, this place has Deathgod Golems!" Bebe said excitedly.

"Deathgod Golems?" Linley immediately turned to look in the direction of Bebe's pointing finger. Indeed, there was a large display area with several Deathgod Golems on display.

Delia laughed. "Linley, you finally found it."

Linley immediately laughed as he walked over. He had wanted to buy some Deathgod Golems long ago. At a critical point in time, one could use it to completely entangle an opponent, and then flee. Only, Deathgod Golems weren't something you could simply buy with money. Linley had made inquiries in the other cities he had passed through, but hadn't found any Deathgod Golems for sale at all.

"Hey, how much do your Deathgod Golems sell for?" Bebe was the first to ask.

The shopkeeper was an icy looking youth with short black hair and violet eyes. He was currently seated in his shop with his eyes closed. Hearing Bebe's words, he opened his eyes and said calmly, "The price is marked very clearly on the sign. Go read it for yourself." And then he shut his eyes again.

Linley couldn't help but laugh. Someone who ran a business but had an attitude like this really was rare.

"Is this person relying on the fact that Deathgod Golems are easy to sell?" Delia laughed.

Linley nodded, then glanced at the price list. Deathgod Golems were divided into three levels, based on the toughness of their bodies. High level Deathgod Golems had bodies that were as tough as Highgod artifacts, and were exceedingly hard to destroy.

Low level, mid level, high level. High level Deathgod Golems each cost 150 million inkstones!

This price was actually reasonable.

"How many high level Deathgod Golems do you have?" Linley asked.

Only now did the black haired youth open his eyes. Frowning, he glanced at Linley. "How many are you buying?"

"A hundred. Do you have that many?" Bebe said. Linley couldn't help but look at Bebe. He had no intentions of buying so many. It must be understood that to control a Deathgod Golem to engage in battle, one had to focus one's mind on it to control it.

Generally, each person could only control a single one.

But of course, if one didn't have to control them too exquisitely, a single person could control quite a few.

Linley currently had four souls. He could simultaneously control four Deathgod Golems with perfect accuracy. But of course, if Linley's original body was battling with the enemy, at most he could have his three extra souls accurately control three Deathgod Golems total. If the level of control didn't have to be too high, then he would be able to control much more.

The cold man shook his head. "I can at most sell you ten high level Deathgod Golems."

"If you can sell ten, I'll take ten." Linley laughed. Linley was already very satisfied with this figure. "Also, those mid level golems. Give me two hundred of those as well." Linley was preparing to accurately control the high level golems. As for the mid level ones, in a time of emergency, they would be used as cannon fodder.

Mid level Deathgod Golems were worth fifteen million.

"Two hundred?" The cold youth shook his head. "I can at most provide a hundred."

"That's fine too." Linley happily paid for and took those ten high level Deathgod Golems and hundred mid level Deathgod Golems. Buying these Deathgod Golems cost a total of 2.7 billion inkstones. To Linley, this was nothing at all.

The amount of money he himself had was nearly two hundred billion inkstones.

As for Bebe, he had gathered countless amethysts, which made up an astonishing fortune.

Actually, the total price should have been three billion inkstones, but Bebe had that 10% discount medallion which he had won in the Arena for ten victories!

After having sold those ten high level Deathgod Golems and hundred mid level Deathgod Golems, a rare smile was on the face of that cold, callous youth. With a wave of his hand, he collected all of the items of his store into his interspatial ring, then turned and left the fourth floor.

"He actually leave?" Bebe stared.

"He's most likely sold off all of his product. Those remaining low level Deathgod Golems aren't much." Linley guessed.

Deathgod Golems were very hard to make.

If one had money, one would still find them hard to purchase. After all these years of wandering various cities, Linley had yet to find any Deathgod Golems. One could imagine how rare they were.

"Let's go. Keep shopping for more treasures!" Bebe said in a high, excited voice.

Walking to the main hall of the fourth floor's various exhibits, Linley sensed how wonderful having money was. He directly purchased many precious treasures. It must be understood...these treasures were things which people might perhaps only obtain after risking their lives.

But as for Linley, all he had to do was spent money.

"Where should we go next?" Bebe said. "We're pretty much done here in the fourth floor." On the fourth floor, only distant clothing stores were available. Bebe, at least, had no interest in clothing.

As he saw it, shopping for clothes was boring!

"Wait. We have the clothing stores. Let's go take a look." Linley said hurriedly. "Delia, what say you?" Linley had noticed long ago that Delia would occasionally glance towards them. Women were always quite intrigued by clothing.

Delia snorted, then walked over.

There were some women trying out the clothes of the shop, but when Linley saw the prices listed, he felt a hint of surprise in his heart. "These clothes are ridiculously expensive. All over a million inkstones?" Although he said this, Linley wouldn't mind buying whatever Delia liked.

After browsing through the three clothing shops, Delia arrived at the fourth without having found anything she liked.

There were quite a few guests here. Business was quite good.

"Not bad." As Linley entered, he felt as though every set of clothing gave him a very superb feeling, as though they were exquisite works of art. Only, the price of clothes here was astonishing as well. The other places had clothes going for around a million inkstones, but here, almost every single set of clothes was over ten million inkstones, with only a very few number being less.

"Linley, how about this one?" After multiple selections, Delia took a fancy to a primarily pink outfit.

Linley glanced at it, then his eyes gleamed. "Excellent."

Delia was smiling as beautifully as a flower. Clearly, she too had taken a fancy to this set of clothes. Only, the price of this set of clothes was simply too astonishing...

Just this set alone actually cost more than eighty million inkstones!

This was the second most expensive one in the store. The most expensive one cost a hundred million inkstones.

The nearby shopkeeper immediately said warmly, "This set of clothes is made from materials that come from the Divine Plane of Light. It was made from the feathers of Boissi Swan-men [Bo'si'yi], and the owner of every single feather had reached the Highgod level. The materials for this set of clothes alone, combined with the shipping cost, is an astronomical figure. Its toughness is comparable to a Highgod artifact!"

"Oh?" Linley was rather surprised.

Beautiful yet sturdy. This price made sense.

"Buy it." Linley nodded.

The owner, seeing Linley nod so freely and easily, felt a surge of joy. At the same time, he was also secretly shocked. People really couldn't be judged by their appearances. Superficially, Linley looked as though he was only a God, but he didn't mind at all about paying nearly a hundred million for a set of clothes.

"See this?" Bebe reached out and flipped out his ten victories medallion.

"Uh..." The shopkeeper couldn't help but be astonished, and then he laughed. "Alright, alright, ten percent off! You only need to pay seventy six million inkstones."

Linley laughed, then paid the money.

Delia put on this set of pink clothes, carefully looking at herself in the mirror, clearly very happy. Looking at Delia's slightly blushing face, set off by the pinkness of her clothes, he felt that she was so devilishly charming.

Linley had to say that this set of clothes was quite worth it!

At this moment, outside the store, six people came in, the leader a callous looking youth with short red hair who stood 2.2 meters tall. He was currently staring at Delia, dressed in that outfit, and a smile was on his face.

"Young master, you've taken a fancy to it?" A silver-haired elder behind him said softly.

"Yes. Not bad." The short red haired youth nodded slightly, then said loudly, "Shopkeeper, do you have any more of that set of clothes that woman is wearing?"

The shopkeeper, hearing this, turned to look at Delia, then quickly shook his head. "Sorry. The materials for this set of clothes are simply too rare. My shop only has this one set. Every single set of clothes in my shop is quite precious. Most of them are unique!"

"Just one?" The red-haired callous youth frowned, then glanced sideways at Delia.

The silver-haired elder behind him, quite intelligently, immediately walked forward towards Linley and Delia, saying directly to Delia, "Our young master has taken a fancy to the clothes you are wearing. Sell it to us."

Linley, hearing this, was startled. He couldn't help but turn to look at them.

"Give us the clothes. We'll pay you for it. However much the price was, we'll pay double." The silver-haired elder said calmly. Hearing this, the shopkeeper clearly was rather regretful.

"Double?" Linley laughed, then glanced back at Delia. "Forget about double. Even if you wanted to pay us ten times as much, we wouldn't sell it!"

The silver-haired elder's face immediately turned ugly.

"Hey, that guy over there is your young master?" Bebe glanced at the red-haired, callous youth, then pursed his lips. "Young master, the clothes you are wearing are quite excellent. I've taken a fancy to them. You can go ahead and sell it to me. I'll pay you double as well. Are you willing to sell?"

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 18, The Blood-Colored Miluo Insignia

The red-haired youth, hearing these words, couldn't help but narrow his eyes, his gaze growing cold.

The silver-haired elder snorted with cold anger as well. "You'd best know what's good for you. It's just a set of clothes, right? Be careful. Don't lose your lives for the sake of clothes!" But Bebe paid no attention to the silver-haired elder's threats.

"You threaten me?" Bebe rolled his eyes as he spoke angrily.

But Linley realized something more.

Linley carefully inspected this red-haired youth, then at the silver-haired elder. He secretly mused, "Most of the people who come to the fourth floor of the Free Castle for shopping are quite wealthy. In the Infernal Realm, most people who have money have great power as well. For the silver haired elder to dare to be so arrogant in a place like this means that he should have some sort of a background."

Although Linley wasn't afraid, in a strange place like this, he didn't want to make any enemies either.

"Bebe, Delia, let's go." Linley pulled the enraged Bebe as he began to walk towards the outside of the store. Linley didn't want to continue wasting time with these people.

"Whoosh!" The four people behind the red haired youth immediately blocked Linley's way. The four were all Highgods!

"You want to leave?" The red haired youth let out a cold laugh, a very condescending look in on face. "There's nothing that I want that I cannot get! I'm in a good mood today and don't want to fight. You'd best hand that set of clothes to me. Otherwise!"

Linley couldn't help but begin to feel his anger rise as well.

"The offer of double price is gone now. However, we'll still give you the same price. Don't say that our Bagshaw [Ba'ge'xiao] clan takes advantage of people!" The silver-haired elder snickered as well. These words instantly caused the owner of the clothing store's face to change.

Bagshaw clan?

Linley was intrigued, but unfortunately, this was his first time at Miluo Island, and he had never heard of this Bagshaw clan.

"You'd best give them the clothes." The store owner urged.

"Linley, this Bagshaw clan seems to be rather formidable. Just give them the clothes." Delia sent through divine sense to Linley as well. Linley glanced at the nearby Delia. He knew that Delia, in her heart, really didn't want to part with it.

Only, Delia didn't want to offend people for Linley's sake.

"It's fine." Linley laughed calmly.

And then, Linley turned to look at those people and barked coldly, "What, you want to start a fight in the Free Castle?"

Immediately, those people were stunned.

This was the Free Castle. The laws and mores here forbade fighting. Anyone who engaged in combat would be mercilessly slaughtered by the island guards.

Right at this moment, the patrolling guards on the main hall of the fourth floor noticed the situation as well, and immediately, a small group of ten of them hurriedly walked over. The leader, a bald, burly man, shouted loudly, "What's going on? You want to cause trouble here? Are you looking for death?"

"Right, they are causing trouble." Bebe said angrily. "Everyone, we bought a set of clothes, but these people here want to force us to sell it to them. We didn't, so they barred our way."

Linley watched this happen calmly.

Since the Free Castle had its own rules, then those rules definitely wouldn't be allowed to be broken by anyone, no matter who they were. Otherwise, who would care about the rules?

"Captain, these people are rather arrogant." The other guards immediately called out.

"You want to force others to sell their clothes to you?" The bald burly man stared with eyes as wide as a bull's, a look of anger in his gaze. "Such audacity! You dare to be so bold in the Free Castle! No matter who you are, nobody here in the Free Castle has the right to be so brash!"

Bebe immediately began to chortle.

The arrogant red-haired youth frowned, glancing sideways with a cold look at the leader of the guards. With a flip of his hand, he revealed a blood red insignia, covered by marvelous patterns. The patterns on the insignia was very similar to the patterns on the armor of the island guards.

"A blood-colored Miluo Insignia!" The bald warrior stuttered, and his face instantly changed dramatically.

"Milord!" The ten island guards, the bald leader included, immediately bowed respectfully as they spoke.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were shocked as well.

"And it is actually a high level blood-colored Miluo Insignia!" The shopkeeper was stunned as well. There were, in total, two types of the 'Miluo Insignias' which conferred extremely high power within Miluo Island. The first type was green, while the other type was blood-colored. Blood-colored Miluo Insignias represented extremely great power.

At the same time, they were also extremely rare.

"A blood-colored Miluo Insignia?" Linley didn't understand what sort of treasure this thing was, but judging from the looks of those ten guards, Linley understood the value of this insignia.

The other island guards on the fourth floor also noticed the special event occurring here. Immediately, quite a few warriors hurried over, and even the general manager of the fourth floor hurried over. Immediately, hundreds of island guards surrounded the area.

"Young master Sequeira [Sai'ke'la], what is it? You want to buy clothes for your wife?" The general manager was a handsome, gold-haired youth. Seeing the young master, he immediately greeted him warmly.

The red haired, cold youth named Sequeira laughed calmly and nodded.

"Boss, the situation looks bad." Bebe sent through divine sense.

How could Linley not have realized this already?

"Linley, let's just give them the clothes." Delia sent through divine sense, urging him. Linley considered for a moment. Delia definitely liked this set of clothes very much, and he should keep it for her sake. But clearly, the opponent came from a ridiculously powerful background.

Linley decided that he might as well swallow his anger for now.

"Sorry, Delia." Linley looked at Delia, who laughed and shook her head.

Seeing this, the silver-haired elder laughed, while the red-haired youth snickered as well.

"Hmph, now it's too late!" The silver-haired elder snorted in an ill-tempered manner. "We won't give you a single inkstone. Do you want to offer it or not?" The silver-haired elder had a belly full of fire right now. As a member of the Bagshaw clan, how had he ever had to swallow his temper?

"However, if you give it to us now, we'll generously spare your lives." The silver-haired elder said disdainfully.

"Motherf*cker, keep dreaming." Bebe was indescribably angry.

Linley began to laugh. Laughter born of anger!

He himself had been willing to swallow his anger to end this situation, but these people had actually taken him for a soft target, easily abused!

"What is going on with this Free Castle? Even when shopping here, we suffer threats and pressure, and a demand for us to give our items without compensation. This Free Castle isn't free at all! It seems the reputation of this Miluo Island is fake, and these island guards are nothing more than ornaments!" Linley's voice echoed throughout the fourth floor.

Immediately, the other customers all looked towards them.

The looks on the faces of the island guards instantly turned ugly. The face of the young master 'Sequeira' of the Bagshaw clan turned sinister as well. The rules of Miluo Island, which had been passed down since antiquity. In the Free Castle, nobody was permitted to engage in battle, no matter who they were.

Any who violated this would be killed!

If the rules were broken, in the future, who would dare do business here?

"Young master Sequeira, this isn't easy to handle." The general manager, that gold-haired youth, said through divine sense. The cold, arrogant young master Sequeira also knew what was important and what wasn't. Glancing at Linley's group, he said calmly, "Let's go!" As he spoke, he led his people away.

The general manager, that gold-haired youth, glanced at Linley, then sent through divine sense, "Kid, be careful! Offending Sequeira in Miluo Island means that while you'll be safe in the Free Castle, as soon as you leave it..." And then, the gold-haired youth left.

Those island guards all left one by one as well.

"Those people really motherf*cking went too far." Bebe was unable to restrain his temper.

"Linley, it's all my fault." Delia said softly.

Linley tightly clenched Delia's hand, shaking his head. "It isn't your fault. In the Infernal Realm, sometimes, if we have to endure, we will. But if someone goes too far, then we might as well just have a battle with them." Linley was laughing coldly in his heart as well. At worst, he would just go all out!

He could use a drop of Sovereign's Might and engage in a wild slaughter. What was there to fear?

"Let's go out." Linley said.

Linley knew very well that at Miluo Island, the Bagshaw clan definitely had to be an extremely powerful force. Most likely, they were one of the five clans which controlled Miluo Island! Linley immediately decided that after finishing buying things in the Free Castle, they would head directly out of Miluo Island!

"I was originally planning to watch the next nine days of competitions for that 'Lomio'." Linley shook his head and sighed to himself.

Linley's group intentionally strolled about for a while on the third floor of the Free Castle, and then came to their original gathering spot. By now, half the people had already gathered here again. Linley's group only had to wait for less than an hour before Aches, the last one to return, came back.

"Sorry, sorry. There were many things in this Free Castle which normally aren't for sale in the Blacksand Castle or the Redbud Castle, so I had to take a bit of time." Aches said hurriedly.

Linley's group all knew that Aches was a merchant. It wasn't strange for him to spend a bit more time.

"Everyone, you can head back first." Linley said.

"Huh?" The big-bearded 'Bates', Aches, and the others all immediately looked at Linley.

"In this Free Castle, we irritated members of the Bagshaw clan. Right now, there are people following us. For your safety, you need to leave first. Right...you can go to the restaurant we first ate at earlier, and we'll all regroup there. If we haven't arrived within one day, you can head off first." Linley said very directly.

Bates and the others were all shocked. In the end, everyone wisely chose to leave.

However, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier stayed by Linley.

After waiting a long time after the others left, Linley's group headed towards the exit of the Free Castle. Behind Linley's group, however, was the silver-haired elder, who stared at the backs of Linley's group. "You offended my clan's young master, and you want to leave alive?"

The silver-haired elder immediately picked up the pace to follow.

"We're out. Everyone, be careful." Linley stepped out of the Free Castle, but then his face suddenly changed.

At the two sides of the wide street, over ten people immediately drew close to them. The two lines of people immediately surrounded Linley's group while at the same time separating them off from the other customers of the Free Castle.

"Haha, you still want to leave?" The silver-haired elder came out from outside.

As soon as he had exited the fourth floor, he had immediately arranged for two of the guards of the young master to lead ten other Highgods to wait at the entrance. No matter what, they wouldn't let Linley's group flee. It had been a long time since his young master had to swallow his temper like that.

"Boss, they really did set an ambush for us." Bebe said in a low voice.

Linley glanced sideways at the two rows of twelve Highgods. These Highgods were roughly ten meters away from Linley, but to Highgods, a distance of ten meters was absolutely nothing. Battle could begin at any moment.

At the same time, a large number of people on the streets immediately hurried over to surround and watch, and they all began to chitchat over the situation.

"So many Highgods, surrounding just those few people?"

"That silver-haired elder is the housekeeper for the Bagshaw clan. I recognize him. Those people are doomed. They actually offended the Bagshaw clan."

The chatter went on, but Linley faced it all calmly.

"Walk towards the front." Linley said through divine sense.

Immediately, Linley's group of four immediately walked towards the front, not even looking at the twelve Highgods to each side of them.

"You want to leave!" An explosive shout. Instantly, one of the Highgods flew towards Linley. Clearly, as he saw it, Linley was just a God. He alone would be more than enough to deal with him.

"F*ck off!" Linley held little regard for ordinary Highgods.

The divine earth power on his body flexed out, and instantly, an astonishing repulsive force was applied to that Highgod's body. That Highgod who had been pouncing towards Linley with his divine artifact drawn, before even touching Linley, was instantly flicked backwards by that astonishing repulsive force, while Linley himself continued to walk forward.

"How is that possible?" The Highgod stared with wide eyes.

The silver-haired elder's face changed. He shouted, "Attack!"

Instantly, the twelve Highgods simultaneously pounced towards Linley's group. But right at this moment, with Linley at the center, a faint earthen yellow hemisphere that was ten meters in diameter suddenly appeared, trapping all of the twelve attacking Highgods within its reach.

Blackstone Space!

Those twelve Highgods, because of the astonishing gravitational force, were drawn directly to the ground.

"How is that possible?" The twelve hadn't even had a chance to react when suddenly, a bizarre wind sound directly entered their consciousness. It was much like the strange wind sound Linley and the others had heard in the Amethyst Mountains. Their soul was affected, and the twelve of them were instantly drawn into a stupor.

"Swish!"

A devilish violet sword light flashed, chopping through the necks of those twelve men like a giant guillotine.

"Bang!" "Bang!"

The heads of those twelve men exploded, and their divine sparks fell to the floor.

Everyone watching this scene in front of the wide gates of the Free Castle was stunned. The previously rowdy streets instantly turned silent, with the most astonished one being that silver-haired elder, who stared disbelievingly at this sight.

Twelve Highgods, killed with one sword?

"These ordinary Highgods, within my Blackstone Space, will have their souls drawn into a stupor. They are only able to stand there and be slaughtered by me." Linley naturally hadn't paid any mind to these sorts of people. Highgods who were in a stupor were like blocks of wood that couldn't fight back.

Killing them was simplicity itself!

"Linley." Delia looked towards Linley with a hint of excitement in her eyes. All women loved it when their man was powerful.

"Let's go." Linley laughed calmly.

Linley's group of four continued to walk forward, while on the wide streets, the previously rowdy crowd immediately split a path for them, allowing Linley's group to leave. Everyone who had seen Linley's sword just now were all staring in Linley in shock and admiration.

In the Infernal Realm, the strong were worshipped!

"He killed twelve Highgods with one sword. This lord is simply too powerful. I originally thought he was just a God-level Fiend."

"What do you know? This lord was hiding his true power. As I see it, this lord is at least a Six Star Fiend."

Those who watched this scene were all chattering and discussing this event.

"So formidable!"

Currently, that arrogant, red-haired youth, 'young master Sequeira', as well as that gold-haired youth, both appeared at the entrance. Actually, this had been arranged by Sequeira to begin with. Naturally, he was watching everything in secret. At this moment, he too was watching, stunned, at Linley's distant, disappearing back.

"Young master." The silver-haired elder said hurriedly.

But Sequeira just frowned as he looked at the gold-haired youth. "This person killed twelve Highgods so easily with a single sword. I thought he was a God. So he was a Highgod who was hiding his true power! Could you tell how powerful he truly was?"

Sequeira knew very well how powerful the gold-haired youth was. As a chief of a thousand-man corps, the gold-haired youth had the power of a Six Star Fiend.

If even the gold-haired youth couldn't tell how powerful this person was, then this person was definitely very fearsome.

"I...can't see through him!" The gold-haired youth had been staring towards Linley this entire time. "This person has been hiding his power, but I can't see through it at all. And from the sword attack he used just now...actually, the sword attack wasn't that formidable. What was formidable was that those twelve Highgods seemed to have gone silly, allowing that sword to kill them without resistance!"

"I didn't expect that after the Arena had a seemingly Seven Star Fiend level combatant, 'Lomio', appear, yet another seemingly Seven Star Fiend level combatant has appeared here." The gold-haired youth's face was solemn.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 19, War God, Cesar

After having killed twelve Highgods with a single sword, he had shocked his opponents. Thus, Linley's group of four left safely.

"Linley, will that young master of the Bagshaw clan bring experts for revenge?" Olivier frowned, somewhat concerned.

Linley chuckled.

Delia replied, "Olivier, in truth, the young master of the Bagshaw clan and the three of us were only in a dispute because of clothing. And then, Linley killed those twelve ordinary Highgods. To an ancient clan like his, the death of twelve ordinary Highgods is nothing at all. I imagine that this young master wouldn't be so rash as to seek revenge without clearly investigating."

"If they come, we will kill them!"

Bebe snorted. "We're about to leave Miluo Island anyways. Who cares about the Bagshaw clan. No matter how powerful they are, can it be that they can control other areas also?"

"Let's go. These large clans are disdainful towards lesser individuals, but against true experts, they are still somewhat cautious." Linley chuckled. Linley, when attacking, had been viewed by others as a Highgod, and yet his aura was that of a God!

The enemies would definitely believe that Linley was hiding his aura.

Actually, Linley really was only just a God! How could they possibly discover any Highgod aura from him?

However, the enemies would only believe that Linley was so powerful that his ability to hide his aura was simply too great!

Given his ability to hide his aura, as well as the sword attack he had just displayed, the opponents had plenty of material to begin wildly speculating over. No matter how powerful a clan was, they wouldn't want to offend an ultimate expert. After all...a true expert, by himself, could destroy a clan.

In front of an ultimate expert, human wave tactics were ineffective.

That young master Sequeira wouldn't dare to offend a possibly Seven Star Fiend over a small fit of pique.

Linley's group immediately headed outside. After walking for a while, Linley didn't discover anyone following them. In his heart, he understood that young master Sequeira should have really given up the idea of getting revenge.

Bebe muttered, "Miluo Island is quite a beautiful island. Unfortunately, after being here just a single day, we have to leave. I really wanted to become a hundred battles victor in that Arena." How could Bebe possibly lose in a fight against those Gods? He could just stand there and let them beat on him.

Unless the opponent also had a godspark weapon or a Sovereign artifact. Most likely, only with those items would they be able to harm Bebe.

"Let's go. In the future, we'll still have the chance." Linley laughed calmly.

"Linley, quick, look!" Delia, somewhat stunned, pulled at Linley and called at him. Linley immediately turned and followed Delia's gaze. As he did, Linley was shocked. From a distant translucent restaurant window, he was able to see an icy man with long red hair seated on the other side of the window!

The War God, O'Brien!

"War God!" Linley was overjoyed.

"War God?" Olivier looked over, puzzled, and then he too was overjoyed.

All of these experts who had entered the Infernal Realm understood that it would be extremely hard for them to run into their old friends from the same material plane. The feeling of meeting with their old friends was enough to make them very excited and energetic.

"Haha, War God!" Bebe was the first to dash towards the restaurant.

Linley's group immediately followed him as well. Entering the restaurant, they saw that this was a fairly quiet restaurant with fairly few customers. O'Brien was currently sitting there, quietly drinking a cup of tea.

"The War God actually became a Highgod?" Linley was somewhat startled. In the past, the War God had relied on fusing with a divine spark to become a God. In as short a period of time as a thousand years, he became a Highgod? There was only one explanation – he had fused with a divine spark.

"Hey, War God!" Bebe immediately ran towards the War God's table.

O'Brien, his head lowered to his cup of tea, was startled. War God? In the Infernal Realm, it had been many years since someone had addressed him in that manner.

O'Brien raised his head and saw Bebe by his table, and also Linley, Delia, and Olivier walking this way as well. The War God O'Brien's face went slack, and then he revealed a look of joy. "Linley, it's actually you four!"

"O'Brien, long time no see." Linley laughed.

"Long time no see." O'Brien laughed as well.

"Aren't you going to invite us to sit?" Bebe snorted.

O'Brien immediately began to laugh. "Haha, it's fine if I don't invite others to sit, but how would I dare to not invite you, Bebe, to sit? Come, let's all sit together." As he spoke, O'Brien immediately beckoned towards a distant waiter, who immediately came over.

"I don't want to eat right now." Linley said hurriedly.

"Then we'll order some wine." O'Brien casually ordered some wine, and then everyone began to chat together.

O'Brien asked Linley and Olivier about what had happened in recent years, while Linley gave a general description of the events which had occurred after their arrival in the Infernal Realm. However, he didn't go into too much detail regarding the dangers they had faced. After giving a brief summary, Linley's group concluded their description of what had happened in the Redbud Continent.

"We were trapped within the Amethyst Mountains for a time, but luckily were able to escape." Olivier, for example, discussed that matter with a single sentence. While they were chatting, Delia even especially set up her 'Godrealm' to cover all of them within it, shutting out sound and preventing outsiders from eavesdropping.

Linley had thought that O'Brien would be shocked, but O'Brien didn't seem to feel anything was amiss.

Actually, O'Brien had always been in the Starmist Sea, and thus he knew very little about the Redbud Continent. He didn't understand what being trapped in the Amethyst Mountains and then escaping really meant!

"Linley, you really are audacious. The Infernal Realm is filled with countless dangers. If I hadn't been following Tarosse, I probably would've died in the Starmist Sea long ago. You, however, actually left the Redbud Continent and began to hurry towards the Bloodridge Continent. Formidable. Admirable!" O'Brien sighed in amazement.

Olivier just chuckled.

As Olivier saw it, given Linley's current strength, he would be able to roam the Infernal Realm with ease. As long as he didn't encounter any major foes, he definitely wouldn't be in any danger.

"O'Brien, how about you? How has life been in the Infernal Realm?" Linley laughed as he asked.

"Me? Not bad." O'Brien nodded. "After arriving in the Infernal Realm, our group included Tarosse and Dylin. Although we ran into some dangerous situations, Tarosse and him were able to deal with it. Afterwards, Tarosse broke through from the God level to the Highgod level. He became a Highgod on his own!"

Linley couldn't help but be surprised.

"After Tarosse reached the Highgod level, he became truly formidable." O'Brien sighed in praise. "Tarosse himself had fused two types of profound mysteries to begin with. Matching that with his innate divine ability...in the Starmist Sea, he is extremely formidable. He even once killed three Five Star Fiends!"

"Killed three Five Star Fiends?" Linley's group was shocked as well.

But after considering it, Linley understood. Tarosse had become a Highgod independently and had fused two types of profound mysteries. If he was able to perfectly match his attacks with his innate divine ability as a divine beast, then it was possible for him to be comparable to a Six Star Fiend.

"Right. Tarosse won a hundred victories here at Miluo Island!" O'Brien sighed in approval.

Linley nodded to himself. Generally speaking, Six Star Fiends were capable of gaining a hundred victories. Five Star Fiends, if lucky, could as well. It was possible for Tarosse to accomplish this.

"Dylin, in turn, won a hundred victories at the God Arena." O'Brien laughed. "Precisely because of this, Tarosse and Dylin both now live in the western part of the island. Tarosse gave us divine sparks to allow myself, Cesar, and Dylin's children to all reach the Highgod level."

Linley now understood.

So that was what had happened. Dylin's two children, those Six-Eyed Golden Ni-Lions, had both fused with divine sparks to become Deities, and O'Brien had as well. Since they had already fused with divine sparks, they might as well just keep doing so. Only, given that they had used divine sparks to become Highgods, their future potential was now rather slim.

Delia smiled. "It seems your life here isn't bad."

"That's right." O'Brien nodded, but then he seemed to have thought of something. He shook his head. "But Cesar, he..."

"What about Cesar?" Linley hurriedly asked.

Linley had a rather deep friendship with Cesar. Previously, in his homeland near Fenlai City, Cesar had helped him. Afterwards, when Linley had gone to rescue those Undying Warriors, the five Barker brothers, at the critical, life and death moment, Cesar had once again helped him and saved him.

Linley naturally was grateful towards Cesar for having helped him multiples time.

"Cesar is rather...depressed these days." O'Brien shook his head and sighed.

"Depressed?" Bebe stared. "Cesar seems to have no cares in the world. How could he become depressed?"

Linley was rather puzzled as well.

"Problems of the heart." O'Brien said.

A look of surprise appeared on the faces of Linley and the others. Cesar, in the Yulan continent, had been an extremely dissolute fellow who often changed women. There was no long-term woman for him. Even that 'Holy

Lady' of the Frost Goddess Shrine, Cesar had ran away from as though fleeing a disaster.

As Linley saw it, a person like him shouldn't suffer too much from matters of the heart.

Seeing the looks on the faces of Linley and the others, O'Brien explained, "At first, I was like you, unable to believe it. But this time, Cesar is for real. With regards to that woman, Cecily (Sai'xi'li), it is as though he has been possessed. Him and that Cecily woman really fell in love. Cesar even told me that this time, he had found true love!"

Linley's group just listened, stunned.

"But of course, what happened between them in terms of their relationship, I'm not too clear. We wouldn't pry about their private affairs. All of us were just very happy that Cesar and Cecily were able to be each other."

"Logically speaking, this was a good thing." O'Brien shook his head and laughed. "Unfortunately, that Cecily had a very special status. She was actually a core member of one of the five major clans of Miluo Island, the Gaylord [Gai'luo'de] clan. In addition, not too long ago, she got married to young master Sequeira of the Bagshaw clan!"

Young master Sequeira?

Linley's group of four, upon hearing this name, exchanged glances. This matter actually had something to do with Sequeira? But not too long ago, Linley's group had gotten into a dispute with that Sequeira.

"What, are you surprised? We were surprised as well. But that's the truth." O'Brien sighed. "Deities should have tough, resilient minds. Who would have imagined that Cesar seemed to have suffered a fatal wound. He's in a daze all day, either drinking or just daydreaming or sleeping or training. He is extremely dispirited."

Linley couldn't help but sympathize with Cesar.

Although O'Brien described it all in a very ordinary manner, Linley himself had been heartbroken in love before as well. He knew well the heart-ripping pain of having his woman being taken away, and how that agony could make a person be able to barely breathe. The more deeply one loved, the more deeply one would be wounded.

"Cesar...seems to have really fallen for her." Linley sighed.

As they chatted, their wine was soon used up.

"It's a matter of time. This happened just recently after all. Cesar is just unable to get over it for now, I imagine. When time goes on, he should be better." O'Brien said, then stood up. "Linley, come. Let's go meet with Tarosse, Dylin, and those two children of Dylin's. All of them are present. When they see you, they will definitely be very happy."

Linley's group immediately rose as well.

"Boss, are we still going to head off with Aches' group?" Bebe asked.

"No need. When the time comes, we'll travel alone. In addition, with Bates by their side, safety shouldn't be a problem." Linley, having met with a group of old friends, was in no rush to leave. As for his problem with Sequeira, Sequeira hadn't immediately attempted to gain revenge, and so clearly he probably wouldn't in the future.

After all, if he really wanted to get revenge, he would've done so right away.

Linley's group of four followed O'Brien, heading directly into the western part of the island.

Miluo Island was divided into the eastern part and the western part. The western part was where the island guards, the five clans, and the others all lived. Outsiders were forbidden entry.

"It really is beautiful here." Linley saw the beautiful two story buildings from afar.

"Those are the homes for the island guards." O'Brien laughed. "I'm here as well. Thanks to Tarosse's help, I also became an island guard. Island guards rotate their duty once a year. This year, I'm on break."

In the area where the island guards lived, people were on patrol.

"Are we allowed to go in?" Bebe was a bit nervous.

"It's fine. The residential area of the island guards aren't under strict supervision. As long as an island guard leads the way, you can go in. The place which is under very tight supervision is the place where those five clans live. However, they are deeper inside." As O'Brien spoke, his body suddenly became covered by a blood red uniform armor.

This was the proof of one's status as an island guard. The patrolling island guards immediately let them in.

Linley's group of four thus followed O'Brien into the residential area of the island guards.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 20, With Child?

The island guards lived in small buildings which dotted the mountains and forests of this area. Just by looking at the number of buildings, Linley could imagine what a terrifyingly large number of island guards there were here.

“The five clans must indeed be powerful, to be able to support such an enormous army of Highgods.” Linley couldn’t help but sigh in amazement. Maintaining an army meant paying salaries; after all, nobody was willing to work for free. Generally speaking, Highgod soldiers would have fairly high pay.

To support such an enormous army required an astonishing amount of wealth.

However, just by looking at the number of people who passed through the Arena as well the Free Castle, one could imagine how astonishingly wealthy Miluo Island was.

“We’re here.” O’Brien laughed.

“O’Brien, this building is quite large.” Linley looked at this residence in surprise. This residence took up space that was roughly ten times that of those ordinary residences. It had a large courtyard and three smaller buildings within. It was built as a stand-alone residence, and the walls had carvings as well.

O’Brien laughed. “This is Tarosse’s residence. Generally speaking, Highgod victors of a hundred battles, if they join the island guards, will have a salary as well as treatment far superior to that of ordinary island guards. Although I do have a small house of my own, normally, we all live at Tarosse's place. His place is large!"

As he spoke, O'Brien pushed the door open and went inside.

"Oh, O'Brien, you're back." A voice rang out. By the green grass off to the side of the courtyard, a green haired man was seated in the meditative position. It was Tarosse!

Tarosse turned to look at him and was about to say something, but suddenly he was stunned. He stared at Linley and the other three behind O'Brien. Linley, seeing the look on Tarosse's face, intentionally smirked at him.

"Swish!" Tarosse instantly appeared in front of Linley's group.

"Haha!" Tarosse slapped Linley on the shoulders. "Linley, you guys actually came as well. This is so incredible and such a rare occurrence. The Infernal Realm is so vast, but we actually ran into each other here. Haha..."

Tarosse was very excited and happy.

"Bebe, Lord Beirut actually was able to bear with letting you come to the Infernal Realm?" Tarosse noticed Bebe.

Bebe pursed his lips. "What, got a problem?"

"It's fine, it's fine." Tarosse greeted everyone. "Come, everyone, sit down. Dylin and Cesar are currently outside. Jeeze!"

Linley's group laughed, then sat down. Tarosse hurriedly said, "You really came at a fortuitous time. Today I was still out on patrols. I just came back not long ago. It is destiny that our group of people from the Yulan continent can meet here today!"

Linley was very happy as well, and he also laughed and chatted. While chatting about he and Olivier had met, they naturally discussed the Amethyst Mountains as well. However, Linley's group once again just skimmed over it with a word. Tarosse actually didn't seem to pay any attention to it at all.

Or perhaps it was simply that he didn't understand what it really meant for Linley's group to have been able to exit the Amethyst Mountains!

Actually, this was normal.

Tarosse was a Highgod, true.

But the amount of time he had spent in the Infernal Realm was simply too short. The things he knew about the Infernal Realm came mostly from those books he had read. Generally speaking, those geographical books would just give a simple explanation of the Amethyst Mountains. In the past, Linley had read some geography books as well, but before arriving at the Amethyst Mountains, he didn't truly know how dangerous they were.

"Creaaaaak!" The courtyard door was pushed upon, and a black haired man reeking of alcohol sauntered in, his eyes droopy with drunkenness as he gave off a clearly dispirited aura. It was Cesar!

Seeing how Cesar currently was, Linley couldn't help but sigh in amazement. That former playboy who had enjoyed himself amongst the 'flowers'...how had he ended up like this today? The events of the world truly were hard to explain.

"Cesar!" Linley spoke out.

Cesar heard that someone was calling to him, but he didn't care too much. He just glanced sideways at Linley, then continued to head towards his own residence. But after taking just two or three steps, his body paused, and he turned to look at Linley once again, his misty gaze slowly growing brighter.

"Linley?" Cesar's voice contained disbelief in it as well.

"Cesar, long time no see." Linley began to laugh as well.

"Haha, Cesar, I'm Bebe." Bebe immediately jumped up also.

Cesar took a deep breath, activating the divine power in his body. The odor of alcohol immediately vanished from his body, and he became much more sober. A rare hint of a smile appeared on Cesar's face as well. "Linley, you came to the Infernal Realm as well? When did you come?"

Cesar was full of questions, and Linley's group chatted with him happily as well.

Although Linley knew what had happened with Cesar, Linley hoped that Cesar's mood would improve. Clearly, seeing some of his old friends from their Yulan continent had caused Cesar to be invigorated.

"Linley, chat more with Cesar, but remember, don't raise that Cecily matter." Tarosse hurriedly sent through divine sense. The state Cesar was currently in was the best state he had been in during this recent period of time.

"I know."

Linley replied. At the same time, Linley was also somewhat puzzled. What was so amazing about that Cecily woman, that this sort of dissolute playboy like Cesar would become so infatuated with her?

Miluo Island. The residential area of the five clans. In the very center was the residence of the Bagshaw clan. The five clans were led by the Bagshaw clan, but the Bagshaw clan was actually not a very densely populated one, with the clan members far fewer than the other four clans.

But precisely because of this, every member of the Bagshaw clan had a fairly high status.

At present, in the rear flower gardens behind the Bagshaw clan's ancestral estate, two men who were 2.2 meters tall were currently walking together. One of the two men was a youth with short red hair, while the other was a middle-aged man with unbound, long red hair.

If Linley was present, he would recognize that the youth with short red hair was Sequiera!

"Sequiera, you need to pay special attention to that man named Lomio in the Arena!" The red-haired middle-aged man had thick eyebrows and large eyes. With each moment, he gave off a domineering aura.

"According to the servants' reports, this Lomio is very likely a Seven Star Fiend. He has already achieved ten consecutive victories on multiple days. In two more days, he'll have completed a hundred victories!"

"Yes, Father!" Sequiera said respectfully.

Sequiera's father, Bakwill [Ba'ke'wei] Bagshaw, was the clan leader of the Bagshaw clan. Bakwill, despite having lived for countless years, only had two children. Each member of the Bagshaw clan had exceedingly few children, most having only one.

Having two children was already quite lucky.

"If he really is a Seven Star Fiend, then that's wonderful news. It's rare to meet a Seven Star Fiend. We can't let him slip away." Bakwill said calmly.

"I know, Father." Sequiera laughed. "Father, not long ago, you went to the secret area, so I didn't have a chance to tell you. Seven or eight days ago, in the Free Castle, I met an expert. We had a small disagreement with each other, but that expert, with a single blow, killed twelve Highgods!"

"Killed twelve Highgods?" Bakwill looked towards him.

There were quite a few experts capable of killing twelve ordinary Highgods with one blow.

"This isn't the strange thing. The strange thing is...those twelve Highgods hadn't even drawn near that expert, but they seemed to have gone silly and unresponsive, allowing that expert to kill them with one blow."

Bakwill was surprised.

Cause twelve Highgod experts to not be able to even resist?

"This man's soul is extremely strong." Bakwill evaluated.

"More importantly!" Sequeira lowered his voice as he spoke. "Father, that person was actually hiding his aura. From the outside, he seems to be just a God. Even the thousand-man commander of our Free Castle, that Six Star Fiend, wasn't able to sense even a hint of his true aura!"

Only now was Bakwill shocked.

A Six Star Fiend being unable to sense a hint of the 'true aura' of someone, and with that someone having such a powerful soul!

"At very least, a peak Six Star Fiend, and possibly even a Seven Star Fiend. In addition, one specialized in the soul." Bakwill evaluated. Experts who specialized in the soul were dread-inducing, because the soul was the foundation of every single person. Experts who specialized in the soul were very hard to deal with.

"Where is he?" Bakwill said hurriedly.

"Gone." Sequeira shook his head. "He shouldn't be someone from Miluo Island. He didn't know anything about the blood-colored Miluo Insignia. I didn't dare to rashly attack him, so all I could do was watch him leave."

Bakwill let out a long breath, then laughed. "If he's gone, then forget it. Your actions were correct. When you encounter an expert like this, you can't rashly offend him. If he kills you, then that truly would be terrible."

Sequeira laughed as well.

"Sequeira!" A voice of jubilation came out from the gates of the rear gardens. A mesmerizingly beautiful woman with a pure white complexion and jade hair came running in, her face covered in joy. This was Sequeira's wife: Cecily!

"Father." Seeing Bakwill, that jade-haired beauty immediately curtsied.

Bakwill nodded calmly.

"Lily." Sequeira, seeing his wife, immediately smiled and walked over to welcome her.

"Lily, you seem so excited. Do you have some good news?" Sequeira laughed.

"Sequeira, I'm with child." Cecily said hurriedly.

Hearing this news, Sequeira and Bakwill were both stunned...and then looks of wild joy appeared on their faces. The two looked at each other, with Bakwill laughing loudly in excitement. "Haha...Sequeira, you chose an excellent wife, an excellent wife, haha!"

"I have a child? I actually have a child!" Sequeira was incomparably excited as well.

Cecily, hearing this, was puzzled.

It was just a child. Why was it that even the perpetually unflappable clan leader would be so excited? She had never seen the clan leader Bakwill be so excited before.

"Excellent!" Bakwill was so excited that his face was red. He slapped his son on the shoulders. "Sequeira, your wife has rendered great merits."

"Right." Sequeira nodded excitedly as well.

And then, Sequeira rushed to his wife, embracing Cecily as he excitedly kissed her. "Lily, you actually are with child...I...thank you...really...thank you so much!" Sequeira said excitedly.

Cecily, seeing her husband so affectionate and ardent, even with the clan leader nearby, felt both amazed and awkward.

"I have a child." Sequeira stretched his hand out, gently placing it on his wife's belly.

"Huh?" Cecily stared, puzzled, at her husband. She saw Sequeira's right hand slowly emit a blood colored glow which was extremely bizarre. Sequeira's face was full of excitement, but slowly, Sequeira's expression froze. He stared in astonishment at his nearby wife, Cecily.

Cecily felt puzzled by the look in his eyes.

"WHAP!" With a sudden swing of the hand, he struck his wife heavily on the face, knocking her into the ground far away.

"Bastard, slut!" Sequeira was so angry, his entire body was trembling.

Cecily held a hand to her face, staring at her husband in disbelief.

"Sequeira, what are you doing!" Bakwill was enraged.

"Father." Sequeira turned to look at his father, saying hurriedly, "That... isn't my child!"

Bakwill was stunned. "Sequeira, are you saying...?"

Sequeira nodded.

Bakwill's face instantly sunk down, as though covered by a layer of frost. Bakwill glanced sideways at Cecily, then said in a voice that was like ice, "Sequeira, this woman is no longer worthy of being your principal wife. You decide how to punish her. After a period of time, prepare to take another wife."

"Yes, Father!" Sequeira turned to stare furiously at Cecily.

Cecily's face was filled with confusion. She immediately said hurriedly, "Sequeira, this is your child, why do you say it is another's?"

Actually, not even a Deity was able to tell if the fetus in his wife's body was or wasn't his own. But some people were exceptions! For example, Linley, because Linley belonged to the Dragonblood Warrior clan.

Any descendant of the Dragonblood Warrior clan would definitely have the lineage of the Dragonblood Warriors. Even if the amount was sparse, it would still definitely be there!

If there was no Dragonblood Warrior lineage in one's body, then one definitely didn't belong to the clan.

"Why?" Sequeira was so furious, his facial muscles were twitching.

The Bagshaw clan belonged to the 'Bloodrune Titan clan' of the Infernal Realm. The descendants of the Bloodrune Titan clan all had the Bloodrune Titan lineage in their veins. Of course, there were varying degrees of density, and if the density reached a certain level, they would possess extremely great power.

Just now, Sequeira had used some of their clan's special energy for sensing, only to discover...

The child in the belly of his wife actually didn't have any of his clan's lineage at all!

Without even a hint of the lineage of his clan, it meant that this child was definitely not his own!

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 21, I Want Him Dead!

"You played me for a fool!" Sequeira stared at his wife, his eyes like death. "The child in your belly is someone else's." Sequeira doted dearly on his wife. When he had gone to the Free Castle, it was for buying clothes for her, but who would have imagined that his wife actually had another man!

And the child in her belly was that man's!

The Bloodrune Titan clan was an extremely mighty clan within the Infernal Realm, and the power they controlled was astonishing as well. In Miluo Island, although on the surface, the five clans were in charge of things, in reality, the other four clans were simply subordinate clans to the Bagshaw clan!

The Bagshaw clan was the Bloodrune Titan clan. This was a secret which very few people knew.

At least, Cecily didn't know it. Otherwise, she wouldn't have run over so excitedly to tell her husband that she was with child.

"No...no!" Cecily hurriedly shook her head.

"This woman doesn't even admit it." The nearby clan elder, Bakwill, said furiously, "Son, this is a shame to our clan. If this woman refuses to admit it, then destroy her entire familial branch within the Gaylord clan!"

Cecily's body trembled.

The Gaylord clan, one of the five clans, was extremely large, with very many family branches. Destroying one of the branches, to the true masters of the Miluo Island, the 'Bagshaw clan', would need nothing more than a single word.

"Speak!" Sequeira stared coldly at his own wife as well.

Sequeira cared deeply about his face, and he was always very proud of the fact that he was a member of the Bloodrune Titan clan. He himself was the son of the clan leader, and was definitely in the principal line of descent, of an extremely exalted status. He was very haughty. Now that his wife had another man's child in her belly, of course he was already going mad!

His face was so ugly, it was turning purple!

"Hurry, speak!" Sequeira landed a kick on Cecily's body, who was struck viciously by that kick and sent smashing into a decorative boulder. "Otherwise, you and your lineage in your clan lineage will all die!" Sequeira said in a frenzy.

"I'll talk, I'll talk." Cecily said hurriedly. She was about to go mad.

Actually, she herself wasn't sure who the child in her womb belonged to, because previously, she had been dealing with two men at the same time. One was Sequeira, while the other was Cesar. She had slept with both men, and so she herself wasn't sure whose child it was.

Originally, as Cecily viewed it, since even she couldn't be sure, she might as well say that it was Sequeira's. There was no way for him to tell anyhow.

Unfortunately, she didn't know that the Bagshaw clan was the Bloodrune Titan clan!

"Even I don't know for sure who the child belongs to." Cecily, seeing the rage on Sequeira's face, hurriedly added, "But I'm certain that it is either yours or Cesar's!"

"Cesar?"

Sequeira was stunned, and then he raised his head to the skies, laughing wildly. "Hahahaha...." His laughter carried boundless insanity within it, and his body faintly began to glow with a bloody light. He, Sequeira, a favored son of the heavens, had never suffered such a humiliation before.

Could there be anything more insulting than his woman having another man's child in her womb?

"Cesar...I want him dead!!!" Sequeira snarled viciously, his eyes glowing with a faint, bloody light, as though he were a man-eating wolf.

At Tarosse's residence. Over the past few days, Linley had lived here very comfortable, each day watching Lomio's ten battles at the arena. He also often chatted with his old friends. As for Aches, Bates, and the others, they had left Miluo Island long ago.

"Lomio really is powerful." Pushing the courtyard gates open, Linley and the others walked in while chatting amongst themselves. "That saber blow of his is all but undefeatable. It just chops the opponents in half."

"He is proficient in both material attacks and soul attacks." Tarosse sighed in praise as well.

Olivier agreed, "In particular, his speed is also astonishing. Lomio is simply too powerful. Each time, he wins with such ease. Up till now, nobody has been able to exchange a few blows with him. All of them were defeated with the first blow."

Thinking back to the sight in the arena, Linley felt amazed as well.

In the Arena, Lomio was simply too arrogant. He held everyone in condescension, but he had the strength to do so!

"Linley, you're back." Dylin laughed as he came down from upstairs, and Linley's group went to welcome him. "Dylin, where's Cesar?"

"Cesar?" Dylin frowned, lowering his voice. "He's sleeping."

"Sleeping?"

Deities didn't need to sleep at all, and Cesar normally wouldn't sleep. However, ever since his relationship with Cecily had been destroyed,

Cesar had become depressed and would often just lounge around lazily and sleep.

Tarosse shook his head and sighed. "Don't disturb him. Just let him rest."

Just as Linley's group of people were gathered together and chatting, young master Sequeira of the Bagshaw clan, a sinister look on his face, was leading three black armored experts out of his ancestral estate. These three black armored experts were true elites of the Bagshaw clan.

"This Cesar actually dares to live amongst the island guards!" Sequeira became all the more enraged.

Cesar had slept with his woman, and was now living on his clan's grounds!

"Let's go!" Sequeira immediately flew into the heavens, moving at high speed straight for the island guards residences. Those three black armored warriors quietly followed.

Moments later, Sequeira arrived at the island guards region. The patrolling guards immediately came to welcome him. Seeing the four of them, these guards couldn't help but be very shocked, especially upon noticing those three black armored warriors. Those silent black armored warriors were like three glaciers.

Although they were silent, they gave others a feeling of being unable to breathe.

“Go. Hurry and summon a thousand-man regiment!” With a wave of his hand, Sequeira revealed his blood-colored Miluo Insignia.

“Blood-colored Miluo Insignia!” The patrolling guards were shocked, and then immediately said while bowing respectfully, “Yes, milord.” Although they were puzzled as to why a thousand-man regiment was being summoned, anyone with a blood-colored Miluo Insignia could easily summon and order about a thousand-man regiment.

Soon, a thousand-man regiment was summoned.

“Young master Sequeira.” The commander of the thousand-man regiment immediately recognized Sequeira. “What are you...?”

“No questions. Follow me!” Sequeira ordered coldly.

The thousand-man commander was startled. He realized that today, Sequeira’s expression seemed rather different. In the past, Sequeira would always be smiling and laughing, but today, Sequeira’s face was simply too ugly to behold, and the aura his body was radiating was one of danger!

“Whoosh!”

Sequeira was the first to fly into the air, with the three black armored guards following. After them was the massive, dense cluster of a thousand island guards.

"Number 306!" Sequeira still remembered the address which his wife had given him, for where Cesar was living. Generally speaking, the addresses for the island guards had very large numbers, but 306 was an extremely small number. Generally speaking, only some rather special people could live there.

For example, Highgods who had won a hundred battles.

Tarosse's residence. Linley's group was seated together.

"Tarosse, you truly aren't willing to leave with us?" Linley asked yet again. "Cesar has agreed to leave with us."

In the end, Miluo Island wasn't the 'root' for Tarosse and the others.

However, the Indigo Prefecture was where the Four Divine Beasts clan was located. Linley wanted to gather there with those people as well. Cesar was willing to leave, but O'Brien had to stay with Tarosse. Tarosse had given him a God-level spark, in exchange for his service.

"No need. We don't want to leave this place." Tarosse laughed, then shook his head.

Dylin shook his head as well. "We've lived here a long time, and we've grown to consider this place our home in the Infernal Realm. We don't want to leave."

Linley could only laugh helplessly.

"A few days after Lomio's battles conclude, we'll leave." Linley said.
"Such a pity. I wanted to be together with the rest of you, but there's nothing for us. I have to go to the Indigo Prefecture." Linley wouldn't try and force them either.

If they weren't willing, then forget it.

"Sorry, Linley." Dylin apologized.

"It's fine." Linley shook his head.

Suddenly, Linley was startled. Raising his head, he saw a large number of island guards in mid-air.

"Why are there so many island guards? What major event is happening?" Tarosse was surprised as well.

But Linley noticed that the leader of this large group of guards was that arrogant young man with short red hair. Sequeira!

"What's he doing here?" Linley was startled.

Right at this moment, that large group of people descended. Sequeira led the three black armored warriors into the courtyard, while over a hundred of the other island guards also landed there, with the rest hovering in the air.

"Boss!"

"Linley!"

Delia, Bebe, and Olivier all rose to their feet. They saw Sequeira as well.

"Are they here for us?" Delia asked through divine sense.

Linley stared at Sequeira, completely not understanding. Given what he had expected, Sequeira shouldn't be causing such a ruckus over that small matter. But Sequeira had clearly brought a large number of experts to surround them.

"Who are you?" Tarosse stood up.

"Tarosse." The thousand-man commander laughed calmly. "This is young master Sequeira of the Bagshaw clan! He has business."

"Bagshaw clan!"

Tarosse and Dylin couldn't help but be stunned.

Sequeira just glanced at Linley. "You are here as well." And then, Sequeira paid no further attention to Linley. He shouted angrily, "Where is Cesar? Have him roll out!" His angry shout shook the entire courtyard.

"Cesar? He's here for Cesar?" Linley began to frown. Sequeira wasn't here for Linley, but was here for Cesar, but for what? Could it be that it had something to do with that woman named Cecily?

"Young master Sequeira, what are you looking for Cesar for?" Tarosse asked.

"No questions. Just have him roll out!" Sequeira stared around at the building, and then Sequeira let out a cold sneer, directly releasing his divine sense and almost immediately locating Cesar. He couldn't help but look towards the second floor of the little building.

"Who is looking for me?" A lazy voice rang out, and Cesar walked out, flying directly down from the second floor.

"You are Cesar!" Sequeira stared at him.

"You are... Sequeira!" Cesar's eyes immediately grew fierce, and became filled with rage.

Seeing the look in his face, Sequeira began to laugh wildly. This loud laughter caused Linley and the others nearby to have a bad feeling. The suppressed rage which Sequeira had held in his heart was now bellowing forth, and Sequeira's eyes were faintly red.

Deities lived for too long.

It was very normal for a female Deity to have had multiple relationships with different men.

Sequeira wouldn't care too much.

As long as his wife wasn't with any other men while they were together, that was enough. But what enraged him was...the child in the womb of his wife belonged to another man! Given Sequeira's temper, how could he possibly swallow this insult?

"Sequeira, why have you come looking for me?" Cesar said coldly.

"Why?" Sequeira raised his head to the skies and laughed loudly, his body beginning to brim with a bloody light, and then he stared at Cesar. "Today, I'm going to kill you!"

The faces of Linley's group immediately changed.

Sequeira stared at the surrounding people, then said loudly, "Today, my Bagshaw clan is going to execute this Cesar. All of you others, leave. If you don't leave...then you are becoming enemies of our Bagshaw clan!"

The faces of O'Brien, Linley, and the others turned ashen.

Cesar seemed very tranquil. He turned to look at Linley and Tarosse, then shook his head. "Don't worry about me. Actually, recently, I myself have felt that my continued existence has no purpose. There's no need to offend them for my sake."

"How can this be acceptable?" O'Brien stepped forward, staring at Cesar. "Cesar, we came here from the Yulan continent together. Over so many years, have any of us ever abandoned each other? At worst, we'll die together. What is there to fear!"

"O'Brien, resisting blindly is just death." Tarosse let out a low sigh, then walked off to one side. "I won't interfere in this matter."

Linley was startled.

"O'Brien, don't resist. Resisting means throwing your life away. There's no point." Dylin shook his head as well. He actually walked to one side as well. As for Dylin's two children, those two Six-Eyed Golden Ni-Lions, they stared with shock on their faces.

"Father." The two Six-Eyed Golden Ni-Lions stared at Dylin.

"Come over." Dylin snapped at them.

The two siblings exchanged glances, but they had no choice but to follow their father.

"You...you..." O'Brien didn't dare believe it. When they had come to the Infernal Realm, they had adventured together and treated each other's lives like their own. Everyone believed...that none of them would ever abandon each other. However, how did things end up like this today?"

"Excellent!" Sequeira said coldly, and then looked towards Linley. "As for you, sir?"

"Me?" Linley, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier all looked at each other.

In their smiles, they knew what each other were thinking.

Linley laughed. Taking three steps forward, he walked to the side of Cesar and O'Brien. In a calm voice, he said, "I, too, am from the Yulan continent. None of us will abandon one of our own!"

"I, too, am from the Yulan continent!"

Delia, Bebe, and Olivier walked forward as well, with Linley as their leader.

Linley's face grew solemn, and his gaze flashed through this group of Highgods.

He understood...

"This time, we really are going to go all out. I cannot show any mercy or forbearance!" Linley's heart was beginning to fill with a killing intent. At a critical time like this, if necessary, he would sacrifice a drop of Sovereign's Might and launch a slaughter that would turn the world upside down.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 22, All Who Bar My Path Shall Die!

Sequeira saw Linley step forward. His face changed slightly. He knew very well how powerful the person in front of him was. If Linley was to interfere, then a new variable would have entered this affair. Sequeira said coldly, "Today, my Bagshaw clan is definitely going to kill Cesar. Can it be that you all want to die with him?"

But Linley's group didn't hesitate or retreat at all.

"Linley, O'Brien, Bebe." Cesar looked towards them, shaking his head slightly.

"Haha..." O'Brien began to laugh loudly, then looked at Cesar. "Cesar, we've lived so many years, and have seen countless things! Our life is important, but sometimes, there are some things which are more important than life! Today...either we shall all live together, or we shall all die together!"

Cesar trembled. He looked towards Linley's group.

Linley's group smiled back at him.

"Sequeira!" Linley turned to look at Sequeira. Linley could tell that Sequeira was currently slightly hesitant. As Linley saw it, it would be best if battle could be avoided. Linley thus said, "Sequeira, what sort of enmity do you and Cesar have, exactly, that you must force him to his death? Everyone should take a step back!"

Anyone else who said these words would be as good as looking for death.

But Linley saying these words was a different situation, because in Sequeira's heart, Linley was very possibly a Seven Star Fiend!

"What is it about?" Sequeira was furious just thinking about this. "You ask him!" Sequeira pointed furiously at Cesar.

"Me?" Cesar had no idea.

Sequeira was so angry that his face was purple, but how could he so openly and publicly discuss this affair? Was he supposed to directly say that the child in his wife's womb was another person's? Once this got out, most likely he, Sequeira, would be a laughingstock for the rest of his life!

"Hmph!" Sequeira, seeing the look on Cesar's face, couldn't help but sneer.

"You are doing this because of Lily?" Cesar laughed coldly. "It must be for Lily's sake, as otherwise, how would you, the mighty young master of your clan, come here for me?"

"Shut your mouth!"

Hearing Cesar call Cecily by her nickname 'Lily' in such an intimate manner, Sequeira was all the more enraged. "You aren't worthy of calling her by that!"

"Haha..." Cesar laughed wildly as he stared at Sequeira. "I'm not worthy of calling her by that? It's true that Lily and I were once together, but so what? Ever since you married her, the two of us never met again! What, can it be that after getting married, you are going to kill all of the men who were previously lovers with your wife?"

Immediately, the many island guards in the air and in the courtyard all began to speak quietly amongst themselves.

Deities had an unlimited lifespan. It was normal for people to have had many romantic relationships. If Sequeira were to truly say that he was going to kill a former lover of his wife, that would be going too far.

"So that's what this is about!" Linley felt rather surprised as well. He had heard of the affairs of Cesar and that woman. That woman had met with Cesar one last time before her wedding, and then they had never met again.

Linley empathized for Cesar.

But who would have imagined that Sequeira would come to kill Cesar!

"Cut the crap!" Sequeira was furious, and yet he couldn't even explain the real reason he was so angry. Explaining something so shameful, to him, was something worse than death!

"I'll ask you one last time. Are you really insisting in interfering?!" Sequeira stared death at Linley. He didn't even glance at Cesar. He held Cesar in utter contempt. As long as he were to attack, he could kill Cesar in the blink of an eye.

The one he worried about was only Linley, who stood in front of him!

"Young master Sequeira, why do you care so much about this God?" The thousand-man commander was puzzled. Even Tarosse and Dylin were confused about this.

"I am!"

Linley said calmly, "Even if it was just for the sake of the friendship we held, I cannot possibly just sit and watch. What's more, Cesar has saved my life before!" Linley's expression was calm, but in truth, the energy in his body was boiling, prepared to explode into an attack at any point.

Sequeira narrowed his eyes slightly, a cold look being revealed.

"Quick, go inform my father that someone who is apparently a Seven Star Fiend is getting tangled up in this matter." Sequeira immediately sent a mental message to one of the black armored warriors. A hint of surprise appeared on the black armored warrior's face, and then with a flash, he disappeared.

Seeing this, Linley couldn't help but furrow his forehead.

"Haha..." Sequeira suddenly began to laugh wildly.

"Kill!" Sequeira suddenly howled.

The surrounding guards were clearly prepared for this the entire time. In the instant Sequeira gave the order, all of the island guards immediately made their move. Clearly, Sequeira wanted to launch a sudden attack to catch Linley off-guard and thus seize the opportunity to kill Cesar at once.

However, as soon as Sequeira ordered that black armored warrior off, Linley had been prepared.

In the same instant that Sequeira let out that furious howl...

"Rumble..."

With Linley at the center, within three hundred meters, a misty earthen light arose. This region was large enough to cover a large number of the island guards, including both Sequeira and their leader, the thousand-man commander.

Blackstone Space!

Powerful gravity!

"Aaaah!" Some of the guards who had been flying up in the air, not too far away, were caught within the sphere as well, and all of them dropped at high speed. As for Sequeira, who had been on the ground to begin with, his body involuntarily hunched down for a moment before he then immediately straightened his waist.

"Not good!"

Sequeira's face changed dramatically, because he saw that Linley was charging towards him at high speed!

To subdue bandits, first capture their king!

Linley had made his plans long ago. "It will be hard for anyone to flee from Miluo Island, but Sequeira is clearly an important figure. If we can capture him and use him as a hostage to threaten the others, the situation would be much better!" In the same instant he created his Blackstone Space, Linley charged straight for Sequeira.

"What terrifying gravity!" Sequeira's face changed dramatically while at the same time he immediately retreated.

"Young master!" The two black armored warriors by Sequeira's side, ignoring their own lives, immediately interposed themselves in front of Sequeira, forcibly blocking Linley's path to him.

"Die!" Linley's gaze turned cold.

"BANG!"

Linley's clothes exploded violently, and he instantly Dragonformed. Azure-golden draconic scales covered every part of Linley's body, and those dark golden eyes stared coldly at the people in front of him. That draconic tail, flashing with a metallic light, began to wave.

Seeing this, those island guards, Sequeira, the thousand-man commander, and the black armored warriors all felt their hearts tremble.

"An ultimate expert!" The island guards had all thought that Linley was just a God, but now they realized how terrifying Linley was. All of them immediately believed that Linley had been hiding his true strength, and that his true status was that of an extremely powerful expert.

"Four Divine Beasts clan!" The thousand-man commander was greatly shocked.

"He's of the Four Divine Beasts clan!" Sequeira, while rapidly retreating, was surprised as well.

"Kill!" Sequeira shouted explosively once more.

So what if he was of the Four Divine Beasts clan? The current Four Divine Beasts clan was not like how the Four Divine Beast clans had been in the past. The former Four Divine Beast clans, their Bagshaw clan might perhaps be frightened of, but these days...their Bagshaw clan didn't fear them at all!

They were capable of controlling Miluo Island and keep it proudly erect in the Starmist Sea. The true power of the Bagshaw clan was such that not even Sequeira, the young master of the clan, knew more than just the tiniest bit.

"Linley, he...!" Tarosse, Dylin, Cesar, and O'Brien were all greatly shocked.

"Die!" The dark golden eyes swept past those two black armored warriors. A surge of spiritual energy centered around the 'black stone' suddenly surged towards those two black armored warriors. Instantly, a strange wind sound began to thoroughly penetrate their souls.

The two black armored warriors both hesitated slightly.

"Swish!" A devilish violet light flashed.

"Clang!" Those two black armored warriors actually both drew their weapons, blocking Linley's sword.

Although the soul-affecting power was great, these two black armored warriors could be considered true elites of the Bagshaw clan. Both of them had the power of a Five Star Fiend. Although they were affected by the wind sound, they didn't fall into a stupor, and were able to maintain their grip on a hint of wakefulness.

"Whap!" The draconic tail viciously slammed upon the shoulder of a black armored warrior.

"Crunch!" Flesh and blood exploded out, and an arm and half the side of his body was split off. The black armored warrior seemed to have been struck by a meteor, and was knocked far away. The black armored warrior was greatly shocked. Fortunately, he had dodged quickly enough, as otherwise, Linley's draconic tail would have swept onto his head.

The whipping strikes of Linley's draconic tail were simply too powerful!

"Whap!" The other black armored warrior was sent flying as well.

"Hmph." Linley's gaze was focused on the frantically fleeing Sequeira. Although the above took time to describe, in truth, when Linley charged past the two black armored warriors, he just struck out twice with his draconic tail, fast as lightning, and sent them flying.

Sequeira had been so terrified by the previous scene that his face was greatly changed. The two black armored warriors hadn't been able to stop Linley for even a moment!

"You want to flee?!" Linley laughed coldly.

Instantly, the gravitational pull that had been towards the ground changed. As Linley's divine power flowed out and began to fluctuate, immediately, all living things within the Blackstone Space sensed an astonishingly powerful gravitational force that was tugging them towards Linley. The sudden change in gravity caught all of the enemies off-guard.

"How is this possible?!"

Sequeira could sense that he was unable to overcome this gravity, and was actually being drawn backwards!

How could he be moving backwards?!

Immediately, his body emanated a bloody light, allowing Sequeira to just barely resist the force. But still, he was completely unable to move forward. The backwards gravity was simply too strong.

“Young master Sequeira!” The thousand-man commander, however, was able to resist the gravity.

“Block him!” The thousand-man commander shouted loudly. Even if a thousand island guards died, it didn’t matter, but Sequeira couldn’t die! The Bagshaw clan had too few people. Every single member of the clan was precious, and what’s more, Sequeira was of the primary line!

All of the island warriors were unsteady right now, and because they were squeezed into too small a space, they were tightly clustered together. They didn’t dare to wildly chop out with their weapons, because they might hurt their own people!

“Fleeing?” Linley increased his speed. Sequeira couldn’t be allowed to flee. Linley wasn’t too far away, and so naturally, he almost instantly appeared next to Sequeira.

“Bang!” A wave of powerful energy struck onto Sequeira, but Linley couldn’t help but be astonished. That wave of energy had actually come from the nearby thousand-man commander.

“Swoosh!” Sequeira instantly was knocked far into the distance, outside of the effect of the gravitational field.

After having left the gravitational field, Sequeira flew for another thousand meters before coming to a halt. He felt a sense of terror in his heart. "This member of the Four Divine Beast clans is simply too terrifying. That gravity was just...even I was unable to resist it. Fortunately, that last blow!"

Sequeira felt very grateful towards the thousand-man commander. That last attack was very queer; it didn't possess much harmful power.

It was just a very heavy blow which impacted him, constantly pushing him outwards at high speed. This surge of force, combined with Sequeira's own power, naturally shot him out rapidly.

"Kill, kill! Kill him for me!" Sequeira immediately shouted explosively!

Only two hundred or so people were trapped in the Gravitational Space, while the eight hundred other island guards were flying high in the sky. They wanted to attack, but the people trapped in the Gravitational Space were too densely clustered, and most of them were their own people. They didn't dare to engage in group assaults.

If they did, they would injure their own people!

"Terrible!" As soon as Sequeira escaped, Linley's heart lurched.

The situation just turned terrible!

After Sequeira escaped, he definitely wouldn't be so careless as to fall into the Gravitational Space again.

The plan of capturing Sequeira had failed!

"Now, only the second method is left to me!"

A slaughter was about to commence!

At present, Cesar and O'Brien were watching in stunned shock. They had believed that Linley was just a God and had come to die by their sides. They had been certain that they were going to die, and had been prepared to fight to their deaths. But now, they discovered...

They were wrong, ridiculously wrong!

Those island guards and black armored warriors weren't even able to stand on their feet steady, within that Gravitational Space. Those people, in front of Linley, were like a flock of sheep, while Linley was a savage wolf. The wolf entered the flock of sheep!

"Linley, he..." Cesar and O'Brien were both rather stunned.

"The situation right now is very bad. Having not captured Sequeira, all we can do is slaughter a path out! To prevent them from engaging in group attacks, we have to battle within their groups. Only within their groups will we be able to avoid the group attacks of the other island guards!" Linley's voice rang out in Cesar, O'Brien, Delia, Bebe, and Olivier's minds.

Cesar and the others immediately focused their attention.

"Remember, follow me!"

After giving this instruction to those behind him, Linley let out a growl, then like an explosively enraged lion, led Cesar, Bebe, and the others to charge directly into the group of island guards in front of them!

"All who bar my path shall die!"

At this moment Linley's heart was as cold and hard as iron. He would no longer show any mercy!

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 23, Turning the World Upside Down

Within the Bagshaw clan's estate.

The only sound that could be heard was that of the gentle wind. Only, a large number of figures flew out from within the Bagshaw estate, moving at high speed towards the residential area for the island guards. It must be understood that those who lived at the Bagshaw clan estate, aside from the elites of the Bagshaw clan, were the true experts.

In mid-air.

His long red hair fluttered unrestrained. Bakwill's face was emotionless as he flew at high speed. Behind him was three experts dressed in long red robes, two of them men, one a woman. The three red-robed experts were the true experts of the Bagshaw clan...

In the Bagshaw clan, the number of red-robed elders was extremely low. They were, however, one of the main reasons why the Bagshaw clan was able to stand so tall in the Infernal Realm, to erect Miluo Island, and ignore the official powers.

Every single red-robed elder was a Seven Star Fiend!

The Bagshaw clan, in the entire Infernal Realm, was one of the ancient clans that was ranked within the top ten! The Four Divine Beasts clan, before their fall, was of course far superior to the Bagshaw clan. But now that they had declined, they were a level weaker than the powerful, full-strength Bagshaw clan.

"Seems to be a Seven Star Fiend?" Bakwill was full of worry.

He was worried about his son!

"Whoooosh!" Bagkwill flew at high speed, with three red-robed elders behind him, and a hundred black-armored warriors behind the elders.

"Swish!"

A ray of blood-colored light spread out at high speed into the skies, from the residential area for the Miluo Island's guards. As it flew high into the skies..."BANG!" It released a powerful explosive sound, while at the same time the blood-colored light expanded greatly, instantly seeming to become an eye-piercingly bright blood-colored sun.

The faces of Bakwill and the three red-robed elders changed.

This was the emergency call-to-arms for Miluo Island, ordering all of the warriors of Miluo Island to immediately enter battle mode as well as prepare to attack.

"Let's move ahead!" Bakwill sent out his divine sense.

Immediately, Bakwill and the three red-robed elders increased their speed dramatically, instantly throwing off the nearly hundred black-armored warriors behind them. The four Seven Star Fiends transformed into four blurs, instantly moving into the distance. Bakwill, as soon as he saw the signal, was worried for his son.

Indeed, the situation had turned extremely, terrifyingly grim, for Sequeira to have been forced to release the signal. Sequeira hovered in the air off into the distance, staring at the slaughter down below, his face ashen. "Too terrifying. How could he be so strong?"

A slaughter!

Linley, who had entered berserk mode and was using both his incomparably strong Dragonform as well as the 'Blackstone Space', had released a slaughtering power that caused the hearts of these men to turn cold.

"Kill!" Linley's icy, dark golden eyes were filled without a hint of compassion.

He led Bebe and the others to charge and slaughter into the residential area of the island warriors. Within this region, there were simply too many island guards. Most of them were spread into the various regions, and on the way over, there were quite a few groups of island guards. Linley intentionally charged towards the areas where the guards were the most plentiful.

The Blackstone Space had expanded to its limit as well...a diameter of five hundred meters!

Everyone within this region was affected by the gravitational pull. Within a diameter of five hundred meters, each time he unleashed it, many island guards were caught within. When affected by the gravitational pull, they couldn't help but be dragged closer to Linley. "Bang!" Their bodies smashed through walls but continued to be pulled towards Linley.

"No!" These island guards were terrified as well.

They discovered that there were many island guards already within the gravitational field.

But instantly, the direction of the gravity changed!

Originally, the gravity was directed towards Linley, but suddenly, it became directed to the ground. The sudden change of the direction of the gravity caused those island guards who had been striving to resist the gravity to smash viciously against and fall downwards towards the ground.

"Kill!" Some of the island guards who had suddenly been pulled into the gravity field were enraged.

"Kill!"

The many island guards who had been trapped into the gravity field attacked.

But as soon as they attacked, Linley immediately activated the soul-bewildering effect! All of the island guards who had fallen into the gravitational field entered a stupor, but of course, amongst the island guards were a few experts as well who could just barely remain clear-headed. Against these very few experts, there was only one word...

Kill!

They were able to just barely remain clear-headed, but in the gravity field, how could they compare to Linley in speed?

"Bang!" The devilish Bloodviolet directly chopped an enemy's head apart.

As for those other island guards who were in a stupor, Linley continued to control a small amount of gravitational power to drag them along with him at high speed as he fled.

A violet sword light continued to flash unabated!

An azure-golden blur continued to flicker!

Blood and flesh exploded, skulls shattered, and divine sparks flew everywhere wildly!

Linley's 'earthen yellow light sphere' continued to advance, like a strange, devouring beast that had swallowed the island guards directly into it. Those who didn't resist became stupefied puppets, while those who did resist were mercilessly slaughtered by Linley!

This beast was continuously advancing.

"Bastard." Sequeira, watching this from mid-air, felt his entire body tremble.

"Linley!" Cesar and O'Brien felt their hearts filled with astonishment as well.

"Haha, Boss, this feels great!" Bebe was very excited.

All of them, despite being within the gravity field, were covered by a flowing earthen yellow light, and so they weren't affected at all.

In addition, in the regions through the island guards residential area, more and more island guards had flown into the air, coming in nonstop after having seen the summoning signal in the skies.

Not only were there many island guards on the ground, there were many island guards in the skies as well. In the skies, the island guards were like a swarm of locusts. More than ten thousand island guards were hovering high in the sky. Staring down at that earthen-yellow sphere of light that was constantly advancing, they too couldn't help but angrily curse...

"This bastard!"

As they saw it, Linley really was quite a bastard!

Because within the Blackstone Space, there was a group of stupefied island guards. These guards were like a wall of flesh!

If these island guards in the skies were to attack en masse downwards, the first to be struck would definitely be these 'meat shield' island guards. Linley was completely capable of controlling these stupefied island guards to use them to block any attacks, once they came.

"Can't let this continue." Sequeira gritted his teeth.

He immediately spread out his divine sense towards those ten-plus thousand-man commanders. "Forget about those hundred island guards. Group attacks. Kill that man!"

The thousand-man commanders were all shocked.

"Yes!" They still acknowledged.

Very soon, the ten thousand island guards in the skies all received the orders.

"Attack?" The island guards were all rather surprised, but they still obeyed their orders. In accordance with the group orders, the ten thousand island guards in the skies all began to brandish their weapons, unleashing countless material attacks and physical attacks!

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" "Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

Instantly, countless multicolored attacks filled the skies, falling down from up above like a rain of rainbows. Only, each 'raindrop' was a lethal one!

Seeing this sight, Linley's heart clenched.

"They really are going to do this!" Linley immediately turned, leading the group of people within his gravity field to dodge to the side.

Fortunately, the countless island guards up above them were all afraid of being caught up by this blackstone space, and so they all were rather high up, causing their attacks to have to fly quite a long distance. With such a long distance, even though they flew quickly, there was still enough time to react.

Linley's group dodged!

"Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!"

The attacks descended from the skies. Countless rays of material attacks or soul attacks fell upon them without mercy!

They fell down as tightly clustered as drops of rain.

The thousand-man commanders of the island guards clearly knew that Linley would dodge, and so their attacks were also aimed at the areas which Linley might possibly flee to. Although by doing so, it meant their attacks were not very focused, in the end...Linley wouldn't be able to dodge them all either.

Within the gravity field, those many stupefied guards were controlled by Linley to block from above Cesar, Bebe, Delia, and the others. Linley himself also retreated backwards to stand closer to Delia.

With so many 'meat shields', the soul attacks naturally struck them first, entering the seas of consciousness for those many stupefied island guards. The number of attacks that actually fell directly upon Linley's group came in clusters, with a single 'meat shield' sometimes being able to block multiple soul attacks and quite a few material attacks.

"Quick, prepare the second wave of attacks!" Sequiera immediately shouted.

The thousand-man commanders understood that the first wave of attacks was almost completely absorbed by the 'meat shield'. Linley's group wouldn't actually be harmed much.

But before they had a chance to give the orders, Linley moved.

"Up!"

Linley's group had just relied on the meat shields to avoid that last round of attacks, and as they did so, they immediately charged upwards. Their flying speed was of course extremely fast, and most of the island guards above them hadn't even had a chance to react before Linley flew within several hundred meters of them. Instantly, dozens of island guards above Linley were drawn into that Blackstone Space.

"Ahhhh!" "Ahhhh!" They screamed miserably, but began to sink down at high speed.

But their screams quickly quieted, because they themselves entered a stupor.

The island guards began to panic.

"Flee!"

If they fell into the Blackstone Space, that would be terrible. Linley's sudden upward charge into the middle of the island guards caused them to completely fall into disordered chaos. All of them were terrified of falling into the Blackstone Space, and so they frantically tried to fly farther away from it.

"About time." Linley said to himself.

Instantly, a large amount of earth elemental essence began to rise up.

"Crackle..." The strange thing was, an enormous black cuboid appeared in mid-air. This black cuboid had six sides, and it hovered there in mid air, four hundred meters tall. This enormous black cube contained more than a hundred Highgods within it.

This enormous cube was formed from countless miniature cubes that were only four meters tall.

The precise number of the small cubes, was a million!

An enormous cube that was four hundred meters tall, formed from a million smaller cubes. Those Highgods were all trapped within.

This was the true form of the Blackstone Prison – a cube!

“What is this?” Many island guards were astonished.

“Swoosh!” That enormous cube flew towards the east at high speed. Any island guards that were too slow or who weren’t able to dodge, upon contact with the cube, were immediately devoured within.

At the center of the enormous cube, Linley’s group was gathered together.

“Now that these people have come in, it will be hard for them if they want to go out again.” Linley laughed calmly. The gravitational force within the cube was under Linley’s complete control. By relying on changing the direction of the gravity, Linley was capable of causing those within it to lose their sense of direction. In addition, each time they attempted to break through a wall, it would be tremendously difficult.

It must be understood that this was formed from a million cubes, and Linley was capable of soundless altering the insides of this cube.

To escape was virtually impossible.

The only possible way was to forcibly shatter it!

"Linley, what are we going to do?" Delia asked.

"First, we'll fly to the eastern part of the island." Linley had planned this out in advance. "By the time we arrive at the eastern part of the island, we will only have to cause a panic amongst the countless guests. The population in the eastern part of the island is very high. After causing them to panic, we'll be able to seize the opportunity to flee."

This was Linley's second scheme!

"Linley, you...you...when did you become so powerful?" The War God, O'Brien, looked at Linley.

"When we are all safe, I'll tell you." Linley replied.

"Bang!" The outsides of the black cube were currently suffering countless attacks from the island guards. Although the island guards were numerous, their attacks were too spread out. At most, they would be able to destroy a few exterior layers, which Linley could instantly repair.

"I can block those material attacks, but as for the soul attacks, let those unfortunate 'meat shields' block them. The Blackstone Prison is so large that those outside have no way at all of knowing where we are within it."

The countless island guards in mid-air were staying far, far away from that enormous black cube. The black cube thus flew across the skies of Miluo Island, moving at high speed towards the eastern part of the island. Slowly, it drew nearer and nearer to the eastern part of the island.

"What's that?"

The countless outsiders of Miluo Island raised their heads, staring at the enormous black cube.

Suddenly...

Four blurs shot at high speed towards that black cube, while at the same time, a dazzling, enormous black saber-light flashed, slashing directly across the black cube. Although it seemed to cut through it with difficulty, in the end, it still chopped through the center of the black cube.

"BANG!" The black cube crumbled.

The Dragonformed Linley, with Delia, Bebe, and the others, hovered there in mid-air.

"You won't be able to flee!" A cold voice rang out. The speaker was Bakwill, who along with the three red-robed elders were staring coldly at Linley.

Linley stared at his surroundings.

Currently, the area around them was surrounded by dense clusters of island guards who had already formed a sphere around them, completely sealing them off. From afar, the countless outsiders at the eastern part of the island were raising their heads to stare at this place.

“Those four are very powerful.” Linley felt a hint of tension. That blade just now had been launched by one of the red-robed men, but the red-robed men were clearly under the command of that red-haired man. Linley had no confidence at all in his ability to fight those four head on!

“It seems...I’ll have to use plan three.” Linley’s gaze slowly turned ice cold.

Plan three...was the final plan!

It was time to use the Sovereign’s Might!

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 24, Life and Death, Two Paths

Currently at Miluo Island, at the air above the border between the western and the eastern part of the island, tens of thousands of Highgod island warriors were in a sphere, surrounding Linley and his group who were in the center with no place to flee. The greatest threat to Linley, however, was the four people he was facing.

Four Seven Star Fiends!

“A single saber blow that chopped my Blackstone Prison ‘cube’ in half, with enough remaining force that I had to disperse it with my fist. The power of that saber blow was really quite frightening.” Linley felt that his right fist was slightly numb. Lowering his head, he saw that on his fist, there was a white imprint.

Linley was quite astonished.

This was the remaining power from that flash of saber light, after it had chopped through so many walls of the Blackstone Prison! If the saber had landed with full power on Linley, it would be hard to say if his draconic scales would be able to resist it!

“Seven Star Fiend! Definitely a Seven Star Fiend!”

Linley stared at the red-robed man who had launched that saber blow just now. He was a muscular, red-robed man with wild, tousled golden hair like the mane on a lion. At present, this man was currently standing respectfully behind the red-haired man.

"And who is this red-haired man?" Linley was cautious.

The three red-robed elders were by the side of the red-haired man, while young master Sequeira was currently by the side of the red-haired man, appearing quite respectful. However, the red-haired man glanced at him, and Sequeira lowered his head, respectfully stepping to the side.

"Even Sequeira is so respectful, and he seems quite similar in features to Sequeira. Could this be Sequeira's father?" Linley, seeing this scene, guessed to himself. After a short consideration, Linley came to the conclusion...

That the situation was grim!

The three red-robed men were very likely Seven Star Fiends. As for the red-haired man, he couldn't be weak either.

"Using Sovereign's Might is one possibility, but more importantly, I have to protect Delia and the others." Linley was still rather worried. After all... their group was surrounded by a dense cluster of tens of thousands of Highgod island warriors!

This group of Highgod warriors were extremely dangerous as well.

"It seems...I have no other options!" Linley gritted his teeth.

He had to block the opponents while at the same time, he had protect Delia and the others. But the enemy consisted of four Seven Star Fiends. Even if he used his Sovereign's Might, he had to go all out.

Thus, in the worst case scenario, he had to simultaneously use two drops of Sovereign's Might!

One drop for his original body to deal with the four Seven Star Fiends.

One drop for his divine clone to protect Delia and the others.

"That's the worst case scenario." Linley was rather unwilling to do so. After all, this was two drops of Sovereign's Might. But the enemy was too powerful!

"I hope you won't force me to that step."

Linley said quietly to himself.

Currently, as Linley was weighing his opponents, they were weighing Linley as well. They discovered, to their astonishment...that they, four Seven Star Fiends, weren't able to see through Linley at all.

"This person is extremely powerful." The clan leader of the Bagshaw clan, Bakwill, felt astonished. At the same time, he gave his son a hard look.

If it wasn't because of his son, how could they have possibly offended an enemy like this?

"Boslo [Bo'si'luo]!" Bakwill shouted.

"Milord." The lion-like man went forward.

"Go test him. If you can, then kill him." Bakwill ordered through divine sense. Bakwill knew very well exactly how powerful the three red-robed elders accompanying him were. In terms of defense, Boslo was the strongest.

Thus, he was the most appropriate choice for testing the opponent's strength.

"Yes, milord!" Boslo seemed rather excited.

Boslo immediately turned his head, his yellow golden eyes locking onto Linley. Cracking his lips, he laughed loudly. "Haha, just now, you were able to take on my blow. That means you are worthy of knowing my name. I am Boslo. Now, if you die, you won't die without even knowing who killed you!"

Linley just stood there coldly in mid-air.

His body suddenly moved, and his divine wind clone flew out, landing next to Delia, Bebe, and Olivier's sides. Delia was filled with concern as well, while Bebe said through divine sense, "Boss, are you going to use the Sovereign's Might?"

“Right. My wind-style divine clone will also carry a drop of Sovereign’s Might. At a time of danger, I’ll immediately use it.” Linley sent mentally.

Two drops of Sovereign’s Might. One was held by the original body within the Coiling Dragon ring, while the other had been shifted into Linley’s divine wind clone’s interspatial ring. If the situation suddenly changed, Linley would immediately use his Sovereign’s Might!

“Haha, I haven’t even killed you, but you are already so frightened that you sent out your divine clone?” Boslo laughed loudly.

The laughter echoed like thunder in the air above Miluo Island.

“Enough bullshit!” The cold voice burst forth from Linley’s lips. Boslo was slightly startled, and then his face grew solemn as well. With a flip of his hand, he retrieved a pitch black long blade that was two meters long.

Immediately...

The tens of thousands of surrounding Highgods and the countless Deity spectators on the ground all went silent, expectantly waiting for this astonishing battle to begin.

“I didn’t expect that this sort of battle would occur at Miluo Island.” A black haired man carrying a warblade on his back appeared within the ground. Raising his head, he stared at the battle. This was Lomio Bornesen whose fame had become widespread throughout Miluo Island.

Lomio narrowed his eyes, staring at the two men who were about to battle as closely as a viper.

The battle that was being watched by countless people was about to begin!

"Rumble..." That explosive red-robed man, Boslo, wielded his long blade. His speed reached the limit, and because he was too fast, the world itself began to rumble and thunder. In an instant, Boslo appeared high in the air.

And then, Boslo's form tightened!

Silently, soundlessly, Boslo charged down from up above with his long blade, chopping down viciously towards Linley. But the strange thing was...this blade actually didn't make any sound at all, and it didn't cause any spatial vibrations at all.

It looked as though it was a very ordinary blade blow.

"Eh?" Watching from below, Lomio's eyes suddenly lit up. "To have trained to such a level in the Way of Destruction...Miluo Island really is a place of crouching tigers and hidden dragons!" But Lomio discovered that Linley still just stood there, not seeming to care at all.

Lomio was surprised.

Even he, in the face of that saber blow, wouldn't dare to be so casual.

"Formidable." A sigh of praise escaped Linley's lips, but right afterwards...

As Boslo slashed down in a perfect arc, while he was still two hundred meters or so away from Linley, his body suddenly, bizarrely quivered, then was pushed back by several meters. Instantly, the stance of his downwards chopping blow was broken.

"What sort of power is this?" Boslo was astonished. Just now, he clearly could sense a terrifying repulsive power acting on his body. Even at his level of power, when caught off-guard, he couldn't help but retreat.

Even Bakwill and the others, watching at a distance, were astonished.

"Father, that man's Gravitational Space is very bizarre. Not only can it pull downwards, it can also draw inwards or repulse outwards." Sequeira immediately explained to his father through divine sense. Bakwill couldn't help but stare at Linley in amazement. "A Gravitational Space that can reach such a level?"

He didn't dare believe it!

"Haha..." Boslo let out a loud, gravelly laugh, which sounded like the bursting waters of a flood. His flashing golden eyes stared at Linley. "I underestimated you."

Boslo wielded his saber with both hands, forcibly resisting the repulsive force as he charged towards Linley.

Linley just stood there quietly.

"Die." Boslo swung down violently with full force. Wherever his warblade passed by, space itself was chopped open by the sharp blade, with a large crack easily being created. That enormous long blade came straight down towards Linley's head.

Before the long blade arrived, the spatial tremors that it had caused had reached Linley.

"This is the moment!" Linley's eyes suddenly widened viciously.

The repulsive force immediately transformed into a downwards gravitational force!

Boslo felt that he instantly seemed to have had a trillion-kilogram mountain crush down on his body. This sudden gravitational pull caused all of his movements to change. When experts exchanged blows, a sudden change like this had a tremendous impact.

Boslo, caught completely off-guarded, suddenly sank down. Boslo had been chopping down at Linley, but he was now below Linley. How could he possibly hit Linley?

"Hmph!" A cold voice rang out.

An azure-golden light flashed. Linley's right leg struck out like a blade towards Boslo's head, with his Dragonformed body containing such boundless physical strength that this kick actually caused space to crack and rumble.

Boslo was an expert as well. He immediately changed his downwards swing to an upwards block, and wherever the blade of his saber passed, space was parted like the waters of the sea.

“Bang!”

Linley’s right leg slammed viciously onto the blade, but the weird thing was, the power of the blow actually passed through the warblade and into Boslo’s body. Boslo’s entire body twitched momentarily, and at almost the same moment, Linley’s draconic tail also lashed viciously against Boslo’s body.

Boslo had been impacted by the Gravitational Space to begin with and was being impacted by an astonishing downwards gravitational force. Now that he had been successively hit by Linley’s kick and also struck by Linley’s vicious tail.

“Bang!” The earth trembled as Boslo smashed directly into the surface of the other, an enormous, deep crevice appearing on the ground.

The tens of thousands of island warriors and the countless spectators on Miluo Island were all stunned.

He actually had dared to use his leg to kick down towards Boslo’s warblade? And had even knocked Boslo into the ground?

“How hard is his leg?!”

This was what countless people were wondering.

"Swoosh!" Boslo emerged from the ground and flew out at high speed, his face filled with disbelief. At this moment, a voice rang out in his mind. "Boslo, what is going on?"

"Milord, his strength is too powerful. I've never encountered a person whose strength was so great!" Boslo sent back.

His physical strength was indeed vast!

Just now, when Linley's leg had smashed against Boslo's warblade, Boslo had felt as though an enormous mountain that had existed for ten million years had slammed onto his body. The strength of this power was indescribable!

"Milord, just now, my attack...he wasn't injured?" Boslo asked. As he was smashed into the ground, he hadn't had a chance to notice.

"You only broke a few of his draconic scales. You didn't injure him much." Bakwill said.

"My blade attack contained a soul attack as well. He didn't feel anything?" Boslo asked hurriedly. Although he was more proficient in material attacks, his soul attacks weren't weak either. Anyone who didn't have a soul-protecting divine artifact would find it hard to resist.

“His soul defense has to be excellent. I haven’t noticed any change in him.” Bakwill was beginning to worry.

The mysterious expert of the Four Divine Beasts clan in front of him seemed to be rather too powerful.

“How dangerous. Fortunately, my soul-protecting Sovereign artifact ablated ninety percent of the attack power.” Linley was frightened as well. Just now, although the material attack component of that blade chop was powerful, it was only able to shatter his draconic scales and give him a flesh wound.

But the soul attack embodied within the blade had struck like a thunderbolt against that translucent membrane.

Upon smashing into the soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, of course it shattered. After the first blow, 60% – 70% of the power was dispersed, and then the remaining force spread throughout the translucent membrane and discovered the flaw in the membrane. The ‘bandage’ over the flaw was now quite strong, and an enormous amount of force was needed to break through it.

The remaining bit of energy, Linley was able to resist with his own soul power.

“This person is still more proficient in physical attacks. If I were to encounter someone who was an expert in soul attacks...” Linley, just now, had already gripped the drop of Sovereign’s Might into his hand, prepared to use it at any moment.

Bakwill and the three red-robed elders were all hesitating. This Linley was truly unfathomable to them. Even a Seven Star Fiend like Boslo seemed to be at a disadvantage.

But what they didn't know was that even a Six Star Fiend, if proficient in soul attacks, would be enough to deal with Linley.

Unfortunately, they didn't know any details regarding Linley.

After all, they all believed that Linley was hiding his aura.

"His ability at hiding his soul aura is at such a level...how could his soul attacks possibly be weak?" Bakwill and the others all came to this conclusion, which is why they had sent Boslo, who had the strongest material attacks in their group.

"Father." Sequeira said softly.

"F*ck off. Go to one side." Bakwill growled.

Bakwill was frustrated, but Linley was also frustrated. Linley knew his own power. His body was very tough and so he could frighten the opponents, but if they were to truly battle, he would absolutely have to use up his Sovereign's Might.

Linley immediately flew over towards Bakwill.

"What are you doing!" Bakwill immediately used his divine sense to shout. Bakwill and the three red-robed elders all grew guarded, staring at Linley. It was as though if he said a single word wrong, they would immediately attack.

“That Lord Linley is flying over. Can it be that he wants to fight them, one on four?”

The countless spectators on Miluo Island who were watching with their heads raised were all staring at this sight, and Lomio was watching quietly as well.

Linley continued to fly. Roughly at a distance of three hundred meters from Bakwill, Linley came to a halt. Seeing Linley halt, Bakwill and the others calmed down slightly as well.

“How could I be here to cause you trouble? You just don’t know...that at a long distance, my divine sense isn’t long enough to reach you!” Linley didn’t know whether to laugh or to cry. He was only a God. Generally speaking, the divine sense of a God was only a hundred meters.

Although he had refined a large number of amethysts and his soul had grown to the limits of power for a God and was unable to absorb any more, his divine sense was still limited to three or four hundred meters or so. Highgods, however, could generally speak with divine sense to a thousand meters.

Only by drawing closer was he able to speak with divine sense!

“I am Linley!” Linley sent through divine sense to Bakwill.

"Bakwill." Bakwill responded. "Linley, your friends are all surrounded. As long as I give the order, tens of thousands of Highgods will join forces and attack. Your friends will all die. Given your power, you should know the true power of our Bagshaw clan. If we really start to claw at each other's faces and go all out, even if you are an Asura, our Bagshaw clan will still be able to kill you."

The experts of the Bagshaw clan were more numerous than just the few of them present.

"I understand. My power has only been partially revealed as well." Linley sent back through divine sense, while at the same time, Linley stretched out his right hand. In his right hand, a sparkling blue drop of water appeared!

This blue drop of water was giving off a faint yet awe-inspiring aura of power.

The faces of Bakwill and the three red-robed elders immediately changed greatly. "Water-type Sovereign's Might!"

"I don't want for us to rip at each other's faces and go all out. You should know that given my power, if I use this drop of Sovereign's Might... what the results will be!" Linley sent through divine sense.

Bakwill's facial muscles twitched, and then he laughed coldly.

Bakwill flipped his own hand, and a drop of black liquid appeared.

Linley could sense the terrifying energy contained within that black drop of liquid. It was a power on the same level of his blue drop of water, only what it emanated was the aura of Destruction.

"Destruction-type Sovereign's Might?" Linley was shocked as well.

"Your Four Divine Beast's clan has Sovereign's Might. Did you think my Bagshaw clan doesn't?" Bagshaw sent through divine sense. "For you to have a drop of water-type Sovereign's Might means that your position in the Four Divine Beasts clan must be quite high."

It was normal for Bakwill, as the leader of the clan, to be carrying a drop of Sovereign's Might.

The top ten ancient clans of the Infernal Realm, such as the Bagshaw clan, all possessed astonishing power of their own!

"You killed so many of my men. Although they were minor figures, you still besmirched the face of my Bagshaw clan. I'll give you two paths to choose from! The first path is the path where we go all out against each other and engage in a great battle. At worst, my Bagshaw clan will lose a number of experts, but we will still kill you. I wager your Four Divine Beasts clan won't dare to come to my Miluo Island to avenge you!" Bakwill was absolutely confident.

Linley's face didn't change. He continued to listen.

"The second path is, my Bagshaw clan can give you face and forget about those minor figures you killed. However, you must serve my Bagshaw clan and assume the position of a red-robed elder. You must serve the Bagshaw clan without compensation for ten thousand years as a form of apology. In this way, this matter will be at an end."

"Pick a path!" Bakwill stared at Linley.

Which path to choose?

Linley's forehead creased slightly.

Neither of these two paths were 'good' paths. The first went without saying; for the Bagshaw clan to be able to keep Miluo Island erect in the Infernal Realm for countless years meant that this ancient clan's roots and foundation of power definitely exceeded his imagination. Killing Linley wouldn't be too hard!

The second path, be a red-robed elder for ten thousand years?

For an ordinary expert, ten thousand years wasn't much. But to him, it was too long a period of time. From birth until now, he hadn't even lived a thousand years.

"Linley, you haven't made up your mind yet?" Bakwill was growing rather angry. He believed that the conditions he had offered for the second path were already quite good; it was just a short ten thousand years. For ultimate experts, they might spend ten thousand years in a single training session.

"Ten thousand years is too long. I have to go to the Bloodridge Continent on business." Linley sent back through divine sense.

Bakwill's face instantly became all smiles.

Ten thousand years. A hundred years. To experts on the level of Bakwill, there wasn't much difference. If he truly had wanted to punish Linley, he wouldn't say ten thousand years; he would say a hundred million years! After all, to ultimate experts like them, a hundred years or ten thousand years really wasn't a long period of time.

"That's easy to negotiate. Linley, since you are willing to become my clan's red-robed elder, my Bagshaw clan won't go too far either. How about this. No matter what, you still have to show your sincerity in apologizing. Let's just say a hundred years then." Bakwill said.

Actually, Bakwill didn't want to waste his Sovereign's Might either, nor did he want to lose his clan's experts. If he could avoid battle, he would. As long as Linley was willing to give his clan face, it would be enough.

But of course, this was also because Linley's 'power' was too great.

If it had been another person, even another Seven Star Fiend who didn't have Sovereign's Might, Bakwill most likely would have ordered them to be killed already.

"There's nothing I can do. This is the only choice." Linley understood as well.

Although he had two drops of Sovereign's Might, the Bagshaw clan had Sovereign's Might as well. If they really did claw at each other's faces and battle wildly, using up those two drops of Sovereign's Might was a small matter, but whether or not he would be able to safely allow Delia and Bebe and the others to leave was another, greater matter.

Right now, both sides were taking a step back.

He might as well stay a hundred years. By doing so, not only would he save two drops of Sovereign's Might, he would also protect Delia and the others.

"I accept." Linley nodded.

Bakwill instantly laughed.

"Linley, follow us, then." Bakwill sent through divine sense.

Linley nodded, then sent mentally to Bebe and Delia, "Bebe, Delia, Olivier...all of you, follow me." Although Bebe and Delia were full of questions, they still flew over.

"Go back!" Bakwill suddenly said in a clear voice.

And then, Bakwill, the three red-robed elders, Sequeira, Linley, and the others all flew directly towards the western part of the island, with the hundred black armored warriors following. As for those tens of thousands of island guards covering the skies, they were all completely lost.

Not just them. The countless spectators watching the battle with heads raised on Miluo Island were puzzled as well. Why did that lord leave with the people of the Bagshaw clan?

“What just happened?”

“Moments ago, they were battling mightily. Why is it that the Draconian expert left with the people of Miluo Island?”

“Isn’t it obvious that it’s because he fears the people of Miluo Island? Over countless years, there’s been no one who dares to resist Miluo Island.”

“I disagree. Most likely, that Draconian lord was concerned about his friends.”

The countless outsiders of the entire Miluo Island were all chatting about this battle, either discussing Linley’s power or guessing at why Linley had left with them. However, without question, everyone agreed...

That Draconian was very powerful.

He was able to kick a red-robed expert flying and control a large number of Highgods like toys in the palm of his hand.

“Experts are as common as the clouds. It seems as though I should accept the invitation of the Bagshaw clan. Let’s take a look and see...what sort of experts the Bagshaw clan has!” Lomio Bornesen raised his head, watching Linley and the others disappear into the western horizons.

And then, he calmly turned and vanished into the crowds, while the people around him continued to chat excitedly.

While flying towards the western part of the island and towards the residential area of the Bagshaw clan, Olivier, O'Brien, and Cesar all used their divine sense to query Linley. They had bellies full of questions.

"Linley, what did you promise that Bagshaw clan?" Cesar hurriedly asked. His heart was filled with guilt. This was all because of him.

"Boss, what does that Bagshaw clan want us to do?" Bebe queried.

"Linley, are you a Highgod or a God?" O'Brien asked.

The repeated questions from multiple people caused Linley to momentarily not know how to respond.

"My power, I won't explain for now. In the future, I'll explain in detail. You can just consider me as a Six Star Fiend." Linley responded to O'Brien. Six Star Fiend only was a level of power.

It didn't mean he had to be a Highgod.

"Bebe, Delia, they just want me to be a red-robed elder for a century. We'd best humbly take a step back." Linley replied.

Only now was Delia relieved. Delia hadn't been in a hurry to go to the Indigo Prefecture to begin with; she only wanted that Linley wouldn't place himself in too much danger. That tremendous battle that was about to break out just now had terrified her so much that her heart was rising into her throat.

Fortunately, the dangerous moment had passed.

The Bagshaw clan took up an exceedingly wide amount of space, with all sorts of buildings and manors scattered throughout it.

“Linley, from today onward, you can live at the estate.” Bakwill laughed calmly. “We agreed that you would only stay for a hundred years. It’s just a hundred short years. There’s no need for you to make a special oath.”

With a wave of his hand, Bakwill brought out a set of long red robes and a green insignia.

“This is the uniform for red-robed elders. The defensive power of this uniform is equivalent to a Highgod divine artifact. This insignia is a ‘green Miluo Insignia’. In Miluo Island, when you use this insignia, you can easily summon and mobilize a hundred island guards.” Bakwill smiled as he spoke.

Linley immediately smiled and accepted it.

“Lord Bakwill, don’t worry. Within these hundred years, without your permission, I definitely won’t leave on my own.” Linley said.

Bakwill laughed and nodded. “I trust the words spoken by the descendants of the Four Divine Beast clan.” Bakwill knew very well that large clans like theirs, the Bagshaw clan and the Four Divine Beasts clan, all had Sovereign’s Might and would give them out to clan members of exceedingly high status.

As he saw it, for Linley to be able to acquire a drop of Sovereign's Might meant that even in the Four Divine Beasts clan, he was most likely an elder-level figure.

The word of someone like Linley was thus worthy of being trusted.

If he had to swear an oath for simply a hundred years, that would actually be laughable.

"Lord Bakwill, normally, what do I need to do?" Linley asked.

"Not much. Only when any major problems occur would we have the red-robed elders go out. For example, today!" Bakwill teased. "But of course, as a red-robed elder, there is a benefit as well. In the future, you can go to the secret area here in the western part of the island for a viewing."

"The secret area in the western part of the island?"

Linley had heard others speak of this place long ago. It seemed as though the victors of a hundred Arena battles were qualified to go in for a viewing. Linley had wanted to ask more questions regarding this secret area, but that Bakwill just laughed and said, "Linley, I'll leave now. If there's anything you need, feel free to come find me."

Linley didn't feel comfortable chasing after him with questions.

Thus, he simply watched as Bakwill, Sequeira, and the three red-robed elders left.

.....

"Creaaaak." The door shut.

In the main hall, only Bakwill and Sequeira remained.

"Father, you're going to just let Linley live a hundred comfortable years? This is letting him off too easy. How many of our men has he killed!" The rage which Sequeira had suppressed for so long was finally boiling out.

"Hmph!"

A single cold snort, but it struck against Sequeira's heart like a hammer. Sequeira's words instantly came to a halt.

Bakwill turned and gave Sequeira a cold stare. "This matter, if we pursue it to its roots, was caused by that slut and Cesar. She's just a woman. Can it be that for the sake of your slut, my Bagshaw clan would lose several Seven Star Fiend-level experts and one or two drops of Sovereign's Might, while at the same time offending the Four Divine Beasts clan? Is it worth it?"

Killing Linley? They could do that.

But the price was far too high.

"It's just the Four Divine Beasts clan." Sequeira muttered.

"Hmph. An enormous dragon, even after starving to death, is still enormous. Although compared to ten thousand years ago, the Four Divine Beasts clan has changed dramatically and their power has dropped, however...the Four Divine Beasts clan had previously dominated the Infernal Realm for countless years. Their roots are extremely deep."

Bakwill growled, "Our Bagshaw clan is more powerful than the Four Divine Beasts clan, but only by a bit."

Sequeira no longer dared to say a word.

West Miluo Island. The Bagshaw clan's residential area. Linley's estate.

"Elder!" At the estate, two servants respectfully saluted Linley.

Linley was currently dressed in a long red robe. All roving island guards, upon seeing Linley, would be extremely respectful. Linley gave orders to a nearby island guard. "Go to room 306 of the island warriors' residential area. Bring Tarosse and Dylin over."

"Yes, elder." An island guard said respectfully.

Linley turned and returned to his estate. At present, Delia, Bebe, Cesar, O'Brien, and Olivier were all living here. In three steps, Linley reached the rear gardens.

O'Brien, Olivier, and Bebe were chatting idly, but Cesar was in the corner of the garden, sitting there foolishly, thinking who-knows-what.

"Linley." Delia walked towards Linley from behind.

Delia had also noticed the distant Cesar. Sighing, she said, "Most likely Cesar is still thinking about Cecily."

"Right." Linley nodded slightly. Most likely, Cesar would need a long period of time before he could escape this 'valley'.

"Hey, Boss, you came." Bebe immediately rushed over and intentionally said a few words of congratulations. "Boss, I must say, that red elder's robe you are wearing looks quite fetching and handsome."

Linley couldn't help but laugh.

Linley's conversation attracted the notice of Cesar, who upon seeing Linley, immediately ran over, his eyes lighting up. He hurriedly said, "Linley, I want to ask something of you."

"Cesar, if there's anything you need, just say it." Linley had always felt gratitude towards Cesar in his heart.

Cesar said nervously, "For Sequeira to suddenly attack me...I'm worried that possibly some sort of major conflict sprang up between him and Lily.

Otherwise, how could Sequeira have been in such a towering rage and have come for me? After all, the day before her wedding, Lily and I officially broke up. Ever since that day, we never met again, not once."

Up till now, Cesar still didn't know that Cecily had become pregnant with his child.

"Linley, I want to ask you to go investigate and see what is going on with Lily." Cesar begged.

Linley nodded. "Alright. Don't worry. I will go do a careful investigation."

Linley knew a bit about Cesar and Cecily's affairs.

The two of them, Cesar and Cecily, were actually truly in love with each other. Unfortunately, young master Sequeira had taken a fancy for Cecily. The Gaylord clan had thus immediately requested Cecily to marry Sequeira, so as to win the favor of the Bagshaw clan!

How could Cecily disobey the orders of her clan?

Thus, in great pain, she had to separate from Cesar. On the day before her wedding, she hardened her heart and told Cesar that they would never meet again.

"Alas, Cesar is really unfortunate." Linley sighed to himself. "Miluo Island supposedly has five clans, but in reality, the master is the Bagshaw clan. The other four clans are just their subordinates."

He could completely imagine how, in order to ingratiate themselves to Sequeira, the Gaylord clan had forcibly required Cecily to do what had to be done.

Beneath the ground. In a darkened tunnel.

Sequeira was walking with a cold look on his face. On each side of this tunnel were jail cells, each of them quite unusual. They were specially made to detain Deities. This corridor had a black armored warrior on guard every ten meters.

"Slut!"

Whenever Sequeira thought about how his wife Cecily had someone else's child in her stomach, and had so excitedly run over to tell him about it, he felt humiliated. And today, he hadn't been able to kill Cesar because Linley had appeared.

"Linley! He shows up everywhere." Sequeira truly detested Linley. He had first shown up in the Free Castle, and now here as well.

"Time to deal with it." Sequeira took a deep breath. Cecily was the shame of his clan. She definitely wouldn't be permitted to continue living. Once this got out, the Bagshaw clan would become a laughingstock.

He had come here...to kill Cecily. Not because he wanted to, but because his father had ordered it!

After arriving at a cell.

"Open it." Sequeira said calmly, while at the same time showing his blood-colored Miluo Insignia.

In the dark, damp jail cell, Cecily was leaning against a wall, her long hair somewhat in disarray. Hearing the cell door open, Cecily couldn't help but turn to look. Seeing that it was Sequeira, her face changed slightly.

"You...you killed Cesar?" Cecily said in a low voice.

"Yes. I killed him." Sequeira said coldly, as he emotionlessly stared at Cecily, waiting expectantly for that look of despair and agony on Cecily's face.

He got what he wanted!

Cecily's face instantly turned white. Soundlessly, her tears came dripping down. In the short few hours she had been imprisoned here, she had been worried about Cesar. She knew that Sequeira would go seek revenge, and she also knew that Cesar wouldn't be able to stop him.

But...she had still held onto hope. Upon hearing Sequeira's words, though, she lost all hope.

"Cesar..."

Cecily's mind returned to those happy scenes, those days she had spent with Cesar. She had been so happy, so free, without any restrictions from the clan. She could live as she pleased. But...

Sequeira had taken a fancy to her.

And thus, her destiny had been changed. In the face of her clan, she had lowered her head. Even after being married into the Bagshaw clan, she had always forced herself to remain smiling and happy.

"Sequeira!" Cecily suddenly raised her head to stare at Sequeira, her eyes like death. "If it wasn't because you are a member of the Bagshaw clan, you would be less than dogshit. Do you know? Whenever I slept with you, I pretended you were Cesar!"

Sequeira's face turned red and he roared angrily, "SLUT!" With that explosive shout, he immediately launched a heavy, furious slap, smashing down on Cecily's head. "Bang!" Cecily's entire body trembled, and then she slowly slid to the ground. To the very end, Cecily had a strange smile on her face.

She had said those words because she wanted to die.

Death would be an escape.

She would no longer have to continue to force herself to be happy every day. Wouldn't have to force herself not to think of Cesar every day.

"Slut, slut, SLUT!!!!" After having killed Cecily, Sequeira's rage was still endless. In his mind, those final words echoed over and over.

“Do you know? Whenever I slept with you, I pretended you were Cesar!”

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 26, Scryer Records

Since he had promised Cesar, Linley naturally began to ponder as to what method he could use to investigate Cecily's situation. However, despite the fact that he was now a red-robed elder, he didn't have the authority to arbitrarily enter the residence of the clan leader. After having ordered people to bring Dylin and Tarosse over here, Linley began to investigate and see what he could find.

"Magnolia [Ma'ge'nuo'li'ya]!"

Linley quickly strode forward to greet her.

Magnolia. A red-robed elder of the Bagshaw clan. She was the one and only female red-robed elder of the three which Bakwill had brought during the previous battle. Magnolia turned, her violet eyes carrying a hint of a smile. "Mr. Linley, is there something you need?"

"Magnolia, there's something I want to ask about." Linley said hurriedly.

"Go ahead." Magnolia was very courteous.

"Last time, Sequeira was infuriated and wanted to kill my friend. It should have been for the sake of his wife. Do you know the current situation of young master Sequeira's wife?" Linley asked directly.

Magnolia furrowed her forehead, then shook her head. "I'm not sure about that. Sequeira and his wife both live in the clan leader's estate. I normally find it hard to go in there as well. I imagine that those who know of this situation are most likely the servants and the housekeepers of the clan leader's estate. Just those few."

Linley frowned.

The clan leader's estate was the most tightly restricted area in the entire Bagshaw clan. The people who lived there consisted of Bakwill as well as his two sons. Those servants who lived there normally never came out.

To investigate would be very hard.

"If you have the chance, you can just go ask Sequeira or the lord clan leader directly." Magnolia advised.

"Alright. Got it. Sorry for bothering you."

Ask Sequeira or Bakwill? Of course Linley knew that was the best way! But Linley also knew that upon asking, Sequeira or Bakwill would definitely know that he was asking on behalf of Cesar, at which point, what would Sequeira and the others think?

At the very least, they would feel quite uncomfortable.

Unless absolutely necessarily, Linley didn't want to act to make others irritated.

After walking around for a bit, he asked quite a few people with high status, but he still didn't know anything about Cecily's current situation. Disappointed, Linley thus could only first return home. By the time he returned to his own estate, Linley saw Cesar at the gates.

"Linley, how did it go?" Cesar hurriedly asked.

"Cecily lives in the clan leader's estate. Even I'm not allowed to just barge in there. Don't be hasty. I'll ask again in a while." Linley shook his head regretfully.

A look of disappointment flashed past Cesar's eyes, and then he forced out a smile. "I'm in no rush, in no rush!"

Linley sighed in his heart.

"Right. Tarosse and Dylin are here." Cesar said. "They came?" Linley immediately walked inside, and the nearby Cesar hurriedly said, "Linley, you can't blame them. You know how bad the situation was. They didn't want to sacrifice themselves for nothing."

"I understand."

In his heart, Linley didn't blame Tarosse or Dylin too much.

Only, Linley was puzzled. Based on his understanding of Tarosse and Dylin, when that sort of dangerous situation had occurred, those two should have been the first to stand forward. But both of them actually retreated, naturally causing Linley to be filled with disbelief.

Although there was nothing wrong with their decision, from an emotional standpoint, it was still rather hard to accept.

Walking past the corridor, he passed through the courtyard door. Linley saw Dylin and Tarosse, currently seated.

"Boss!" Bebe stood up, then muttered disdainfully from the corner of his lips, "These two came."

Linley just glanced at Bebe. Although he wasn't happy, there was no need for them to stomp on their face like that.

Dylin and Tarosse both immediately stood up as well. The two of them were rather embarrassed. But Linley laughed as he walked over. "Dylin, Tarosse, sit and chat, sit!" Linley himself was the first to sit.

Dylin and Tarosse exchanged a glance.

"Linley, about today, it was our fault." Dylin took the lead to speak. Shaking his head, he said helplessly, "I'm sorry. At the time, we both thought that resistance just meant death, and so..." Tarosse nodded as well.

When a person felt guilty, they would be timid when speaking. This was how Dylin and Tarosse were right now.

"I don't blame you." Linley laughed. "After all, in the end, Cesar's still fine." Linley could tell that Dylin and Tarosse both felt ashamed. Since they were capable of feeling shame, there was no need for him to say anything else.

Tarosse and Dylin both felt relieved.

"Linley!" Tarosse couldn't help but feel puzzled, and so he asked, "I heard that you, by yourself, killed many island guards, and that you even defeated a red-robed elder?"

"That was luck." Linley said.

Tarosse and Dylin looked at each other. They lived here on Miluo Island, and knew how powerful the red-robed elders were. Each red-robed elder had the power of a Seven Star Fiend! But this God in front of them, Linley, had actually defeated a Seven Star Fiend!

Back when they were in the Yulan continent, Linley was only just a Demigod.

"Linley, you...are you a God or a Highgod?" Dylin asked again.

It wasn't Dylin's fault for asking this. Linley's performance had simply been too astonishing.

"No need to discuss this. You can just consider me a Six Star Fiend."

Linley shook his head. "Tarosse, Dylin, I want to ask you about something. I hear that the victors of a hundred battles in the Arena can enter the secret area in the western part of the island. Do you know what is inside the secret area?"

The red-robed elders were qualified to enter the secret area of Miluo Island as well.

What exactly did the secret area of Miluo Island have? Linley was puzzled as well.

"The secret area?" Dylin and Tarosse were both surprised and puzzled.

"Ask Tarosse. I'm not sure." Dylin shook his head.

"Weren't you a victor of a hundred battles in the God Arena?" Linley didn't understand. Dylin explained, "After entering the secret area, you also need to undergo a test within the secret area. Only if you are considered to be qualified will you be allowed to go in for a viewing. I was refused outside the door."

Linley was startled.

There was an inspection for whether or not a person was qualified?

Linley turned to look at Tarosse, who sighed emotionally and said, "The only thing I was able to see in the secret area was a series of scryer recordings!"

"Scryer recordings?" Linley was astonished.

Linley was very familiar with scryer recordings. They were created from a simple 'Floating Scryer' technique, a very simple water-style spell. That year, before Linley had broken up with Alice, Linley had purchased two memory crystals that had been filled with scryer recordings. He had used the memory crystals and filled them with many memories to give to Alice.

Only, after they broke up, Linley had smashed the memory crystals.

"Scryer recordings?" Linley didn't understand.

These scryer recordings could record many memories, but why would the Bagshaw clan treat them as a treasure? What exactly did these images record?

"Right. Scryer recordings." Tarosse said with a sigh. "Recordings of experts who battled each other. Every single scryer recording has recorded some truly astonishing duels, with the experts who were in the duels at least of the Seven Star Fiend level."

Linley's eyes lit up.

For many people, viewing a duel between true experts was of great benefit in helping them to make breakthroughs and gain insights. Normally speaking, it was extremely rare to see a pair of Seven Star Fiends do battle.

"How many duel recordings are there?" Linley was eager as well.

"Very many, at least thousands." Tarosse sighed in praise. "There are so many experts in those recordings. Also, there are explanations and introductions to each of those ultimate experts, including the Sixwing Fiend, the Bloodviolet Fiend, the Snow Fiend, the Silvermoon Fiend...it truly was astonishing."

Linley's eyes were shining as he listened.

So many Seven Star Fiend duels?

"However, my strength was insufficient. I was only allowed to go to the second secret room to do a viewing." Tarosse shook his head. "In the second viewing room, the vast majority were Seven Star Fiend level battles, not just here in the Infernal Realm, but also including experts who are in the other Higher Planes as well as the Divine Planes."

"I hear that the scryer recordings in the first room are truly exciting." Tarosse's eyes were shining. "There are recordings of Asura-level experts, and supposedly, there are recordings of inter-planar battles. And even... scryer recordings of a Sovereign showing his might!"

Linley sucked in a cold breath.

Recordings of a Sovereign showing his might?

"However, that's all in the first room." Tarosse shook his head. "Generally speaking, only red-robed elders or Seven Star Fiends are permitted to go view them. In addition, that's only at the invitation of the Bagshaw clan."

Linley remembered quite clearly how Bakwill had said that as a red-robed elder, Linley was qualified to enter the western part of the island's hidden area.

"The recordings of so many experts engaging in battle is a priceless treasure! Asura-level battles, inter-planar battles...and even Sovereigns attacking?" Linley's heart was blazing. What did those high and mighty Sovereigns look like when they attacked?

He had been a red-robed elder for two days now. During these two days, Linley hadn't found any hint of information regarding Cecily.

"Boss, the secret area actually has so many exciting recordings. Can I go take a look as well?" Ever since they had learned information two days ago regarding the secret area, Bebe had also been desirous of going to take a look.

"I don't have that authority. That's the treasure of the Bagshaw clan." Linley then frowned. "Only, I rather don't understand. The sryer recordings of ultimate experts battling against each other definitely can be considered a priceless treasure."

"But why is the Bagshaw clan willing to open it up to the public and allow the red-robed elders and the victors of a hundred battles to go for a viewing?" Linley was puzzled.

Logically speaking, these recordings should be kept secret.

Bebe rubbed his nose, then muttered, "Maybe it's because the Bagshaw clan is confident in their strength, and so intentionally put on a show of being generous, so as to attract more experts to go to the Arena to fight. That is their lure." Linley nodded slightly as well.

Suddenly, footsteps rang out from behind them. It was a black-armored guard.

"Elder." The black-armored guard bowed respectfully. "Per the orders of the clan leader, tomorrow morning, please gather tomorrow morning at Suncutter Peak in the western part of the island. At that time, you will meet with victors of a hundred battles in the Arena and go into the secret area together!"

Linley's eyebrows lifted up.

"Haha, it came just as we were discussing it." Bebe laughed loudly. "Hey, can I go too?"

The black-robed guard couldn't help but be startled, and then he immediately, courteously withdrew.

"No sincerity."

Bebe snorted. He was uncomfortably curious, but Linley still wasn't able to take him in to do a viewing as well. "Enough, don't be impatient. In the future, you'll have a chance to look."

"What are you talking about? Why so happy?" Delia walked in from her room.

"Ha!" Bebe immediately leapt up in excitement. "I was a fool! Victors of a hundred battle are all qualified to go in. Although I'm a God, I can go win a hundred victories." Bebe was uncontrollably excited. "Last time, I won ten victories. I'll continue!"

Miluo Island. Suncutter Peak.

Suncutter Peak was a very ordinary mountain peak, just a thousand meters tall. Currently, eight people were gathered at the peak, with Linley being the last one to arrive. As Linley arrived and looked at the other seven...

"Three Highgods. Two Gods. Two Demigods." Linley instantly could tell. Those who were allowed to enter the secret area were all victors of a hundred battles. Thus, even Demigod victors would be allowed in.

"Him." Linley instantly noticed that person.

A skinny body, a long black robe, and long black hair, with a warblade on his back. It was Lomio Bornesen!

Currently, Lomio Bornesen had seen Linley, and he was staring at him, his eyes shining. "You are Linley, right?" Lomio had accepted the invitation of the Bagshaw clan, and then had asked around for some information regarding that battle. He had also learned Linley's name.

Linley felt rather astonished. Lomio actually recognized him?

"I saw the battle between you and that red-robed elder the other day." Lomeo's face, normally so hard that it looked as though it had been carved out by a knife, was currently revealing a hint of a smile. His gaze was akin to one who was staring at a precious item. Firmly and forcefully, he said, "Your power is very great! Once we leave from the secret area, I hope we can have a competition."

Linley didn't know whether to laugh or to cry.

This Lomio was utterly insane. Whenever he met an expert, he wanted to fight them.

"Everyone, you are all here?" A familiar figure walked over. His tall form, his short red hair...it was the young master of the Bagshaw clan, Sequeira.

Sequeira glanced at the eight people, his gaze pausing momentarily on Linley, then said loudly, "Alright. I'll lead all of you to the hidden area, everyone. Just stay behind me, and remember, on the way over, don't make trouble. If you are killed by the guards in the hidden area, don't blame others."

"Sequeira." Linley suddenly said.

Sequeira frowned slightly. He didn't have any good feelings towards Linley at all, but he still opened his mouth. "Elder Linley, what is it?"

"I'd like to ask, how is Cecily doing?" Linley asked directly. This question caused Sequeira to be quite embarrassed, but Linley didn't have any other choices. After all, he couldn't enter the clan leader's estate.

For Cesar's sake, he had to ask without consideration for his face.

"You ask me about this?" Sequeira's face was frozen into a frown. He could guess that Linley definitely was asking on behalf of Cesar. Once again, Cecily's dying words echoed in Sequeira's mind.

"When I slept with you, I pretended you were Cesar!"

Sequeira's rage began to rise, and he couldn't help but let out a cold sneer. Knowing Linley's power, however, he knew that attacking meant humiliating himself.

"She...left Miluo Island." Sequeira said coldly.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 27, Secret Area

“Left Miluo Island?” Linley was suspicious as soon as he heard this.

Only a few days had passed since that last great battle, and Cecily had married Sequeira not too long ago. How could she suddenly leave Miluo Island? Even if she had truly left, others should have seen it. But in the past few days, he had asked many people. None of them knew anything about Cecily, nor had they seen her.

“He is lying!” Linley decided.

Why was he lying? Instantly, Linley had a terrible premonition in his mind.

“Everyone, follow me. We’re heading out.” Sequeira’s face was extremely sinister looking right now. After speaking, he led the group of people deep towards Suncutter Peak. Although Linley felt suspicious in his heart, he still followed.

Suncutter Peak. Linley’s group of nine floated into it.

Moments later, Linley’s group arrived at a deep cavernous tunnel, without a hint of sunlight within it. Sequeira was the first to enter the deep tunnel, while Linley’s group of eight hesitated slightly, then entered as well.

“Young master Sequeira.” A Highgod said through divine sense. “Where exactly is this secret area? This tunnel seems to be bottomlessly deep.”

“Just follow me.” Sequeira said calmly.

Linley and Lomio followed quite calmly. What was there to fear? This Sequeira was right in front of them, and either of them could easily kill Sequeira. They didn’t need to fear Sequeira playing any tricks at all. In addition, Linley had learned from Tarosse that the hidden area contained scryer recordings.

“Linley.” A voice rang out in Linley’s mind.

Linley turned to glance at the nearby Lomio. Just now, the one who had sent him the mental message was Lomio. Lomio’s lips curved upwards, and he continued to chat through divine sense. “When I saw you fight, I became certain that the Four Divine Beasts clan really lives up to its fame. Might I ask how strong the other three branches of the Four Divine Beasts clan are?”

“Why so many questions?” Linley responded.

In truth, Linley himself knew very little regarding the Four Divine Beasts clan.

“Right. There’s no need to ask. I’ll know once I’ve truly fought with them. After we exit this secret area, let’s first have a little spar. Afterwards, I’ll head to the Indigo Prefecture of the Bloodridge Continent to seek out the experts of the other three branches of your Four Divine Beasts clan and compete with them.” Although Lomio’s face was calm, his eyes were shining.

Lomio was very eager to battle against other experts.

Linley couldn't help but feel a headache coming.

As soon as he left the secret room, he would have to compete against this madman? It wasn't that Linley didn't like to compete, it was that Linley knew his own strength and weakness. It wasn't so bad if he ran into an expert who specialized in material attacks, but if he encountered an expert in soul attacks, it would be terrible.

Linley cursed inwardly, "This guy, ugh. He's even crazier than that Learmonth was. As soon as he encounters an expert, he wants to challenge them."

While chatting with Lomio through divine sense, given the speed at which Linley was advancing, they had gone multiple kilometers. The strange thing was, however, that despite having gone down many kilometers into the cavern, there was still no end in sight.

"Given this depth, we should be deep within Miluo Island." Linley guessed to himself.

Suddenly, Linley discovered that the corridor beneath them was completely filled with water.

"It's all water down there. Are we still going down?" Someone couldn't help but ask.

"Just follow me and cut out the chitchat." Sequeira was feeling very unhappy right now. Linley's words at Suncutter Peak had made his mood turn terrible. Those words which Cecily had said before dying made him feel even more insulted than when he had discovered that Cecily had another person's son in her womb!

"Drip, drip..."

Linley's group followed Sequeira into the water, and the eight of them all formed protective coverings around their bodies, easily blocking the water.

"Back then, I should've asked Tarosse in detail as to what place this secret area actually is." Linley felt puzzled. This water-logged passage had cave walls covered with green vegetation. Clearly, this passage had been filled with water for a long, long time.

Suddenly...

The tunnel beneath them became smooth, and at the end of this smooth tunnel, a faint glow could be seen.

"We finally reached the end." Linley couldn't help but feel a sense of celebration. As soon as they exited the tunnel, however, they saw a world of endless, boundless water.

"Eh? The secret area is actually in the middle of the ocean?" Linley couldn't help but speak out in astonishment.

Sequeira sneered. "Are you puzzled?"

Linley discovered that ever since he asked that question, Sequeira's face had continuously been ugly to behold, and his temper had turned irritable as well. Linley couldn't be bothered to reply. Arguing with Sequeira was something that simply wasn't worth it.

After flying at the bottom of the sea for some time, Linley was stunned.

Off the distance, an enormous black castle that was dozens of kilometers in circumference had been erected at the bottom of the ocean, like a massive monster lying in wait. The amazing thing was, countless, densely clustered figures could be seen around the castle on patrol. The number of people here was extremely high.

"This is the secret area of our western part of the island." Sequeira said proudly. "The secret area of my Bagshaw clan! You are very lucky to have the chance to come here."

As he spoke, from the distance, a squad of black armored warriors dressed with black cloaks flew over. Seeing this squad, Linley and the others all felt a sense of shock in their hearts. These ten guards all naturally emanated a baleful aura, and their faces were all expressionless and cold.

"Each of them is an expert." Linley was incomparably shocked.

Compared to the warriors of Miluo Island, these black armored and black cloaked guards gave off a far more powerful, valiant, remorseless aura. Even Lomio narrowed his eyes, looking carefully at the distant black castle.

"A single clan actually has so many forces!" Linley felt stunned.

He could see, with the naked eye, thousands of people, each of them Highgods, and excellent Highgods at that. They weren't on the same level as the island guards, who were made up of just any Highgods who wanted to join.

"Young master Sequeira." The leader of the squad bowed.

"They all came. Let's go." Sequeira said calmly. The ten black armored guards immediately guided Linley's group towards the black castle. The gates to the black castle were open.

This black castle had existed for unknowable amounts of time, deep at the bottom of the sea.

The strange thing was...

The black castle seemed to have a sort of strange energy. It actually was able to keep the waters of the sea at a distance, making all the sea water unable to get within a kilometer of the black castle. It was as though a translucent barrier was protecting the castle, keeping all the seawater at a distance.

And thus Linley's group suddenly entered a water-less area.

"Hey?" Everyone was astonished, while Lomio's eyes lit up in excitement as well.

Linley turned to carefully look, but he wasn't able to find any special 'barrier'. "There really are all sorts of marvels in the world." As he entered the black castle and saw the many guards within the black castle, Linley was stunned.

"This...is most likely the true power of the Bagshaw clan." Linley said to himself.

Within the black castle. An empty plaza. Linley's group of eight was waiting here.

"Wait here a while. Later, people will come." Sequeira said emotionlessly. "You'll have to be tested to see if you will have the chance to enter the secret area." After speaking, Sequeira himself turned and left.

His assignment was complete.

"Tested?" Some people were instantly puzzled.

"Wasn't it said that as long as we can win a hundred victories, we'll be able to go to the secret area for a viewing? Why is there a test?"

Hearing this discourse, Lomio and Linley both maintained their silence. Linley knew all along that there would be a test, and he stared at the area around him. The buildings around this plaza also had roving patrols of black armored guards, and the entire castle was like a military fort, under extremely tight guard.

Just moments later, the ancient, dark blue gates in front of the plaza that were ten meters tall up rumbled opened.

“Creaaaaaaak.” The opening of the dark blue gates caused a very unpleasant, scraping sound.

Six people walked out from inside the gates, the leader a man with white hair, a white beard, red armor, and a red cloak. The five behind him were all black armored warriors, but they too wore red cloaks.

“Welcome!” The white-haired elder immediately strode forward and laughed clearly, “Welcome to Castle Hendsey [Han’di’sai]! Let me introduce myself. My name is Uriah [You’lai]!”

Castle Hendsey?

A hint of suspicion arose in Linley’s heart.

“Although all victors of a hundred battles in the Arena can come to this secret area,” Uriah laughed, “The scryer recordings within the secret area aren’t just shown to everyone. If you want to view them, you must undergo testing.”

“Scryer recordings? Of what?” Lomio said.

"Battles of Seven Star Fiends. Battles of Asuras. Interplanar wars. Even scryer recordings of a Sovereign showing his might!" Uriah smiled. "This has been accumulated by my Bagshaw clan over countless years!"

As soon as these words came out, everyone's eyes lit up. Even Lomio's eyes were shining. Linley sighed to himself; these scryer recordings of experts doing battle was indeed a very alluring prospect.

"Now, all of you come, one at a time, to compete against our people. Based on your performance, I will judge if you are qualified to go in for a viewing." Uriah glanced at a person next to him, and immediately, a callous bald man wearing black armor and a red cloak strode forward.

Uriah stretched out with his hand, pointing towards one of the Highgod victors. "You first."

"Fine." That Highgod who had won a hundred Arena victories chuckled twice, then stepped forward. "If I kill him, don't blame me." This Highgod was dressed in a blue robe and had thick eyebrows.

"If you can kill him, feel free to." Uriah laughed calmly.

Immediately, this blue-robed Highgod and the bald man moved to the center of the plaza. The two faced each other.

"You can start now." Uriah gave the order.

"Boom!" The blue-robed Highgod instantly transformed into a flash of fiery light that didn't emit flames, with the scorching heat causing even the air to crackle. And then, the flameless fire-light immediately formed into a fiery arrowhead, which hovered there in mid-air in the plaza, emanating a heart-shaking power.

"Swoosh!"

The arrow of flame suddenly shot out like a meteor.

"Hmph!" The bald man gave a low snort, his entire body immediately becoming covered by an earthen yellow armor. His enormous fist began to be covered with rippling light, and he astonishingly landed a direct punch towards that fiery missile.

"Bang!" A low, rumbling sound. Even the arena itself trembled.

The rippling light on the fist of that bald man had been shattered, and even his fist had been blown apart. Even the layer of earthen yellow armor on his body was cracked, and he couldn't help but take several steps back, cracking the ground as he did.

The fiery red missile collapsed as well. That blue-robed Highgod's face was ashen, but he was still standing there.

"Not bad." The white-haired Uriah nodded. "You are qualified to enter the second secret room."

"The second secret room?" The blue-robed Highgod was puzzled.

"Right. The secret area is divided into two rooms; the first room and the second room. The first room has more scryer recordings, and the experts in those recordings are more powerful." Uriah said calmly.

"Then what must I do to be qualified to enter the first room?" The blue-robed Highgod was rather unwilling to accept this.

"Kill him in one blow." Uriah pointed towards the bald man.

The blue-robed Highgod instantly gave up.

Hearing this, Linley was stunned. "Can it be that the leader of this castle doesn't treat life as having any value? He can so casually sacrifice even his own people?"

"You are next." Uriah pointed to a God.

"Enough of this." A cold voice rang out. Lomio directly strode forward, looking calmly at Uriah. "Let me go first. Didn't you say that if I could kill him with one blow, I can enter the first room, right?"

Uriah glanced at Lomio in surprise, then laughed. "You are Lomio, right?"

Lomio nodded calmly.

"You don't need to be tested." Uriah shook his head and laughed. "Of the eight of you, you and red-robed elder, Linley, don't need to be tested. You can go directly to the first room for viewing."

Linley couldn't help but laugh.

"However, opening the secret room is a very important matter. We have to make a request to the master of the castle, and then find a good time. You can go rest for now. We will soon notify you." As he spoke, Uriah arranged for people to guide Linley and Lomio away.

As Linley was led away by the black-armored, red-cloaked guard, he now understood.

"It isn't that the leader of the castle doesn't care about the lives of his men. It is that when a real expert comes, there's no need for a test." Linley was quite eagerly anticipating that moment of viewing those scryer images coming as soon as possible.

The black castle was very large. It had thick, sturdy walls, and a very complicated layout of many corridors.

"Captain Mob [Mo'bu], I've been here for nearly a month. Why isn't his lordship willing to meet me yet?"

"Don't be in such a hurry. If his lordship wishes to meet you, he will. Otherwise, just wait here."

Hearing this voice from a corridor up ahead, Linley couldn't help but frown. "This voice is so familiar!"

In front of Linley were four corridors. Two people headed out from one of the corridors, and one of them was a man who wore a long green robe and had fish scales on his face. He was currently with another man, one dressed in black armor and a red cloak, who the first man was constantly speaking to. And then, the two of them entered another one of the corridors.

"Ganmontin?" Linley's face was filled with disbelief. "Why is he here?"

This person was the exact same person who had waylaid and attacked Linley's group in the Starmist Sea, the person who had wanted to offer Olivier to his 'Lord Commander'. Ganmontin!

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 28, The Secret

Originally, Ganmontin had wanted to forcibly take Olivier away, but Linley had refused. Thus, Ganmontin and Linley had battled against each other. At that time, Linley had relied upon his Blackstone Space to execute Ganmontin's divine wind clone, but who would've thought that Ganmontin actually had a divine water clone as well?

Ganmontin naturally hated Linley to the core.

Linley still clearly remembered Ganmontin's dying bellow. "You can't kill me. If you kill me, the Lord Commander will definitely kill you!" Ganmontin had, back then, used the so-called 'Lord Commander' to threaten Linley.

"He went to find the Lord Commander? And he is now here...can it be that the Lord Commander is right here?" Linley frowned.

This mysterious seafloor castle...Castle Hendsey. The white-haired elder who had welcomed him had once said, "Opening the secret room was a matter of great importance. We need to request permission from the master of the castle."

"Master of the castle?" Linley pondered. "The people which Uriah had brought were all roughly around the level of Six Star Fiend in power. Then Uriah's power...? The power of the master of the castle...?"

"Ganmontin's so-called. 'Commander'..."

"The master of the castle?"

In that instant, Linley suddenly thought of a possibility.

As soon as he thought of this possibility, Linley only felt a sense of terror fill his mind. His entire body couldn't help but tremble, and his face instantly turned white. "Can it be..."

"That I'm like a lamb who has delivered himself into the mouth of a tiger? That I've come to throw my life away?" Linley pondered.

From the number of experts at Miluo Island and the number of experts on display here at the seafloor Castle Hendsey, Linley could tell that this master of Castle Hendsey was, without a doubt, an ultimate expert who possessed astonishing power!

In the Infernal Realm, a person who had great status had to have an equivalent, matching amount of power. Otherwise, others wouldn't submit to them!

"Eh?" Lomio, who was travelling alongside Linley, naturally noticed that Linley currently seemed rather 'off'. He glanced at Linley, puzzled. What had caused Linley to lose his bearings like this?

Fortunately, the person leading them didn't turn to look at Linley, and didn't know what had happened.

"Milords, once we arrive at the guest houses, we'll be nearly there." The black armored red cloaked warrior laughed as he spoke, his words causing Linley to be startled awake from his pondering. Linley immediately began to adjust his mindset.

After all, the situation hadn't become utterly disastrous yet. Even assuming that the master of the castle was the 'Commander', which he might even be, this person had never met Linley.

"One thing at a time." Linley said to himself.

The seafloor Castle Hendsey was like a small city, filled with intersecting corridors that divided it into many areas. Generally speaking, guests all stayed in one area, which had a number of two-story buildings that were all built in a similar fashion.

These small buildings were built with a type of rice-yellow stones, and made one feel quite comfortable within the black castle.

"Lord Lomio, you will stay here in room twenty six. Lord Linley, you will stay here in room twenty seven." The black armored, red cloaked warrior said respectfully. "When the time comes, someone will deliver food to you. As for when you will enter the secret room, please don't be impatient, milords. When the time comes, there will be people who will come notify you."

Lomio frowned. "Are we just supposed to wait here indefinitely?"

Linley felt rather uncomfortable as well.

"Milords, don't worry. Based on our long-established rules, in roughly half a day or so, you'll be invited to the secret area. At the slowest, it would only take three days." The guard smiled as he spoke.

"Right." Lomio nodded calmly.

At most, three days? Lomio wouldn't mind. But Linley minded!

"You can go now." Linley stepped back from the guard, feeling rather concerned, because the more time he spent here at Castle Hendsey, the more dangerous it was. After all, Ganmontin was within this castle."

"Linley, I'll go to my room for now. If you need anything, you can come find me." Lomio said, then immediately turned and entered his room, not giving Linley a chance to reply.

Lomio was normally a very arrogant, solitary figure. It was only because he had seen Linley fight and wanted to spar with Linley that he was now so courteous. Otherwise, why would he say so many things to Linley?

But Linley's mind was preoccupied with Ganmontin, and so he didn't have any energy to bother with Lomio. He turned and went to his own room as well.

Taking a meditative stance on the stone bed, he looked through the window to the outside.

"I had wanted to come watch the scryer recordings of battling experts, but who would have imagined that Ganmontin was here?" Linley sighed to himself. At this time, footsteps rang out from outside, followed by a knocking on the door.

"Enter." Linley said calmly.

The door opened. Immediately, two beautiful women dressed in bright yellow robes walked into Linley's room, carrying a large platter of food.

"You can just leave it on the table." Linley said calmly.

"Yes, milord." The two maids were very respectful. They gently set down the platter of delicacies, but Linley suddenly raised his head to look at them. "Has the examination of those who had come alongside us concluded?"

One of the maids said respectfully, "Yes, milord. The examination is complete. Of those six lords, two of them have already returned to Miluo Island, while the other four are living here, not too far from you, milord."

"Oh." Linley understood.

Of the six, two were like Dylin; they had been refused and shut out, and weren't going to be permitted to enter the secret room.

"You can go now." Linley instructed.

The two maids curtsied, then left. As for the platter of delicacies, Linley didn't take a single bite. He didn't have any appetite or desire to enjoy delicacies right now.

"Whether fortune or disaster...if it's a disaster, I won't be able to avoid it anyhow." Linley shut his eyes, quietly meditating.

Castle Hendsey. Currently, that red armored, red cloaked old man with white hair, 'Uriah', was currently walking on a tightly controlled and restricted corridor.

"Rumble!" A great door covered with all sorts of mystical runic carvings swung open, revealing a narrow walkway.

Uriah continued in.

And then, the two guards at each side of the door immediately closed it again.

The walls on each side of the walkway had some carvings, either of thousands of soldiers doing battle, or two figures dueling each other in mid air...

At the end of the walkway was a wide, empty throne room.

On one end of the throne room, there was an enormous fireplace. Uriah walked to the end of the fireplace and pressed a button, immediately causing a wide corridor made completely from a blood-red stone to be revealed. This blood-red corridor had a deathly aura about it that made one's heart tremble.

Uriah took a deep breath, then stepped into the wide, hidden tunnel.

The tunnel wasn't very large. At the end, there was a blood-red door with black edges that was ten meters tall and six meters wide. The entire gate faintly emanated a red glow. Uriah didn't dare take another step forward.

"Teacher!" Uriah said in a low voice.

"Mm. The examination is done?" A low, gentle voice rang out from past the door.

Uriah said respectfully, "Teacher, nothing out of the ordinary happened. The other six didn't have any special abilities or potential. However, Teacher, those two you paid attention to should be very strong. I, your disciple, personally witnessed Lomio's battles in the Arena. He is definitely on a Seven Star Fiend level. As for that red-robed elder, Linley, he was able to easily defeat the red-robed elder, Boslo. There's no need to say anything further."

"Mm." The person inside made a noncommittal sound.

Uriah hesitated a moment, puzzled, then asked, "Teacher, that Linley is a descendant of the Four Divine Beasts clan."

"Four Divine Beasts clan?" The low voice suddenly began to laugh. "Haha...if this was ten thousand years ago, I'd be concerned. However, the Four Divine Beasts clan, at present, wouldn't dare come irritate me! There's no need for me to be concerned. However, for him to possess a drop of Sovereign's Might means that this Linley should be an important figure within the Four Divine Beasts clan. Unfortunately, the present is the present, not ten thousand years ago."

"Tomorrow, bring Linley and Lomio in to see me. Let Lomio come in first, then let Linley come in." The low voice instructed.

"Yes, Teacher." Uriah said respectfully. After waiting a few moments without any response, Uriah added respectfully, "Then I'll leave now."

"You can go."

Uriah immediately bowed, then left, not worried about his teacher at all. Sovereign's Might? A drop of Sovereign's Might was indeed powerful, but his teacher was at the highest level one could be at, beneath the Sovereign-level.

Forget about just a drop of Sovereign's Might.

Even that ultimate expert, Lord Aikens of the Redbud Continent, who was able to refine Sovereign's Might from inkstones was someone his teacher didn't fear!

"Sovereign's Might, in the hands of different people, have different amounts of power as well." Uriah clearly remembered the words his teacher had once said to him.

At present, Linley was seated with his eyes closed, while people would occasionally cross by from outside on the street. Most were maids and guards. But of course, occasionally some guests would pass by as well, and each time they did...

Linley would open his eyes!

"Ganmontin is a guest. He should live in this area as well!" Linley said to himself. "Judging from his conversation with that captain, Ganmontin clearly is waiting to see that so-called 'lord'."

Quietly, silently, time flowed on.

Although they were at the bottom of the sea and unable to tell whether it was day or night, Linley could clearly calculate in his mind if it was time for the sun to rise or the sun to fall. It was night, now. Suddenly, footsteps came from the street, outside the window.

Linley still opened his eyes, looking outside the window carefully.

A figure walked past the window.

Linley's eyes instantly lit up. "Him!" Although he only caught a glimpse of the man, Linley immediately recognized him. It was Ganmontin. With but a thought, a human figure appeared in Linley's room. It was one of Linley's Deathgod Golems!

"Swoosh!" The Deathgod Golem instantly appeared outside the door, looking towards the street.

The Deathgod Golem wasn't a living creature. It only had a hint of Linley's consciousness within it. At the doorway, it stared at the distant Ganmontin, who didn't notice anything. But of course, if it had been Linley himself staring at Ganmontin, he would have noticed.

A Deathgod Golem, in the end, wasn't a living creature. It was just an object. Who would care about an object?

"I didn't expect that this Ganmontin would be here as well." Linley, through the Deathgod Golem, could clearly see Ganmontin enter a little two story building that was eight hundred meters or so away from them.

It made sense. Ganmontin had arrived a month earlier, after all. It made sense that he lived here.

A killing look flashed past Linley's eyes.

"Ganmontin hasn't yet had a chance to meet with his 'Lord'. It's best to remove this potential source of disaster early on."

If Ganmontin was allowed to remain alive, it would be very dangerous for Linley as well as Olivier. It was better to remove him immediately. The roving patrols of Castle Hendsey didn't keep a very strict patrol watch on the guest living area.

In addition, even if they kept strict watch, it didn't matter.

"Whoosh!" The Deathgod Golem entered the interspatial ring, while Linley himself instantly arose, his body immediately fusing with the ground...

Worldwalking!

Linley didn't dare to emanate any hint of an aura. Immediately using Worldwalking, he reached the window below that two-story building, but as soon as he arrived, Linley heard Ganmontin cursing loudly.

"Hmph, a group of bastards. They knew that my divine wind clone was destroyed so they all look down on me. After talking to them for so long, all of them are still delaying. Most likely his lordship doesn't even know that I'm here!"

Ganmontin had a belly full of fire right now, and thus was currently cursing in his room.

He came here wanting to meet the Lord Commander, but now that his power had greatly dropped after losing his divine wind clone, those 'old friends' of his all looked down at him. It was like pressing his warm face against their icy buttocks; how could he possibly not be upset?

"Motherf*cker, it's all that Linley's fault!" Ganmontin would forever remember Linley, who had destroyed his powerful divine wind clone.

"Once the Lord Commander knows that there is a soul mutant God, he will definitely intervene. That Linley will definitely die!" Ganmontin ground his teeth. "Alright. I'll have the Lord Commander use his 'Soulseed' to control Linley and live for millions of years without freedom, and then be killed!"

Linley, hearing Ganmontin's 'cursing' from outside the window, felt his heart tremble.

"Soulseed control?" Linley clearly remembered that when he had been at the Yulan continent, his old friend, 'Boss Yale', had once been controlled in such a manner. People controlled through a Soulseed had their own memory, but were completely devoted to serving their master.

"Soulseed control?"

Thoughts flashed like lightning through Linley's mind. He instantly thought of a possibility.

"Why would Miluo Island be so generous as to allow the victors of a hundred battles in the Arena to come here and look at the precious scryer recordings of their clan?"

"Why would Miluo Island permit the red-robed elders to come to this secret area?"

"This Ganmontin is hunting for experts with great potential for his Lord Commander. Why does this Lord Commander want experts with high potential? If he was to train them, how could he be assured of their loyalty?"

"Also, why are so many Seven Star Fiends willingly serving Bagshaw's clan? Why are Seven Star Fiends so loyal to the Bagshaw clan?"

“And also, Tarosse and Dylin. When Cesar was about to be killed by Sequeira, why had they actually, unbelievably, chosen to throw their lots in with the Bagshaw clan’s side? In addition, the two of them just so happened to have come here before as well!”

Linley’s face instantly turned white!

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 29, Unable to Leave!

“Trap!”

Linley felt his heart turn cold.

“What an enormous lie!” Linley began to shudder.

Demigods. Gods. Highgods. Generally speaking, all those capable of winning a hundred battles had high potential and some special abilities! In addition, after arriving at Castle Hendsey, they had to be tested. Only after their potential was verified would they be allowed to stay, while the others were deported.

“All those who are allowed to stay have special potential.”

“Wait! If that’s the case, how can we explain Dylin?” Linley, based on the series of events and on the fact that Dylin and Tarosse had chosen the Bagshaw clan’s side, was now certain that Dylin had been controlled as well.

Linley immediately came up with a possibility...

“It’s not just those who pass the test who are spiritually controlled. Even if they don’t pass, most likely they will still be controlled. Only, a subordinate will do it instead.” Linley understood this; after all, how could any hundred battles victor of the Arena be weak?

The more the merrier, as far as soldiers for one's forces.

Pondering this from the viewpoint of the master of Castle Hendsey, instantly understood: "The so-called examination is most likely to divide people based on their power. After determining how powerful an opponent is, they'll know what level of expert is needed to control that person." The more powerful a person was, the harder they would be to control.

For the likes of Lomio, a Seven Star Fiend, it would be incredibly difficult to control him.

"Lomio and I didn't need to be tested at all. This means...very possibly, this master of the castle, the so-called lord 'Commander', will personally deal with us." Thinking of this, Linley couldn't help but be frightened. Even in Miluo Island, there were quite a few red-robed elders.

Within Castle Hendsey, there were multiple Six Star Fiends and Seven Star Fiends.

"Even Seven Star Fiends have been effortless controlled. Then the power of this Lord Commander...?" Linley frowned. For the Lord Commander to be able to control Seven Star Fiends meant one thing...this person was extremely powerful with regards to the soul.

But what Linley feared the most...

Was precisely this, experts skilled in soul attacks!

"When I encounter this castle master, I won't be able to resist at all. Can it be that I will have to use my Sovereign's Might?" Linley immediately thought back to how the clan leader, Bakwill, had Destruction-type Sovereign's Might himself. "This master of the castle is clearly the true power behind the Bagshaw clan. Even Bakwill has Sovereign's Might... how can the master of the castle not have it?"

"Someone capable of letting Miluo Island stand proud and independent in the Infernal Realm...the power this master of the castle possesses is at a level which I definitely cannot take on."

Linley immediately came to a conclusion...

"Flee!"

He had to flee!

Linley turned to look at the window. Ganmontin was currently resting in his room. Ganmontin now only had his divine water clone, and it would be very easy for Linley to kill Ganmontin.

"Cannot kill him! If I kill him, I would attract attention, and they will definitely keep a close watch on me. If I want to leave, it will be very hard." Linley, after having come to this understanding, couldn't possibly remain here and wait for death.

He had to flee quickly!

"Just consider yourself lucky." Linley glanced at the window, then immediately utilized the Worldwalker technique and entered the ground.

After having come to this conclusion, Linley himself felt shock in his heart. Based on what he knew...his hypothesis was most likely 99% correct! It no longer mattered whether or not this place truly had scryer records of experts; he couldn't remain!

Having one's soul controlled was a fate worse than death!

On the city walls that were forty meters tall, there were a large number of patrolling black armored guards. Occasionally, there were some red cloaked guards amongst them. This place was more severely guarded than any other place Linley had ever seen.

All of the black armored guards were silent, not daring to make a sound.

However, the red cloaked guards would occasionally chat, as though quite relaxed.

"Each time Arena victors are sent here, even we have to come over and be on patrol." Two red cloaked warriors were walking alongside each other while chatting and laughing.

"Actually, all we need to do is capture anyone we see fleeing. The real task of oversight isn't for us to worry about; it's that thing over there." One of the red cloaked warriors pointed to the core of the city.

"You are talking about the Water Element Heart?"

"Naturally. The Water Element Heart controls the vast water around this area. If anyone dares to exit our boundaries, the Water Element Heart will easily detect it. By then, we'll just have to act." The roving guards were quite relaxed.

It was impossible for anyone to secretly flee!

Forcibly flee? That depended on if they were strong enough. If they were, those patrolling guards would be dead.

But suddenly...

The enormous city wall glowed with the colors of the rainbow, and the multicolored light even blinked twice, immediately startling awake all of the patrolling warriors.

"Someone is fleeing!"

Dozens of the nearest black armored guards and red cloaked warriors all flew directly towards the direction of the disturbance. They clearly could tell that the person who had charged out was...

The red-robed Linley!

"Good heavens, a city wall that has a circumference of tens of kilometers is actually protected by an enormous magic formation? And which seems to have all types of elemental energy?" Linley stared at the massive city walls and the flashing, multicolored magic runes. He tasted sourness in his lips.

He wasn't able to flee.

Currently, a large number of black armored guards were staring at this place, and many red cloaked experts descended from the skies as well.

"A red-robed elder?" These red cloaked warriors were startled, and then one of them said in a sonorous voice, "You dare to abscond? Hmph!"

Linley glanced at the group of red cloaked warriors. Previously, during the testing, Linley had seen a red-cloaked warrior attack. They were roughly on a Six Star Fiend level. "A group of Six Star Fiends?" Linley laughed bitterly to himself.

There was no way for him to forcibly escape any longer.

"I am a red-robed elder of the Bagshaw clan, Linley! I have something important that I must immediately return to handle. I didn't want to disturb you. Now, please step aside and let me return to Miluo Island." Linley's voice rang out.

The leader of the red cloaked warriors said calmly, "Oh, Elder Linley? The rule of our Castle Hendsey is that unless we have permission, no outsiders are ever permitted to leave."

"I have something important to do!" Linley said angrily.

"Please, Elder Linley, just wait a while." One of the red cloaked warriors said. "If you want to force your way out, then don't blame us." Actually, these red cloaked warriors, upon seeing that it was a red-robed elder of the Bagshaw clan, didn't want to attack either.

This was because red-robed elders were all Seven Star Fiends.

Once battle began, their group of people might be able to obtain victory through numbers, but it would assuredly be a pyrrhic victory.

Linley was frustrated. "Neither acting firmly nor speaking softly works. If I try to force my way out, most likely all the experts from the castle will pop out."

"Linley, why are you in such a rush to leave?" A familiar voice rang out. Linley turned and saw that white-haired elder with red armor and a red cloak fly out. It was that expert named 'Uriah'.

Uriah laughed as he looked at Linley. "Linley, you haven't even gone to the first viewing room yet."

"Mr. Uriah." Linley said hurriedly. "There's nothing that I can do. Just now, I received a soul message from my servant. I really do have something important I must handle, and so I have to leave. As for the first viewing room, how about I return tomorrow?"

"Oh?" Uriah frowned.

"Makes sense." Uriah laughed. "Linley, since you really do have an important task to handle..."

Linley's heart leapt up.

"Then I won't force you to stay. However, I've already reported your arrival to the master of the castle. I don't have the authority to let you leave. How about this. You wait here for a while, and I'll make a report to the master of the castle. I trust that he won't make things difficult for you." Uriah laughed.

"Sorry for the trouble, Mr. Uriah." Linley said.

Uriah laughed calmly, then immediately flew away.

Linley's face sank. "Ask the master of the castle? This is going to be troublesome!" Linley glanced at his surroundings. There were tens of red cloaked experts staring at him, and on the walls, there were many black armored guards watching as well."

"How can this Castle Hendsey have so many experts?" Linley was helpless.

Originally, in Royalwing City, even Six Star Fiends were very rare. As for Seven Star Fiends, they were virtually nowhere to be seen, as they were usually hidden throughout the Infernal Realm. But this Castle Hendsey had a pile of Six Star Fiends and even quite a few Seven Star Fiends, and a seemingly even more powerful 'master of the castle'.

Moments later...

"Eh?" Linley's face changed.

From afar, with Uriah at their head, three red armored and red cloaked experts flew over, with the black-robed expert, 'Lomio', with them!

"Red armor, red cloak? The other two people have roughly the same status as Uriah. Most likely, they are here to keep me from fleeing. But... why did they bring Lomio?" Linley was puzzled, but Lomio had a rare smile on his face.

"Mr. Uriah, you have news?" Linley said clearly.

Uriah and the others landed alongside Lomio, and Uriah laughed. "Good news, good news. The master of the castle is truly considerate towards you, Linley."

Linley was startled. Could it be that he had guessed wrong? The master of the castle was going to be so kind as to let him leave

"When he learned that you, Linley, had something important to handle, he agreed to let you and Lomio go to the first viewing room right now! Going to the first viewing room and using your divine sense to view the scryer recordings is a very fast process." Uriah laughed.

Linley's facial expressions couldn't help but congeal.

“Linley, since you could wait here for me, you also have enough time to go to the first viewing room and do a quick viewing with your divine sense, right?” Uriah laughed. The other two red armored, red cloaked experts laughed as well as they looked at Linley.

But Linley felt bone-deep terror from their stares.

“Alright, then we’ll go do a viewing first.” This was the only thing Linley could say.

Uriah immediately laughed. The three of them immediately led Linley and Lomio towards the center of Castle Hendsey. The path over there had multiple intersections, and patrols could be seen everywhere. Outsiders would probably find it hard to take a single step here, but as Linley was following Uriah, he wasn’t barred or impeded at all.

“Lomio, you need to thank Linley. If it wasn’t for him, you’d probably have to wait until tomorrow before you can go to the secret room.” Uriah laughed.

Lomio had a rare smile on his face. Clearly, he was in an excellent mood due to the prospect of about to see so many experts doing battle in those scryer recordings.

“Linley, it is quite rare for the master of the castle to let you go to the secret room early.” Uriah said to Linley.

“Right. I truly need to thank the master of the castle.” Linley said, but in his heart, he was cursing nonstop. That master of the castle clearly had no good intentions.

While walking on the path, Linley was paying attention to his surroundings.

But the deeper into the heart they went, the more patrols there were, and in addition, he had those three experts around him.

Flee?

Hard!

"Rumble!" The great door covered with mysterious carved runes swung open, revealing a corridor which had many carvings on each side. Linley and the others thus began to walk towards the end of the corridor.

Linley didn't have any time to enjoy the sculpture.

As they reached the throne room at the end of the corridor, Uriah walked to one side of the throne room, against a brazier, and opened up a mysterious, wide corridor. The corridor was made completely from blood red stones, and emanating a heart-shaking, deathly aura.

"How mysterious." Linley frowned.

Lomio frowned as well. The silver-haired woman by Uriah's side laughed and said, "This is the place where the scryer recordings are held. Naturally, it's rather hidden. The two of you, just follow me in." As she spoke, she was the first to enter.

Linley and Lomio naturally followed them in, while Uriah and the other followed from behind.

At the end of the tunnel, they reached that black, patterned door with the blood red edges. They came to a halt.

"Teacher, Lomio and Linley are here." Uriah said respectfully, while the others bowed as well.

Lomio raised an eyebrow. "There's someone else inside?"

"A place as important as this naturally must be guarded." Uriah laughed as he explained. Linley just narrowed his eyes, musing to himself, "It seems this so-called 'Teacher' is the master of the castle."

"Fine. Let Mr. Lomio be the first to enter for the viewing." A low, gentle voice came from within the door. Immediately, the large door swung open slightly, revealing a crack that was enough for one person to enter.

"Lomio, go on in." Uriah and the other two looked towards Lomio.

Lomio was a bold, courageous expert. He immediately was about to head in, but Linley gave a soft cough, then hurriedly sent via divine sense, "Lomio, be careful. The person within the room will most likely take sinister action against you. Beware his soul attack."

Lomio glanced at Linley in surprise, but then with a laugh, he still entered.

“Regardless of whether this is true or not, thank you! If someone inside really does attack, I’d actually be quite happy.” Lomio’s voice rang out in Linley’s mind, while he himself entered past the door.

“BANG!” The great door once more slammed shut.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 30, Sledgehammer

The blood-red corridor. The blood-red gate. That overpowering aura of death.

"I need to flee. How can I flee?" Linley was incomparably frantic. The three experts around him were all guarding him, while past that door was the 'master of the castle', a person of astonishing power. Most likely, even if he used Sovereign's Might, it would be hard for him to flee.

"Calm down. Calm down!"

Linley strove to find a chance to escape, but no matter what he thought of, in the end, there was only one possibility.

"I can only entrust my hopes to Lomio. Lomio will be on his guard. He might be able to escape. If he had a violent battle with that 'master of the castle' and attract the attention of those three, I'll be able to seize an opportunity to flee."

Linley understood that for the master of the castle to be willing to allow Lomio enter meant that he was confident in being able to easily defeat and mentally control Lomio. If it really was that simple, though...then even this final chance Linley had for escape would be gone.

Although he was frantic, Linley still watched carefully for any chance, and was prepared to explode forth and flee at any moment.

“Linley, are you impatient?” Uriah chortled. “Don’t be impatient. Lomio needs a bit of time in the first viewing room to view those scryer recordings. It’ll be your turn soon.”

“It’ll be my turn soon?” Linley felt that Uriah’s laughter was so vile. Uriah clearly knew that this was a lie, a trap, but was still trying to lie to Linley, even now.

“BOOM!” Suddenly, the entire floor trembled violently, and even the great door in front of them shook forcefully. The tremor caused the walls around them to begin to crack, with scattered rocks falling down and smashing onto the corridor. Linley’s group of four swayed, and they were all astonished.

“Good.” Linley was overjoyed. Lomio, indeed, hadn’t let him down. He had indeed caused a disturbance.

“Eh?” Uriah and the other two were shocked. They looked at each other. Given the master of the castle’s power, how could such a huge commotion have been caused? Although they were shocked, they still kept watch on Linley.

Linley put on a puzzled look. “Mr. Uriah, what is going on inside?”

“I’m not sure.” Uriah laughed calmly. “Perhaps Lomio, when watching those scryer recordings of ultimate experts, was suddenly so excited that he wanted to test out a technique. Right. Linley, after you enter the secret room, no matter what, don’t wildly test out techniques.”

"Got it, got it." Linley had to admit that Uriah's disassembling abilities were top notch.

Right at that instant...

"Rumble..." It was as though heaven was collapsing or the earth was shattering. A terrifying explosive sound rang out, and the entire corridor and great door blew apart, with countless pieces of rubble flying everywhere, each one containing lightning-type energy.

Chaos!

The faces of Uriah and the other two changed. They hadn't imagined that Lomio, in front of their teacher, could cause such a huge disturbance.

"Excellent." Linley was overjoyed. "This is the moment." Just as Linley was preparing to use the Worldwalker ability to leave...

"Swish!"

Uriah and the other two immediately moved, forming a three-point triangle and surrounding Linley. Uriah laughed calmly. "Linley, don't be impatient. Perhaps Lomio did something to anger Teacher."

Linley, seeing that he was surrounded by these three, frowned.

"Haha...kid, it looks like I underestimated you." The low, rich voice rang out in the air above Castle Hendsey, and Linley couldn't help but to raise his head to look up.

In the air above the shattered building, Lomio's blood-splattered black robe fluttered in the wind. He held a black warblade in his hands, and his entire body was surrounded by crawling lightning serpents. His eyes were flashing with electricity, and he looked to be the very picture of a true Thunder God.

Facing Lomio was a man that was nearly 2.5 meters tall. The man had short red hair that looked as though it were made out of metal, and he wore a very ancient, unadorned set of armor. His thick, massive arms were a bronze color, seeming to hold a vast amount of strength, while in his right hand, he actually held a large black sledgehammer!

"He is the master of the city? That 'Commander'?" Linley said to himself. But then, Linley stopped paying attention to the skies, instead focusing on the three around him. He hoped that one of them might relax their guard, allowing him to flee.

From high up in the sky, Lomio's voice rang out once more.

"Hmph, I must thank you. If it weren't for you, I wouldn't have made yet another breakthrough. You want to kill me? You are far from being able to!"

"The three of you, keep watch on Linley." The sledgehammer-wielding red-haired man said calmly.

"Yes, Teacher (Master)!" Uriah and the other two said.

"Indeed." Linley became all the more certain. "They actually address him as 'Master'...I didn't expect that amongst these three, two are under the control of the master of the city." Although surprised, Linley was still searching for his chance to flee.

Linley's face changed.

"Uriah, what is going on?" Linley asked angrily.

Uriah laughed, "Teacher wishes you to stay, so as to let you be able to view the first secret room."

"Why do they address him as 'Master'?" Linley asked another question.

"We have been followers of Master since we were Demigods." The silver-haired woman said calmly, while Linley just smirked coldly. Two Demigod subordinates had actually both become Seven Star Fiends?

"Whatever abilities you have, use them all!" Lomio said with incomparable valor.

In mid-air, that sledgehammer-wielding red-haired man let out a loud laugh. "You were able to take a few punches from me. Not bad. Now, let's see if you can withstand my sledgehammer." The red-haired man agilely swept out with the massive black sledgehammer in his hand.

It made no sound out all...

The sledgehammer struck out, and as it did, a very bizarre ripple spread out, with the sledgehammer at the center. Everywhere the ripple passed through, the stone structures all transformed into fine powder. Thus did this sledgehammer slam down with no sound.

It seemed slow, but in reality it arrived next to Lomio in an instant.

“BANG!” Lightning appeared out of the blue skies.

As the thunder roared, a saber shadow clashed with the sledgehammer.

“Rumble...” The sledgehammer seemed to tremble slightly, with the surface of the sledgehammer rippling as though the sledgehammer was made of water. Lomio’s warblade actually trembled as well, and then completely shattered.

A silent, soundless sledgehammer blow.

But even Lomio’s weapon had been destroyed.

Linley, stunned, raised his head up to watch, his mind filled with that soundless blow that he had just seen. It seemed so graceful and gentle, and yet in reality the sledgehammer blow had carried trillions of kilograms of force. That amazing, miraculous curving blow caused Linley’s soul to be stirred.

Linley had never been able to understand the description of the 'Strength' profound mystery of the Laws of the Earth, but suddenly, Linley had the feeling...

It was as though a seed in his mind had suddenly begun to bloom.

"Strength...boundless...massive..."

Linley had been training hard in the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength', but had yet to make any headway. However, this time, upon seeing that sledgehammer blow from this 'castle master' which seemed to hold a hint of the Profound Mysteries of Strength.

Although in reality, this master of the castle used the Way of Destruction, every single path had some similarities.

For example, the Laws of Lightning and the Laws of Light all had mysteries pertaining to speed. The speed of lightning had some similarities with the Profound Mysteries of Lightspeed.

"Impossible!" Lomio had been thrown far away, and he landed in a pile of debris, his face filled with disbelief. He had just made a breakthrough, and so he felt he was now strong enough to battle against an Asura. But why was it that despite his power, he still wasn't able to withstand that sledgehammer?

At this moment, Uriah and the others all glanced slightly at Linley. Seeing that Linley wasn't running, they immediately returned to watching this battle. This battle, to them, had quite the allure.

"If Linley is to flee, with so many people in the castle, he has nowhere to run."

Uriah and the others were very confident.

"The natural ability of my Bloodrune Titan clan, when matched with the Way of Destruction...did you think it was something to be trifled with?" The red-haired man said loudly. Standing in mid-air, he was like a celestial divinity, causing people's hearts to be filled with fear.

"Ah, why am I standing here like an idiot? I need to flee, that's what matters." Linley instantly came to his senses and stopped his pondering.

The sudden starting and stopping of his pondering actually only took a very short period of time.

"These three are actively watching this battle." Linley felt a surge of joy in his heart, then turned his head to stare at the distant master of the castle and Lomio. "The moment the master of the castle attacks is the moment that I'll flee!"

The attack of the master of the castle would definitely be carefully scrutinized by Uriah and the other two, while the master himself wouldn't have any time to bother with catching Linley.

"You managed to eat one of my sledgehammer blows without dying. You can be considered a peak Seven Star Fiend, approaching the Asura level in strength." The master of the castle laughed loudly, and then transformed into a bloody shadow, instantly slashing through the sky...

Linley's eyes lit up. "This is the moment!"

Worldwalking!

Very suddenly, Linley disappeared from within the rubble, while Uriah and the other two, in a triangle surrounding Linley, were focused on watching this battle in the sky. An instant after Linley escaped, Uriah and the other two noticed from the corner of their eyes that Linley had disappeared!

"Fled?" Uriah and the other two were dazed, but they quickly recovered.

"He used Worldwalking." Uriah immediately shouted. "Hurry up and fly into the sky. He won't be able to flee from the ground. He'll have to go into the skies." Deep under Castle Hendsey as well as on the walls surrounding it was that enormous magic formation. There was nowhere to flee.

Only by flying through the skies or by going through the gates would one be able to leave.

The three powerful experts immediately flew into the air while simultaneously shouting towards the other warriors to be on the lookout.

"All of you, watch closely. If you are capable of Worldwalking, hurry into the underground and find Linley, quick!" Uriah immediately shouted. One black armored warrior after another began to use Worldwalking, merging into the ground.

Uriah and the other two were floating in the sky. At the same time, other experts were hovering in the sky as well, all of them staring in every direction.

"This Linley actually dared to flee!" Uriah couldn't help but feel infuriated.

After this event, his teacher would definitely censure him.

Underground, Linley had fused with the earth elemental essence and was travelling through the ground.

"There's no way I'll be able to flee the castle from underground." Linley had previously tested it already. "I'll first run to a unassuming place in the castle, then quickly fly into the air and flee." Linley immediately flew at high speed towards the northwest corner.

But the strange thing was...

"Eh?" Linley could easily sense that there was a living aura from up ahead.

Linley was shocked. "There are others using Worldwalking as well?" That living aura immediately drew near at high speed, even spreading out a divine sense.

"Lord, Linley is here!" A voice rang out, echoing in the castle. Linley himself immediately fled hundreds of meters away, and then ignored all else, immediately emerging from the ground.

"Swoosh!"

Linley immediately flew into the skies, his entire body transforming violently, with azure-gold draconic scales covering every part of him and fierce spikes sprouting out as well. Linley's speed increased yet again, and like an azure-gold flash of light, he flew upwards at high speed.

"Seize him!" The distant Uriah bellowed.

Instantly, from every direction, a large number of black armored guards and red cloaked guards swarmed over towards him like locusts. Linley let out a mighty roar, and then with Linley at the center, a sphere of nearly five hundred meters in diameter formed.

Blackstone Space!

"Huh?" All of the black armored guards and red cloaked guards who charged into this region found out to their astonishment that they were forced to retreat.

"What a powerful repulsive force." Those people were astonished.

"Pincer him from every direction. Trap him." Uriah bellowed, while he himself was hurrying over as well.

Linley's dark golden eyes were focused up above himself, but from up above, a large number of black armored guards had already gathered, completely sealing off his escape routes.

"It's your own fault for seeking death!" Linley's eyes turned cold.

Instantly, the world began to glow with an earthen yellow color, and earth elemental essence suddenly gathered at high speed. Divine earth power flowed about, and instantly, an enormous cube that was four hundred meters tall appeared out of nowhere. Those black armored guards which were struck by the cube were directly swallowed into it.

"Bang!"

From afar, the red-haired man once more exchanged blows with Lomio. Lomio's face was ashen, but then, with a sudden bellow, he transformed into a ray of black lightning, disappearing into the horizons at an astonishing speed. The master of Castle Hendsey raised his head, watching with resignation. "This fellow trains in the Laws of Lightning... he's actually so fast. He's even a bit faster than me!"

Lomio's speed was so great that even the master of the castle couldn't catch him.

"There's still another one." The master of the castle turned to look.

Currently, Linley's 'cube' had collapsed. After having suffered the combined attacks of four Seven Star Fiends and many Six Star Fiends, Linley's 'cube' had immediately blown apart, while Linley himself continued to fly up at high speed.

"Teacher, his Gravitational Space is very bizarre. We are unable to catch him alive." Uriah said hurriedly.

"Hmph."

A cold snort, and then the master of Castle Hendsey, holding his sledgehammer, transformed into a bloody shadow as he chased towards Linley. The master of Castle Hendsey was so fast that he was only just a hair slower than Lomio, and far faster than Linley.

He was quickly drawing nearer and nearer to Linley.

"Kid, why don't you stay." A loud laughter rang out.

Linley lowered his head to look. "The master of the castle?" With a flip of his hand, a drop of Sovereign's Might appeared, but Linley didn't immediately use it, because Linley was still confident in his Gravitational Space.

"Crackle..." As the bloody shadow passed through the area of the Gravitational Space, its speed lessened dramatically.

"Haha, this Gravitational Space isn't bad." As he spoke, the master of Castle Hendsey laughingly waved the sledgehammer in his hand. Multiple rays of black energy coiled out from the sledgehammer, as though countless strands or ropes had been spun out, filling the entire Gravitational Space.

"Catch!"

The countless rays of black energy entangled Linley, making him no longer able to flee.

"What is this?" Linley frantically struggled and was able to break dozens of strands through brute force, but even more black strands entangled him. Linley's face changed, and he was about to immediately use his Sovereign's Might.

But right at this moment...

"Your strength is decent, and the Gravitational Space isn't bad either. Unfortunately, the difference between you and Reisgem is still quite great." A gentle voice rang in Linley's ear.

Linley was stunned. "Reisgem? Gem-Gem?" Linley thought back to that adorable juvenile amethyst beast in the Amethyst Mountains.

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 31, Purgatory Commander

Linley remembered the name 'Reisgem' very, very clearly.

Back in the Amethyst Mountains when Linley had been testing out 'Worldwalking', he had fallen into the hands of that juvenile amethyst beast, who had announced his name and that he was a Purgatory Commander, wanting to overawe Linley. Unfortunately, Linley had no idea what Purgatory was and thus had no idea what it meant for a person to be a Purgatory Commander.

"Crackle." Countless black energy strands surrounded Linley, and they were incomparably stiff, causing Linley to be completely unable to move. Even though Linley's strength was massive and inexhaustible, the speed at which he destroyed the black energy bindings was slower than the speed by which they increased.

"Kid, don't use your Sovereign's Might. You'd be wasting it if you did." The low, gentle voice continued.

Linley turned his head in astonishment. Fortunately, the black energy strands didn't cover Linley's head as well. Linley could clearly see that ancient armor, and that red-haired man standing in mid-air, holding that massive sledgehammer.

"What do you want to do?" Linley chuckled. "What, you want to dominate my soul?"

"You even know about this?" The master of Castle Hendsey was quite surprised.

While the two were chatting, the master of the castle had set up his Godrealm, completely blocking out their conversation, while those who were watching from afar couldn't see a single thing.

"Come with me. Let's have a nice chat." The master of the castle actually flew downwards.

"Follow him?" Linley was stunned.

The master of the castle, seeing that Linley wasn't moving, turned and glanced at him, then laughed calmly, "Given your soul strength as a God, you are far from being my match. Controlling you would be utterly effortless. There's no need for me to play any tricks."

"If there's something you want to say, you can say it here." Linley said.

The master of the castle glanced at him, amazed, then began to laugh and nod. "Fine. I'll do as you say." For so many years, nobody had ever dared to speak to him in such a way. And so, the master of the castle began to chat with Linley in the air above Castle Hendsey."

"First, let me introduce myself. I am Mosi [Mo'si] Bagshaw! The master of this Castle Hendsey." The master of the castle had a hint of a smile on his face.

The master of the castle was of the Bagshaw clan as well!

Linley had noticed that the 'master of the castle', so valiant in battle, actually spoke in a very soft, gentle voice, and his smile was quite friendly as well. He didn't give off any aura of being a rude boor at all. Linley replied, "I am Linley."

"Can you tell me what your relationship is with Reisgem, for you to actually convince him to make a soul-protecting divine artifact for you?" The master of the castle, Mosi, laughed calmly.

"Reisgem...made me a soul-protecting divine artifact?" Linley was astonished.

"Isn't that the case?" Mosi laughed calmly. "I've heard of your combat prowess. You were able to kill so many Highgods, and also defeat 'Boslo'. Your soul protection must be very strong. However, you were only a God. How powerful could your soul possibly be? The soul of a God, in terms of 'quality', is simply far too inferior compared to Highgod souls!"

"It is true that I have a soul-protecting artifact, but what of it?" No matter what, Linley wouldn't dare say that he had a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact.

Otherwise, most likely this 'Mosi' in front of him would be unable to resist being greedy.

"There we go." Mosi laughed. "It is exceedingly hard to create a soul-protecting artifact. You must understand, first of all, a person who wants to make this must have an exceedingly high level of accomplishment with regards to the soul. In the entire Infernal Realm, there are very few people capable of making a soul-protecting artifact. Reisgem, however, is one of them."

"You are able to utilize his trademark special skill, the 'Amethyst Space'; you definitely were taught by him. Thus, I said that your soul-protecting artifact must have come from him helping you make it as well." Mosi said very confidently.

Linley shook his head. "My Gravitational Space did indeed originate from him, this is true. But the soul-protecting artifact wasn't made by him."

"Oh?" Mosi glanced at Linley in surprise, then laughed. "I must say, you are quite mysterious, kid. Your body is so incomparably tough; even amongst the Four Divine Beasts clan, this is exceedingly rare. And you also have a soul-protecting artifact, and have some sort of a relationship with Reisgem..."

Linley frowned.

This Mosi had talked with him for so long. Why? But it seemed as though the man didn't have the intention to kill him.

Mosi, seeing the look on Linley's face, couldn't help but laugh, then said comfortingly, "Kid, don't worry. Even if it were just for the sake of giving Reisgem face, I won't kill you. Only, I feel you are quite curious, kid, so I want to chat with you a bit."

Linley let out a sigh of relief.

"I didn't expect that because of that juvenile amethyst beast, I dodged a catastrophe today." Linley had great faith in this castle master Mosi, as the man's power far outstripped his own. There was no need for Mosi to lie to him if he wanted to kill him.

"Why are you so certain that I am a God?" Linley asked.

"Haha..." Mosi immediately began to laugh. "Kid. Forget about the Infernal Realm; even if you were to search the entire Four Higher Planes and the Seven Divine Planes, you would at most find ten who are superior to me in terms of the soul! However, although they are slightly superior to me, there's no way they could possibly completely conceal their strength in front of me."

Linley was secretly shocked.

Four Higher Planes and Seven Divine Planes...in all those combined planes, there were no more than ten people who were superior to Mosi in terms of the 'soul'?

Then that meant...

In the Infernal Realm, Mosi's soul power should rank in the top three! The Infernal Realm had existed for countless years, and it contained experts beyond number, while many of the 'Asuras' had received their position after many of the original Asuras had retired and gone into seclusion.

Experts were as common as the clouds!

But this Mosi was actually able to rank in the top three as far as souls went? Terrifying!

"But of course, there's another possibility." Mosi laughed. "You might be a Sovereign! That's the only way you could possibly deceive even me." As he spoke, Mosi had a sudden thought, and the black energy strands retracted.

His freedom returned to him, Linley felt more kindly disposed towards Mosi. "Castle Master Mosi, dare I ask, what's your relationship with Reisgem?"

"Him?" A hazy look flashed through Mosi's eyes, as though he were thinking back to many things that had happened in the past. And then, his gaze firmed once more, and he sighed, "Reisgem and I are both Commanders of Purgatory."

"As I thought!" Linley was now completely certain. The 'Lord Commander' which Ganmontin had spoken of was this Mosi!

"What is Purgatory? What does being a Purgatory Commander mean?" Linley asked, puzzled.

"What is Purgatory?" Mosi glanced at Linley in surprise. "You don't even know this?" As Mosi saw it, given how many secrets Linley seemed to have, he should know about what Purgatory was.

But Mosi still answered. "Purgatory is a very special place in the Infernal Realm. In that place, experts are as common as the clouds. Many retired Asuras, reclusive experts, and others will enter Purgatory...in that place, there are simply too many experts!"

"And a Purgatory Commander?" Linley continued to ask.

"Purgatory has a total of 108 Commanders!" Mosi laughed.

"108 yet again?" Linley was astonished.

"Right. The Infernal Realm has 108 Asuras, and Purgatory also has 108 Commanders. The Asuras in the Infernal Realm all control a prefecture, while the Purgatory Commanders command an army!" Mosi explained.

"Oh. Then...which is more powerful? Asuras, or Purgatory Commanders?" Linley continued to ask.

Mosi glanced at Linley. "The Asuras of the Infernal Realm and the Commanders of Purgatory...you can't quantify one as being superior to the other. This is because every person capable of becoming an Asura or a Purgatory Commander is close to the very peak of power possible for a Highgod, and all have their own special, ultimate attacks. There are quite a few Seven Star Fiends in the Infernal Realm, but the number of Asuras and Commanders is forever limited. In addition, they often engage in challenges, and upon losing, retire. The stronger will take the position!"

Linley couldn't help but nod.

"However, comparatively speaking, the 108 Asuras of the Infernal Realm have it easier. They control an entire prefecture, and don't face too many challenges. But Purgatory Commanders are different. Battles and slaughters are commonplace." Mosi sighed.

Linley had to admit that having been in the Infernal Realm for so long, he had seen quite a few Seven Star Fiends, and here at Miluo Island had seen quite a few Seven Star Fiends.

Generally speaking, Highgods capable of fusing four profound mysteries could become Seven Star Fiends.

But in truth, there were some who had fused five or even nearly fused all six types.

But of course, there were those experts who had fused six types of profound mysteries and become Paragons.

There were some who were Soul Mutates, while others were divine beasts who had innate divine abilities. Some were of strange races that also had innate abilities, while other experts were in possession of Sovereign artifacts or Sovereign's Might...

Only the most extraordinary of people were capable of becoming 'Asuras of the Infernal Realm' or 'Commanders of Purgatory'.

"My Gravitational Space is already so powerful, but if utilized by the juvenile amethyst beast? In addition, that's his innate ability. When using it, it's definitely ten times or a hundred times more powerful than mine."

Linley still remembered how the entire Amethyst Mountains had an enormous 'Gravitational Space' that was hundreds of thousands of kilometers in circumference.

Over the course of this conversation, the relationship between Linley and Mosi grew significantly friendlier.

"Castle Master Mosi, there's something I wish to beg of you." Linley said sincerely.

Tarosse and Dylin were definitely under soul control. This sort of life, where they had lost their own will, was a life worse than death. Linley naturally wanted to be able to free Tarosse and Dylin and allow them to regain their own will.

"Oh, speak." Mosi said.

"I have two friends who were both Arena victors. I believe they are under soul control. I hope you, Castle Master Mosi, can let them regain their freedom."

Mosi paused for just a moment.

Linley was rather nervous. Soul control was one of the techniques this person specialized in. Linley could only hope that this person would give him face and release the two of them.

"Fine, then. Tell me their names." In the end, Mosi nodded.

"One is a Highgod named Tarosse. The other is a God named Dylin." Linley said hurriedly.

Mosi sighed. "Tarosse. I personally controlled him. He has quite some potential. As for Dylin, one of my subordinates should have controlled him." Mosi paused momentarily. "Don't worry. By the time you return to Miluo Island, you will have discovered that the two of them have regained their free will."

"Castle Master Mosi, I'm incomparably grateful." Linley truly was rather grateful. If this person didn't want to give him face, there was nothing he could've done.

Mosi just laughed calmly. He controlled quite a few Seven Star Fiends. Naturally, he wouldn't care too much about a mere Tarosse and Dylin.

"Let's go. Now, you can go down with me, right?" Mosi said.

Linley laughed as well, then followed Castle Master Mosi down, back towards the castle. At this moment, those damaged parts of the castle were currently under repair by a large number of black armored warriors, who had brought black stones over and were working at high speed.

"Teacher (Master)!" Uriah and the others drew nearer respectfully.

Castle Master Mosi nodded in acknowledgment, then flew downwards with Linley.

"Who is this Linley?" Uriah and the others were puzzled. As they saw it, their teacher was one of the truly peak figures of the entire Infernal Realm, and yet he was actually so friendly towards Linley. This was truly inconceivable.

Linley and Castle Master Mosi flew downwards, but suddenly...

"Milord, milord!" A frantic voice rang out.

Linley turned to look. He couldn't help but frown, as he saw Ganmontin flying over frantically while calling out, 'Milord!'

"Oh, Ganmontin." Castle Master Mosi immediately recognized Ganmontin, then was puzzled. "Ganmontin, your divine wind clone?" Ganmontin was one of his more senior subordinates.

Ganmontin immediately bowed respectfully, then said angrily, "Milord, he destroyed my divine wind clone!" As he spoke, he pointed at Linley.

"Eh?" Castle Master Mosi frowned.

"How did you and Linley end up in a fight?" Castle Master Mosi said.

Ganmontin said hurriedly, "Milord, I discovered a God-level Soul Mutate, so I immediately went to capture him to offer him to you, but who would have imagined that this person was Linley's friend. Linley thus attacked and destroyed my divine wind clone."

"A God-level Soul Mutate?" Castle Master Mosi's eyes lit up.

The potential of a Soul Mutate was higher than that of even a divine beast.

"Castle Master Mosi, that God-level Soul Mutate is my brother." This was all that Linley could say.

"Milord, you must get revenge for your subordinate." Ganmontin said hurriedly.

Castle Master Mosi frowned and was momentarily silent. For a moment, neither Linley nor Ganmontin knew what Mosi was thinking.

"You can go now!" Castle Master Mosi said calmly.

Ganmontin was stunned. His face couldn't help but turn ashen. He knew Castle Master Mosi's temper very well, however, and so he immediately bowed respectfully. "Yes, milord." Ganmontin didn't dare to say a single word more. He immediately left.

Linley let out a secret sigh of relief.

Castle Master Mosi turned to look towards Linley. Laughing, he said, "Linley, want to go to my first secret room and take a look at the scryer recordings of experts doing battle? That place even has recordings of Sovereigns showing their might!"

Book 16, Chapter 32 [Last chapter]

Book 16, Starmist Sea – Chapter 32, The Might of a Sovereign

“There really are scryer recordings?” Linley couldn’t help but be interested.

Ever since he had found out that those so-called recordings of experts doing battle served as a trap, Linley had doubted whether or not Castle Hendsey had scryer recordings or not. But from Castle Master Mosi’s words, it seemed as though there really were such things.

“You’ll know once you go take a look, right?” Mosi said mysteriously.

Castle Hendsey. Underground. Within a mysterious, wide throne room. The two sides of the throne rooms had quite a few bookshelves, only the bookshelves didn’t have books on them. Instead, they had many fist-sized crystal balls.

Linley and Mosi were currently in the throne room.

“There are a total of 1628 crystals here, each one of which contains a scryer recording.” Mosi said leisurely. “In addition, the crystal balls all have introductions and explanations regarding the battle and the techniques used.”

Linley, staring at the many crystals balls stored on the bookshelves, couldn’t help but stare with shining eyes. These were all scryer recordings of ultimate experts doing battle.

“In this first room, most of the recordings are those of peak Seven Star Fiends doing battles. There are also recordings of Asuras and Purgatory Commanders doing battle. As for the scryer recording of a Sovereigns showing their might...” Mosi pointed to a corner of the room, where a rectangular pillar was located which had a glowing gemstone placed at the very top of the pillar. “The scryer recordings of Sovereigns are located there, within that pillar. The pillar is hollow. You can open it like a door.”

Linley couldn't help but take a deep breath to calm himself down.

Good heavens. Recordings of Sovereigns showing their might? He had only heard legends of Sovereigns, but had never ever seen one. Everyone said that the might of a Sovereign was inviolable, but who knew exactly how powerful a Sovereign was?

“I'll start from the Seven Star Fiend battles.” Linley walked over to the bookshelves.

After walking forward, Linley discovered that on the surface of every single crystal ball that was placed on a bookshelf had two names recorded down.

“This is to simplify the process of finding the recordings one wants to watch.” Mosi walked over and said with a laugh.

“Understood.” Linley swept the racks of bookshelves and the dozens of crystal balls, then suddenly his gaze fell upon a crystal ball which had several names atop it: 'Bloodviolet Fiend' dueling the 'Ironleaf Fiend'!

"Bloodviolet Fiend?" Linley immediately drew closer.

This crystal ball contained scryer recordings within. One could use divine power to cause the scryer recordings within the crystal ball to emerge from it and appear in mid-air. That way, multiple people could watch at the same time. However, a person could also use his divine sense directly enter the crystal ball, which would make the watching process extremely fast.

Linley immediately filled the crystal ball with his divine sense...

In a desolate desert, thousands of people were battling everywhere, while in mid-air, two people were staring at each other. One of them was completely covered in black scale armor, with long black hair that glowed with a blue light.

The other person had a long violet robe, long violet hair, and a violet longsword in his hand. The familiar figure was one which Linley had seen long ago.

"It really is him. The Bloodviolet Fiend!" When Linley had first used his divine sense to enter Bloodviolet, he had seen many different images, and the primary subject of every single image was this person. But only now was Linley completely, 100% certain.

"That longsword is Bloodviolet!"

Only today was Linley completely convinced and certain that the original owner of his Bloodviolet sword was the legendary figure, the 'Bloodviolet Fiend'.

There was no sound at all from the battle scene, only the images recorded down.

The Ironleaf Fiend and the Bloodviolet Fiend both specialized in speed. Linley just saw two experts instantly transform into two blurry shadows. Wherever the Ironleaf Fiend passed by, space itself began to emit a strange, rippling spatial vibration. When looking at all the vibrations at once, they actually formed a flower that was blooming.

A devilish violet light was repeatedly flashing.

"Whoosh!"

A ray of violet light filled the skies, and the spatial ripple flower transformed into two halves, and many spatial cracks appeared.

Only now did the Ironleaf Fiend's body grow clearly visible, and he dropped down from the skies, while the Bloodviolet Fiend's expression didn't change at all.

"These two people were all terrifyingly fast. The Bloodviolet Fiend's sword attacks are much more powerful than even Learmonth and Boslo. When he strikes, he shows no traces of his actions at all, and the power is tremendous. He doesn't need to build up his power at all." Linley could just barely understand the intricacies of this battle.

Just from the scryer recordings, he could tell that the Bloodviolet Fiend's material attacks were tremendously powerful! Far greater than the material attacks of those other Seven Star Fiends which Linley had seen.

After the recording was completed, there was some information regarding this battle.

"This explanation is quite detailed." Linley, after reading it, sighed in praise. This explanation actually gave a detailed explanation of the techniques used by both people. Only now did Linley understand: "So the Bloodviolet Fiend is actually most powerful in the Way of Destruction."

Linley opened his eyes.

"How do you feel?" Mosi, seated on a distant chair, laughed as he looked at Linley. "There are many Seven Star Fiends, but the weakest of them have fused four profound mysteries. The most powerful are comparable to the Asuras of the Infernal Realm or the Commanders of Purgatory."

"Very powerful." After seeing the explanation of this battle, only now did Linley understand how frightening the Bloodviolet Fiend was.

If he were to encounter the Bloodviolet Fiend, he would most likely be finished.

"The Bloodviolet Fiend is extremely famous, and his power is more than enough to compete against most Asuras of the Infernal Realm or Commanders of Purgatory. His accomplishments in the Way of Destruction are at a very high level, and he is also a Soul Mutate. He truly is powerful." Mosi shook his head and sighed. "Unfortunately, this astonishing, dazzling figure went to a material plane ten thousand years ago and was killed."

In his heart, Linley knew that the Bloodviolet Fiend was killed in his own homeland.

"Could it be that Lord Beirut was the one to kill him?" Linley wondered to himself.

Linley didn't over-think things. He seized the opportunity to immediately go watch the scryer recordings of other experts doing battle. They included the Bloodviolet Fiend, the Royalwing Fiend, the Bluejacket Fiend, the Silvermoon Fiend...

Aside from these, there were also scryer recordings of ultimate Deity-level experts from other Higher Planes engaging in battle.

Asuras of the Infernal Realm, Commanders of Purgatory...scryer recordings of figures at this level.

"There's even a scryer recording of Reisgem engaging in battle." Linley didn't recognize virtually any of the figures who did battle, so when he saw Reisgem's, he was naturally delighted.

The scryer recording had 'Reisgem' in a human form. He looked like a very handsome youth, quite similar with Bebe. Only, Reisgem's entire body was covered in an amethyst armor, and in battle he relied on his hands and feet.

Clean and blunt. The Gravitational Space formed from violet light which Reisgem used was far more powerful than Linley's.

"So powerful." Linley stared, slack-jawed.

Another Purgatory Commander was fighting Reisgem, but the battle was one-sided.

Linley watched nearly a thousand scryer recordings, finally arriving at the pillar at the corner of the throne room. Pulling open the pillar 'door', he saw that inside, there were three memory crystals.

"You only need to see a single one of these three crystal balls." Mosi finally stood up and walked over, laughing. "The three crystal balls are all recordings of a Sovereign dealing with a Highgod, and the technique they used in each is essentially the same."

"Understood." Linley took a deep breath, then sent his divine sense into the first crystal ball.

It was a vast, endless sea. In the air above, there was a black-robed middle-aged man. This person was currently laughing with his head raised towards the skies, but tears were streaming down his face. His lips were moving, as though he was saying something.

The strange thing was...

In the air above the sea, a blurry, enormous face appeared, which was completely formed from elemental essence.

The black-robed man immediately pointed angrily at the enormous face, his lips moving nonstop.

A hint of annoyance passed through that enormous face, and its lips moved slightly. The black-robed middle-aged figure's body trembled, and then he fell down from the skies, while the enormous face vanished.

"That's it?" Linley looked at the explanation for this scryer recording. "And that black-robed figure was an Asura of the Infernal Realm?"

Linley withdrew his divine sense from the crystal ball, his mind still numb.

"That enormous face was a Sovereign?" Linley turned to look at Mosi.

Mosi nodded. "Right."

"All the Sovereign had to do to kill an Asura of the Infernal Realm was just move his lips?" Linley felt that this was simply too incredible.

Mosi sighed. "The Will of a Sovereign is inviolable. Even someone as powerful as an Asura, with but a thought by a Sovereign, will be easily killed. In front of a Sovereign, even the most powerful of Highgods will be unable to resist."

Linley couldn't help but be astonished.

Not being a Sovereign, Linley couldn't understand how Sovereigns could be so powerful.

Kill an Asura with just a thought?

"The might of a Sovereign is irresistible." Linley said to himself.

Compared to those countless Deities, Sovereigns were high and above them, capable of effortlessly killing any Highgod.

"Sovereigns are very remote and distant from us. As long as you do not anger Sovereigns, they won't lower themselves to kill you." Mosi laughed.

Linley nodded slightly. After having viewed so many snyder recordings, Linley was quite stunned. After calming himself, Linley said, "Lord Mosi, I've disturbed you for so long. I should return now. I truly am grateful to you."

Mosi laughed and nodded.

Linley suddenly thought of something, and he couldn't help but laugh awkwardly. "Lord Mosi, there's one last thing."

"Oh?" Mosi furrowed his forehead.

"During that battle at Miluo Island, I promised Bakwill to serve as a red-robed elder for a hundred years, and that I wouldn't leave the island without his permission. But I truly long for my homeland and want to go back sooner..." Linley continued to explain.

The next day. The Bagshaw clan's estate. Linley's residence. Currently, Linley and Uriah were walking towards the gates of the estate.

"Elder." Two guards at the side of the gate to the resident immediately bowed respectfully.

Linley instructed, "Go to the island guard's residential area and have Tarosse, Dylin, and Dylin's two children come over." This guard had gone last time, so he knew exactly where Tarosse lived.

"Yes, elder." The guard immediately left.

"Mr. Uriah, sorry to trouble you." Linley turned and laughed.

"It's no trouble." Uriah was very courteous as well.

After Linley returned from the underwater Castle Hendsey to Miluo Island, he had brought Uriah with him. Uriah's was on official orders from the master of Castle Hendsey to order Bakwill to permit Linley to leave.

"Linley, then I'll go speak with clan leader Bakwill now." Uriah immediately left.

Just as Linley entered his residence, he saw Bebe, Delia, Olivier, Cesar, and the others all come welcome him.

"Boss, did you just say we are about to leave?" Bebe was the first to run over.

Linley looked at Bebe, Delia, and his friends. Although he had only gone one or two days without seeing them, during the past two days, he had walked to and from the brink of death, and had learned many secrets in the process.

"Yes. We are about to leave." Linley laughed as he rubbed Bebe's head.

"Delia." Linley turned to look at Delia.

"If it weren't for the fact that the master of Castle Hendsey was giving face to that juvenile amethyst beast, I probably really would have been done for." As he thought of this, he couldn't help but tremble. Linley couldn't help but immediately pull Delia into his arms, tightly holding her.

"Linley?" Delia asked softly. She could tell that Linley seemed to be in a strange mood.

"I missed you." Linley said softly. Delia's face couldn't help but turn red, and she said softly, "Olivier and Cesar and them are all here." Linley released Delia. Seeing her bashfulness, he couldn't help but begin to laugh loudly.

Sequeira was walking alongside the road. When he arrived at the gate to Linley's residence, he heard the loud laughter coming from within.

"Oh, that Linley's back?" Sequeira recognized Linley's voice, and then he chuckled. "He was so arrogant in front of me. But in the end, hasn't he become just another dog for my Bagshaw clan?" Sequeira, as the young master of his clan, knew that those red-robed elders were all under soul control.

Sequeira immediately entered Linley's resident.

The guards at the door didn't dare to bar Sequeira's path.

Linley was currently laughing and chatting with Delia, Bebe, Olivier, and the others.

"Linley." A voice suddenly rang out. Linley turned to look. The newcomer was Sequeira.

Sequeira raised his jaw slightly, and with a cold laugh, flipped out his blood-red Miluo Insignia. "See this?"

Linley was puzzled.

"Blood-red colored Miluo Insignia. What of it?" Linley said, puzzled. This time, the master of Castle Hendsey had given him a great deal of face, and had satisfied every request he had made. Linley didn't want to cause any more problems with this Sequeira.

"Come here!" Sequeira said coldly.

Frowning, Linley walked over.

"Kneel." Sequeira shouted.

Linley's face couldn't help but turn dark.

"In the name of the blood-red colored Miluo Insignia, I order you to kneel." Sequeira shouted with cold fierceness. "Hurry." In the Bagshaw clan, the red-robed elders who had been controlled served, above all others, the master of the castle. After that, they would obey holders of the blood-red colored Miluo Insignia.

Currently, Sequeira just wanted to thoroughly humiliate Linley. As for killing Linley?

He wouldn't do that. As he saw it, Linley was now an obedient dog for his clan. How could he bear to kill him?

"Sequeira, what are you doing?" Linley felt that this was absolutely ridiculous.

"You dare disobey?" Sequeira was enraged. Nobody whose soul had been controlled had ever dared to disobey the blood-red colored Miluo Insignia.

"You have brain damage." Bebe immediately shouted angrily.

"Sequeira!" Suddenly, a furious shout rang out.

Sequeira turned his head and saw his father, 'Bakwill', currently walking over alongside Uriah. Sequeira immediately walked over and said angrily, "Father, that Linley actually dares to disobey my orders. He needs to be properly punished."

"Shut your mouth!" Bakwill was so furious, his face was turning red.

Sequeira was stunned.

Bakwill immediately turned to look at Linley, squeezing out a smile. "Mr. Linley, over the past few days in this place, I haven't been a very good host. I'm truly sorry." Hearing these words, Sequeira stared, slack-jawed.

"Father, why are you..." Sequeira didn't understand.

Why the need to be so courteous to a completely devoted person whose soul had been dominated?

"Shut your damn mouth!" Bakwill shouted angrily.

After Uriah had conveyed the order, Bakwill and Uriah had chatted in detail. Bakwill now understood that Linley's status was truly extraordinary. If Linley was simply a mere descendant of the Four Divine Beasts clan, his ancestor, Lord 'Mosi', definitely wouldn't have stayed his hand.

"Father, I..." Sequeira was completely lost.

"WHAP!" Bakwill launched a vicious slap directly on Sequeira's face. "I told you to shut your damn mouth!" This slap from Bakwill finally brought Sequeira to his senses. Sequeira immediately stood off to one side, not daring to make another sound.

"Mr. Bakwill, no need to be like this." Linley now could guess that Sequeira had probably taken him for someone who had been spiritually controlled.

Bakwill forced out a smile. "Linley, my son sometimes is so arrogant as to consider everyone else beneath him. It's only proper that he be disciplined on occasion. Linley, I've already learned everything from Uriah. Alas. You haven't even stayed here at my place for more than a few days, but you are already going to leave. What a true pity."

"There's nothing I can do. I really do have something I must be doing." Linley said.

"Fine, then. I won't try to further dissuade you from leaving, Mr. Linley. Mr. Linley, you can leave whenever you wish...but of course, if you ever return to my place, my Miluo Island welcomes you at all times." Bakwill said in a very friendly manner.

"Definitely, definitely." Linley laughed.

Linley suddenly turned his head, and he saw that Tarosse, Dylin, and Dylin's two sons were currently walking over. Tarosse and Dylin, upon seeing Linley, were overjoyed and embarrassed. Their emotions were extremely complicated right now.

They wanted to say something, but with Bakwill present, they didn't know what to say for now.

"Haha, Dylin, Tarosse!" Linley immediately laughed and walked over. "No need to say too much. It is all over now!"

"Right. It's all over now." Tarosse and Dylin had unshed tears in their eyes. They had been under soul control, but now they had regained their freedom. This freedom which they had lost then regain would cause even the toughest of men to feel emotional. What's more, they knew that the reason why they had regained their freedom was due to Linley.

"Haha, let's go. It's time to head out!"

Linley stared into the distant southeastern skies. "Indigo Prefecture... time to go back!"

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 1, Training Speed

"Rumble..." The waves of the Starmist Sea struck against the shores of Miluo Island. The clan leader of the Bagshaw clan, Bakwill, watched alongside Uriah and the others as Linley's group boarded their metallic lifeform, beginning their journey towards the Bloodridge Continent.

The metallic lifeform had once more transformed into a ship. On the front of the ship.

"We finally left." O'Brien let out an emotional sigh.

"Right. We left." Cesar repeated. "I'll forget this place. Forever!" Linley glanced at Cesar. Previously, Cesar had asked him to help investigate what had happened to Cecily. Although Linley had discovered that the situation seemed off, and that it was uncertain whether or not Cecily was still alive...

He still told Cesar that Cecily was perfectly fine and still living in the clan estate.

"Perhaps this way, Cesar will feel a bit better." Linley said to himself.

"We're finally leaving. Father, we're finally leaving." The elder Six-Eyed Golden Ni-Lion, 'Cleo', was extremely excited as well. In the past, he and his brother had no idea that their father had been under soul domination. Only now did they know.

They felt a surge of terror just thinking about it.

"Right. We're leaving. We've escaped." Dylin stared into the distant southeastern skies, not turning at all. He would most likely never return to Miluo Island ever again.

"Screeech!" An ear-piercing sound suddenly shook the heavens.

Linley turned to look. It was Tarosse. Tarosse's head was raised, and he was emitting an ear-piercing screech, his entire body trembling. After a long time, he finally ceased his howling. Tarosse turned to look at Linley, his eyes slightly red. "Linley. I won't say too much about this great kindness you have shown me. Thank you."

Someone who had never been soul dominated would never understand how Tarosse and Dylin were currently feeling.

"Haha, let's go. Let's go to the Bloodridge Continent. Let's go to the Indigo Prefecture." Linley held Delia by the hand.

Their trip over the Starmist Sea was very calm. They occasionally met a few bandits, but given the power of Linley's squad, the Highgods amongst them only had to show themselves and the bandits were immediately terrified and would flee.

This trip was an uneventful one.

Within the ship cabin.

Linley was seated in the meditative stance in a corner. His original body as well as his three divine clones were all in this state. After this last experience, Linley realized what his greatest weakness was. His soul!

It wasn't that his profound mysteries in terms of soul defense was weak!

At present, he had fused the Throbbing Pulse of the World, Gravitational Space, and the Essence of the Earth. His soul defense, in terms of profound mysteries, wasn't weak. The biggest problem was his foundation; in other words, the strength of his soul!

The power of a God's soul, in quality, was far weaker than that of a Highgod's soul. Although Linley, through using soul-related profound mysteries, had soul defense comparable to that of an ordinary Highgod, and also had that damaged soul-protecting Sovereign artifact...it was precisely because of that Sovereign artifact that Linley was able to roam the Starmist Sea, slay Ganmontin, and slay so many Highgods. If he didn't have it, how could Linley, a mere God, possibly be so strong?

Sovereign divine artifacts were simply too powerful.

"Right now, my number one target must be to reach the Highgod stage as soon as possible." Linley knew where he needed to develop himself. "Once I become a Highgod, I can once again refine a large amount of amethysts, and with amethysts as well as the natural Highgod boost, my soul power will increase tens of times over! Once that happens, as long as I only need to defend that flaw in the soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, I won't need to be afraid of even a Seven Star Fiend skilled in soul attacks."

Linley knew all of this very well.

It might perhaps be easier for someone at the God level to fuse profound mysteries, as upon reaching the Highgod level, the difficulty level would rise greatly.

But at the same time, fusing a large number of profound mysteries as a God also took an astonishing amount of time. For example, the 'Worldwalking' profound mystery of the Laws of the Earth, up till now, still hadn't yet even begun to be fused with any of the other three profound mysteries, much less completely fused.

"I currently have three types of profound mysteries. If I need to fuse four of them, it seems that I would have to thank my lucky stars to be able to fuse them in even ten thousand years."

"Right now, I've gained a basic understanding of the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength'. I need to hurry up and master the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength', and then I'll train in the final 'Vitality' mystery. Once all six are completed, I will be a Highgod. By then, my power will grow dramatically! In terms of material defense or soul defense, I won't have any glaring weaknesses. I'll be able to deal against most Seven Star Fiends."

Linley knew that upon becoming a Highgod, it was still possible to fuse profound mysteries. Only, the difficulty level would rise exponentially.

"Once I become a Highgod, I can continue to slowly fuse them."

As long as one became a Highgod on one's own, there was still hope for fusing.

"I need to thank Mosi. If it hadn't been for his sledgehammer blow, who knows how long it would have been before I would have gained basic insight into the Profound Mysteries of Strength?" Linley quieted his mind, allowing his original body as well as his divine earth clone to wholeheartedly delve into training in the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength'.

Right now, Linley was favoring the Laws of the Earth.

As for the Elemental Laws of the Wind, Linley had only begun to train in five profound mysteries. He had four more that he needed to train in, and the amount of time that took was astonishing as well.

As for the Elemental Laws of Fire, Linley's divine fire clone, till now, was still not even at the God level.

"Training in the Elemental Laws of Fire is simply too slow." Linley now had an even greater appreciation for the importance of talent.

If one was talented, then one would train faster, such as Linley with the Laws of the Earth and the Laws of the Wind. In less than a thousand years, Linley had reached the level of learning five of the Laws of the Earth.

But if one's talent was poor...

Although there was no bottleneck yet, Linley still had yet to even master a second profound mystery of the Elemental Laws of Fire.

Breaking through bottlenecks required insights, luck, and comprehension ability.

However, normal training was reliant on talent.

Linley's elemental affinity for 'earth' and 'wind', based on the test that had been done when he was young, was 'exceptional'! As for 'fire', it was only 'average'. As for the others, his affinity was very low.

Clearly, Linley had the greatest chance of becoming a Highgod soon through his divine earth clone. His divine earth clone's power was clearly more powerful, and so naturally, with even his original body training in the Laws of the Earth, his training speed became even faster.

The Starmist Sea. Endless and boundless. Occasionally, an island would be seen.

"Rumble..." The metallic lifeform continuously advanced through the waves.

Linley and Delia were currently shoulder-to-shoulder, staring towards the southeast. Next to them was Olivier, Bebe, O'Brien, Dylin, Tarosse, Cesar, and others. They all had smiles on their faces.

From afar, they saw a hint of a line that was extremely, extremely long. The line was a shore.

"The Bloodridge Continent. We finally arrived!" Linley was incomparably excited.

After heading out from Miluo Island, they had travelled for twenty three years, and now, they were finally at the Bloodridge Continent.

"We're at the Bloodridge Continent now. The Indigo Prefecture won't be far away." Bebe's eyes were shining. "Boss, I remember that on that map, it seemed as though the Indigo Prefecture wasn't too far away from the sea shore. Ohoho, after nearly seven hundred years, we are almost there, finally."

Linley and Delia held each other's hands tightly, staring towards the shore.

"Linley, once we arrive at the Bloodridge Continent, shall we head directly for the Indigo Prefecture, or to accept another escort mission headed towards the Indigo Prefecture?" Olivier looked at Linley. After all, this was what Linley had done in the past.

"No need."

Linley shook his head. "In the past, I was weak and was afraid of trouble. Now, we'll head straight for Indigo Prefecture. No need to fear anything on the way over." Linley was now extremely confident in himself, and his squad had quite a few Highgods.

In addition, Tarosse was an expert on the level of a Six Star Fiend as well.

The metallic lifeform moved forward at a very fast pace. Soon, it reached the continental shelf. Immediately, the 'ship' shaped metallic lifeform transformed into a panther-shape, flying in the air above the Bloodridge Continent.

The Bloodridge Continent was similar to the Redbud Continent.

Various tribes were scattered everywhere, and bandits were scattered everywhere as well. Battles could occur at any moment. But of course, no bandit squad would dare offend Linley's squad.

"Linley, how is your training progressing?" Tarosse laughed.

On the way over, Tarosse and Dylin had finally learned that Linley was only a God. As for how a God could release such astonishing power, Linley just gave a fairly general explanation.

However, Tarosse and Dylin could tell that this all had to do with the Amethyst Mountains.

"Not bad. I've reached the later stages of the Profound Mysteries of Strength." Linley revealed a hint of a smile on his face. "Unfortunately, I still haven't even gotten a basic understanding of the Profound Mysteries of Vitality." This was what frustrated Linley the most. 'Vitality'.

Based on the book which had given him a general description of the various profound mysteries, the 'Vitality' mystery was one of the unique profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth, and was exceedingly hard to gain insight into.

For each profound mystery, getting basic insights as well as breaking through the final bottleneck to mastery was the two hardest steps. If one was slow, one could be stuck for a million years, and that would be considered normal.

"No rush. Perhaps you'll gain a sudden insight soon." Tarosse laughed.

Linley laughed and nodded as well. It was true. For example, he had suddenly gained an insight into the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength', and so he had gained a basic understanding.

"Your training speed is already very impressive. You've trained for less than a thousand years, and yet you've gained insights into five of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth. And, more importantly... you've fused three of them." Tarosse was quite admiring of Linley.

Tarosse himself had only fused two profound mysteries, and had relied on his innate divine ability, along with those two profound mysteries, to reach the power level of a Six Star Fiend.

"Hey, Tarosse, that goes without saying. My Boss has always been awesome." Bebe walked over as well and said arrogantly, "Look at you. You've been training for I don't even know how many years, but you've only fused two profound mysteries. Hmph."

Tarosse couldn't help but laugh. "Bebe, don't be so smug. You train in the Laws of Darkness, right? I want to ask you, of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of Darkness, how many have you trained in, and how many have you fused? As I recall, you've been training with Linley for about the same length of time."

"Haha..." The nearby O'Brien and Cesar both began to laugh.

Linley couldn't help but begin to laugh towards Bebe as well.

Everyone knew that Bebe didn't have any patience for training. At most, he'd be able to calm his mind and train for a year or so, after which he'd begin to get restless. With an attitude like that...no matter how talented he was, if he didn't work hard, how could he improve?

"Tarosse, you know that's just how Bebe is, and yet you ask him this question?" Dylin said.

Bebe was so angry, even his nose was trembling. "Right. I haven't even fused a single profound mystery!"

"Bebe, enough. Don't be angry." Linley laughed as he patted Bebe on the shoulder, but Bebe raised his head proudly. "But of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of Darkness, I, Bebe, have gained insights into four of them!"

Everyone within the cabin immediately fell silent.

Linley wondered if he was hearing things. He couldn't help but look at Bebe. "Bebe, what'd you say?" Linley remembered quite clearly that Bebe hadn't spent much time training. Normally, he would just mess around, and only occasionally would he train.

"Bebe, say it again. I suspect I misheard." Tarosse said, and even Dylín and Olivier were looking at Bebe.

Neither Dylín nor Olivier had, as of yet, successfully mastered four profound mysteries.

"Listen up, and listen clearly." Bebe raised his eyebrows smugly, then said loudly, "I, Bebe, despite not having fused a single profound mystery, have already mastered four of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of Darkness, and am currently training in a fifth!"

Linley himself had only mastered four of the profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth, and was currently working on the fifth.

"Bebe, it's fine if you are slow in training, but you can't just make things up." Cesar said.

"Make things up?" Bebe was so angry, his eyes bulged out.

Bebe flipped his hand, and darkness-type elemental essence swirled around, forming a black serpent which wrapped around Bebe's arm. It even emitted a hissing sound, as though it were real.

"This is the Essence of Darkness." Bebe said smugly. "See it?"

"You knew that one all along." Olivier laughed.

Bebe's body flickered, and instantly, dozens of doppelgangers of Bebe appeared within the cabin. Everyone remained calm; they all knew that Bebe was in possession of the Shadowshape Doppelganger technique.

"Hmph."

Bebe suddenly let out a cold snort.

Very bizarrely, one black tentacle after another emerged from Bebe's body. Instantly, Bebe had become like an octopus, with the area around his body being filled by dozens of long, icy cold tentacles. The black, misty aura they emanated was exceedingly bizarre.

Linley was surprised, and everyone else was stunned.

Laws of Darkness – The Profound Mysteries of 'Evil'.

"That was the third. This is the fourth." Bebe's body flickered, and those evil tentacles disappeared. Bebe reached out with his right hand, and from within it, a vortex appeared which seemed to be devouring everything around it, swallowing up even light itself. The area of darkness grew larger and larger.

Laws of Darkness – The Profound Mysteries of 'Devour'.

Everyone in the cabin was speechless. Olivier, up till now, had only mastered two profound mysteries of the Laws of Darkness, and was currently researching a third. As for Dylín, he had only mastered three and was currently training in a fourth.

But Bebe had actually been faster than them.

"How is this possible?"

"Hmph. You actually didn't believe me. Bebe! Let me tell you, it's possible that tomorrow, I'll have mastered the fifth one." Bebe smugly adjusted his straw hat, his head raised proudly.

"Bebe, what's this all about?" Linley was utterly puzzled.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 2, Travelling to Indigo Prefecture

From going from the Yulan continent to the Infernal Realm, Bebe had always been by Linley's side. Linley knew very clearly how hard (or not) Bebe had trained. Logically speaking, it should be impossible for Bebe to have mastered four profound mysteries.

However, Bebe had succeeded.

This was a reality! Everyone had seen this.

"Bebe, how did you train?" Dylin was in disbelief as well.

"How could you be so fast?" Olivier, no matter how calm he normally was, had been stunned. They all stared at Bebe. Clearly, all of them wanted to know why Bebe was able to train so quickly, so as to see if they could also learn from this method.

Bebe just laughed smugly.

"I told you so, but you guys didn't believe, earlier." Bebe said forcefully.

"We believe you now, but how did you do this?" Tarosse asked as well. Even the greatest of geniuses had a process by which they trained. Linley had seized every moment to train, and his talent had been on full display in the Yulan continent. Everyone had watched him improve, step by step.

But Bebe? Nobody had dared to believe that his training speed could catch up to Linley's.

"I'm Bebe!" Bebe stared at the surrounding people. He said smugly, "You didn't believe me. All I'll say is...it has to do with my Grandpa Beirut. I won't say anything else."

"Lord Beirut?" Tarosse and Dylin were mystified.

Training was a personal matter. No matter how powerful Beirut was, he wasn't by Bebe's side. How could he help Bebe?

"Those smug looks on your faces just now...hmp. I won't tell you. Slowly ponder it on your own. I'll only tell my Boss." Bebe turned to glance at Linley, then chortled and said through the soul, "Boss, are you surprised?"

"I am indeed surprised." Linley couldn't understand either how Bebe had trained so quickly.

Bebe smiled mysteriously, then said through his divine sense, "Boss, do you still remember how Grandpa Beirut had said that to help me train faster, he had paid a very heavy price and obtained many treasures to help me breakthrough faster? He said that I was very slow to have taken twenty years before mastering the Essence of Darkness and reaching the God level, and that if it had been you, most likely a single year would have been enough."

Linley immediately recalled this.

Beirut had indeed said such a thing.

Back then, Linley hadn't yet entered the Infernal Realm, and so he didn't clearly understand how powerful Beirut was. After arriving in the Infernal Realm, however, Linley finally realized how mighty Beirut was. Beirut had created that godspark weapon for Bebe, then infused it with that pearl.

The power of that attack had actually destroyed the divine artifact of Elquin, a Seven Star Fiend!

"If it had been Lord Beirut himself, he most likely would have easily killed that Seven Star Fiend." Linley still remembered how the master of Castle Hendsey, 'Mosi', had said that there were very few people in the Infernal Realm capable of creating soul-protecting divine artifacts.

"But Lord Beirut had made a soul-protecting divine artifact for Bebe."

Linley mused to himself, "Godspark weapons are priceless items in the Infernal Realm as well. They are exceedingly costly. Even if all he did was sell off a few godspark weapons, Lord Beirut would be a person of astonishing wealth. In addition, he is a Sovereign's Emissary!"

Despite having been in the Infernal Realm for so long, Linley had yet to hear of someone else who was a Sovereign's Emissary!

To be selected by a Sovereign...naturally, only absolute topmost Highgods would be selected.

"Lord Beirut said that he had spent an enormous price to acquire some treasures. Given Lord Beirut's power, for even him to say that the price was enormous...what treasure could it have been?" Linley understood that even a trillion inkstones, to Lord Beirut, was nothing.

A single godspark weapon, in and of itself, was worth far more!

What sort of treasure could possibly cause Lord Beirut to say that it had cost him an 'enormous price'?

He hadn't realized this earlier, but now that Linley thought of this, he became all the more curious.

"Bebe, what sort of treasure is it? For even your Grandpa Beirut to say it cost an enormous price, and for it to be capable of helping you train so quickly..." Linley hurriedly asked through their spiritual bond.

Bebe laughed. "Boss, that treasure is...soul fragment strips!"

"Soul fragment strips?" Linley didn't understand.

"Right. Grandpa Beirut knew that I didn't have the temperament to slowly train, so he came up with this idea. Grandpa Beirut went to the Infernal Realm and spent an enormous price to invite a major figure to gather the souls of countless Prime Saints and fragment them into strips! He completely peeled out all of the fragments containing 'Profound Mysteries of the Laws' in the souls of those Saints."

Linley was stunned.

Peeling off strips from the soul?

When Linley had been in the Yulan continent, he had seen the then Grand Magus Necromancer, 'Zassler', execute a 'Soulscur' on a soul. Only, that just removed a portion of a soul's memories; there was no one to clearly sense the insights within a person's soul.

"Grandpa Beirut said that peeling off soul fragment strips is very hard! In addition, a Deity's soul is fused with his divine spark, and so it's impossible to carve out soul fragment strips from them. The only choice for doing this is with Saints!" Bebe continued to chat through divine sense. "To completely peel off the portion of a soul with insights into the profound mysteries of a Law is something which only a very few people in the Infernal Realm can do. Grandpa Beirut said that he himself couldn't do it either, so he had to pay an enormous price to invite an expert to help out."

Linley was secretly surprised.

In places such as the Blacksand Castle and the Redbud Castle, Linley had never heard of 'soul fragment strips' being available for purchase. These things were simply priceless. Most likely, only major personages like Beirut were capable of acquiring them.

"When I became an adult, I naturally became a Deity, and so gained insight into the 'Shadowshape Doppelganger' mystery. Grandpa asked some of his friends to help out and acquire four pieces of 'soul fragment strips' for me, which contained four of the six profound mysteries of the Laws of Darkness."

Bebe sent resignedly, "Grandpa Beirut said that most Prime Saints had only gained insights into very ordinary profound mysteries, such as the 'Essence of Darkness'. Very few have insights into 'Devour' or 'Evil'."

"Grandpa's friends also were forced to spend an enormous amount of effort and to very carefully peel off those soul fragments. It is extremely difficult to completely peel off the part of the soul with the insights into a profound mystery. In the end, he managed to acquire four, which he gave to me for fusing." Bebe sent mentally.

Linley was completely stunned.

Souls were very unique things, and even soul attacks were hard to develop.

To completely peel off the part of a soul which contained insights into the profound mysteries of a Law...one could imagine how hard it was just thinking about it.

"To reach this level, how deep must one's mastery with regards to the soul be?" Linley felt this was almost unbelievable.

Beirut himself was capable of making soul-protecting divine artifacts, which meant that Beirut had already reached a very high level of accomplishment with regards to the soul. But even Beirut was not capable of this, and had to pay a huge price to invite others to do it for him.

One could imagine how hard peeling off soul fragments was.

"Lord Beirut's friends are truly amazing." Linley sighed to himself.

There was no way one could peel any fragments from the soul of a Deity, so it had to be done to Prime Saints instead.

"Who knows how many Prime Saints were killed for these soul fragments to be acquired." Linley sighed to himself, but he also understood that in the Infernal Realm, the mighty were respected. In the Infernal Realm, many tribes raised Saint-level magical beasts, then butchered them and retrieved their body parts for sale to restaurants.

In the Infernal Realm, Saints were treated as humans treated wild rabbits in the material realms. They could be killed at leisure.

"Alas. Prime Saints are all people who have gained some insights into a single profound mystery and have reached a bottleneck and are just one step away from completion." Bebe sighed. "Thus, with regards to these four profound mysteries, I've gained insights all the way through to the bottleneck. For breaking through the bottleneck, though, I still have to rely on myself!"

"In the Yulan continent, it only took me twenty years to break through in the Essence of Darkness."

"In the Infernal Realm, it's been seven hundred years. I've occasionally gained some insights, and broke through to obtain mastery in the 'Devour' and 'Evil' profound mysteries. Right now, I've completely mastered four types, while I'm at a bottleneck for the fifth. As for the sixth...I'm completely blind and have no idea as to what it is about."

Linley completely understood.

Bebe was a divine beast. As soon as he reached adulthood, he would naturally master one type of profound mystery and become a Deity! This was the first profound mystery, 'Shadowshape Doppelganger'.

Afterwards, Lord Beirut, knowing that Bebe had no patience, didn't want Bebe to become a Highgod through fusing with a divine spark. Thus, he had paid an enormous price to procure those four strips of soul fragments to have Bebe fuse them, and thus naturally reach the 'bottleneck' stage in those four profound mysteries.

As soon as he gained an insight into one of them, he would reach mastery.

He didn't need to train at all.

"No wonder. No wonder." Linley let out two sighs.

Sometimes, one could be angered to death when looking at others. Linley had spent every day and every night training, but Bebe had spent all his time fooling around. When, for some reason, he gained a sudden insight, he would achieve mastery. This was simply too easy.

However, in Linley's mind, he was still very happy for Bebe.

"Lord Beirut truly has taken exceedingly good care of Bebe." Linley sighed.

Beirut had a very high status, while Bebe was the second Godeater Rat in his lineage. Beirut naturally viewed Bebe as a treasure and doted upon him to an unbelievable extent. For Bebe's sake, he had been willing to exhaust himself and run throughout the Infernal Realm to ask friends to help out.

From this alone, Linley could tell how powerful and vast Lord Beirut's connections were.

"Peeling off soul strips...that's hard work and careful work. For that powerful figure to actually be willing to do this for the sake of Lord Beirut..." Linley understood now how influential Beirut himself was.

The metallic lifeform continued to speed towards Indigo Prefecture. As for the secret regarding why Bebe had trained so quickly, in the end, Bebe only told Linley and Delia. The others didn't know. Clearly, in Bebe's heart, Linley and Delia were closer to him.

After they had reached the Bloodridge Continent, the metallic lifeform had flown on for three years.

"Boss, look. Stonesword Mountain!" Bebe pointed through the translucent window towards the east.

Linley looked carefully. In the distance to the east, there was an exceedingly tall mountain, its peak seeming to pierce through the heavens. The upper part of the peak was shaped like a heavy sword, and at the peak of this sword-shaped mountain, the clouds swirled about.

"Stonesword Mountain. We finally reached the Indigo Prefecture!" Delia said with excitement.

Stonesword Mountain was one of the important landmarks in the maps of Indigo Prefecture.

Linley felt the blood surging throughout his body. "Finally here. We're finally here! Indigo Prefecture!"

The place which his dreams and his very soul had been focused on.

When in the Yulan continent, Linley had learned of Indigo Prefecture. He knew that his ancestors, the elders of the Baruch clan had all come to Indigo Prefecture. Linley thus had embarked on this one-way trip to the Infernal Realm!

From the Redbud Continent all the way over to here, they had encountered countless tribulations. The battle at the castle of sand. The volcano range. The breakthrough in the Amethyst Mountains. The shocking danger of Miluo Island...and now finally, after passing through the Starmist Sea, they had arrived at the Bloodridge Continent, arrived at Indigo Prefecture!

"Indigo Prefecture!"

Linley took a deep breath. Currently, he was unbearably eager to go meet the ancestors of his Baruch clan.

"Boss, we don't know the exact location of the Four Divine Beasts clan." Bebe said.

"It's simple." Linley was all smiles. "Let's first go to the nearest city, Fansi City. The Four Divine Beasts clan should be extremely famous in the Indigo Prefecture. To find the place where the Four Divine Beasts clan live should be quite simple."

The metallic lifeform sped directly for Fansi City. Fansi City was the first city which Linley's group would be entering upon reaching the Indigo Prefecture.

After flying for many days.

Linley and everyone else was drinking wine and chatting idly in the living room of the metallic lifeform. As they were about to reach his ancestral clan, Linley was very happy. In this final stage of the journey, Linley was, for once, not training.

"Boom!" Suddenly, a powerful vibration shook out from the skies, shaking Linley's metallic lifeform.

The metallic lifeform trembled.

"What a powerful wave."

"Hey, what's going on?" Linley and the others stood up, looking out through the window.

The metallic lifeform flew very fast, and soon, Linley's group saw something which utterly stunned them...

In the distant skies, nearly a hundred Highgods were fleeing in panic. They were currently being slaughtered by three white-robed men!

"Haha, you won't be able to flee!" A white-robed figure laughed loudly.

The three white-robed men all had long golden hair, golden eyebrows, and were as handsome as any fairies which Linley had ever seen. The three white-robed men flashed about at high speed, and the Highgods on the other side all fell down from the skies.

Those Highgods were terror-struck!

"Flee!" With a furious shout, those dozens of lucky survivors immediately dispersed in every direction.

"You won't be able to!" A calm voice rang out.

One of the white-robed men whose long hair fluttered in the air suddenly had a pair of golden wings that were ten meters long grow out of his back. This enormous set of golden wings was covered with a hazy golden light, and holy energy spread out in every direction.

The golden-winged man, his entire body wrapped up in golden light, seemed so holy and beautiful.

"I sentence you...to death!"

The white-robed man said softly.

A translucent golden ripple spread out in every direction, and those dozens of fleeing Highgods, no matter how fast they had been fleeing, were unable to move faster than this ripple.

Immediately, those dozens of Highgods who had been fleeing in every direction fell down from the skies. Only the original leader of those hundred Highgods remained, and he stared in terror and rage at the three white-robed men in front of him.

"So strong." Linley, Tarosse, and the others were all stunned.

"He trains in the Edicts of Fate." Tarosse said in a low voice. "Judging from his power, that white-robed man, if not a Seven Star Fiend, must at least be a Six Star Fiend."

"Edicts of Fate?"

In the Infernal Realm, Linley rarely encountered experts who trained in the Edicts of Fate, because most of them had gone to the 'Celestial Realm' of the Four Higher Planes. The few he had actually seen weren't very powerful.

"A Highgod that trains in the Edicts of Fate." Linley was secretly startled.

From mid-air, a bellow rang out.

"Why. We have never offended your Boleyn [Bo'lin] clan. Why must you be so ruthless, to kill us all and spare not a single one of us?" The lucky survivor, the leader, couldn't help but bellow out in rage.

Those three white-robed men all faintly glowed with golden light.

"Why? Aren't you on assignment for the Four Divine Beasts clan?" One of the white-robed men laughed coldly.

"Four Divine Beasts clan?" The surviving leader said, stunned.

"All who serve the Four Divine Beasts clan will die!" The white-robed man who had the pair of golden wings said, then he pointed out with his right hand and a ray of golden light shot out.

The leader wasn't able to dodge in time. The golden light struck into his body, and he fell down from mid-air.

The white-robed man with the golden wings cast a sideways glance at Linley's distant metallic lifeform, then let out a disdainful snort. "Let's go." The three white-robed figures transformed into three rays of light, disappearing into the horizon.

“All those who serve the Four Divine Beasts shall die?” Within the metallic lifeform, Linley murmured to himself, momentarily speechless.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 3, Azure Dragon Clan

According to what Linley had learned on the way, as well as what he had heard from Beirut, as Linley saw it, the Four Divine Beasts clan was extremely powerful. At Miluo Island, after seeing the many scribe recordings, he had mentioned to Castle Master Mosi the fact that he was headed for Indigo Prefecture, and Mosi had discussed the Four Divine Beasts clan.

From what Mosi had said, it seemed as though the Four Divine Beasts clan had fallen on hard times.

But even despite that, it should still be almost comparable to the Bagshaw clan.

“The Bagshaw clan, at Miluo Island, is in complete control. No one dares offend them! Despite countless years having passed, Miluo Island’s fame remains widespread. There’s no way something like this could happen at Miluo Island, where those who serve the Bagshaw clan will be killed!”

Linley really couldn’t believe it.

The Indigo Prefecture could be said to be the main headquarters for the Four Divine Beasts clan. How could something like this happen within the borders of the mighty Four Divine Beast clan? How could a truly powerful clan allow something like this to happen?

Anyone who thought about it for even a moment would understand.

If a truly powerful clan encountered something like this, they would definitely eradicate the entire 'Boleyn clan', killing them as a warning sign to frighten others!

"The situation doesn't make sense." Linley narrowed his eyes. The joy he had felt upon arriving at his clan's territory instantly evaporated, and Linley began to worry. It seemed as the situation the Four Divine Beast clan was in wasn't what he had thought it would be.

In the metallic lifeform, Tarosse, Bebe, Delia, and the others were all mystified by what they had just seen.

Tarosse said with a solemn look, "Linley, it seems as though the Four Divine Beast clan doesn't have much power within Indigo Prefecture." When Linley had invited Tarosse and the others to Indigo Prefecture, he had said that that within the Indigo Prefecture, given the strength and influence of the Four Divine Beast clan, they shouldn't encounter any more dangers.

But now, it seemed...

"I don't understand either." Linley's face was solemn.

After all, he had never gone to the Four Divine Beast clan before. All he knew, he gained from outside sources of information.

"I'm sorry. It seems as though I've caused everyone to enter a dangerous situation." Linley couldn't help but say towards Olivier, Tarosse, and the others. When he had invited them to come with him, he had wanted for all of them from the Yulan continent to be together and that there wouldn't be much danger.

As he saw it, there shouldn't be any dangers in the main lair for his clan.

But it seemed he was wrong!

Dylin laughed. "Linley, don't worry about it. No matter what happens, my life can be considered to belong to you. What have I to fear?"

"Let's go. Even if someone wants to kill us, first they have to have enough power to do so!" Tarosse said.

Linley nodded. If the Four Divine Beast clan was comparable to the Bagshaw clan, then, as an incredibly powerful force, there was no way they would simply be destroyed. As the saying goes, a camel which died of starvation is still larger than a horse.

Mosi's words implied that the weakened Four Divine Beast clan was still comparable to the Bagshaw clan.

But before its downfall?

How could such an originally incomparably powerful clan possibly be completely destroyed?

"Let's go to Fansi City first."

Fansi City was a city in the eastern part of Indigo Prefecture, and was the first city which Linley's group was heading towards in Indigo Prefecture. Fansi City was just like every other city in the Infernal Realm; it was very bustling!

The streets were rowdy and filled with people everywhere.

"Boss, where shall we go to find the location of the Four Divine Beast clan?" Bebe asked, puzzled.

The War God, O'Brien, laughed. "Any place works. For example, the Fiend Castle. We can just ask some people there. There are definitely people here in the Indigo Prefecture who know quite a bit regarding the exceedingly famous Four Divine Beast clan."

Asking around at the Fiend Castle was indeed an excellent idea.

"No rush. Let's go to the Bloodridge Castle first!" Linley said.

The Redbud Continent had Redbud Castles, while the Bloodridge Continent had Bloodridge Castles. The two were the same; they both purchased and sold large quantities of items.

"Why are we going to the Bloodridge Castle?" Dylin asked.

"Bebe, do you still remember how we had gone shopping for books that time in the Redbud Castle?" Linley turned to look at Bebe, who hurriedly nodded. "I remember. That time, we went to buy some books regarding the geography of the Infernal Realm."

"Right. Last time, we only went to investigate the general geography of the Infernal Realm, which is why in the books we bought, the information regarding the 108 Prefectures was very brief. But that time, however, we did see quite a few books which discussed each prefecture in detail."

There had been five or six centimeter thick books that discussed each prefecture.

Those detailed books each focused on one prefecture, and naturally would discuss and point out some of the unique areas in a prefecture, as well as provide some very detailed information on some of the most powerful clans. Most likely, even some ultimate experts would be described within.

Delia's eyes lit up, and she nodded in agreement. "Buy one which goes into detail regarding the 'Indigo Prefecture'. The Four Divine Beast clan is very famous in Indigo Prefecture. It will definitely be described in detail, and the location will be clearly mentioned as well."

Linley laughed and nodded.

If they asked others, others might point them to a specific place which they didn't even know was located where.

After all, they had never had a detailed map of the Indigo Prefecture. They only knew the rough geography of the place. By buying a detailed book regarding the Indigo Prefecture, they would even get a clear understanding of the geographical information in the Indigo Prefecture.

"Buying books? I've never gone book shopping in the Infernal Realm." Tarosse laughed.

"You normally lived on Miluo Island. Why would you need to buy books? You'd only go buy them when you needed them." Linley said, then headed towards the Bloodridge Castle.

The three castles in every single city were bustling with activity. Following the flow of people, Linley's group quickly reached the Bloodridge Castle. At the gate to the Bloodridge Castle, there were Bloodridge Army soldiers standing guard.

"Heh heh, I must say, the uniform of the Bloodridge Army is quite stylish. It's much better than that of the Redbud Army and the Starmist Army." Bebe said softly as he looked at the Bloodridge Army soldiers at the gates.

Linley glanced at them. "The baleful aura it emanates is rather heavier than that of the Redbud Army and the Starmist Army."

"Let's go." As he spoke, Linley led the group into the first floor of the Bloodridge Castle. The way the Bloodridge Castle was organized was quite similar to the Redbud Castle. Linley's group easily found the room which specialized in selling a large number of books.

In the room, there were only three people, one of whom was the staff member.

"What do you want to buy?" Seeing Linley's group walk in, and that most were Highgods, the staff member immediately came to welcome them.

"Which book has information regarding the location of the Four Divine Beast clan?" Bebe was the first to say.

But Linley said, "This place should have a detailed description of the entire Indigo Prefecture, right? Give me that book."

"We do." The female staff member withdrew an enormous, black covered book that was two fingers thick, then walked over and handed it to Linley. "This one should be the book with the most complete introduction to the Indigo Prefecture."

Linley immediately accepted it and began to flip through it.

This book, in its table of contents, was divided into 'geography', 'dangerous areas', 'famous people', 'clans'...and so on and so forth. From the table of contents, Linley easily found the top ranked 'Four Divine Beast clan'.

"Page 158!" Linley couldn't help but grow excited.

The first thing which drew Linley's attention was...

The Four Divine Beast clan was actually the general term for four mighty divine beast clans.

They were:

The Azure Dragon clan: The Redding [Lei'ding] clan!

The Vermilion Bird clan: The Nimo [Ne'mo] clan!

The White Tiger clan: The Lais [Li'e'si] clan!

The Black Tortoise clan: The Bowen [Bo'wen] clan!

The Four Divine Beast clan was led by the Azure Dragon clan, the Redding clan. The four great clans were joined together into one, and were spread throughout the Four Higher Planes...

While reading the detailed information regarding the Four Divine Beast clan, Linley couldn't help but begin to sweat. The history of the Four Divine Beast clan simply astonished Linley. So originally, the Four Divine Beast clan wasn't just limited to the Infernal Realm!

"Divine Water Plane, Divine Earth Plane, Divine Fire Plane, Divine Wind Plane, and the Four Higher Planes of the Celestial Realm, Netherworld, Infernal Realm, Life Realm...they all have branches of the Four Divine Beast clan!"

Linley was completely thunderstruck.

Based on the description within the book, the Four Divine Beast clan was considered an extremely, terrifyingly powerful clan throughout the Four Higher Planes as well as the Seven Divine Planes. They were spread everywhere, but of course, in the Infernal Realm, Indigo Prefecture was a headquarters for the Four Divine Beast clan.

"They are so powerful?" Linley found it hard to believe.

"Boss, lemme see." Bebe, seeing the look on Linley's face, couldn't help but snatch the book over from Linley and begin to read it carefully as well. As he read, Bebe's eyes began to grow round. "Wow, Boss, the Four Divine Beast clan is really badass."

Delia leaned over to look as well.

"They really are quite formidable." Delia was stunned as well.

"We can leave now. I now know where the Four Divine Beast clan is located." Linley couldn't help but smile. The Four Divine Beast clan was the root and foundation of his own Baruch clan, which could only be considered one of the many branches.

Naturally, Linley was delighted at how powerful the main clan was.

"Wait." Linley suddenly frowned.

If the Four Divine Beast clan truly was so powerful, then why was it that when he came, he saw that member of the Boleyn clan, the one who could grow golden wings, be so arrogant and unbridled?

"You are looking for the location of the Four Divine Beast clan?" Suddenly, a clear voice rang out.

Linley's group turned to look. The speaker was that female staff member.

The female staff member laughed and said, "If you want to just follow the information in the book to look for them, there's no way you'll find the Four Divine Beast clan."

"Eh?" Linley was stunned.

"Why not? Is the book fake?" Bebe immediately asked.

The female staff member shook her head. "No, the descriptions in the book are real."

"If they are real, then why can't we find them?" Bebe said.

The female staff member laughed. "This book is in general circulation and for sale in every single city in the Infernal Realm. Because the Infernal Realm is too vast, just sending it out to each location will most likely take a thousand years."

Linley nodded. To send it throughout the Infernal Realm, it would indeed take upwards of a thousand years.

“Because the shipping process alone takes so much time, the geographical information in the book will be re-evaluated and updated once every million years. This book is several hundred thousand years old, and it described what the situation was like for the Four Divine Beast clan hundreds of thousands of years ago.” The female staff said.

The Infernal Realm was vast and endless. A million years, in the ancient history of the Infernal Realm, really wasn't much.

“Are you saying...?” Linley began to understand.

“Right.” The female staff member laughed. “If you asked others, they might not know, but since I've always lived in Indigo Prefecture, I'm quite familiar with the Four Divine Beast clan. The Four Divine Beast clan, roughly ten thousand years ago, underwent a huge change. The branches that had been located in the Divine Planes or the other Higher Planes all returned and regrouped here in the Indigo Prefecture of the Infernal Realm.”

Linley now understood.

Lord Beirut had not deceived him. The current Four Divine Beast clan really was in Indigo Prefecture.

Delia asked, puzzled, “What caused the Four Divine Beast clan to summon and concentrate all of their branches here in the Indigo Prefecture?” Delia didn't understand.

"I'm not sure." The female staff member said with a laugh. "That year, a large number of experts of the Four Divine Beast clan returned, but when they did so, they shook the entire Indigo Prefecture, because when they returned, they brought countless battles with them!"

"Countless battles?" Linley was stunned.

"Right." The female staff member nodded, then laughed. "But of course, I'm just a minor figure, and what I know is limited. All I know is that back then, the battles were quite fierce. Afterwards, the Four Divine Beast clans that had been scattered throughout Indigo Prefecture all came together at one location."

"One location?" Linley still clearly remembered what that book he had read had said.

As that book had described it, in the Four Divine Beast clan, each of the four clans was located in one of four locations.

"Right. The Four Divine Beast clans are living quite close to each other now. The place they live is known as the Skyrite Mountains!" The female staff member said.

Hearing this, Linley immediately thought back to when he had first read the book giving a general introduction to the geographical features of the Infernal Realm, and the information it had regarding the Skyrite Mountains. The Skyrite Mountains were a very famous area within the Indigo Prefecture.

It could, in fact, be described as the mountain range which symbolized the Indigo Prefecture.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 4, Seize Them

After leaving the city of Fansi, Linley's group immediately rode on their metallic lifeform to head towards the Skyrise Mountains.

"The Skyrise Mountains are located within the northern borders of Indigo Prefecture. From Fansi City, there is a distance of nearly two hundred million kilometers. To fly there will take half a year." Linley felt rather relaxed.

After knowing where the Four Divine Beasts clan was, Linley also understood: "Most likely, this place is too far away from the Skyrise Mountains, which is why the Boleyn clan dared to be so arrogant." This was Linley's guess.

"Another half year to go." Bebe stretched lazily, letting out a long sigh, then looked at Linley. "Heh heh, Boss, let's have a contest and see who will be the first to master a fifth profound mystery. What do you say?"

Linley had already reached the late stages in training in the Profound Truths of Strength.

As for Bebe, he had already reached a peak with regards to this fifth profound mystery of Darkness, and as soon as he gained an insight, he would break through. But 'insights' were something that one could hope for but not count on. Who knew how long Bebe would take?

Linley immediately calmed down and began training.

While training, time passed extremely quickly. Linley was only awakened from his training on three occasions. By the fourth time he opened his eyes, they were only a few hundred thousand kilometers away from the Skyrite Mountains and were about to arrive.

The metallic lifeform's front became transparent, and Linley's group could completely see through the metallic lifeform to the front.

"Skyrite Mountains! The Four Divine Beasts clan!" Linley felt that his breathing was growing ragged. The blood in his body was beginning to boil. He had come all the way over here from the Yulan continent. Finally, he was returning to his own clan.

"I can see it. The Skyrite Mountains are up ahead." Delia said in delight.

Linley's eyes were shining.

One massive mountain peak after another could be seen piercing through the clouds and the sky, each of them astonishingly high. The reason why this area was known as the 'Skyrite' Mountains was precisely because so many mountain peaks here were so tall.

"That is..."

Linley's eyes couldn't help but light up. He saw an enormous bird of almost the same size as a mountain peak that looked as though it was about to take flight, its entire body surrounded by flames. Its feathers were fiery red, and it had green plumage on its forehead. Linley and the others could all feel the dominating aura which emanated forth from it.

“What an enormous sculpture.” Linley couldn’t help but be amazed. “It has to be at least a hundred kilometers tall.” The tallest mountain peaks of the Skyrise Mountains reached upwards of tens of thousands of meters.

This enormous sculpture was comparable in height to the tallest of mountain peaks.

From the book he had read half a year ago, Linley had gained a better understanding of the Four Divine Beasts clan and had learned that the ‘Four Divine Beasts’ referred to the ‘Azure Dragon’, the ‘White Tiger’, the ‘Vermilion Bird’, and the ‘Black Tortoise.’ Just from the names ‘Azure Dragon’ and ‘White Tiger’, Linley was able to understand what the creatures represented.

But Linley had never heard of a ‘Vermilion Bird’ or a ‘Black Tortoise’.

After carefully reading through the book as well as reviewing some of the pictures in the book, Linley learned that a ‘Vermilion Bird’ was a fire-type divine beast that was similar to a ‘Fire Phoenix’, but which was far more powerful. As for the ‘Black Tortoise’, it was an earth-type divine beast that seemed quite similar in appearance to the ‘Dragon-Turtles’ which Linley had seen before.

Even the divine beast ‘Azure Dragon’ was not like those enormous winged dragons that he had seen on the Yulan continent, nor was it like the Tyrant Wyms. It was a dominating, noble, and utterly perfect, true divine beast.

The most powerful water-type divine beast – the Azure Dragon.

"The southern parts of the Skyrite Mountains should be where the Vermilion Bird clan resides." Linley immediately controlled the metallic lifeform, ordering it to fly towards the northeast.

Indeed, the eastern part of the Skyrite Mountains was where the Azure Dragon clan lived.

"This..."

In mid-air, staring afar at the distant sight of the Azure Dragon's 'Redding' clan, Linley was stupefied. Even Delia, Bebe, Olivier, Tarosse, and the others were so shocked, they couldn't speak.

An enormous, coiling dragon that was over tens of thousands kilometers long was within the mountain range.

Of course, it wasn't a real dragon.

This enormous coiling dragon covered an area of tens of thousands of kilometers, and carved atop of its massive body were giant draconic scales. At the same time, it was also, in and of itself, a long passageway in the mountains, and the entire passageway emitted an azure light. From afar, it truly looked like an enormous, terrifying Azure Dragon!

"To build an enormous edifice of tens of thousands of kilometers long in the Infernal Realm is...unbelievable." Tarosse sighed in shock.

“Look carefully. The entire body of this Azure Dragon is actually one long passageway, with many castles and residences around that passageway.” Dylin said loudly.

Linley was completely lost in the awe-inspiring sight before him. A ‘dragon passageway’ that was tens of thousands of kilometers long and which coiled through the mountains, with castles and estates surrounding its perimeter and which formed a perfect whole with it.

In front of the dragon’s head was an enormous golden castle, which looked like a dragon pearl.

“The aura and majesty alone far surpasses any clan that I’ve ever seen.” Linley was truly stunned.

The Four Divine Beasts clan had originally dominated the Four Higher Planes and Seven Divine Planes. Even after their fall, they wouldn’t forget the former glory of their clan. Naturally, they cared deeply about the construction of their clan’s headquarters.

Although they had seen it from afar, Linley’s group had to fly for quite a while before arriving at the base of the Skyrise Mountains.

Standing at the base of the mountains, Linley’s group stared afar through the ‘dragon passageway’, staring at the many patrolling soldiers dressed in azure armor. For a moment, they felt their hearts clench. At a glance, the warriors here were more than ten thousand in number.

But Linley’s group could tell that every single one of them was a Highgod!

"So many experts!" Tarosse sighed in amazement. "The Four Divine Beasts clan really lives up to its name. At least in the number of Highgod warriors, it isn't the slightest bit inferior to the Bagshaw clan."

"This is a true, powerful, great clan." Dylin sighed in amazement as well.

Salomon's 'Boyd' clan had been decent, but these clans, when compared to the Bagshaw clan or the Four Divine Beasts clan, were nothing at all. Look at the Bagshaw clan or the Four Divine Beasts clan; every single soldier in their clan army was a Highgod.

"This is the Azure Dragon clan!" Linley felt his blood pumping. "My roots, the roots of my Baruch clan!"

This seemingly endless dragon passageway gave Linley such a familiar feeling, one which made the blood in his veins thunder. It was a feeling akin to when the prodigal son returned home. The sense of belonging was extremely strong.

"Linley." Delia held Linley's hand.

Linley turned to glance at Delia. The two, looking at each other, couldn't help but laugh. They had experienced nearly seven centuries of turbulence. When they had first come to the Infernal Realm, Linley was just a Demigod. But now, he could effortlessly kill ordinary Highgods.

They had made their way over. And now, finally, they had reached their destination.

The root and foundation of the Four Supreme Warriors!

The legendary Four Divine Beasts clan's gathering point: The Indigo Prefecture's 'Skyrite Mountains'!

"Who goes there!" A loud shout from up above.

From the wide dragon passageway, ten soldiers who had previously been on patrol flew over, and the captain of the squad barked, "This is an important area of my Azure Dragon clan. You need to leave immediately."

Laughing, Linley replied, "Gentlemen, I myself am a branch member of the Azure Dragon clan. I have been in the Infernal Realm for a very long time, but I've finally made it here."

"Hurry up and welcome us." Bebe said loudly. "It's been so long, and we've really been exhausted."

"You belong to a branch of my Redding clan?" The captain looked at Linley dubiously. "Kid, the members of my clan returned a long, long time ago." The other members of the patrol didn't quite believe it either.

"You should know that our Azure Dragon clan is capable of Dragonforming." One of the patrolling soldiers said.

Linley laughed.

"Crackle..." Immediately, azure-golden draconic scales sprouted from everywhere on Linley's body, and a spike emerged from his forehead. Linley's dark golden eyes stared at the captain. "Now, do you believe me?"

Those patrolling soldiers all began to laugh as well.

The captain was also all smiles. "Indeed! And judging from your body's aura, it seems as though you come from a fairly pure lineage. But how come you have those spikes on your back? Still, there's no mistaking that aura."

Dragonforming was a very simple way by which one could tell if one was a member of the Azure Dragon clan or not.

The Draconians of the 'beastmen' race were completely different from the Dragonform of the Azure Dragon clan. In terms of both power as well as aura, the difference was tremendous. They just looked a bit similar.

"Haha, brother, you've had an arduous trip." The captain immediately laughed and went to welcome them, saying in a sincere voice, "When our clan retreated from the various planes, we really were in too much of a rush. Most likely, at that time, you weren't able to come back with everyone else at the time."

The captain let out a long sigh.

"At that time, our main army returned as well, but it was disastrous.

That year, my brother died in battle." Tears glimmered at the corner of the captain's eyes. "Let's go. Let's go home! At home, you'll be safe."

The two words, "go home", caused Linley to tremble with emotion.

"These friends of mine came alongside me." Linley said.

"Them?" The captain frowned.

"What is it?" Linley was puzzled.

The captain said with a frown. "These are your friends, and you plan to live with them?"

"Right." Linley nodded. "They risked life and death to travel with me. It would be good if we can live together. What, is that forbidden?"

"It's not that it cannot be done." The captain reflected for a moment, then said, "The administrative rules of our clan are quite strict. If it was just you by yourself, you would receive a superb welcome, but if you want to bring them in, you'll have to live in a fairly distant, remote part of the Skyrite Mountains."

"Remote is fine with me." Linley shook his head.

"That's fine then." The captain nodded, then laughed. "Come, go with me to register yourself. We'll investigate what branch you belong to. Hey, you guys can come along as well." The captain addressed Tarosse and Bebe and the others.

Linley's group immediately flew in along with the ten patrol soldiers.

"Brother, my name is Yeer [Yi'er]. I came back from the Divine Fire Plane. Which plane are you from? How could your lineage be so pure?" While walking, the captain asked in a warm, friendly manner.

"Right, which plane are you from?" The other patrolling soldiers laughed as well.

"I, I'm from the Yulan Plane." Linley laughed.

The captain's expression instantly hardened, and the same thing happened with the other soldiers.

"Seize them!" Captain Yeer shouted icily, and immediately, the other nine patrolling soldiers moved aside as fast as lightning, immediately surrounding Linley's group of people. From higher up the 'dragon passageway', many patrolling soldiers who saw these going-on's immediately flew over as well.

Linley's group was stupefied.

"Hey, what's this all about?" Bebe immediately shouted.

Linley just looked at the captain. "Captain Yeer, what's going on? Why are you suddenly seizing me?"

Captain Yeer said calmly, "Sorry, brother! The Azure Dragon 'Redding' clan, although spread out across many planes, is only spread out across the Higher Planes and the Divine Planes. I've never heard of a Yulan Plane."

"Aren't I a member of the Azure Dragon clan?" Linley asked.

"You are. I'm certain of this." Yeer nodded.

"However, if we can't be completely certain of your history and which lineage you belong to, then you can't be completely trusted either." The captain said emotionlessly. "Some members were scattered across the multiverse when they were young, and were raised by other clans, who trained them and then sent them back to be spies! This has happened more than once."

In the past ten thousand years, the Azure Dragon clan had become exceedingly cautious. Because...they had suffered too much previously when they weren't.

"You suspect me of being a spy?" Linley found it hard to believe.

"Captain Yeer, if I were a spy, I wouldn't say I'm from the Yulan Plane. I would make up a perfect identity and status." Linley said urgently.

Delia spoke out as well. "Captain Yeer, you might not have heard of the Yulan Plane lineage, but that doesn't mean others in your clan haven't heard of it either. Please go investigate first."

"Hmph. Which lineage am I unaware of?" Captain Yeer was extremely confident.

"What's going on here?" A bark rang out from above, and a middle-aged man dressed in light gray robes flew over.

Captain Yeer, upon seeing this person, immediately said with respect, "Milord, there is a person here who claims to be a member of our Azure Dragon clan, and indeed, he has the lineage of the Azure Dragon clan. However, he claims he is from the Yulan Plane lineage. I have never heard that our clan has a branch in a 'Yulan Plane'."

"Oh?" The middle-aged man looked towards Linley's group in astonishment.

"The Yulan Plane branch?" The middle-aged man looked towards them. "Who?"

"Me." Linley stood up.

The middle-aged man laughed. "Right, our Azure Dragon clan does in fact have a branch on the Yulan Plane."

Captain Yeer and the other soldiers were all surprised.

"This was something from six thousand years ago. Not many people know this." The middle-aged man said with a calm laugh. "Their branch called themselves the 'Baruch' clan. Quite peculiar. Nobody knows which elder ended up starting up this branch."

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 5, Baruch

When Linley heard them mention the 'Baruch clan', his heart relaxed. His ancestors in the Baruch clan were in the Infernal Realm after all, and they really were here. For a moment, a hundred emotions mixed in Linley's heart.

"Right, right. The Baruch clan." Bebe was unspeakably delighted. "Boss, we finally found them."

"Linley." Delia felt happy for Linley as well.

The nearby Olivier, O'Brien, Tarosse, and Dylin were all smiles as well. The Baruch clan, in the Yulan continent, was so very famous, but this was the first time they had heard others speak of it in the Infernal Realm.

"Linley, congratulations." Dylin laughed.

"There's no mistaking it this time." Cesar and the others laughed as well.

Linley was jubilant. He had been guided by the teachings of his clan since he was young, and Linley clearly knew what the ancestors of the clan had done. And now, today, he was finally going to meet with the ancestors of his clan.

"Milord, I belong to the Baruch clan. Please hurry and take me to see the ancestors of my clan." Linley couldn't help but say.

"Impudence!" Captain Yeer let out a cold snort.

Linley was startled.

"Do you know what status his lordship has? Him, personally take you there?" Captain Yeer was very unhappy that this person in front of him didn't understand the differences in status between them. "As for whether or not you belong to the Yulan branch, everything will be made clear soon. Don't be too happy too early."

The middle-aged man chuckled. "Yeer, you can make the trip yourself." After speaking, the middle-aged man turned and flew away.

Yeer looked coldly at Linley's group. "All of you, listen up. Later, when we enter the inner reaches of the Skyrise Mountains, don't fly around randomly. Follow me! If you bump into or disturb the high level members of our clan, when they look for someone to blame, I won't be able to protect you."

"Understood."

But Linley could sense how strict ranks were within the Four Divine Beasts clan.

"Follow me." Yeer flew up ahead, while Linley's group immediately followed. The Skyrise Mountains were exceedingly vast, and the eastern part of them was the place where the Azure Dragon clan's clansmen lived.

Linley and the others travelled through the 'dragon passageway'.

The dragon passageway was fifty meters wide, while the edges of it were carved draconic scales. This tens of thousands of kilometers long, coiling dragon passageway, rose and fell as it winded through the mountains. Countless estates and castles were erected by the side of this dragon passageway, with human figures visible within all of them.

"Boss, there's so many people here." Bebe's eyes rolled in their sockets. "As I see it, the Azure Dragon clan has to have at least a million people in it. Boss, as I recall, your clan seems to be unable to produce many children."

Linley chuckled.

Indeed. The more powerful a race or clan was, the smaller their population was.

"But as time goes on, the accumulated population will still be a large figure." Linley said casually.

Hypothetically, a new generation might be born every hundred years.

Each member might have one or two children. As time went on, especially as hundreds of millions of years passed, how many clan members would a clan have? After all, upon reaching the Saint level, one wouldn't die of old age.

Only by being killed.

"After being born, we still have to survive." Captain Yeer said from up ahead. "In the past, our Four Divine Beasts clan was very powerful and was capable of protecting all of our descendants. Naturally, our population grew greater and greater. But now, it isn't so simple."

Linley couldn't help but grow puzzled.

What exactly had caused the Four Divine Beasts clan to fall?

"That castle is so beautiful." Delia said gently into Linley's ears. Linley turned and saw a completely blue castle, with only variations in the deepness or lightness of the coloration, creating a very unique, beautiful appearance that was indeed quite mesmerizing.

"Remember, just fly on Dragon Avenue and don't fly elsewhere." Yeer warned.

Bebe snorted, and Linley couldn't help but look towards Bebe and laugh. "Bebe, our clan's rules are a bit strict. When we are back to our own residence, things will be better." Linley was currently in a very good mood.

"I know." Bebe sent back through divine sense.

While chatting, Linley, under the guidance of Yeer, arrived through Dragon Avenue at a very ordinary two-story building created halfway up a mountain. This two story building had a white-haired elder slouching over a chair with half-lidded eyes, seemingly quite relaxed.

"Hanuman [Ha'ne'man]." Yeer laughed.

The white-haired elder opened his eyes, then laughed and stood up.
"Oh, Yeer, it's you. Why'd you come to my place today?"

"We just met a member of our clan who has our lineage. Please help out by going with us for an investigation and a registration." Yeer explained.

"Which one?" The white-haired elder turned to look at Linley's group.

"Him!" Yeer pointed at Linley, who laughed and said to the white-haired elder, 'Mr. Hanuman, I am Linley. I come from the Baruch clan of the Yulan Plane!"

"Oh, Baruch clan? The branch from the Yulan continent. I know."
Hanuman's eyebrows danced, and he began to laugh. "Our Azure Dragon clan is also known as the Redding clan. Virtually all of our branches refer to ourselves as the 'Redding clan', and only a very few branches who don't know the real name will casually choose a name for themselves. Your Baruch clan is one of them."

Linley could only grin.

The first generation of his clan, Baruch, didn't know of the Azure Dragon clan, nor that they were members of the Redding clan. Thus, he had founded his Baruch clan.

"For you to be able to report that you are a member of the Baruch clan...I trust that you are a member of our clan." Hanuman shook his head helplessly. "However, the clan has rules. We must undergo a strict test, therefore...I need you to go meet with your ancestors."

"Meet with my ancestors?" Linley was beginning to grow excited.

"Right. You have to meet them in order to completely ascertain your identity." Hanuman then looked towards Yeer. "Yeer, your role is done. You go take care of your business. I'll accompany them."

Yeer nodded, then left.

"It's rare to encounter a lost clan member who returns to us, even in a thousand year span." Hanuman sighed. "Let's go. Follow me. Let's go meet the ancestors of your branch."

Linley hurriedly followed him, while the group behind Linley began to chat amongst themselves.

"The Four Supreme Warriors of the past...the Dragonblood Warrior, 'Baruch'. It's been nearly six thousand years since I've seen him." Cesar had a rare smile on his face. "I wonder how those old fellows are doing these days."

O'Brien nodded as well.

"Old fellows?" Hanuman, walking up ahead, turned and frowned. "The oldest member of the Yulan continent branch is just six thousand years old. And you call him an 'old fellow'? In our clan, I don't even know how many members have trained for hundreds of millions of years. The Yulan continent branch, in our Redding clan, is a very young branch."

"Very young branch?"

Linley's group looked at each other.

In the Yulan continent, thousands of years of history definitely could be considered a very long history. But in the Infernal Realm, thousands of years was just 'very young'. Compared to the other branches, which were hundreds of millions old, they were indeed very young.

"Old sir," Bebe called out, "We see many castles and estates everywhere throughout the mountain ranges, with so many people. Old sir, do you clearly remember where the Yulan continent's branch lives?"

"How could I not!"

Hanuman stared. "Even with my eyes closed, I, Hanuman, can easily find the residences of any of our Redding clan's various branches or of our ultimate experts."

"But we've been flying on this Dragon Avenue for so long. How come we aren't there yet?" Bebe muttered.

Hanuman couldn't help but frown at Bebe. "Kid with the straw hat, in this group, it seems you are the most talkative."

"Bebe." Linley said softly.

"Hmph." Bebe let out a low snort, not daring to say another word.

Only now did Hanuman say, "The Yulan continent branch is a very weak branch. These weak, small branches are located deep in the border areas. That's why it takes some time to fly there. We haven't even flown a tenth of the way there."

After flying for a long time, and after having seen more than a hundred thousand patrolling soldiers, Linley's group finally reached their destination.

"Here we are." Hanuman immediately flew out of the Dragon Avenue. "Follow me."

Linley's group had also discovered that not too far away, there was a large gorge. Hanuman was flying straight for that gorge, and so Linley's group followed him in as well. The gorge had fog and mist within.

While descending through it, they passed through the foggy mist and could vaguely see some small buildings up ahead.

"This place contains your Yulan branch, as well as some other branches." Hanuman said. "This gorge has in total more than ten thousand people."

"Baruch!" Hanuman suddenly shouted loudly.

"Baruch!" "Baruch!" "Baruch!" The entire gorge reverberated with this shout, and Linley's group was badly startled by Hanuman's sudden shout.

They landed on the flat ground in the gorge.

From afar, dozens of figures flew over at high speed, the leader being a muscular man with powerful, protruding chest muscles and a sleeveless shirt. His brown hair was rather mussed, and his eyes flowed with wisdom.

"Haha, so it is Mr. Hanuman." The muscular, brown-haired man laughed in a loud voice.

A group of people followed him from behind. Most of them had long brown hair, with a few having golden hair or blue hair.

Linley stared at this group of people.

"He is Baruch? The founder of my Baruch clan?" Linley's heart felt as though it had been struck by a massive hammer. The dozens of people who had flown over were mostly men, with a few women as well.

Linley, seeing them, had a familiar feeling appear in his heart.

"Baruch." Hanuman laughed. "Today, I've come because a member of our clan says that he is from the Yulan continent and that he is from your Baruch clan."

Linley's eyes were shining.

Indeed, the man in front was Baruch! The founder of the Dragonblood Warrior clan!

"From the Yulan continent?" Baruch was stunned, and then wild joy appeared in his eyes.

"Someone came from the Yulan continent? And says that he is of our Baruch clan?" A muscular, handsome youth by Baruch's side hurriedly spoke out as well, while at the same time, he swept the group of people behind Hanuman with his gaze.

As though he sensed something, his gaze fell on Linley!

This was the call of blood ties.

But Baruch's gaze fell on another person – Cesar!

"Cesar! It's you!" Baruch was amazed and delighted.

"Haha, Baruch, I didn't expect that after you suddenly disappeared, you old fellow, you actually had run off to the Infernal Realm." Cesar laughed as well.

"O'Brien?" Baruch then looked at the War God, 'O'Brien'.

"Baruch, long time no see." O'Brien greeted him as well.

Hanuman intentionally said in an unhappy manner, "Hey? I'm here today to verify this person's status and see if he is a member of your clan. Baruch, give me a hand and help me confirm his identity."

"Oh." Only now did Baruch come to himself.

"He is Linley." Hanuman laughed. "He says he is of the Baruch clan." As he spoke, he pointed towards Linley.

Immediately, the group of people behind Baruch all turned their gazes towards Linley. These elders had gazes filled with incomparable ardor. They hadn't been back for thousands of years. The return of a descendant of their clan naturally made them excited.

Actually, upon seeing Cesar and O'Brien, Baruch was already certain that this 'Linley' should definitely be a descendant of his clan.

"Please help verify him." Hanuman said.

Baruch nodded, then looked at Linley. "Linley, right? If you are a member of my Baruch clan, then you should know...that in our clan's ancestral hall, there are recordings regarding the generations of ancestors of the clan."

Linley opened his mouth and began to speak.

"Baruch, the very first Dragonblood Warrior of the Yulan continent. In the year 4560 of the Yulan calendar, outside the walls of the city of Linnan, Baruch did battle against a Black Dragon and a Titanic Frost Wurm. In the end, he slew both the Titanic Frost Wurm and the Black Dragon, causing his fame to be spread across the world. In the year 4579 of the Yulan calendar, along the coastline of the northern sea of the continent, Baruch did battle against a Nine-Headed Serpent Emperor. On that day, the waves crashed unceasingly and nearby cities crumbled, but after a vicious fight lasting a full day and night, Baruch finally executed the Nine-Headed Serpent Emperor....finally, Baruch founded the Baruch clan, and became the first leader of the Baruch clan!"

"Ryan Baruch..."

"Hazard Baruch..."

Linley described the affairs of three ancestors in succession. Baruch and the group of people behind him were all so excited that their eyes turned moist.

"Right. Right." Baruch said hurriedly.

Baruch strode forward and immediately enfolded Linley into his arms.
"Child, welcome home."

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 6, The Weakest, Smallest Branch

“Welcome home!” These words caused a hot feeling to gush forth from Linley’s chest.

Feeling the caring gaze of the Baruch clansmen on him, Linley suddenly realized that the difficulties he had endured through the nearly seven hundred years he had spent in the Redbud Continent, traversing the Starmist Sea, and hurrying through the Bloodridge Continent was all worth it!

After wandering in the Infernal Realm for so many years, he had finally returned home!

Baruch released Linley, then looked at Linley, his fierce face hiding unshed tears. “Linley, you must’ve had a rough time of it.”

“Mr. Hanuman, thank you.” Baruch looked towards Hanuman. “This Linley is indeed of my Yulan continent branch.”

“Haha, Baruch, congratulations. Here is the emblem of our clan. Let Linley bind it with blood.” Hanuman handed out an emblem, then laughed and said, “I won’t disturb you further.” As he spoke, Hanuman flew away and departed.

Baruch gave the emblem to Linley.

“Bind it with blood?” Linley studied the emblem.

"This shows your status as a clansman. All members of the clan have it." Baruch explained, and Linley immediately bound it with blood. In the instant that he did, Linley found out to his astonishment...

That he could actually sense the emblems which others carried.

"Indeed, by relying on this, one can easily differentiate whether or not someone is a member of the clan."

"Linley." Behind Baruch, that handsome youth was all smiles. "Do you know who I am?"

Linley couldn't help but be startled. He had never before met any of the ancestors of his clan. How could he know their name or identities?

"My name is Ryan." The handsome youth said. "You were talking about my affairs, just now."

Only now did Linley understand, and he laughed, "Our first Golden Dragonrider Saint of the Baruch clan!"

"Haha, Golden Dragonrider Saint. Right, right." Ryan began to laugh loudly. "Just now, you mentioned myself and Hazard. Hazard, come here." Behind Ryan was a muscular man with light golden hair.

"Linley, hello." Hazard said.

Linley opened his mouth, but Linley suddenly realized that he had no idea how he should address them.

Hazard was his great great great...grandpa?

Whether it was Baruch or Ryan or Hazard, all of them were many generations senior to Linley.

Seeing the look on Linley's face, Baruch was able to guess what Linley was thinking. He laughed, "Linley, in material planes, people's lifespan are not very long, so generational questions matter. In the Infernal Realm, however, there are many who have lived for over a hundred million years. Caring about generations is no longer meaningful."

"Look, in our Azure Dragon clan, which has existed for countless billions of years, there might be a gap hundred million generations between an elder and a junior. Tell me, what's the point?"

Once things got to a certain level, it became pointless.

For example, in the Yulan continent and the O'Brien Empire.

The War God had many descendants. After five thousand years, his descendants were simply too many, and so O'Brien himself didn't care much about them. Of the disciples he had accepted, the eldest were almost as old as him, while the youngest were comparable to Linley. There could be a gap of five thousand years.

But despite such a huge gap, they still simply viewed themselves as fellow apprentices.

"The Azure Dragon clan has set its roots and scattered its leaves in very many places. It's possible that two people who were born at the exact same time might be technically separated by countless 'generations' in the family hierarchy." Baruch laughed. "Thus, not just in our own family, in the entire Infernal Realm, which 'generation' one is in doesn't matter much."

Linley nodded in agreement as well.

"Boss, Grandpa Beirut and I are separated by I don't even know how many generations, but I still just call him Grandpa." Bebe said. "Also, Beirut's three sons. I just call them by their names."

Bebe was a member of Beirut's clan, after all. Technically speaking, he could be considered a descendant of Harry and his brothers.

But because the difference between them in the generational hierarchy was simply too great, Bebe just addressed them by their names.

"Haha." Ryan laughed. "Linley, at first, we had headaches as well over this matter, but now we are all accustomed to it. All members of the Azure Dragon clan just address each other casually. The only thing that matters for status is one's power!"

If one was powerful, one would be at a higher level in the clan. Even if one was very senior in terms of the hierarchy but had remained a God despite training for trillions of years while another had trained for just ten thousand years to become a Highgod, one had to bow respectfully when seeing that Highgod.

"You can just address me as clan leader. As for the others, you can call them by their names." Baruch laughed.

"Call them by their names?" Linley felt that it was awkward.

"Of course." Hazard laughed. "You've reached the God level, but most likely were born within the past thousand years. Dozens of years ago, I had another daughter. She is much younger than you. Are you supposed to address her as 'ancestor'?"

Linley could only laugh.

To these people who had unlimited lifespan, generational hierarchies really did become meaningless.

"Anyone who isn't directly within three generations of you can simply be addressed by name." Hazard said.

"Everyone, stop standing there. Come to the main hall." Baruch laughed, and Linley followed them deeper in, chatting with everyone while walking. Linley also introduced Delia and Bebe.

"Clan leader." Linley asked, "How many people does our Yulan branch have?"

"A few hundred people." Baruch laughed as he looked around. "However, in this gorge, there're a few other branches as well. Our Yulan branch is a very small branch." But there was something which Baruch had not said...

That his branch was the weakest, smallest branch.

"Baruch, you seem to be in a good mood?" A teasing voice rang out.

The faces of Baruch and the others immediately became rather unpleasant. Linley turned to look at the source of the voice. From not too far away, a few people walked over, the leader a youth with long green hair. The youth had a rather mocking smile on his face. "What happy affair has happened? Tell us and let us hear it."

"Ignore them. Let's go!" Baruch said in a low voice.

Linley noticed as well that the other clansmen didn't look at that green haired youth at all, continuing towards their residence.

"Baruch, I'm talking to you. Why the ugly face?" The green-haired youth shouted with a frown.

The youths behind the green-haired youth seemed to be quite dissatisfied with Baruch as well, one of them snorting, "Baruch, what, are you going to be so arrogant, just because you have someone supporting you? You aren't going to even pay attention to us when we speak with you?"

The faces of Baruch, Ryan, and the others were exceedingly ugly to behold.

In the Azure Dragon clan, the Yulan branch was the weakest one. When they had been brought over, they had all been Saints. After undergoing the Ancestral Baptism and hard training, although they had made great improvements, the amount of time they had lived was simply too short, just a few thousand years.

Even the strongest member of the Yulan branch was just at the God level!

God?

In the Infernal Realm, especially in an ancient clan like the Four Divine Beasts clan, if even the strongest person in a branch was still just a 'God', then it was all but guaranteed that this branch would be viewed in contempt, be mocked, be satire!

The other branches all had many Highgods.

But yours only had Gods? How could you compete against them? It'd be strange if you aren't mocked, for that matter!

Although everyone in the gorge belonged to a fairly weak branch, at least the other branches had one Highgod!

"Motherf*cker, what's with all your bullshit?" Bebe shouted angrily.

Tarosse's face had turned grim as well, and he icily swept these people. "Where have you lot come from, and why are you saying so much bullshit in our place?"

"You..." Those people were stunned, and then infuriated. They had never imagined that in the weakest Yulan branch, the branch which they often mocked and insulted, there would be someone who dared to be so arrogant towards them!

The leading youth began to laugh from rage. "Baruch, your people are quite bold. They dare to insult me, Asru [A'si'lu]!"

Asru himself was a Highgod!

In the Four Divine Beasts clan, being a Highgod didn't mean much. On the way over through the Dragon Avenue, Linley had seen more than a hundred thousand patrol soldiers, all of whom were Highgods. One could thus imagine how common Highgods were, here!

But...

The Yulan branch didn't have a single Highgod!

Thus, Asru, as a Highgod, could be arrogant and unbridled in front of the Yulan branch. As for Baruch and the others, they had to just endure it.

"Asru, don't go too far." Baruch said in a low voice. "Today, we have guests."

"I, go too far?" Asru stared.

"Baruch, you're quite bold. You dare insult Lord Asru?" The people behind Asru called out.

By now, Tarosse and Bebe were unbelievably angry. Tarosse had never viewed an ordinary Highgod with any consideration. "Kid..."

"Shut your mouth!" Asru pointed angrily at Tarosse.

Tarosse was enraged.

Asru laughed coldly, "I know that you others are Highgods. But you don't seem to be members of our Azure Dragon clan. You are permitted to stay here, where our Azure Dragon clan lives, which is already something you need to feel thankful for. But if you are to fight...the soldiers of the clan will be the first to exterminate you!"

Asru had noticed long ago that Tarosse, Cesar, and the others were Highgods.

But he wasn't afraid, because this was the territory of the Azure Dragon clan. Through the clan emblem, he had noticed long ago that these were outsiders.

"Cesar, you all, no matter what, cannot fight." Baruch shook his head and sent mentally, "The reason you can live here is partially due to Linley's status, and partially because our clan is located in a remote region. But if you were to fight...regardless of whether you were in the right or in the wrong, the clan soldiers will always favor our clansmen. Once you start a fight, they'll kill you. Linley, look after your people."

Tarosse, Cesar, and O'Brien were all stunned.

"Don't worry, clan leader," Linley replied.

Linley then turned to look at that Asru. Asru was a Highgod? But what was an ordinary Highgod to him? While in the Miluo Island, when he had used the Blackstone Prison, he had committed wanton slaughter when surrounded by tens of thousands of Highgods.

He didn't even fear tens of thousands of Highgods.

How could he care about this Asru?

"Kid, what are you looking at?" Asru shouted. Asru was in a very bad mood today. This weakest Yulan branch normally was shouted at and mocked by him as he pleased, without saying anything in response. But today, it seemed as though they were being rather arrogant.

"Asru, right?" Linley laughed.

"Right." Asru raised his chin slightly.

"Linley, don't cause trouble." Baruch was rather worried, and he hurriedly sent through divine sense, "The strongest member of our Baruch clan is just a God. Our branch is too weak. We can't fight with them."

"Clan leader, I'm a member of the clan. If I were to act against them, the army soldiers wouldn't favor them, right?" Linley sent through divine sense.

Baruch said, "They won't favor them, but you are only a Go-..."

Linley immediately turned to look towards Asru. "Asru, I advise you that in the future, after today, you had best not come annoy our Yulan branch."

"What did you say?" Asru was flabbergasted.

"In the future, don't annoy us." Linley said grimly.

Asru stared at Linley, speechless, then raised his head and laughed loudly. "Haha..." Even those youths behind Asru began to laugh loudly.

The Yulan branch was the weakest one in the gorge. They were always picked on and mocked by the other branches. But they were too weak. They couldn't resist at all.

"Kid, listen up..." Asru pointed at Linley, about to say something. But suddenly...rays of hazy earthen yellow light suddenly sprang up, enveloping Asru and the others.

Blackstone Space – Supergravity!

Asru's body hunched over and he immediately fell to his knees. The powerful gravity caused his entire body to shudder. The people behind him were even worse; they immediately collapsed at first before then just barely standing up.

"I told you. In the future, don't annoy my Yulan branch!" Linley's face sank, and instantly, the earthen yellow light trembled.

The downwards gravitational force transformed into a repulsive force!

"BOOM!" Asru and the others were thrown far away by that repulsive force. From far away, they stared at astonishment and fear towards Linley. Linley hadn't even moved, but he had been able to easily toy with them.

The difference was too great.

Linley couldn't be bothered to spare a single extra glance for Asru's group. He turned towards Baruch and said, "Clan leader, let's go back." In Miluo Island, Linley had slaughtered a path through tens of thousands of Highgods. How could he care about a single ordinary Highgod?

"Linley..."

Baruch's group was completely stunned.

They had yet to understand that from today onwards...the Yulan branch would never be mocked or humiliated again.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 7, The Clan's Crisis

The Azure Dragon clan's Yulan branch simply had too short a history, spanning just a few millennia. A few millennia, in the ancient history of the Four Divine Beasts clan, could be considered a single drop of water in a sea.

A short history resulted in weak power!

In this gorge within the Skyrise Mountains, the other branches of the Azure Dragon tribe looked down on them and mocked them. This was very normal. Fortunately, the clan had very strict rules; members of the same clan were not permitted to kill each other.

This was a very severe rule. Nobody could violate it.

Precisely because of this, although the Yulan branch had lived a life of some embarrassment, they weren't in any mortal danger. Baruch and the others could thus just endure it. After all, if they fought back, they would just be humiliated even further.

They were weaker. There was nothing they could do!

But this descendant of the clan who they were welcoming back, one who had returned from the Yulan branch, had effortlessly toyed with a Highgod and multiple Gods.

Baruch, Ryan, and the others all stared at Linley in disbelief.

"Linley?" Baruch stuttered.

Linley looked at Baruch, then laughed. "Clan leader, let's hurry back. I still don't even know where I'll live?"

"Right, right." Baruch recovered from his shock. Although he didn't understand how Linley could be so powerful, Baruch wouldn't ask right now. He immediately laughed, "Let's go, let's go back."

The other clansmen of the Yulan branch all stared at Linley in amazement. This descendant was too strong!

"What are you looking at?" Bebe's voice rang out. "What? Can it be that after the lesson my Boss just taught you, you haven't had enough? You want to test him again?"

Linley turned to look.

Asru and the others were staring towards Linley with gazes full of shock and fear. They couldn't believe that this was real.

"Asru." Linley spoke out. "You and I are both members of the Azure Dragon clan. We are all members of the Redding clan! Since we are all members of the clan, fighting amongst ourselves will just result in ridicule from others."

Asru was stunned.

"The Yulan branch is also a member of the Redding clan." Linley laughed calmly. "I'm a member of the Yulan branch, and also a member of the Redding clan. I don't want to see you causing trouble for us in the future. If something like that happens, then I wouldn't mind...giving you a good lesson."

O'Brien, Cesar, Tarosse, and the others were all laughing off to the side.

They knew exactly how powerful Linley was. During the great battle at Miluo Island, Linley's power had been completely revealed and was unquestionable.

"Let's go." Linley held Delia's hand, then followed Baruch, Ryan, and the other members of the clan towards the abode of the Yulan branch. The only ones left were Asru and the others.

"Lord Asru, this..." A youth behind Asru said, his face filled with disbelief, shock, and anger.

Asru's face was gloomy.

"Who would have thought that an expert would appear amongst the Yulan branch." Asru said in a low voice.

"But he's just a God." Someone immediately said.

Asru shook his head. "Impossible. That Gravitational Space was powerful to an unheard of level. In such a powerful gravity, he would definitely be able to effortlessly kill us. Only an extremely powerful Highgod could possibly train the Gravitational Space to such a high level."

"How powerful?" The Gods behind him were all puzzled.

"Six Star Fiend. Perhaps Seven Star Fiend!" Asru said in a low voice.

Immediately, those Gods were completely stupefied. These people, when encountering a Highgod, were normally all very respectful. Generally speaking, Highgods were at the Four Star Fiend level of power. Anyone capable of reaching the Six Star Fiend or Seven Star Fiend level had a high status in the clan.

"But we noticed that he was just a God." Another blue-haired youth said hurriedly.

Asru turned and glanced at him mockingly, then turned and left, not paying attention to that God at all.

"What'd I say wrong?" The blue-haired man was still lost.

"Can't you guess that he was hiding his aura and just pretending?" Another God snickered. "Let's go. I can't imagine how this short-lived Yulan branch actually produced such a powerful expert."

While still muttering amongst themselves, those Gods all left.

Linley knew very well that even two brothers of the same mother, much less branches of the same clan, would possibly struggle with each other for status. The weak would be looked down upon and embarrassed.

This was normal.

"The high level members of the Redding family don't care about this. First, it's not convenient to interfere. And secondly, they are probably satisfied with the situation." Linley understood that when the weak were viewed in contempt, this anger at being humiliated would serve as a powerful motivation for the clan to grow stronger.

Perhaps an expert would appear.

In the end, the rules of the clan prohibited clansmen from killing each other. With this rule in place, there would be no fear of the clan losing its power.

"Only when there is competition, when there is a differentiation between the 'high' and the 'low' levels will there be improvement." Linley sighed.

Unfortunately, his Yulan branch had become the weakest branch. Its roots were weak and its history was short. There was nothing that could be done.

"Linley, on the other side of the grass is our Yulan branch's residence." Baruch pointed towards the front. Linley, looking in that direction, saw that at the end of the short grass, there were multiple two story buildings, as all a palace which took up a very wide amount of space.

When Linley's group passed through the grass, quite a few men and women came to welcome them, including two children.

"Clan leader!"

The group all hurriedly welcomed them.

"Haha, hurry up and prepare a feast for celebrating Linley's arrival." Baruch laughed loudly.

"Clan leader, who is Linley?" Nobody here recognized Linley.

Linley looked carefully at this group of people. All of them had an aura which felt so familiar to his soul. These were people from his clan, people of his blood. "Our Baruch clan has so few people in the Yulan continent, but in the Infernal Realm, we are much more populous."

All of them in the Infernal Realm possessed unlimited lifespan. Naturally, their numbers would continuously grow.

"Who is Linley?" Baruch immediately laughed. "He is someone from our Yulan branch."

"He came over from the Yulan continent." Ryan added. "Look closely. He is Linley. Don't misrecognize him in the future." As he spoke, he rested his hand on Linley's shoulder.

Immediately, everyone looked towards Linley while a commotion broke out.

"He came from the Yulan continent?"

"He actually came from the Yulan continent. Hey, Linley, how's our Baruch clan doing?"

"Linley, do you know 'Bozart' [Bo'sai'te]? He's my son!"

The group of them all excitedly asked questions nonstop. In the Infernal Realm, they were the weakest branch of the Four Divine Beasts clan. In the Yulan continent, however, they were the 'Dragonblood Warrior clan' which had dominated the continent.

The humiliation which they now had to endure naturally made them think all the more of their glory days in the Yulan continent.

They were filled with longing for the Yulan continent.

"If all of you ask questions en masse like this, how is Linley going to respond?" Baruch snorted coldly. "Enough of this. Hurry up and prepare a banquet. Today, every member of our Yulan branch is going to get together for the banquet. During the banquet itself, you can ask your questions."

"I'll go arrange the banquet." Immediately, a brown-haired woman laughed while flashing Linley a smile.

Not just this woman; many of the other members of the clan were all smiling towards Linley. They naturally were very welcoming towards their clansmen who had come from the Yulan continent!

The clan's banquet was attended by every single member of the Yulan branch. Hundreds of people thus squeezed into the palace, but fortunately, the palace was very large, allowing everyone a place to sit. During the course of the banquet, the atmosphere was very lively.

After all, of the hundreds of people present, only a few dozen actually came from the Yulan continent. The others had been born in the Infernal Realm.

They were thus very curious regarding the root of the Yulan branch, the 'Yulan continent'.

As for the ones who had actually come from the Yulan continent, such as Baruch, Ryan, and the others, they were also very interested in learning the situation of the descendants of their clan. This entire banquet all but turned into a story-telling time for Linley, Cesar, and the others, and Cesar and O'Brien talked nonstop regarding all sorts of matters which had occurred in the Yulan continent.

At the same time, they also told the story of how Linley had risen to sudden prominence in the Yulan continent.

Master sculptor, Grand Magus Saint, Dragonblood Warrior...

Linley's story caused many of the descendants of the clan in the Infernal Realm to be filled with envy. Although they, too, were powerful, in the Four Divine Beasts clan, they were just the bottom tier. How could they compare to Linley's resplendence?

By the time the banquet concluded, it was dark. Only now did the group of clansmen part from Linley.

Ryan led Linley and the others to their residence.

"Linley, these three buildings are for you all to live in. You make the arrangements for who lives where." Ryan said warmly.

"Right. No need to trouble you. I'll make the arrangements." Linley laughed.

Ryan smiled, then left, while Linley, Delia, Bebe, O'Brien...the group finally let out sighs of relief.

"The banquet finally came to an end." O'Brien laughed, then let out a sigh. "Despite having been in the Infernal Realm for so long, I've never spoken so much in one breath. Linley, these clansmen of yours truly are quite curious regarding the Yulan continent."

"The vast majority of them have never been to the Yulan continent before. Of course they are curious."

Linley laughed. "Enough. Everyone, go get some rest. Everyone can choose their own residence." In the end, Linley, Delia, and Bebe took one building, Olivier, O'Brien, Cesar, and Tarosse took a second building, while Dylun and his two sons took a building."

A quiet night.

Linley and Delia were in each other's arms on the bed, smiles on their faces.

"Linley, are you very happy right now?" Delia said softly.

"Right." Thinking back to the banquet that day, and that scene of how those clansmen all asked him all sorts of questions, Linley couldn't help but laugh. "When I was with those clansmen, I felt as though I returned to a large family. It truly was wonderful! If my father could see them as well, he definitely would feel very happy and very content."

Linley still remembered how his father had dreamed all his life to restore the clan to glory.

His dying wish was that the weapon of the clan leader, Baruch, be returned.

"Right. If your father knew, he would definitely be very happy." Delia said. "If your father knew what you had done over these years, he would definitely be very proud." Delia rested her head against Linley's chest.

Linley held Delia in his arms.

"I rather miss Sasha and Taylor." Delia said.

Linley couldn't help but think of his own son and daughter. Who knew what was going on back in the Yulan continent?

"Delia." Linley suddenly said.

"What is it?" Delia raised her head.

"Let's try and see if we can have another one, shall we? Maybe we'll succeed." Linley said slyly. Delia was startled, and then her face reddened as she looked at Linley. Linley chortled, then lowered his head to kiss Delia...

Dawn. Linley got out of bed and headed to his residence's gate.

"The morning air is excellent." Linley watched as the fog swirled around in the gorge. From afar, various buildings could dimly be seen, and that coiling 'Dragon Avenue' could be seen in the skies. Given his visual acuity, he was able to even see those patrol warriors on Dragon Avenue.

"This is my Four Divine Beasts clan!"

Linley sighed in his heart.

Linley suddenly had a feeling, and he turned to look. Not far away, a figure was walking towards him. It was the clan leader of the Yulan branch, Baruch. Baruch's face was covered in smiles. "Linley!"

"Clan leader." Linley hurriedly went to greet him.

"Come. Let's find a place to chat. There's something I need to discuss with you." Baruch said.

"How about right here at my place?" Linley said.

Baruch glanced around, then nodded. "Might as well. There's no outsiders here at your place. No need to worry about others overhearing."

Linley was rather surprised. From what Baruch was saying, it seemed as though they were going to discuss a rather important matter. Linley immediately led Baruch towards his own living place, then to a study within.

Linley and Baruch both sat down.

"Clan leader, you can go ahead." Linley said.

Baruch looked towards Linley. Pausing a moment, he then said, "Linley, first tell me, are you a God or a Highgod?"

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 8, The Secrets of the Ancestral Baptism!

Asking about his strength?

Linley looked at Baruch. After a momentary pause, he said, "I am a God!"

A look of surprise appeared on Baruch's face, and then he immediately sighed in praise, "Linley, you, a God, were able to effortlessly defeat that Asru. This is simply inconceivable. How did you accomplish this?"

Linley, for a moment, didn't know how to reply.

The reason why he, a God, was so powerful actually had many components.

"Oh." Baruch seemed to have realized that he had asked a question that he shouldn't have asked. He laughed, "Enough about that. Since you are so formidable as a God, once you become a Highgod, you will definitely become a true expert of our Azure Dragon clan. Since that's the case, there are some things which I will tell you in advance."

Linley listened intently.

"These affairs, our Azure Dragon clan generally won't tell some of the weaker clansmen." Baruch sighed.

Linley couldn't help but feel puzzled. "Weak people? But the clan leader himself is just a God. How does he know?" As Linley said it, in the Four Divine Beasts clan, the Baruch clan was indeed a very weak, small clan.

Baruch just continued. "Linley, do you know how resplendent and glorious our Four Divine Beasts clan was in the past?"

"I know." Linley nodded. "I read a book introducing the Four Divine Beasts clan. In the past, the power of the Four Divine Beasts clan spread across all Four Higher Planes and multiple Divine Planes. But it seems as though ten thousand years ago, all of our clan's forces withdrew from the other planes and regrouped here in the Infernal Realm."

"Right."

Baruch sighed. "Our Four Divine Beasts clan's power was spread across the Four Higher Planes. But do you know why our clan was so powerful to begin with?"

Linley shook his head.

Linley was puzzled about this as well. Why were they so mighty?

"Let me tell you. The reason our Four Divine Beasts clan was, in the past, so strong, was because..." Baruch's eyes shone, and his breathing became more ragged as well. His face also turned red from excitement. "The ancestors of our Four Divine Beasts clan were four Sovereigns!!!"

"What?!" Linley felt completely stunned.

"Clan leader, what did you just say? Sovereigns? Did I mishear?" Linley said hurriedly.

Sovereigns were far above all other life forms, whom they gaze down at from up above. Even the most powerful Infernal Asuras or Purgatory Commanders, in front of a Sovereign, were like ants. With but a thought, a Sovereign could kill an Asura.

The ancestors of his clan were Sovereigns?

The ancestors of the Four Divine Beasts clan were four Sovereigns?

"Right! You heard correctly!" Baruch said solemnly. "The ancestors of our Four Divine Beasts clan were four Sovereigns. The four mighty Sovereigns were a very tight-knit group, and the descendants of their Four Divine Beasts clan, which they raised, were naturally powerful to begin with. When they were present, the assistance the four ancestors provided allowed their clan to dominate the major planes with utter invincibility!"

Linley felt as though his mind was in a state of chaos.

Sovereign? And four of them?

It must be understood that the seven elements of earth, fire, water, wind, lightning, light, and darkness, each only had seven Sovereigns! The Sovereigns were scattered throughout the various Divine Planes and Four Higher Planes. And, for creatures as proud as them, it was very hard for alliances to form.

But four Sovereigns had joined forces. It would be a strange thing if the Four Divine Beasts clan wasn't mighty!

Most likely, the other Sovereigns also wouldn't be willing to offend these four Sovereigns without a good reason.

"The ancestor of our Azure Dragon clan was a water-type Sovereign. The ancestor of the White Tiger clan was a wind-type Sovereign, while the ancestor of the Vermilion Bird clan was a fire-type Sovereign. As for the Black Tortoise clan's ancestor, that was an earth-type Sovereign!" Baruch said solemnly.

Linley's mind was reeling.

Sovereigns were so far above them, and yet behind the Four Divine Beasts clan, there had been four Sovereigns!

It would be impossible for the Four Divine Beasts clan to be weak, even if they wanted to be.

"If that was still the case, our Four Divine Beasts clan would still be invincible throughout the various planes! But all of this changed, roughly eleven thousand years ago!" Baruch said.

Linley also knew that roughly ten thousand years ago, a tremendous change happened to the Four Divine Beasts clan. What type of change, exactly, had caused his clan to fall?

For all four of the Sovereign's clans to simultaneously weaken...there was, most likely, just one possible explanation. The power backing the Four Divine Beasts clan had been destroyed! As he thought of this possibility, Linley found it to be unbelievable. "Who could possibly defeat four mighty Sovereigns? Impossible! Absolutely impossible!"

Although he thought this, he still looked at Baruch, waiting for Baruch's answer!

"The four ancestors are all dead!" Baruch said hoarsely.

Linley couldn't help but stop breathing.

So that really was the case!

"Four Sovereigns...all died? How is that possible?" Linley said hurriedly. To kill a Sovereign, one had to at least be at the Sovereign level, but the four ancestors of the Four Divine Beasts clan represented four full Sovereigns!

Who could kill four Sovereigns?

"They did indeed perish." Baruch said helplessly. "Although we don't know the reason for their death, there is no question about the fact that the four ancestors are dead! And precisely because the four ancestors are dead, our Four Divine Beasts clan's moment of crisis arrived!"

"Crisis?" Linley frowned.

"Right." Baruch furrowed his forehead in worry. "The four ancestors were all on very good terms with each other. The four of them, all Sovereigns, had existed for countless years, causing the Four Divine Beasts clan and its members to be extremely arrogant and overbearing."

Linley nodded to himself. With four Sovereigns as ancestors, how could the Four Divine Beasts clan not be arrogant!

"Wherever there are people, there are struggles. Because of their arrogance, because of their power! In the past, when the Four Divine Beasts clan struggled against other clans, the Four Divine Beasts clan would naturally be rather overbearing." Baruch said.

Linley understood.

"After countless years, naturally there would often be battle and struggles. The Four Divine Beasts clan had a number of enemies, but the Four Divine Beasts clan never cared, because they were so powerful, they didn't fear their enemies!"

Baruch shook his head. "But then, the four ancestors died!"

Baruch looked towards Linley. "The clans which dared struggle against the Four Divine Beasts clan, even if they were weaker, wouldn't be too much weaker."

Linley nodded in acknowledgment.

“Those clans, in their own planes, were all very formidable. But compared to the Four Divine Beasts clan, there was still quite some difference. After all, behind the Four Divine Beasts clan were four Sovereigns. But once the four Sovereigns died...”

Baruch shook his head and sighed.

Linley began to understand.

“Those clans, in the past, had simply been humiliated too much by the Four Divine Beasts clan.” Baruch shook his head. “Once the four Sovereigns died, these clans no longer had any more misgivings. They immediately, wildly began to assault the Four Divine Beasts clan!”

Linley took a deep breath. He could completely imagine the scene.

“Thus, the forces of the Four Divine Beasts clan immediately withdrew, and the descendants in all the planes immediately withdrew and regrouped to the Infernal Realm!” Baruch said solemnly. “Ten thousand years ago, just during the withdrawal process, the number of Highgods which died was an astonishing figure. Even many Six Star Fiends and Seven Star Fiends died.”

Linley’s heart shuddered.

“The Four Divine Beasts clan is strong, extremely strong.” Baruch said. “Originally, when the four ancestors were alive, they naturally cultivated their descendants, causing the Four Divine Beasts clan to produce many experts, Seven Star Fiends, and even Asura-level experts.”

Linley understood this. The four Sovereigns had cultivated their descendants for countless years. Given that the Four Divine Beasts clansmen were naturally blessed with gifts to begin with, it made sense for them to be mighty.

If they weren’t mighty, how could they have dominated the many other planes?

After all, to dominate the other planes, the power of the ancestors was just one aspect. The many powerful experts which the Four Divine Beasts clan held was another aspect.

“They were powerful, but they couldn’t overcome the superior numbers of their enemies, and in addition, their enemies were also powerful.” Baruch sighed. “The worst part was, eight of the clans who had held the deepest grudges against and had the most hatred for the Four Divine Beasts clan ended up actually slaughtering a path into the Infernal Realm!”

“They attacked here in the Infernal Realm?” Linley was astonished.

“Right. Those clans actually moved their entire clans to the Infernal Realm in pursuit of the Four Divine Beasts clan.” Baruch said.

Linley was completely stunned.

“Amongst them is the Barbary [Ba’ba’li] clan which attacked from the Divine Water Plane, the Dean [De'en] clan from the Divine Earth Plane, the Edric [Ai'de'li'ke] clan from the Higher Plane of the Life Realm, the Venna [Wen'na] clan of the Divine Wind Plane, the Ashcroft [A'she'ke'luo'fu'te] clan of the Netherworld, the Chanel [Sheng'nei'er] clan of the Divine Fire Plane, and also the Boleyn clan of the Celestial Realm!" Baruch said solemnly.

Linley was completely dazed.

The transportation fee for moving between high level planes was astronomical. To move an entire clan would require an astonishingly amount of wealth, but these families were able to accomplish it, which was a testament to their wealth.

In addition...

They were willing to move from their own planes to the Infernal Realm. One could imagine how great their hatred was!

"There were, in total, seven major clans. Aside from these seven clans, in the Infernal Realm, there was one clan already present who had great enmity against our Four Divine Beasts clan. This is the 'Reinales' clan." Baruch said.

Linley sighed to himself.

They even had enemies on their own lands.

"Not a single one of these eight major clans are weaker than our Azure Dragon clan." Baruch said solemnly.

Linley felt bitterness in his heart.

None of them were weaker than the Azure Dragon clan? Linley knew that in the Four Divine Beasts clan, the Azure Dragon clan was the leader. Even if theoretically all four of the Four Divine Beasts clans were equal in power, allied together, they still couldn't overcome the eight clans of the enemies!

"The eight clans joined forces. Doesn't that mean we shouldn't have been able to resist?" Linley was puzzled.

If none of them were weaker than the Azure Dragon clan, once the eight joined forces, how could the Four Divine Beasts clan possibly resist?

"Right. We couldn't resist." Baruch said. "However, we had the help of the Lord Prefect of the Indigo Prefecture."

"The Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture?" Linley was surprised. The Lord Prefect of a prefecture was an Asura!

"The Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture has four powerful emissaries under his command, each of whom is exceedingly powerful. In addition, the Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture also controls the prefecture army." Baruch said. "The Lord Prefect forbade the eight clans from attacking the Skyrise Mountains. If battles occurred outside of the Skyrise Mountains, however, he wouldn't interfere."

Linley now understood. If the enemies had agreed, then the Four Divine Beasts clan wouldn't be completely destroyed, at least.

They had to just hide within the Skyrite Mountains.

But the Four Divine Beasts clan couldn't possibly stay forever within the mountain without leaving. As soon as they left, they would suffer attacks.

"The eight clans obeyed the Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture?" Linley was puzzled.

Of these eight clans, seven came from other planes, and each of them was very powerful. These eight major clans would care about a single Lord Prefect? But of course, behind the Lord Prefect was a large number of prefecture soldiers.

"The eight clans obeyed." Baruch laughed. "All these years, they truly have never attacked the Skyrite Mountains."

Linley was secretly shocked at the influence of the Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture.

"The Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture was actually willing to assist our Four Divine Beasts clan." Linley sighed to himself.

"I'm not clear as to the reason why, myself. There is probably a deep secret hidden within." Baruch said. "Perhaps this was the reason why our Four Divine Beasts clan withdrew back to Indigo Prefecture to begin with."

Linley nodded.

"But our clan can't always be trapped within the mountains." Baruch sighed. "Thus, battles still occur quite often. In addition, once they begin, they only end with one party's death. Either you die or I die."

Linley remembered clearly that scene he had encountered when he had first arrived at Indigo Prefecture, where the Boleyn clan had engaged in a wild slaughter. Only now did Linley understand that the Boleyn clan was one of those eight clans, and was from the Celestial Realm.

"Linley, you are powerful. Once you become a Highgod, you will definitely become a formidable warlord for our clan. Thus, I want to warn you in advance about this, so that you will continue to train hard." Baruch said.

"Understood." Linley nodded.

"I'm just afraid that something terrible will happen to you in those battles...haha, I'm thinking too much." Baruch immediately shook his head and laughed. "You haven't even undergone the Ancestral Baptism, and yet you are so powerful. Once you undergo the Ancestral Baptism, you will definitely become even mightier."

"Ancestral Baptism?"

Linley was extremely curious regarding this. "Clan leader, what exactly is an Ancestral Baptism, and what does it do?"

Baruch laughed. "The Ancestral Baptism is actually a process which truly guides out the innate ability of our Azure Dragon clan. As members of the Azure Dragon clan, we all are at least capable of assuming the Azure Dragonform. But as a clan descended from a divine beast, we have to at least be capable of an 'innate divine ability' as well, right?"

"Azure Dragonform? Innate divine ability?" Linley was rather stunned.

The Four Divine Beasts clan was a clan of divine beasts. Naturally, they had their own 'innate divine abilities'.

"However, although we belong to the Azure Dragon clan, only the ancestor could was a true Azure Dragon. We, his descendants, don't have as pure a blood lineage as he had. Thus, there are differences in our Azure Dragonform, and we have varying levels of strength in our innate divine ability as well." Baruch said.

"Varying levels of strength?" Linley frowned.

"Right. The more of the blood of the ancestor which flows in our veins, the more pure that blood is, then the more powerful the Azure Dragonform will be. The innate divine ability will also grow to be more powerful." Baruch said. "But unfortunately, after so many generations, the blood lineage of the descendants has grown rather thin."

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 9, Eighty Years

As they discussed this, Baruch actually laughed. “But the strange thing is, my bloodline is actually extremely pure. When undergoing the Ancestral Baptism, I actually badly startled those warriors on guard there, and was received by the elder.”

“Your bloodline is very pure?” Linley looked at Baruch.

Baruch was just six thousand years old, while the Four Divine Beasts clan had been in existence for countless years. It was indeed quite bizarre for Baruch’s bloodline to be so pure.

“Generally speaking, the children of our ancestor, in particular the second and third generation members of our Azure Dragon clan, will have an extremely pure lineage. But unexpectedly, my bloodlines are actually comparable with the second generation.” Baruch didn’t hide anything at all.

The second generation of the Azure Dragon clan was composed of the sons and daughters of the ‘Azure Dragon’ Sovereign.

The children of the ‘Azure Dragon’ Sovereign naturally had very pure bloodlines. The members of the third generation who had great innate talent could also be compared to the second generation.

But as for the later generations...

Perhaps occasionally, in one generation, a genius would appear with extremely pure Azure Dragon lineage. But this was a vanishingly rare occurrence. Baruch, however, was one such example.

"This is also precisely the case as to why that elder told me these things regarding our clan." Baruch said.

So that was how it was.

Linley now understood. Up till now, he had been puzzled at how Baruch knew these things.

"Actually, the affairs of our ancestor as well those eight clans isn't much of a secret. In the clan, everyone with pure bloodlines, high potential, or are at the Highgod level will all know about these things." Baruch said solemnly. "After all, clan warfare occurs frequently."

Linley nodded. "I could sense that when I saw those patrolling guards."

The strictness and severity of the vigilance of the Four Divine Beasts clan was far greater than that of the patrols on Miluo Island.

"Linley, your natural talent is definitely better than even mine." Baruch's eyes were shining. "You haven't even undergone the Ancestral Baptism, but you are already so powerful. After you undergo it, you'll then gain insights into the Elemental Laws of Water."

"Insights into the Elemental Laws of Water?" Linley said in astonishment.

He currently had only gained insights into the earth, the wind, and fire. He didn't have any insights whatsoever into the other Elemental Laws.

Baruch said solemnly, "Right. Our Azure Dragon clan is the clan of a water-type divine beast. If the members of our clan aren't even able to understand the Elemental Laws of Water, then we would be jokes. Currently, you aren't able to gain insights into it, but that's only because your lineage hasn't been fully awakened. After you enter the 'Dragonize Pool' and undergo the Ancestral Baptism, you will naturally be transformed into an 'Azure Dragon', while at the same time, you will naturally and immediately reach the Demigod level in the Laws of Water. In addition, you will also gain our innate divine ability."

Linley was completely stunned.

In the past, when Linley had watched how divine beasts would naturally become Deities after reaching adulthood, he would secretly sigh at how naturally blessed they were.

But he hadn't expected that the same was true for himself.

"I can become an Azure Dragon, and not only gain an 'innate divine ability', I'll also become a Deity in water!" Linley couldn't help but feel joy in his heart. "Most likely, in the Infernal Realm, there are very few people who have five divine clones, including my original body."

Once he underwent the Ancestral Baptism, he would have the earth clone, fire clone, water clone, wind clone, and original body. Five bodies.

Since birth, he had high elemental affinity for 'earth' and 'wind', and he was also able to somewhat use 'fire'. But now, he would also have 'water'.

"We are the Azure Dragon clan!" Baruch said proudly. "Training in the Elemental Laws of Water will be extremely fast. Look at me. Although my understanding and ability to gain insights is poor, in just a few thousand years, I've already gained insights into five of the profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of Water. I'm not too far away from the Highgod level."

Linley couldn't help but be astonished. For a person to gain insights and master five of the profound mysteries of the Elemental Laws of Water in just a few thousand years was indeed very fast.

"The heavens have indeed been quite kind to the Azure Dragon clan." Linley said to himself.

"Clan leader, I haven't undergone the Ancestral Baptism yet. Then, how can I go undergo it?" Linley hurriedly asked. The Ancestral Baptism would allow himself to increase in power. Naturally, the sooner he experienced it, the better.

"Don't be impatient." Baruch laughed. "The Ancestral Baptism is carried out within the clan only once every century. Although the clan is very large, every hundred years, there will still be some newborn descendants. Thus, they'll be allowed to undergo the Ancestral Baptism."

"Oh." Linley hurriedly asked, "Then when will the next Ancestral Baptism be?"

"The last one was twenty years ago. Thus, if you want to go undergo the Ancestral Baptism, you'll need to wait eighty years." Baruch said.

"Eighty years." Linley wasn't in a rush.

Ever since he had stayed five hundred years in the Amethyst Mountains, Linley no longer cared too much about the passage of time. A single session of meditation...after closing his eyes, eighty years might pass before he would open them again.

"Linley, in the future, you will be very powerful. Thus, your responsibilities will also be great. Our Four Divine Beasts clan is currently battling against those eight great clans. You will definitely become a powerful warlord for our clan. Thus...you need to work hard. Only in this way will you be able to survive in the dangerous battles of the future." Baruch said solemnly.

And Linley nodded seriously as well.

In the eight great clans, seven were from other planes. They had moved their entire clans over, pursuing and attacking the Four Divine Beasts clan. One could imagine how deep their hatred was for the Four Divine Beasts clan. However, given the arrogance of the Four Divine Beasts clan, there was no way they could forever hide within the Skyrise Mountains.

The struggles and battles between them thus naturally happened all the time.

The warfare between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans...as soon as Linley got involved, he would begin to experience a true rain of blood and storm of slaughter.

"I need to train hard." Linley said to himself.

Indigo Prefecture, Skyrite Mountains. It was as calm and peaceful as ever. Perhaps the army of the Four Divine Beasts clan would be sent out to battle and war against the eight great clans, but Linley's group who lived deep within the Skyrite Mountains knew nothing of these things.

The peaceful days spent in training passed very quickly. Sixty years soon passed.

On this day.

In the Skyrite Mountains. The gorge where Linley's group was currently living. The many members of the Azure Dragon clan living here were either training or gathering together.

"Let's go to the Yulan branch and tease those little fellows. Want to come?" In one corner of the gorge, six youths were gathered together, and one of them, a blue-haired man, laughed as he spoke.

"I'm not going."

"I'm not going either."

The other five men all shook their heads, and one of them even said, "Second Brother, don't go cause trouble at the Yulan branch."

"What's wrong with you? How come all of you are so cowardly now. It's just the Yulan branch. Their strongest members are just Gods. What are you afraid of?" The blue-haired man was rather unhappy.

"Second Brother, in the past, it was fine to cause problems for the Yulan branch, but what you don't realize is that in the centuries you've been in seclusion, there have been changes in the Yulan branch."

"What sort of changes?" The blue-haired man snickered. "Can it be that in just a few centuries, they've produced a Highgod? A few centuries ago, their entire branch only had twelve Gods. Aside from that Baruch who trains a bit faster, the others are all very slow. Can it be that Baruch has become a Highgod?"

"It's not Baruch. Sixty years ago, another member of our clan returned and said that he was of the Yulan branch. The tribesmen all took him to be a God, but he was able to just stand there without moving and send Asru flying."

The blue-haired youth couldn't help but be stunned. "Did you say Asru?"

"Not just Asru. When we heard this from Asru, we didn't believe it. So, we went with Elder Brother to make some trouble for him, but...even Elder Brother was easily defeated by that Linley."

"Elder Brother?" The blue-haired man was now truly stunned. "My Elder Brother was defeated as well?"

"Right. Thus, Elder Brother is now meditating in seclusion." Another one of the five spoke out.

Only now did the blue-haired man realize that this was the reason he hadn't seen his Elder Brother this time upon concluding his training. He had thought that his Elder Brother had gone travelling. So in reality, he was in seclusion.

"This person truly is powerful?" The blue-haired man asked, puzzled. "What is his name?"

"From what the Yulan branch's people say, he is named Linley!" Someone immediately said.

"Right. His name is Linley. Those Yulan branch members are now very smug. They even say...that if we want to struggle against the Yulan branch, then we should come and see if we can beat Linley. Unfortunately, all of the Highgods in our gorge who tested him were defeated."

"Thus, in the past sixty years, nobody has dared to cause trouble for the Yulan branch again."

After hearing the explanation from his friends, the blue-haired man finally understood.

This gorge was a place where very weak branches lived. Many branches had just a few Highgods, and the entire gorge, all combined, only had twenty or thirty Highgods. But Linley was able to defeat several of them.

Naturally, the other branches in the gorge would acknowledge the new status of the Yulan branch and not go humiliate them.

After all, if instead of humiliating them, they were themselves humiliated, that would truly be a loss of face.

Suddenly...

A surge of endless ripples descended from the heavens. That unique energy ripple caused the blue-haired man and the other five to be startled.

"The descent of the natural Laws?" The six men were greatly shocked.

This was the sign of a person becoming a Deity on their own.

The six immediately began to chat amongst themselves.

"Who made a breakthrough?"

"The descent of the natural Laws was centered on the Yulan branch. It was someone from their branch."

"It's probably that Saint, finally breaking through to become a Demigod. No need for all this commotion." The blue-haired man snickered.

.....

Currently, quite a few people were gathered outside Linley's door, with only Delia and Bebe having run inside.

"What's going on?" Baruch walked over and immediately asked.

Tarosse laughed. "Linley made a breakthrough."

"He's become a Highgod?" Baruch immediately asked through divine sense. Up till now, many of the other people in the Yulan branch viewed Linley as a Highgod, just one who was low-key and hid his aura.

"Not sure." Tarosse shook his head. "He shouldn't have. When Linley first arrived, he was still meditating on the fifth profound mystery of the Laws of the Earth."

While they chatted amongst themselves, three figures emerged from within the room.

"He came out. Linley came out." The Yulan branch's clansmen were all very excited.

"Everyone, you can go back to your own places now. I just made a breakthrough in one of my divine clones, that's all." Linley laughed calmly. Seeing the group of clansmen present, especially the look of veneration with which they viewed him, Linley still felt quite happy.

After having arrived here, Linley naturally wouldn't just watch as his clansmen were humiliated. Thus, on multiple occasions, he had shown his might, shocking the other branches.

These days, the Yulan branch no longer needed to endure humiliation. These other clansmen naturally felt gratitude towards Linley.

"Everyone can disperse now. Don't stay here." Baruch laughed as well.

Only now did the group of clansmen, chatting and laughing amongst themselves, depart. While doing so, they said amongst themselves, "Linley is so formidable. What clone do you think made the breakthrough?"

"Most likely, a divine Destruction clone."

"It might be his divine Wind clone."

Those other clansmen weren't clear about Linley's detailed situation. They weren't even sure as to what type of Laws Linley was currently training in.

"Linley, what breakthrough did you make?" Cesar went up to him, greeting and asking him.

"Divine fire clone." Linley laughed at himself. "Only now have I finally reached the God level in my divine fire clone. I truly am slow in training in fire."

Cesar, Tarosse, and the others were immediately speechless. He had been training for less than a thousand years, but had reached the God level in earth, wind, and fire...and he was complaining that he was slow?

"How is your training in the Laws of the Earth progressing?" Tarosse asked.

"Still training in the fifth profound mystery. I've reached a bottleneck. I wonder if I'll be able to completely master the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength' before the Ancestral Baptism." Linley said.

Only a decade or two was left before the next Ancestral Baptism.

Ten or so years, to Deities, was a very short period of time. Linley's original body accompanied Delia, while his three divine clones were completely absorbed in their training. But even after the day of the Ancestral Baptism was about to arrive, the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength' remained stuck at the bottleneck.

On this day, nearly eighty years had passed since Linley had arrived at the Skyrte Mountains.

In front of Linley's residence. Baruch was walking over.

“Linley, tonight, the Ancestral Baptism is about to begin. I’ve already registered your name for it. Soon, you’ll most likely be led away by others to participate in the Ancestral Baptism. Make your preparations.”

“Understood.” Linley’s eyes couldn’t help but be filled with a look of anticipation.

The Ancestral Baptism. What exactly was it like?

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 10, Dragonize Pool

The skies were dark. It was already sundown.

Tonight, the Ancestral Baptism was going to begin. Within the gorge in the Skyrise Mountains, Linley was patiently waiting. Just a short while later, Linley saw a warrior dressed in azure armor fly over from the air.

"Who is Linley!" The azure armored warrior shouted.

Linley felt a surge of joy. He immediately went up to greet the man.

"I am Linley." Linley laughed. The azure armored warrior glanced at Linley. After a short, careful scrutinization, he couldn't help but frown and bark, "Stop joking around. Everyone who goes to the Ancestral Baptism is less than a century old. You are a God. Can it be that you are less than a century old? Quick, go have Linley come out."

Linley didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. It seemed as though he had been taken for an imposter.

"I am Linley. I had been living in other planes, and only returned to the Skyrise Mountains just eighty years ago." Linley explained. "Thus, up till now, I have yet to participate in the Ancestral Baptism."

"Oh?" The azure armored warrior was rather puzzled.

At this moment, watching from below, Baruch, Delia, Bebe, and the others also didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. The azure armored warrior actually didn't believe Linley was who he said he was. Baruch himself immediately flew up towards that azure armored warrior. "It's true. He is indeed Linley. He wasn't born in our Skyrise Mountains, which is why to this very day, he has yet to undergo the Ancestral Baptism."

The azure armored warrior glanced at Linley, then let out a cold snort. "I'll believe you for now. But, kid, you better understand...if you've already undergone an Ancestral Baptism, undergoing a second baptism will be of no use to you. And, if you were to be found out to be an imposter, you will be in trouble. Enough. Let's go."

The azure armored warrior immediately flew high into the sky.

Linley turned his head to say his farewells to Delia and Bebe, then immediately followed.

They flew up into the Dragon Avenue, and followed it. Linley kept close behind the azure armored warrior as they advanced nonstop. After flying for quite some time by the side of this azure armored warrior, the two arrived at the top of a pitch-black mountain peak.

At the top of the mountain peak, there were multiple azure armored guards, a bald, black-robed man, as well as ten or so young men and women.

"Milord, Linley has been brought here." The azure armored warrior flew over and immediately said respectfully.

The bald, black-robed man glanced sideways at Linley, nodded, then instructed the warrior, "Enough. You can leave now." The black-robed man looked at Linley. "Linley, wait here for a while. When everyone is present, we'll go in."

"Yes." Linley stood there with the other ten or so people.

"These people are all just Saints." Linley could immediately tell that these youngsters were very suspicious, and they looked at Linley in surprise. They were amazed to discover that they actually couldn't see Linley's power!

"This person isn't a Saint?" Those young men and women were all puzzled.

For someone who had been born less than a century ago, especially a descendant of the Azure Dragon clan, it wasn't very likely that they would be able to become a Deity on their own without having undergone the Ancestral Baptism.

Linley just waited there quietly, as one young man after another was led here by azure armored warriors.

"A total of twenty eight. All present." The bald, black-robed man nodded slightly, then said calmly, "Enough. Little fellows, all follow me. Remember, without my permission, you aren't allowed to run around wildly."

As he spoke, the bald, black-robed man led them all into a corridor within the mountain peak.

The outsides of the entrance to the corridor were all covered with draconic sculptures. The entire corridor led downwards, deep into the heart of the mountain. This corridor was nearly six meters wide and four meters tall. It was very rectangular, while at the same time the walls of the corridor had some ancient sculptures as well.

The floor was covered with a woven carpet.

Linley just quietly followed the bald, black-robed man.

"Hey, you, you're already a Deity?" A jade-haired girl walking alongside Linley couldn't resist her curiosity, and so she asked the question in a soft voice.

Linley turned to glance at her. He chuckled, but only nodded in response.

The jade-haired girl's eyes immediately lit up, and were filled with a look of adoration. "You are so amazing. You've never undergone the Ancestral Baptism, but you were able to become a Deity in under a century." Even the other youths who were taking part in the Ancestral Baptism turned to look at Linley with either veneration, or surprise, or jealousy.

Less than a century?

He had passed the century mark long ago. However...in the Yulan continent, when he had become a Deity on his own, it was true that at that time, he had been training for less than a century.

"Pipe down." The bald, black-robed man shouted icily.

Immediately, those twelve Saints were so scared, they didn't dare say another word. Linley's expression didn't change. "This bald fellow has quite the temper." Linley continued to walk and follow him. Moments later, they arrived at the end of the corridor, which had a wide hall past it with quite a few black-robed figures within.

"All here?" One of the black-robed men went to welcome them.

"A total of twenty eight. All present." The bald, black-robed man said. "You watch them for a while. I'll go invite the two elders to activate the Dragonize Pool."

"Right. Do you know where the two elders are, right now?" The black-robed man said.

The bald, black-robed man said, puzzled, "Could it be that they haven't arrived yet?"

"They arrived, they arrived. But the two elders just went into a private room. They even said that without their permission, nobody is permitted to enter." The black-robed man was puzzled. "They are in the private room in the eastern palace hall."

"I'll go take a look." The bald, black-robed man immediately walked over.

Deep within the mountain, in a private room in the eastern palace hall.

Two figures were currently standing, shoulder to shoulder. One of them had a hawk-hooked nose, a balding head, two drooping sideburns, and a pair of eyes that were as grim and callous as a viper's. The other was very handsome, with long hair that flowed down his back.

The two were both dressed in azure armor that was embroidered with gold patterns, as well as a cloak that was covered with strange, peculiar magic runes which flowed with all sorts of faint light.

They were currently focusing their attention on watching a scryer recording that currently being broadcast, floating in the air within the private room.

"Formidable." The bald man couldn't help but sigh in praise.

"Even you and I probably wouldn't be able to so easily block that blade blow." The handsome man sighed in praise as well.

The scryer recording currently being played, amazingly, was the scene of Linley's battle in the skies above Miluo Island. The scene which had just caused the two to sigh in amazement was that of the red-robed elder of the Bagshaw clan using a single blade chop to break apart Linley's 'cube'.

That battle had been watched by many outsiders who were present at Miluo Island. Those of them who trained in the Elemental Laws of Water naturally would record it down.

Because the main figure in this battle, 'Linley', was considered by many experts to be of the 'Four Divine Beasts clan', these scryer recordings naturally made their way to the Four Divine Beasts clan. Only, the speed at which this happened was rather slow.

Linley had been in the Four Divine Beasts clan for so many years now, but the scryer recording had just now made its way here.

"Look. That red-robed elder is about to fight with our clansman." The handsome man said hurriedly.

In the scryer recording, that red-robed elder, after hearing the order from the clan leader of the Bagshaw clan, 'Bakwill', began to wield his blade and charge towards Linley.

Seeing the saber blow strike down, the two elders both held their breaths.

But then, they saw from the scryer recording that Linley was able to use just his right leg to kick against that saber, smashing that Seven Star Fiend directly into the ground. Moments later, the scryer recording came to an end.

"Formidable!" The handsome man sighed in praise.

A stunned look was in the eyes of the bald man as well. "Just by relying on his body, he was able to resist a full force material attack from a Seven Star Fiend. For his body to be so incredibly strong...even in our clan, there are few who are at this level."

"You and I are not, at least." The handsome man agreed.

Although the Azure Dragon clan's members were indeed strong in Dragonform, to be as strong as this...very few in the Azure Dragon clan could accomplish it. For one's Dragonform to be at this level of power wasn't just a matter of lineage; it also required other factors.

"It isn't just that his body is tough. Did you see that globe of earthen yellow light surrounding his body? Everyone trapped within it will have their movements be affected. Even that red-robed elder of Miluo Island was affected as well." The bald man said solemnly.

"Right. That's a Gravitational Space. An extremely formidable Gravitational Space." The handsome youth said, puzzled, "Someone in our clan is actually specialized in the Laws of the Earth? And at such a level? Inconceivable!"

After having seen that snyder recording, they were certain that this person was of their clan.

In the entire Infernal Realm, only the Azure Dragon clan could have such powerful bodies after assuming Dragonform!

"This person's power is great." The bald man sighed. "He was able to defeat a Seven Star Fiend without even using his innate divine ability. If he had used his innate divine ability, he would have easily won."

"Right." The handsome man nodded. "His body is so powerful, which means that his lineage must be very pure. If his lineage is very pure, then his innate divine ability must be formidable as well." The handsome youth knew full well how powerful his clan's innate divine ability was."

"But, I've never seen this person before." The bald man looked at the other man. "Have you?"

The handsome man frowned. "This transformation...I haven't seen it either."

"It might be an expert who is in seclusion outside the clan." The handsome man said.

"Hmph. The clan is in a state of crisis, but this person still doesn't return." The bald man was clearly very unhappy. "He might be powerful, but if he doesn't return, what good is he?"

"Knock!" "Knock!"

The sound of the door being knocked.

"Enter." The bald man said calmly.

The bald, black-robed man pushed open the door to the private room, then said respectfully, "Elders, the twenty eight participants of the Ancestral Baptism are here."

"Oh. Let's go. Let's activate the Dragonize Pool." The handsome man said, and then he headed out alongside the bald man.

The two were members of the elders of the Azure Dragon clan.

Linley's group of twenty eight followed behind the two elders and the four black-robed men, walking through a narrow corridor. Up in front, the two elders chatted and laughed with each other. "Garvey [Jia'wei], it's quite a rare occasion for us to have a God participate in the Ancestral Baptism."

"It is quite interesting." The handsome man nodded.

"He became a God without undergoing the Ancestral Baptism. Not bad." The handsome man turned to glance at Linley, but unfortunately... during that great battle above Miluo Island, Linley had been in Dragonform the entire time.

Currently, Linley was in human form, so the two elders naturally couldn't recognize him as being the main character of the scryer recording they had just seen, that so called 'reclusive expert' who was living outside the clan.

At the end of the walkway was a very wide palace hall.

In the center of the palace hall, there was a large round pool that was two hundred meter in diameter. The waters of the pool emitted a very peculiar odor, and next to the pool, there was a black-robed figure that was tossing in a large amount of herbs into it.

"Bubble, bubble..." The waters of the pool continuously frothed.

"This is the Dragonize Pool." The bald man said in a clear voice. "Wait a while. Go in only after I tell you to."

As he spoke, the bald man, with a flip of his hand, retrieved a fist-sized gemstone. This fist-sized gemstone sparkled with a dazzling azure light, and the bald man tossed it directly into the Dragonize Pool.

"Plonk!" The gemstone fell into the waters of the pool.

The strange thing was...

The Dragonize Pool immediately glowed with a dazzling azure light that was quite piercing to the eye. And then, the waters of the entire Dragonize Pool began to wildly bubble, with blasts of water constantly appearing and a large amount of azure energy forming waves that circulated on the surface, as though tiny azure dragons were swirling about.

"Enough. You can all go in now." The bald man said casually.

"You keep an eye on them for me." The bald man turned to look at the bald, black-robed man. "After the Ancestral Baptism is complete, retrieve the Dragonize Jewel and give it to us."

"Yes, Elder." The bald, black-robed man bowed as he replied.

"Let's go." The bald man and the handsome man laughed, then departed. The Ancestral Baptism would take a fairly long period of time. The two elders wouldn't just wait there like fools.

The bald, black-robed man immediately stared coldly at the group of twenty eight. "All of you, go in."

"Dragonize Pool?" Linley stared at the azure energy swirling about in front of him, at that Dragonize Pool that was emitting that dazzling azure light. He immediately dove directly into the Dragonize Pool, moving so fast he was like a ray of light. As for the other twenty seven, they too charged forward en masse and entered the Dragonize Pool."

The twenty eight all landed within the Dragonize Pool.

"Roaaaaaaaaaaaaaar!" The entire Dragonize Pool emitted a strange, draconic roar, a roar which shook the soul. At the same time, the dazzling azure light which the Dragonize Pool had been shooting out in every direction began to dim, and the large amounts of azure energy swirling on the surface of the pool, with a whoosh, flooded towards those twenty eight people.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 11, Innate Divine Ability

Countless streams of azure energy circled about like serpents slithering in the Dragonize Pool. These azure energy currents flooded towards those twenty eight people, surrounding them like azure silkworm cocoons which continuously spun themselves around them.

“What an unusual feeling.”

As soon as he had entered the Dragonize Pool, Linley had sensed a large amount of energy surrounding him. It was as though he had been returned to his mother’s womb. The strange energy brought warmth to every part of his body and seeped deep into it.

His body felt both numb and comfortable.

“So this is the Ancestral Baptism. Quite comfortable, actually.” Linley closed his eyes, luxuriating in the feeling of that unique energy entering his body.

The energy continuously seeped in through his skin. His flesh, his nerves, his blood vessels, his blood...they were all infused with it. Even his bones were infused with it...and even his eyes and eyelids were going numb. From inside to outside, not a single part of his body was left unchanged.

In terms of spirit or body, Linley was currently in a very relaxed state.

The palace hall where the Dragonize Pool was located was extremely large. It was three or four hundred meters wide, and nearly a hundred meters tall. The ceiling of the palace hall, in particular, had an image of a bellowing dragon carved into it.

"Bubble, bubble..." The Dragonize Pool continuously frothed.

At the side of the Dragonize Pool, quite a few black-robed men were resting while watching these twenty eight junior descendants metamorphosize.

"The Ancestral Baptism will take at least one or two days. Some with purer bloodlines will have their Ancestral Baptism last for six or seven days." The bald, black-robed man shook his head. "The two Elders went to rest, but we still have to wait here."

A silver-haired youth by the side of the bald, black-robed man laughed. "When one day you become one of the Elders, you can be like that as well."

"Me? Become an Elder? I'll wait to have the power of a Seven Star Fiend first." The bald, black-robed man said resignedly.

"Hey. These juniors are beginning to slow down in their rate of absorbing the energy of the Dragonize Jewel." The silver-haired youth suddenly said.

The bald, black-robed man turned to look. Indeed.

Currently, in the Dragonize Pool, twenty five of the twenty eight azure cocoons had ceased absorbing the azure energy, with only three left which continued to devour the azure energy.

"During this Ancestral Baptism, there's actually three who have high potential." The bald, black-robed man sighed in praise. "The longer they can absorb the power of the 'Dragonize Gem', the purer the ancestor's blood is in their veins, and the greater amount as well."

"Right." The silver-haired youth nodded. "However, juniors these days all have very shallow amounts of the lineage. Now that they are done absorbing the energy of the Dragonize Gem, they'll have completed their Ancestral Baptism shortly."

"I heard that the more powerful second and third generation members of our clan, when undergoing their Ancestral Baptism, took one or two full days just to absorb the energy of the Dragonize Gem." The bald, black-robed man said mysteriously.

"Are you serious?" The silver-haired youth didn't dare believe it. "Ordinary clansmen only need a few moments to complete the absorption part. Is the lineage of the second and third generation clansmen that much superior to ordinary clansmen?"

"Why would I lie to you? Not long ago, that Baruch fellow. Do you know of him?" The bald, black-robed man said.

"I do." The silver-haired youth sighed in praise. "Supposedly, he spent a full night just absorbing the power of the Dragonize Gem. The purity of his lineage is truly quite rare."

"Just think about it. If even Baruch's lineage could be so pure, how pure is the lineage of the second and third generations?" The bald, black-robed man laughed.

"That Dragonize Gem had been completely charged, but he immediately absorbed almost a third of it." The bald, black-robed man sighed with feeling. "I saw this happen myself."

"A third? That much?" The silver-haired youth said in shock.

A single 'Dragonize Gem' would generally be swapped out for a fully charged Dragonize Gem after using up half of its energy. However, generally speaking, half of the energy of a Dragonize Gem would be enough to provide Ancestral Baptisms for thousands of years for the clan.

Given there was an Ancestral Baptism every hundred years, that meant it could be used for tens of times, consecutively.

But Baruch had caused the Dragonize Gem to have a third of its energy used up in a single Ancestral Baptism. This was indeed shocking.

"It seems as though today's Dragonize Gem is fully charged." The bald, black-robed man said.

The Dragonize Gem was a fairly precious item for the Azure Dragon clan. To others, however, it was worthless. After all, the energy of the Dragonize Gem would only take effect on someone who had the 'Azure Dragon lineage'. The Azure Dragon clan, in turn, had to spend an enormous amount of money to create these Dragonize Gems.

"Look, just one left. The other twenty seven have stopped absorbing the energy of the Dragonize Gem." The silver-haired youth said.

The bald, black-robed man turned to look, only to see that in the Dragonize Pool, just a single, large azure energy cocoon remained. A large amount of azure energy continuously, ceaselessly flooded towards that azure cocoon, which seemed to be like a bottomless pit, capable of absorbing as much energy as came to it.

"Whoah-oh! This one should be that God." The bald, black-robed man, glancing at the other twenty seven, knew that the remaining one was Linley.

"God?" The silver-haired youth laughed. "I hear that he just came back not long ago from the outside world. He was able to reach the God level without undergoing the Ancestral Baptism; he's quite talented. No wonder he's able to absorb so much of the energy of the Dragonize Gem."

"Tell me, how much do you think he will absorb?" The bald, black-robed man laughed.

"Hard to say. Perhaps he might be able to absorb a tenth of the energy of the Dragonize Gem." The youth said.

"A tenth? That's not very likely." The bald, black-robed man shook his head.

As they spoke, the two continued to pay attention to the final, remaining azure cocoon within the Dragonize Pool. As for the other twenty seven, they were in a state of slumber.

Time flowed on...

"Half the night has passed. He's still absorbing?" All of the black-robed men around the Dragonize Pool were discussing this amongst themselves now.

"Crackle..."

That azure energy continued to endlessly flood towards Linley's azure cocoon, which didn't reject any of it, instead constantly absorbing all the azure energy. The strange energy of the Dragonize Gem continuously flooded every single part of Linley's body.

But it seemed as though Linley's bones and flesh were able to absorb as much energy as was sent to them.

"My entire body is shaking." Linley felt extremely comfortable. He could sense that unique energy seeping deep into every part of his body, merging with the latent, potential energy throughout his body. The energy of the 'Dragonize Gem' was completely compatible with Linley's bloodline energy.

However...

It was as though the bloodline energy in Linley's body hadn't been completely discovered yet. Thus, a large amount of the energy of the 'Dragonize Gem' continued to flood in, constantly drawing out the energy hidden deep in the blood which flowed throughout Linley's body.

"It's been an entire night." The black-robed men surrounding the Dragonize Pool were awestruck.

"Last time, I heard that Baruch spent an entire night absorbing. But this person actually...right, what's his name?" The silver-haired man asked.

"Linley. He's Linley." The bald, black-robed man had been in charging of assembling Linley's group, and so he was very familiar with Linley's information. "Oh, that Linley is just like Baruch. He also comes from the Yulan branch."

"The same branch?" The silver-haired youth was astonished.

"I wonder how much energy this Linley will be able to absorb." The bald, black-robed man stared at the Dragonize Pool.

The azure energy continued to flood out, not stopping at all.

Only a long time later...

The speed of the azure energy flow slowed down, then came to a halt. That azure cocoon merged into Linley's body as well. Within the Dragonize Pool, Linley completely stopped moving, falling into a slumber, just as the other twenty seven had.

"Half a day, and a full night."

The bald, black-robed man and the silver-haired youth looked at each other, their eyes filled with amazement and envy.

The longer one could absorb, the more pure one's lineage was, and the more talented one would be in water. In addition, one's 'innate divine ability' would also be more powerful!

Half a day and one night!

Only the legendary members of the second and third generation could compare to this.

"Ah!" Linley seemed to be asleep, but his consciousness was still quite clear.

Linley could sense that his skin, his flesh, his bones, his organs...his entire body seemed to be trembling with excitement as countless microscopic threads of energy danced about.

Throughout his body, every single cell was vibrating minutely.

The energy of the Dragonize Pool and the energy of his lineage was fusing together.

"It feel as though every part of my body is coming alive." Linley felt that this was inconceivable. In addition, the energy of the Dragonize Gem, along with the energy of his lineage, when coming together, were silently transforming Linley's body.

From his skin to his flesh to deep within his cells, a transformation was occurring.

An intrinsic metamorphosis.

As this silent transformation occurred, Linley allowed his body to change unimpeded, just using his consciousness to sense it.

Not long after Linley stopped absorbing the energy of the Dragonize Gem, the other people throughout the Dragonize Pool began to change dramatically.

"Hoooooowl!" First was a youth in the Dragonize Pool who suddenly opened his eyes, then let out a wild howl. Draconic scales suddenly emerged from his body, and his draconic tail began to thrash about in the pool as well.

Waves were sent splashing everywhere.

"Aaaaaaaaaaah!" This Dragonformed youth let out an agonized howl. Moments later, he slowly calmed down, regaining his calm.

At the same time...

"Rumble..." A rippling surge of energy came as the natural Law's descended.

A black-colored stone that glowed with an azure-greenish aura appeared, hovering above his head. It was a water-type divine spark!

"This kid is going to become a Demigod." The silver-haired youth chuckled. All those who entered the Ancestral Baptism would naturally become Deities of water, and would also gain their innate divine ability.

"Hmph. The first one to transform is the one who absorbed the least amount of energy from the Dragonize Gem, and has the least potential." The bald, black-robed man couldn't help but snicker disdainfully.

"You...geeze. This junior just completed his Ancestral Baptism. Say something nice instead, can't you?" The silver-haired man laughed calmly. He, too, knew that although the other had said some unpleasant words, these words were true. The lesser the lineage, the lesser the elemental affinity to water, and the weaker the innate divine ability.

As time flowed on, one person after another in the Dragonize Pool became Deities. The vast majority of them completed the process in just two days. The second and third to last required three days before becoming a Deity. After the two of them became Deities...in the entire Dragonize Pool, only Linley remained, still 'slumbering'.

The twenty seven had gathered at the sides of the Dragonize Pool and were watching Linley within it.

"Wait slowly. From the looks of it, this Linley will need at least quite a few days before he will complete his transformation." The silver-haired youth said.

"I expect he'll take more time than Baruch did." The bald, black-robed man said.

Time flowed on. In the blink of an eye, eleven days had passed since Linley had entered the Dragonize Pool. Very, very few members of the Azure Dragon clan would take eleven days for the transformation. Linley remained the only person in the Dragonize Pool.

"Aaaaaaah!" Linley suddenly let out an agonized howl.

Immediately, the group of black-robed men surrounding the Dragonize Pool, as well as those twenty seven others, felt their hearts tremble. They immediately looked over. At this moment, draconic scales completely covered Linley's entire body, and savage spikes had sprouted out as well.

A terrifying aura drifted out.

"So painful!" Linley gritted his teeth. He felt as though every single cell in his body was exploding with terrifying power, and countless surges of energy were constantly merging inside his body. This exploding energy caused Linley to be unable to refrain from transforming.

The latent energy inherent in his mighty body continuously flowed out and merged like countless rivers that were flowing upwards.

Up, up, up!

Up into his mind!

At this moment, that soul-protecting Sovereign artifact was completely ineffective. This soul-protecting Sovereign artifact would defend against enemy attacks, but wouldn't defend against Linley's own energy.

This massive flood of energy poured directly into Linley's sea of consciousness, completely surrounding the souls of Linley's four clones.

In the sea of consciousness, that bizarre azure light began to glow like a halo. On multiple occasions, even as far back as when Linley was a Saint, this azure halo had saved him. But this time, the glowing azure halo was constantly growing more and more powerful!

The glowing azure halo grew more and more powerful, until it seemed to have transformed into the sun, illuminating the entire sea of consciousness.

The people by the side of the Dragonize Pool stared with wide eyes at this scene.

Around Linley's body, the phantom of an enormous Azure Dragon appeared, filling nearly the entire palace hall as it coiled around him. This Azure Dragon phantom hovered directly around Linley, and its illusory eyes actually swept the group of people by the side of the Dragonize Pool with its gaze.

"The Azure Dragon Phantom! It's actually the Azure Dragon Phantom! And what an incredibly clear Azure Dragon Phantom."

The black-robed men stared, slack-jawed.

As for Linley, he was currently opening his mouth, and as he did so, that Azure Dragon Phantom also opened its mouth, emitting a terrifying draconic cry....and as it did, a blurry azure energy halo suddenly spread out in every direction, filling the entire palace hall.

Every God and Demigod present suddenly froze, as though having lost all consciousness.

Even those black-robed Highgods could feel their souls be trapped in a very peculiar state.

The bald, black-robed man instantly regained his clarity of mind, then said in astonishment, "Innate divine ability, 'Dragon Roar', at such a terrifying level of power...and he is only a God. If he were a Highgod..."

"Rumble..."

The natural Laws suddenly descended.

Linley had become a Deity in water as well!

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 12, The Might of the Dragon Roar

These black-robed figures had long since grown accustomed to the sight of people becoming Deities at the Dragonize Pool. Naturally, it wouldn't surprise them. However, they currently were still astonished by the enormous Azure Dragon Phantom which had appeared behind Linley.

"Azure Dragon Phantom. A God is capable of manifesting the 'Azure Dragon Phantom'." These black-robed men were utterly dazed.

Much like the divine beasts 'Godeater Rat' and 'Suanni Lion', the divine beast 'Azure Dragon', when using its innate divine ability, would also have an illusion of its true form appear behind it. If they were true divine beasts, then when using this innate divine ability as a Demigod, the illusory phantom would still appear.

But the Azure Dragon clan was different.

This was because in the entire Azure Dragon clan, only the ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon', was a true divine beast, a true 'Azure Dragon'. As for his descendants, such as the clansmen of the second or third generation, all the way down to Linley...they only had the 'bloodline' of the Azure Dragon, but they weren't the true divine beast 'Azure Dragon'.

The power of their innate divine ability was far inferior to that of their ancestor.

But although it was inferior to their ancestor's, there were still varying levels of strength with regards to this innate divine ability amongst the descendants of the Azure Dragon clan.

This was because the innate divine ability was linked to one's spiritual energy. Thus, generally speaking, clansmen who had extremely powerful innate divine abilities would only just barely manifest the 'Azure Dragon Phantom' upon reaching the Highgod level, when their souls became more powerful.

As for those with weaker innate divine abilities, even after becoming Highgods, they still wouldn't be able to form an 'Azure Dragon Phantom'.

Only Gods with exceedingly powerful innate divine abilities were capable of forming an 'Azure Dragon Phantom'.

For example, the second generation members of the Azure Dragon clan, as Gods, were able to manifest the Azure Dragon Phantom. As for the third generation, only part of them were able to manifest the Azure Dragon Phantom as Gods.

"A God who is capable of manifesting the Azure Dragon Phantom." The black-robed men looked at each other, their gazes filled with shock.

"Rumble..."

To the side of Linley's original body, another Linley had appeared, hovering in the air, dressed in an azure-green robe and with a head full of azure-green hair, who emanated an aura of water. This was Linley's divine water clone, and it immediately entered Linley's original body.

The Azure Dragon Phantom had disappeared long ago.

“So this is what the Ancestral Baptism is all about.” Linley, his eyes closed, was sensing his sea of consciousness and his soul.

Deep within his mind, seated above that soul sea was his divine earth, fire, wind, and water clones. In the center of those four clones was that black stone, and above the black stone was the soul of Linley’s original body.

At the same time...

The entire soul sea was flooded with a thick, azure light.

In the Yulan continent, when Linley had only been a Saint, this azure light had saved Linley on multiple occasions. But afterwards, when Linley’s power had grown, the strength of this azure light had become far inferior to the soul attacks of others and unable to withstand them.

However, after this Ancestral Baptism, the power of this azure halo had increased ten-thousand-fold.

“So the innate divine ability is as marvelous as this.” Linley was incomparably surprised. “It isn’t just pure divine power, nor is it pure spiritual energy. When the spiritual energy and this azure aura combines, only then can this ‘innate divine ability’ be executed.”

Only now did Linley understand the reason why innate divine abilities could only be used by divine beasts, and why others couldn’t learn how to use them.

For example, Bebe's 'Godeater'.

For example, Dylín's 'Heaven Devourer'.

They were all divine beasts, causing their souls to have unique properties. The unique property of the Azure Dragon clan was this 'azure halo'. Linley was unable to understand what source of energy this azure halo was, exactly.

It wasn't divine power, nor was it spiritual energy.

After undergoing the Ancestral Baptism, Linley naturally gained insight into this innate divine ability, and naturally gained insight into one of the profound mysteries of the Laws of Water.

"This innate divine ability, 'Dragon Roar', has some similarities to my 'Blackstone Prison'. They both have an impact on the soul, rather than being killing techniques." Linley, after acquiring the 'black stone' at the Amethyst Mountains, was capable of using the black stone to exert a power that impacted the soul, causing enemies to enter a dazed state.

This 'Dragon Roar' also affected the soul.

"My innate divine ability, 'Dragon Roar', isn't as strong as the 'black stone' with regards to affecting the enemy." Linley had discovered the second difference now. Aside from the impact on an enemy's soul, his innate divine ability, 'Dragon Roar', had another, unique impact.

"Impacting speed?" Linley shook his head. "Wrong. It impacts...time. Right. It's time!"

The innate divine ability of the Azure Dragon clan, the 'Dragon Roar', didn't just impact the soul; it also contained the ability to impact 'time'. Although the strength of the effect on souls wasn't too great, the power it had to influence time was utterly monstrous.

Neither the Seven Elemental Laws nor the Four Higher Edicts had an impact on time.

Time was something which was utterly inviolable.

And yet...

The innate divine ability of the divine beast, 'Azure Dragon', had an impact on time. Most likely, only this sort of innate, intrinsic divine ability could have an impact on time.

Bebe's 'Godeater' allowed the direct devouring of divine sparks.

The Azure Dragon's 'Dragon Roar' influenced time.

Neither could be trained. Unfortunately, Linley wasn't a true Azure Dragon, and so the true power of the 'Dragon Roar' couldn't be fully unleashed.

"When I use the 'Dragon Roar', the impact on time is very minute, virtually negligible." Linley thought of the ancestor. "However, if it were the ancestor, a true 'Azure Dragon' who used this divine ability, the effect would definitely be terrifying."

Although his blood was very pure, it was still far from being comparable to his ancestor.

"Currently, the power of my soul isn't very great, so when I use this innate divine ability, the impact on others is very limited. Once I reach the Highgod stage and absorb a large amount of amethysts, my soul will strengthen by tens of times over, and the impact on time this innate divine ability has will definitely become more noticeable."

Linley knew very well how terrifying the power to influence time was.

"However, this Ancestral Baptism has already had a tremendous effect on my power." Linley's heart was filled with joy.

The greatest benefit Linley had reaped from this increase in power was that azure halo. The azure halo, combined with his spiritual energy, could not only execute his innate divine ability, it could also...be used for soul defense!

For example, even at the Saint-level, the azure halo had blocked soul attacks.

But now, after the Ancestral Baptism, the power of that azure halo had been multiplied ten thousand times over. Once it fused with his spiritual energy, the power of Linley's soul defense was now extremely shocking.

"Given my current soul defense with the damaged soul-protecting Sovereign artifact assisting it, most likely only Seven Star Fiends who specialize in soul attacks are able to pose a threat to me. But whether or not they can kill me is another story."

Linley was completely confident.

Within the Dragonize Pool, Linley opened his eyes. Those black-robed men as well as the twenty seven others were all staring at him in amazement. Linley looked around the Dragonize Pool, realizing that he was the only one left within it.

"I didn't realize I was so slow." Linley laughed calmly, then flew out.

Only now did the bald, black-robed man wave his hand, and that Dragonize Jewel immediately levitated out of the Dragonize Pool. Currently, only half of the Dragonize Jewel was azure in color, with the other half being translucent.

"Half of the energy was used up." The bald, black-robed man glanced in surprise at Linley.

"Make the arrangements to have these people be sent back." The bald, black-robed man said to the silver-haired man.

"Fine." The silver-haired man nodded.

Linley was quite delighted. Smiling, he followed after the silver-haired man, preparing to leave alongside him.

"Linley, hold it." The bald, black-robed man suddenly said.

"Huh?" Linley turned to look at him, puzzled.

The bald, black-robed man forced out a smile. "During the Ancestral Baptism, all by yourself, you absorbed half the energy of a Dragonize Jewel over the course of one night and half a day. As a God, when utilizing our innate divine ability, you were able to form an Azure Dragon Phantom. You are indeed a genius of our clan...make a trip with me. Later, the Elders will definitely want to meet you."

"Oh." Linley laughed as well.

Baruch had told him as well that after his Ancestral Baptism, because his bloodline was almost as pure as those of the third generation clansmen, he had been received by an Elder, and thus learned many things regarding the clan."

The twenty seven were immediately led away, while Linley followed the bald, black-robed man forward, passing through a walkway into a palace hall, then through yet another corridor before arriving at the eastern palace hall.

Within a private room that was deep within the eastern palace hall.

"Wait here for me." The bald, black-robed man said.

Linley nodded.

The bald, black-robed man immediately walked out.

Linley had a hint of a smile on his lips. The Ancestral Baptism definitely had been a great boon to him. His soul defense had received an unexpected, delightful increase in power, and as for the 'Dragon Roar', in the future, when his soul grew more powerful, he would be able to truly unleash its might as well.

"I hope that the Elder won't chat with me about all the various issues pertaining to the clan." Linley said to himself. "It will be quite boring to listen to it a second time."

In the hidden room, the bald man and the handsome youth were currently seated in the meditative position, awaiting the bald, black-robed man. Only when he entered did they open their eyes.

"You are so slow." The bald man said coldly. "Give me the Dragonize Jewel."

"Yes, Elder." The bald, black-robed man offered the Dragonize Jewel.

Upon seeing it, the bald man and the handsome youth were both shocked.

"Only half remaining?" The handsome youth immediately said.

"Right. This Ancestral Baptism had a genius named Linley. He took half a day and a night just to absorb the energy from the Dragonize Jewel, and only now did he complete the Ancestral Baptism." The bald, black-robed man said hurriedly.

The handsome youth and the bald man exchanged shocked glances.

"Emanuel [Yi'man'niu'er], yet another person with potential has appeared in our clan." The handsome youth sighed in praise.

"Quick, have him come over." The bald man shouted hurriedly.

"Yes." The bald, black-robed man immediately left.

Soon, Linley, dressed in a sky-blue robe and with his long brown hair casually flowing down his shoulders, walked in with a smile. Upon seeing these two people, Linley immediately bowed respectfully. "Linley greets the Elders."

"So it is you." The two had some recollection of Linley. It would be strange if they couldn't remember a God-level Deity participating in the Ancestral Baptism.

The handsome youth laughed, "Linley, your bloodline is very pure, completely comparable with our third generation clansmen. You absolutely cannot squander such excellent innate gifts. The clan needs you." As he spoke, he flipped his hand and produced a fairly thin book.

"The fall of our clan ten thousand years ago as well as our current crisis. Once you read this book, you will understand it all." The handsome youth, with a toss, made the book fly straight towards Linley.

Linley let out a secret sigh of relief. So he was just given a book. He had been worried he would have to listen to the story once again.

"It makes sense..." Linley said to himself. "If this has to be told to every single person with high potential or every single person who becomes a Highgod, wouldn't the Elders grow tired of it?" Linley took the book, pretending to flip through it.

"You can go back and read it later." The handsome youth laughed. "Remember, after reading it, destroy it. Don't allow those ordinary Demigods and Gods to learn of it. For now, it's best to let them worry less."

"Yes, Elder." Linley immediately responded.

"Linley." That bald man, 'Emanuel', also laughed. "Innate talent is one thing, but working hard and training is very important as well. Enough, you can go back and train. Remember...you are not permitted to use a divine spark. You have to rely on yourself to become a Highgod."

If a genius like him was to use a divine spark, that would be an utter waste.

"Yes." Linley immediately bowed, then turned and began to walk towards the outside.

"Emanuel, it's quite rare for us to be able to encounter such a genius." The handsome youth, 'Garvey', sighed in praise.

"Yes, it is quite rare. Let's go." The bald man, 'Emanuel', laughed as well, and then he rose to his feet. But as his gaze unconsciously swept across Linley, who had already reached the doorway, Emanuel's gaze suddenly turned sharp!

A look of astonishment appeared on his face as well!

He stared unblinkingly at Linley's right hand. As Linley was walking away, the movements of his hand occasional revealed a glimpse of a black ring...the Coiling Dragon ring.

"That's...the ring of the ancestor. A soul-protecting Sovereign artifact!"

The balding man's face instantly turned purple, and his entire body was shaking, his mind lost in a fog. "A soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. That's a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact!!!"

"Emanuel, what is it?" Garvey was rather puzzled.

By now, Linley had already pushed the door open and was walking out.

Only now did the bald man come to his senses, and he immediately shouted, "Linley, halt!!!"

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 13, Greed!

Linley was currently walking outside the door. His power had risen after the Ancestral Baptism, so naturally, he was quite happy.

“He’s calling for me?” Linley, hearing the shout, couldn’t help but be puzzled.

However, Linley still turned to look behind him, only to see the bald Elder’s face was completely red, and even his eyes had turned scarlet. The man now looked like a rapacious wolf. Linley couldn’t help but grow cautious, while at the same time, he opened his mouth and spoke, “Elder, please let me know what you need?”

“Emanuel, what’s going on?” The handsome youth said.

What’s going on?

Only now did Emanuel awaken from his excitement and regain his clarity. His face returned to normal, and he looked at Linley in front of him. In his heart, he knew: “The appearance of the Azure Dragon ring of the ancestor cannot be made public. I can’t let this Garvey learn of this.”

Emanuel was a member of the Assembly of Elders of the Azure Dragon clan.

He himself was a fourth generation member of the clan, and had lived for countless years. However, in terms of status, quite a few members of the Azure Dragon clan were higher than him.

"If the appearance of the ancestor's Azure Dragon ring was made public, there's no way it would become mine." Emanuel's thoughts whirled about in his mind, and then he made up his mind, laughing coldly in his heart. "Fortunately, this Garvey had never met the ancestor, and doesn't know what the Azure Dragon ring looks like."

Their ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon', as a Sovereign, naturally didn't meet very often with his descendants.

In the Azure Dragon clan, only the sons and daughters of the Azure Dragon, those second generation members, were very close to the Azure Dragon. The third generation members had met him a few times as well. A few fourth generation members had met him as well. As for the others...only a very few genius-level clansmen had been granted an audience by the ancestor.

Garvey had never even seen the ancestor. Naturally, he didn't recognize the Coiling Dragon ring.

After all, those who joined the Assembly of Elders had reached the Seven Star Fiend level, but that didn't mean they were born very early on.

"Emanuel, what are you thinking about?" Garvey asked.

"Oh. There's something I wish to discuss with Linley." Emanuel said with a laugh.

Linley couldn't help but grow puzzled. "I've never met him. What does he want with me?"

"If you want to chat with him, then just chat with him here." Garvey laughed, but Emanuel shook his head and said solemnly, "Garvey, I have something very important I wish to discuss with Linley. Garvey, please go back on your own for now. Let me speak with Linley alone."

"Not only do you want to chat, you want to chat with him alone?" Garvey was rather curious now.

Emanuel couldn't help but frown.

"Fine, fine." Garvey laughed. Since Emanuel had made the request, it wasn't convenient for Garvey to persist. "Then I'll head out first. Right, Emanuel. We need to have a good discussion regarding the upcoming visit of the Indigo Emissary. I'll wait for you outside the hall. Hurry up."

Emanuel immediately beamed. "Fine. I'll just chat right here in the hall. After I'm done, I'll immediately come out."

"Right." The handsome youth, 'Garvey', grinned towards the puzzled Linley. "Kid, work hard. I'll be waiting for you to join us in the Assembly of Elders." As he spoke, he left the private room, closing the door as he left.

"Hmph, hmph, now that Garvey is gone, the ancestor's ring will be mine." Emanuel couldn't help but feel excited. As he viewed it, this Linley was just a God. Even if a God had a 'soul-protecting Sovereign artifact', Emanuel could use a material attack to kill Linley. Naturally, he would then acquire the Sovereign artifact.

"Linley." Emanuel smiled in a very warm, friendly manner.

"Elder." Linley was highly suspicious. Why did this person want to speak with him alone?

As the saying went, men of talent were men of courage. Linley had fused three profound mysteries and fused with the 'black stone', and was very formidable to begin with. After the Ancestral Baptism, his one and only weakness, soul defense, had been improved upon significantly.

He had no fear of a Seven Star Fiend. Naturally, he was able to face this Emanuel calmly.

"Crackle..." Emanuel immediately set up his 'Godrealm', surrounding the entire private room with it.

Linley's face couldn't help but change. "Elder, what are you doing?"

Emanuel just smiled. "The conversation between us is very important. That's why I set up my Godrealm, to prevent others from eavesdropping."

"Elder, might I ask what matter you have to discuss with me, Linley?" Linley's attitude remained very meek and humble.

"Linley, first take a read through the book we just gave you." Emanuel smiled.

Linley was deeply puzzled, but he still flipped through that book discussing the history of the Four Divine Beasts clan. In front of Emanuel, Linley pretended to be astonished while flipping through it, but in his heart, he was pondering. "Previously, Emanuel had me leave, but now, suddenly, he asked me to stay. And have a private conversation? What is this about?"

While pretending to read and pretending to be astonished, he continued to ponder.

Linley currently had five souls, and so he could focus on doing five things at the same time. This pretense was thus quite simple for him.

"There's nothing about me that should have attracted his interest."

As Linley closed the book, he looked towards the bald Emanuel, then pretended to be 'astonished' and said, "Elder, our ancestor was a Sovereign? And all four Sovereigns died? How is this possible?"

"This is the truth." Emanuel said with certainty. "Linley, you now understand the danger our clan is in."

"Right. I understand." Linley's face was solemn.

This wasn't a pretense. Linley was indeed very worried for the clan's situation. After all, those eight great clans were staring at them like hungry tigers.

Emanuel said solemnly, "Linley, our Four Divine Beasts clan is facing this enormous crisis. Currently, what we need are true experts! True experts, aside from their own innate power, also need good divine artifacts. Linley, tell me, am I right?"

Linley nodded in agreement. "Divine artifacts are indeed important."

Emanuel looked at Linley. "Linley, you have a Sovereign artifact, right?"

Sovereign artifact?

These words struck Linley like a bolt of lightning. The look on Linley's face couldn't help but change as his head trembled. Only Bebe and Delia knew about his possession of a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact.

Linley immediately regained his clarity.

"Elder, you are joking with me." Linley stared at Emanuel.

Emanuel let out a chuckle. "Linley, in front of me, you can stop pretending. I'll tell you this – I am a fourth generation member of the Azure Dragon clan, and I have personally met the ancestor.

"So what if you have?" Linley was extremely cautious right now.

Emanuel looked towards Linley's finger, and Linley's face couldn't help but change. Emanuel laughed. "Linley, I'll tell you that the ring you have on your finger is the ring which the ancestor previously wore, a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact...the Azure Dragon ring!"

"Azure Dragon ring?"

One thing after another flashed through Linley's mind like lightning. In the blink of an eye, Linley understood so much.

"I had always suspected that the previous owner of this Coiling Dragon ring is a Sovereign. So it was my own ancestor. Right. Ten thousand years ago, the ancestor died, and the Coiling Dragon ring was thus lost." Linley now completely understood. "And that drop of blood which allowed my body to transform...so it was the blood of the ancestor."

The blood essence used to refine this Sovereign artifact was, without question, the blood of the Azure Dragon himself.

That drop of blood had caused Linley's blood to become very pure as well.

"No wonder there were three drops of water-type Sovereign's Might. The ancestor himself was a water-type Sovereign." Linley now completely understood what Emanuel wanted, and he looked at him. "This Emanuel had met with our ancestor, and so most likely he had seen the Coiling Dragon ring and was able to immediately recognize it."

Linley's thoughts spun rapidly, but his facial expressions had returned to normal.

"Oh, Azure Dragon ring?" Linley laughed. "Elder, since you recognize it, then I won't deny it. This is indeed a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, but that was just in the past. It no longer is! Elder, think about it. The ancestor died. If his soul-protecting Sovereign artifact wasn't broken, would he have died?"

Emanuel chuckled. "Hmph. When a Sovereign artifact is broken, it definitely won't be completely destroyed. Otherwise, this Azure Dragon ring would be completely shattered."

"Elder, you've said so much. What do you want?" Linley said solemnly.

Emanuel said solemnly, "Linley, given the rules of our clan, this Azure Dragon ring is one of the treasures of our Azure Dragon clan! A communal possession of the clan! If news that you are in possession of the Azure Dragon ring were to spread out, the clan would definitely confiscate it from you."

Linley frowned.

"Confiscate?" After knowing that this was the Sovereign artifact of their ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon', Linley was indeed worried about this possibility. This Coiling Dragon ring wasn't just a guarantee of his own strength; it was also a keepsake which cherished the memory of Grandpa Doebling.

There was no way Linley would give it up.

"Right. The clan is currently in a state of crisis. This sort of treasure definitely cannot be left on you, where it is wasted." Emanuel said solemnly. "A good treasure has to be matched with an expert. Only then can its full power be drawn out."

Linley let out a cold snort.

Emanuel continued, "If it is confiscated, this sort of treasure would be given to someone of at least the Seven Star Fiend level, and a formidable one. The Azure Dragon ring, in the hands of an ultimate expert...can cause a powerful Seven Star Fiend to become an Asura level expert."

Linley naturally understood this logic.

It was precisely because he himself had this Coiling Dragon ring that he could ignore the difference which Gods and Highgods had in terms of the soul.

"Therefore, Linley, for the sake of the clan, and for your own sake, please give me this Azure Dragon ring." Emanuel said.

"Do you think that is actually going to happen?" Linley chuckled.

Emanuel said hurriedly, "I understand that you can't bear to part with it. This is very understandable. How about this...I guarantee that so long as you give me the Azure Dragon ring, I will bestow upon you enormous wealth. A trillion inkstones. What do you say?"

A trillion inkstones?

This person really was taking him for an inexperienced God.

"No need." Linley shook his head.

Emanuel's face sank. "Linley, you should know that for me, killing you is simplicity itself." In his heart, however, Emanuel knew that first of all, it was forbidden for the Azure Dragon clansmen to casually kill each other, and secondly, he was worried that he wouldn't be able to kill Linley in one blow.

This was because Linley had a Sovereign artifact, hence his worry.

If Linley were to flee from this private room, things would be complicated. After all, outside the private room, there was Elder 'Garvey', as well as the black-robed men.

"Killing me is simplicity itself? Didn't you just say I have a Sovereign artifact?" Linley snickered. "I have a Sovereign artifact, but you'll be able to kill me in one blow? What's more, the rules of the clan state that clansmen are not permitted to kill each other."

"Hmph."

Emanuel let out a cold snort. "If I, an Elder, were to kill you, who would dare interfere? Linley, I'll give you a final chance. I am willing to use a drop of Sovereign's Might to trade for your Azure Dragon ring. In addition, I am also willing to create a contract bond with you and guarantee that I won't kill you to prevent the secret from being exposed. What do you say?"

"Sovereign's Might?" Linley glanced at Emanuel in surprise. "This baldy is actually willing to part with it?"

Linley knew very well that although Sovereign's Might was precious, it was far inferior to a Sovereign artifact. Sovereign's Might was a one-use item. Almighty Sovereigns were able to easily bestow more Sovereign's might. To Sovereign's, Sovereign's Might was something that they could provide as much of as was needed!

But Sovereign artifacts were different.

Sovereign artifacts were to Sovereigns what divine artifacts were to Deities. To create a Sovereign artifact, the Sovereign had to expend both time and effort. It was very difficult, which was why Sovereign artifacts were incomparably precious.

"Right. Sovereign's Might." Emanuel laughed coldly. "This drop of Sovereign's Might is one of my most important treasures. Linley, I hope you won't force me."

An attempt to cow him through threats?

Most likely, an ordinary God, when faced with this circumstance, would have surrendered in fear long ago and offered the Sovereign artifact. But Linley was different. Because...even if he had to fight Emanuel head on, Linley wouldn't fear him at all.

"Force you? How am I forcing you?" Linley smirked as he spoke.

Emanuel's gaze instantly grew cold, and rage began to fill his chest. The angry Emanuel let out a furious snort. "You are looking for death!" Ignoring all else, Emanuel sent a backhand blow directly towards Linley.

He was hoping to kill Linley with a single blow, then seize the Sovereign artifact.

"Boom..."

The power of this slap caused Linley to feel the whole world was turning dark.

Linley's right hand immediately transformed into a draconic claw, colliding with that palm.

"BANG!" Linley was sent flying outwards, smashing viciously against the door of that secret room. The door blew apart, and Linley immediately flew out. "Save me, Elder Garvey, save me!" Linley's voice was like a thunderclap, echoing throughout the main hall.

Emanuel's face instantly turned exceedingly ugly to behold. "He's going to die!"

"Swish!" Emanuel immediately flew out from the private room.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 14, The Challenge

As Linley was sent smashing to the corridor outside, a hint of blood appeared at the corner of his lips.

He immediately launched himself from the ground, transforming into a ray of light and scurrying towards the main hall. Linley laughed coldly to himself, "Emanuel thinks he can kill me? However, unless it becomes necessary, there's no rush for me to reveal my power." At the same moment Linley was fleeing, he was also shouting, "Elder Garvey, save me!"

The explosion of the door, and Linley's loud shout...given the hearing prowess of Highgods, how could they not hear this?

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

From afar, multiple figures flew over at high speed, with the handsome youth, Garvey, at their head.

"Don't even think about escape!" An angry voice rang out, and Emanuel's body flashed out in pursuit of Linley, as fast as an arrow.

Linley, seeing Garvey and the black-robed men, immediately fled behind them. Only now did he say, "Elder Garvey, Elder Emanuel wants to kill me!" When Garvey heard this, his handsome face became filled with anger.

"Emanuel, what are you doing!" Garvey thundered.

The bald Emanuel came to a halt, staring angrily at Linley, then looked at Garvey. "Garvey, step aside."

"Linley is our clansman. Why do you want to kill him?" Garvey was extremely upset. "So the reason you wanted to speak to him privately was so you could kill him."

"No, that's not it."

Emanuel said hurriedly. Emanuel, seeing Garvey appear, knew that this situation had just grown complicated. This was what he had feared the most. But he was astonished as well. "That palm blow of mine actually didn't kill Linley. Sovereign artifacts truly are powerful and useful in protecting one's life."

Linley had blood dribbling from his lips, and his face was ashen.

Emanuel had believed that the reason he wasn't able to kill Linley with one blow was because of the Coiling Dragon ring.

He didn't realize...

That the blood leaking from the corner of Linley's lips and his ashen face were all part of Linley's pretense.

"A simple palm like that, given my defense, won't be able to harm me at all." Linley snickered internally. "However, it's best to hide my true strength for now." After having arrived in the Four Divine Beasts clan, he had decided to first spend some time quietly accompanying his family and friends. After he became a Highgod, he would then go out to do battle.

In addition, after he became a Highgod, he would be of greater use.

He couldn't reveal his strength for now. Once he did, his peaceful days would be over.

"Linley, tell me, what is this about?" Garvey looked at Linley.

"Elder Garvey, I didn't offend Elder Emanuel at all, but for no reason at all, he wants to kill me." Linley said. The matter regarding the Coiling Dragon ring definitely couldn't be revealed. By now, Linley had also changed the appearance of the Coiling Dragon ring.

Even divine artifacts could be changed in appearance, and so Sovereign artifacts naturally could as well.

Linley regretted not having changed the appearance of the Coiling Dragon ring in the past. First of all, nobody had ever discovered it, and so he had not been vigilant. Secondly, as his power had increased, so too had his self-confidence. But who would have imagined that this would happen?"

"Emanuel?" Garvey looked towards him.

"Garvey, do you believe me or believe him?" Emanuel's rage was rising, and his face was exceedingly ugly. "This Linley offended me. Today, I will definitely kill him. Garvey, out of the way."

The black-robed men at the corridor were all surprised. This Emanuel really had lost his self-control.

"Emanuel!" Garvey barked coldly. "We are in the Skyrite Mountains! The rules of the clan are that we are not to wantonly slaughter each other. What are you doing!"

"Elder Emanuel, I truly wish to know why you want to kill me." Linley stared at Emanuel as he spoke.

"Right. Why do you want to kill him?" Garvey also looked at him.

Emanuel stared furiously at Linley, his eyes spitting fire. He was angry. Angry that Linley didn't know what was good for him. "I was willing to offer a drop of Sovereign's Might, but he still wasn't willing. He forced my hand." Emanuel had already made his decision.

"Elder Emanuel, why are you so angry? It seems as though I should be the angry one." Linley laughed coldly. "If push comes to shove, we can just fight to the end, until 'either the fish dies or the net breaks'!"

Emanuel's heart clenched.

What did he fear, right now?

Not Garvey's interference. He was afraid that Linley would publicly announce the fact that he had the Azure Dragon ring. Once this was made public...even if the clan didn't confiscate it, there was no way it would go to Emanuel.

"Fine, Linley." Emanuel snickered. "Aren't you the fierce one."

"Me, fierce? It is that you go too far." Linley replied.

The nearby Garvey as well as the black-robed men were mystified. They didn't know what Linley and Emanuel were talking about.

"Elder Emanuel, I, as a junior, would like to offer you a few words!" Linley stared at Emanuel, a hint of a smile at the corner of his lips. "Sometimes, it's best not to be too greedy. Greed can cause you to lose your life. What belongs to you is yours. What doesn't belong to you will never be yours."

Emanuel began to laugh from rage.

"Kid, I'll send your words right back to you." Emanuel said furiously. "Don't be too greedy. Greed can cause you to lose your life!"

"Oh? Lose my life?" Linley began to laugh. "Most venerable Elder, you are a powerful Seven Star Fiend, while I am just a mere God. I admit that my power is inferior to yours, and it wouldn't be hard for you to take my life, but you can't go too far and be too abusive."

"What are you two talking about!" Garvey said angrily.

"Emanuel." Garvey said, "If Linley truly has acted untowardly, you can go ahead and speak to the Assembly of Elders, who will definitely carry out a punishment against Linley."

Emanuel took a deep breath, then said slowly, "Linley, the offense you have given me is unpardonable. I...issue you a challenge to a life-and-death duel!"

"Life-and-death duel?"

Garvey and the black-robed men on the corridor were all stunned. Garvey stared, astonished, at Emanuel, then sent with divine sense, "Emanuel, what are you doing? He's just a God. If you really want to kill him, just report this to the Assembly of Elders. Why a life-and-death duel?"

But how could Garvey know that Emanuel wanted to personally kill Linley and rob him of his Azure Dragon ring?

Those black-robed men all looked at Linley, a hint of pity in their eyes.

"Can I ask, what is this life-and-death duel?" Linley's voice rang out.

Immediately, Elder Garvey and the others were all amazed. Linley didn't even know what a life-and-death duel was?

Garvey let out a secret sigh, feeling grief for Linley. In the end, he explained, "Linley, there are many people in the clan. With so many people together, it's impossible for there to be no conflicts at all. Once the conflicts reach a certain level where neither side will rest until the other is dead, then these conflicts will have become irreconcilable. Although the rules of the clan state that clansmen are not permitted to kill each other, when the hatred grows too great, sometimes even the mediation of the clan is useless."

"At this time, the only option is a 'life-and-death duel'!"

Garvey said solemnly, "The life-and-death duel is a brutal duel, with two people taking part and the duel only concluding upon one side's death. But of course, if the winner spares the loser's life, that's permitted as well. However, generally speaking, in a life-and-death duel, both sides won't end it until the other is dead."

Hearing this, Linley now understood.

He couldn't help but feel his rage grow. "This Emanuel really doesn't want to leave me any options at all."

"Can it be that I have to accept his challenge?" Linley asked.

"You can refuse it." Garvey said. "However, even if you refuse it, he can still make an application to the Assembly of Elders. Once the Assembly of Elders approves it, even if you refuse...you still have to take part in the life-and-death duel."

"Haha..." Linley began to laugh. "Assembly of Elders?"

Emanuel himself was a member of the Assembly of Elders. If Emanuel went to apply for a life-and-death duel, how could it not pass?

"Linley, if you regret it, it isn't too late yet." Emanuel laughed coldly. "My conditions haven't changed. I can spare your life." Emanuel's request was to use a drop of Sovereign's Might in exchange for the Coiling Dragon ring.

Linley looked at him. Simply looked at him, with eyes as cold as ice.

"It isn't too late for me if I regret it?" Linley had a hint of a satirical smile on his face.

"Right." Emanuel nodded.

"Emanuel, I'll tell you this." Linley snickered. "I refuse your life-and-death challenge!"

"Your refusal is futile." Emanuel said.

Linley snickered. "I'm refusing right now. As for whether or not the Assembly of Elders will approve your request, I can't be bothered to care. I'll tell you one thing as well...Emanuel, if you regret it now, it isn't too late for you. In the future, even if you regret it, it will be too late."

After speaking, Linley turned his head and left, his face a frozen mask.

Linley truly had the urge to kill now!

"Originally, I wanted to continue my peaceful life until becoming a Highgod. Emanuel, you forced me!" Linley wouldn't hesitate any longer. If he truly had to participate in a life-and-death duel, he would definitely kill Emanuel!

Seeing Linley's back as he walked away, Emanuel laughed coldly.

"Refuse? Will your refusal matter?" Emanuel chuckled. "When the time comes, it won't matter even if you regret it." Emanuel shook his head, then left, not paying any attention to Garvey.

Garvey let out a sigh.

"What a pity for this genius. He is going to die." Garvey didn't think Linley had any chance at life. Emanuel was a fourth generation member of the clan. His father was a third generation member, while his paternal grandmother was of the second generation.

In the entire Azure Dragon clan, there were only two members of the second generation, a pair of siblings, brother and sister. The first was the Patriarch of the Azure Dragon clan, the son of the ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon'. The other was the sister of the Patriarch.

In the clan, Emanuel's status wasn't that high, but his influence was significant.

As for Garvey? He had come countless tens of thousands of generations later. Although he was also a Seven Star Fiend, his influence was naturally inferior.

Late at night. The Violet Moon hung high in the sky.

Linley flew by himself on Dragon Avenue. He clearly remembered the way back home.

"This Coiling Dragon ring." Linley lowered his head, glancing at it. In his mind, he couldn't help but think back to so many scenes from his childhood.

Because of the Coiling Dragon ring, he had met Grandpa Doehring.

Because of Grandpa Doehring, he had become a powerful expert.

Over the many years, because of the Coiling Dragon ring, he was able to compensate for the difference in his soul when compared to Highgods. Because of the Coiling Dragon ring, he dared to do battle against Seven Star Fiends. Unconsciously...

His entire life had become intertwined with the Coiling Dragon ring.

"Nobody should even dream of trying to take my Coiling Dragon ring from me." Linley said softly.

"If I truly am forced to take part in a life-and-death duel." Linley's gaze was cold and clear. "I will definitely kill that Emanuel. Right now, he is the only one who knows that I have this Coiling Dragon ring. He definitely won't be so stupid as to spread the news. If I kill him, no one else will know about it."

That very day, Emanuel returned and immediately went to find the three Elders who were in charge of managing the 'life-and-death duels'.

Ordinary duels could be agreed to by three Elders.

"Emanuel, why did you summon the three of us in such a rush?" Two men, one woman. The three were dressed in resplendent azure armor with golden patterns, and a billowing cape covered with complicated magic runes.

Three Elders.

"There's a God who has offended me. He holds me in no regard at all." Emanuel said angrily. "I am going to kill him. I'm applying for a life-and-death duel. The three of you, help me out and approve this request." As he spoke, he handed over a piece of paper.

The three Elders glanced at the paper, then looked at each other.

This was a joke, right?

An Elder was going to engage in a life-and-death duel to kill a God?

The golden-haired woman laughed. "Emanuel, as someone who has a revered position as an Elder, how can you possibly squabble with the likes of a God?"

"I am definitely going to kill him." Emanuel said.

Another Elder, a silver-haired old man, laughed. "Emanuel, if you really want to kill him, just tell us the reason he offended you. We'll send people to go arrest him. In accordance with the rules of the clan, we can execute him for having offended an Elder. Why the need for some life-and-death duel? You, a venerable Elder, are going to duel a God. Isn't this laughable?"

"The three of you, just consider this being me, Emanuel, asking the three of you to help me out. Alright?" Emanuel said.

The three exchanged glances.

"Fine. We agree." The three Elders each withdrew a feather quill, recording their names on the paper.

Emanuel, seeing this, laughed. In his heart, he said to himself, "Linley, it's now too late for you, even if you regret it."

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 15, Life-And-Death Duel

The morning sun had just risen, and the sanguine light of the Blood Sun could be seen peeking through the thin mists of the gorge. Linley walked out from his room as well.

"The weather's not bad." Linley took a deep breath, letting the cool air fill his chest.

"Swoosh!" A human figure jumped down from above. "Boss, it seems you are in a good mood." Bebe laughed. Bebe lived on the second floor of this building.

"Yes, a pretty good mood. It's been eighty two years since we came to the Skyrise Mountains, and I haven't had a good battle this entire time, nor have I killed anyone. But I'm about to go kill someone and about to have a good battle. Of course my mood is good." Linley laughed.

Bebe was puzzled. "Boss, what do you mean by this?"

"No rush. You'll know soon enough." Linley said.

Bebe, seeing that Linley was intentionally being mysterious, couldn't help but purse his lips. At this time, Delia also walked out from the room, and Bebe immediately went to greet her. "Delia, the Boss says that he is about to engage in a battle and kill someone. Do you know what this is about?"

"Is that so?" Puzzled, Delia turned her head to look towards Linley.

Linley chuckled. Suddenly, the sound of the wind could be heard. He immediately raised his head to look.

Multiple figures flew down from the skies, all dressed in the battle armor uniform of the Azure Dragon clan. Linley laughed calmly. "They are here." Bebe and Delia raised their head to look, puzzled. They saw three azure armored warriors fly over.

"Linley!" The leader recognized Linley right away. Clearly, the Assembly of Elders, when giving the order, had provided a clear description of Linley's appearance as well.

"Everyone, is there something you need?" Linley said.

The leader of the azure armored warriors sighed inwardly. He, too, didn't understand how a God could have offended one of the lofty, high-ranked Elders. But he still said, "Linley, Lord Emanuel has issued a life-and-death challenge. The Assembly of Elders has already approved it. Come with us."

"Right now?" Linley was rather surprised.

The approval of the application by the Assembly of Elders was something which Linley had predicted long ago, but for the duel to start immediately was outside of Linley's expectations.

"The life-and-death duel will be held today during noon. Right now, you just need to get there in advance.” The azure armored warrior said. In his heart, he still felt some sympathy for Linley. After all, as he saw it...

Linley was a bottom-ranked figure of the clan, not too different from patrol warriors like them.

But although they sympathized for Linley, there was no way they could help out.

“Boss, what is it?” Bebe said frantically.

“Linley, what is this ‘life-and-death duel’?” Delia said urgently as well.

Linley laughed, “In our clan, an ‘Elder Emanuel’ insists on killing me. Fortunately, at that time, Elder Garvey was present, but in the end, Elder Emanuel still issued me a ‘life-and-death duel’. Either he dies or I die.”

“Elder?” Delia began to worry.

“Boss, are you confident?” Bebe asked.

They were certain of Linley’s strength, but the opponent was one of the clan’s Elders, after all. In the past eighty years, they had gained an understanding of the Assembly of Elders. To enter the Assembly of Elders, the first requirement was to reach the Seven Star Fiend level.

Linley sent mentally, “Delia, Bebe, don’t worry. If this was before my Ancestral Baptism, I wouldn’t be completely certain, but after having undergone the Ancestral Baptism, I have confidence.”

Delia immediately relaxed. She trusted Linley.

“Linley, is the reason he wants to kill you...because of the Coiling Dragon ring?” Delia sent through divine sense.

Linley nodded, sending back through divine sense, “I myself learned just now that this Sovereign artifact, the Coiling Dragon ring, had actually belonged to the ancestor of our Azure Dragon clan. Emanuel recognized it at a single glance.”

Bebe and Delia now both understood.

They both could understand the powerful allure of a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. No wonder Emanuel was acting this way.

“Linley, can you leave now?” The azure armored warrior said.

These azure armored warriors actually weren’t in a rush. The life-and-death duel would only be held at noon. For Elder Emanuel, he would just come over from his residence when the time came. But Linley, as the person of lower status, had to arrive earlier.

“It doesn’t start until noon. Why the rush?” Bebe said unhappily.

“The three of you, what are you doing?” Several figures flew over at high speed. It was Baruch and several other clansmen. They, too, had begun to worry after seeing the azure armored warriors fly over. These azure armored warriors' arrival definitely portended an important matter.

"Elder Emanuel is about to initiate a life-and-death duel with Linley. The Assembly of Elders has already approved it." An azure armored warrior said.

Baruch and the others were stunned, their eyes filled with disbelief.

"The Elder and Linley?" They couldn't accept this.

"A revered, venerable Elder...how can he challenge Linley to a life-and-death duel?" Hazard said furiously. Linley's arrival had caused the status of their Yulan branch to rise considerably in recent days. In addition, all of them were fond of this descendant of theirs, Linley.

An Elder, challenging a God? This was too unfair!

"The Assembly of Elders has already approved it. There's no way to change it." The leader of the azure armored warriors said. "Unless you can ask the Patriarch to intervene."

In the Azure Dragon clan, without question, the person of the highest status was the Patriarch. He was the son of their ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon'. When the Azure Dragon had been alive, he had naturally expended enormous amounts of effort in training and cultivating his son. One could imagine how powerful the Patriarch was.

In the clan, his word was supreme.

"Linley, what is it?" Tarosse, Dylin, and the others flew out. Others immediately began to explain the situation to them. Tarosse and the others were astonished as well that an Elder of the clan was actually challenging Linley to a life-and-death battle."

"Don't worry, everyone." Linley said calmly, then looked at the azure armored warrior. "Let's go."

The leader of the azure armored warriors nodded.

"Can we go watch the duel?" Delia immediately asked.

The leader of the azure armored warriors glanced at the crowd, then nodded. "This is Linley's last battle anyways. You can go watch it if you want." As he spoke, the three azure armored warriors took Linley with them, flying into the air.

Delia, Bebe, Baruch, as well as even Tarosse, Dylin, and the others all immediately followed.

An Elder of the clan was going to initiate a life-and-death duel with a God. This news wasn't actually known by many throughout the various levels of the clan. At the higher levels, however, this news spread very quickly, especially amongst the Elders themselves, who quickly learned of this.

"Emanuel, that kid...he's going to engage in a life-and-death duel with a junior? Did I mishear something?" A muscular man with short azure hair said with a frown.

"Uncle, there's no mistake. Emanuel really is going to have a life-and-death duel with a God." The other person, a tall man with brown hair, spoke out. The two of them were dressed in that azure armor with golden embroidery, as well as the cape with unusual magic runes.

Both were Elders of the clan.

"Let's go take a look." The azure haired man said.

"Today, quite a few people will be watching." The brown-haired man laughed.

"Will the Patriarch attend?"

"The Patriarch most likely doesn't even know about this. I hear that today, he is together with the Indigo Emissary. This visit by the Indigo Emissary seems to be regarding a rather weighty matter." The brown-haired man said, rather puzzled.

"An important affair? Could it be that we are about to start fighting with the eight great clans?" The azure-haired man was rather worried.

"I'm not sure. We'll know when the Patriarch returns." The brown-haired man shook his head.

While chatting, the two flew towards the direction of 'Death Valley', the place which the Azure Dragon clan used for carrying out 'life-and-death duels'.

Quite a few people had arrived at Death Valley today. Aside from the high level members of the clan and Linley's people, there were also a large number of patrol warriors who knew about this matter. Bored, they came to watch this battle.

This was an Elder against a God!

Something like this was something which they wouldn't see even in a hundred million years within the clan.

"That Emanuel really does put on airs." Bebe said unhappily. "We've already arrived, but he still hasn't shown himself. Perhaps it really will be like what the azure armored warriors said and that he won't come out until noon."

Linley laughed as he stood above Death Valley. "Bebe, don't be impatient."

"Linley, you seem completely confident." Tarosse laughed.

"I had wanted to live the peaceful life for a bit longer, after having returned to the Azure Dragon clan. It seems that won't be possible any longer." Linley swept his gaze across Death Valley. Currently, quite a few Elders of the clan had already arrived. But of course, most of the spectators were azure armored warriors.

There were thousands of azure armored warriors present, and they were all chatting amongst themselves.

"I hear that today, the God who is being challenged by the Elder to a life-and-death duel is named Linley. Which one of those guys is Linley?"

"That one, the one with brown hair. The one standing next to the kid with the straw hat." Someone immediately pointed him out. Amongst the patrolling guards who had come to watch this duel, information regarding Linley had quickly spread out.

"What a pity. A God is going to die today."

"I wonder why Elder Emanuel is acting this way towards a God. If he wants to kill a God, he doesn't need to go to all this trouble."

"The Elder is going a bit too far. Linley is quite impressive as well, that he actually has the courage to come."

It was natural for people to pity the weak, and of course the patrolling guards were also considered commoners within the clan, those of the lowest rung. In the bottom of their hearts, they were filled with both fear as well as respect for those venerable, lofty Elders. It was only natural for them to feel sympathy for Linley and stand on his side.

But of course, although in their hearts, they stood with Linley, they wouldn't dare display it.

"Elder Emanuel has arrived!" Someone suddenly called out.

Immediately, everyone turned to look. Linley, hearing the commotion, also turned his head to look. From mid-air, the bald Emanuel, dressed in the garb reserved for Elders, came flying down alongside several other Elders.

"They finally came." Linley looked at him.

Emanuel looked back at him. "He's bold at least." Emanuel had a hint of a smile at the corner of his lips. He swept his gaze across Linley, and saw the flash of light from the ring on Linley's finger. He couldn't help but grow excited.

He knew that was a Sovereign artifact!

"Fortunately, he didn't flee last night." The previous day, Emanuel had ordered that the gorge be completely sealed off from above, precisely to defend against Linley fleeing.

"In accordance with the rules of the clan, once conflicts reach an irreconcilable level, a life-and-death duel will be initiated. No regrets in death! Today, the parties to this life-and-death duel are Emanuel and Linley!" An Elder hovered in midair and said in a loud voice.

The entire Death Valley became silent, with no one saying a word.

"Gentlemen, make your preparations." The Elder said calmly.

Emanuel flew over gracefully to the center of Death Valley, immediately looking arrogantly towards Linley.

"Boss, go kick that Elder's ass and kill him." Bebe sent through divine sense.

"Linley, be careful." Delia said.

Linley just laughed calmly, then flew straight to the center of Death Valley as well, staring directly at the distant Emanuel. In the entire Death Valley, everyone, Elders and patrolling warriors alike, had fallen silent.

"Begin, then." The Elder shouted.

Linley's face instantly turned solemn.

"Linley, as long as you admit defeat, I can spare your life." Emanuel floated down, laughing calmly as he spoke, as though he held Linley's life in his hand.

"Admit defeat?"

Linley let out an emotionless chuckle. "Today is a life-and-death duel. Either you die or I die."

Immediately, there was an enormous commotion. The Elders and the patrolling warriors were all rather astonished. As they saw it, Linley was going to die for certain. For Emanuel to be able to say what he had just said could already be considered quite benevolent and merciful. But Linley had actually refused.

"Hmph. It is you who is asking for death." Emanuel's face immediately turned cold.

Suddenly, Emanuel frowned. From the corner of his eyes, he noticed Delia, Bebe, Cesar, and the others standing at the corner of Death Valley.

"These people look rather familiar. It seems I've seen them somewhere before." Emanuel had this sudden thought, but instantly, the thought disappeared. After all, a battle was about to begin. He couldn't lose his concentration.

"BOOM!" An explosion of energy.

Linley's entire body was instantly covered with a large number of draconic scales. Those azure-golden scales stretched across his entire body as those fierce spikes erupted from his forehead and spine. His draconic tail, flashing with metallic light, began to sway gently.

"Come!" Linley stared coldly with his dark golden eyes towards his opponent.

"It's him?" Elder Garvey was shocked.

"It's him!" The faces of the ten or so Elders who were watching from afar instantly changed.

The scryer recording which had spread to them from Miluo Island. All of the high level members of the Azure Dragon clan had viewed it. They all knew...that in the Infernal Realm, there was an expert of the Azure Dragon clan whose body emitted sharp spikes when Dragonformed.

The members of the clan had never before seen this sort of transformation. After all, in normal circumstances, how could the descendants of the Four Divine Beasts clan be forced to drink the dragon's blood of a magical beast of the ninth rank, an Armored Razorback Wurm, in order to activate Dragonblood in their veins?

The formerly confident Emanuel's face immediately changed as well.

"It's him! That powerful, mysterious clansman of ours who appeared in Miluo Island!" Emanuel's mind was in a state of chaos now, and then he glanced sideways at Delia, Bebe, and the others. "Right. Now I remember where I saw them. In that scryer recording! When that enormous cube was chopped apart, those people were by the side of that clansman of ours!"

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 16, No Mercy!

In the air above the Skyrise Mountains. A tall, powerful figure slashed through the skies, his long robe fluttering as he arrived to a high point above Dragon Avenue, at the 'Dragonhead' location, where there was an enormous castle.

His azure hair fluttered in the breeze. His cold, grim face appeared to have been chiseled out by knives. This person descended directly in front of the castle gates.

The patrolling soldiers in front of the castle gate, upon seeing this person, immediately bowed with respect. "Patriarch!"

The person was the awe-inspiring Patriarch of the Azure Dragon clan, the number one expert of the Azure Dragon clan...Gislason [Gai'si'lei'seng] Redding! The son of the Sovereign 'Azure Dragon'. Gislason's power was simply infathomable.

"Mmm. Why are none of the Elders present in the castle?" Gislason frowned. He had been able to instantly tell that the castle had no Elders within it.

"The Elders all went to Death Valley to watch a life-and-death duel." A patrol warrior immediately replied.

"Life-and-death duel?" Patriarch Gislason frowned. "A single life-and-death duel attracted so many Elders? What's this about?"

"Elder Emanuel initiated a life-and-death duel against a God named Linley." The patrol warrior said.

"Linley? A God?" Gislason was utterly confused. "A venerable Elder, engaging in a life-and-death duel with a God? Hmph." A cold snort. The Patriarch 'Gislason' transformed into a streak of light, flying at high speed towards Death Valley.

At this moment, the situation at Death Valley was very peculiar.

The duel had begun, but Elder Emanuel, who clearly should have had the upper hand, was actually hesitating. He hadn't attacked yet, and his face was filled with shock, fear, anger, and regret!

"It's actually him! It's actually him!!!"

Emanuel was utterly enraged. "He has the Azure Dragon ring. His soul defense is definitely very powerful. But his body..." Emanuel had originally been planning to use 'material attacks' to gain victory. He was very confident, as his own body was very powerful. But he had seen the scryer recording...

Emanuel knew very well that Linley's body was even tougher than his!

Who would have imagined that Linley was actually that expert who had appeared at Miluo Island.

"Emanuel, what is it? You want to let me go first?" Linley laughed coldly.

Instantly, the entire Death Valley buzzed with conversation. Those patrol warriors, in particular, were puzzled as to why Emanuel still hadn't attacked.

"Linley..." Emanuel wanted to say something.

"Since you are letting me go first out of courtesy, Elder, then I'll go first." Linley said coldly, and then he exploded with speed, transforming into a blur that slashed through the skies. Emanuel immediately let out an explosive shout...

"Rumble..." The world suddenly gave birth to enormous watery waves, and these waves swept down towards Linley. And then, instantly, the wave transformed into mist, ensconcing Linley within. For a moment, Linley wasn't able to see what was going on in front of him.

"Swish!" "Swish!" "Swish!"

Sharp icy bolts suddenly emerged from the mist, all of the icy bolts arcing in curved lines. The countless icy arrows were actually all arcing in different curved lines towards Linley, and as the icy arrows drew near, they actually tore the skies apart...

Multiple tears in space appeared.

"He lives up to being an Elder." Linley said to himself.

Linley didn't even dodge. He just stood there in mid-air, like a celestial divinity.

Rays of divine earth power emerged from Linley, sweeping outwards with Linley at the center. Immediately, that dim earthen yellow light spread out, forming an enormous sphere that was five hundred meters in diameter. Emanuel was unable to dodge, and he was immediately trapped within.

Blackstone Space!

The terrifying gravitational pull, when applied to those icy arrows, caused their direction to change slightly. This slight change in direction caused the vast majority of the icy arrows to very naturally miss their mark, and be unable to converge on the target.

"Crunch!" "Crunch!" "Crunch!"

Eight icy arrows struck Linley, but a clear sound like metal clashing on metal rang out. The icy arrows immediately shattered, while only a few white spots were left on Linley's draconic scales.

"What!" Emanuel's face changed dramatically.

Although he had been mentally prepared already, he was still astonished at Linley's defensive power.

"Terrible!" Emanuel could feel that his body was under the effect of that inexhaustible gravitational power. He immediately wanted to throw it off, but in an instant, the downwards gravitational pull suddenly transformed into a pull towards Linley's direction.

"You want to flee?" Linley let out an angry laugh, then threw himself towards Emanuel.

Emanuel's speed was naturally inferior to Linley, now that he also had to fight off the gravity.

"How did this come to pass?" The thousands of patrol warriors were all flabbergasted. This life-and-death duel which they had been certain was going to be one-sided was indeed one-sided, but the person who had the advantage was that 'God'."

"This Linley, how can he..." These people only stared, their tongues tied.

"Linley. He isn't a God. He definitely isn't."

For now, let's ignore the stupefied patrol warriors. Those Elders who were watching the battle from the side, after seeing Linley's transformation, grew certain in their hearts.

"Emanuel is doomed, this time!"

"He's kicked a steel board this time."

Those Elders all maintained their silence. After all, Emanuel was participating in a life-and-death duel. It wasn't appropriate for them to intervene.

"Bastard." Trapped in the gravitational sphere, Emanuel was like an ordinary person trapped in quicksand, finding movement incredibly difficult. Linley, however, was drawing near at astonishing speed. Emanuel didn't dare to engage in close-quarters combat with Linley.

"Aaaaaah!"

Emanuel seemed to have gone insane as he let out a bellow.

"Crackle..." Strangely, a large amount of ice appeared out of nowhere, forming an enormous, thick wall of ice directly in front of Emanuel, the blocks of ice flashing with dazzling light. This wall of thick ice was also affected by the powerful gravity...

And they flew at high speed against Linley!

Not only was the wall of ice affected by the gravity, Emanuel himself also intentionally sent the ice wall flying towards Linley.

In an instant, the ice wall reached Linley's body.

"Break!" Linley let out a low growl. His right fist, carrying boundless power, utilized the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength' of the Laws of the Earth, smashing down viciously against one point on the icy wall.

"BANG!" The entire icy wall trembled, then exploded into countless shards of ice.

As Linley was flying past those shattered shards of ice, Emanuel had managed to flee to the edges of the gravitational field. But right at this moment, Emanuel actually stopped fleeing, turning and letting out a low roar...

Suddenly, an Azure Dragon Phantom appeared behind Emanuel, which stared at Linley with a pair of icy eyes, preparing to let loose a low roar.

Innate divine ability – Dragon Roar!

"Not good." Linley's face changed.

A blurry azure light instantly shot towards Linley, who felt his head grow numb for a moment before he instantly regained clarity. But Linley discovered...that both Emanuel as well as the countless distant spectators suddenly began to move much faster.

"Time?" Linley immediately understood.

In that instant, the region where Linley had been had its time slowed down. For every ten seconds which passed for others, one second would pass for Linley. This allowed Emanuel to flee from Linley's gravitational field.

"I finally escaped." Emanuel immediately flew to the far end of Death Valley.

"Emanuel, you won't be able to flee." Linley flew over.

"Halt!" Emanuel furiously shouted.

Linley was startled, but he still halted. With a cold laugh, he said, "Emanuel, what, you have something you want to say?"

"I acknowledge your strength. I admit defeat. Let's just bring an end to this life-and-death duel." Emanuel sent through divine sense. "It's my fault for being blind. I didn't realize you were an expert. Let's just leave it here."

"Leave it here?" Linley threw himself forward once more.

"Linley, I don't want that Azure Dragon ring anymore." Emanuel said hurriedly. "I originally thought you were a God. Who would have imagined...that this Azure Dragon ring, when carried by you, can still unleash such tremendous power. I won't try to take it."

Linley just laughed coldly.

When Emanuel had thought he was weak, Emanuel wanted to kill him. But now he was submitting tamely. However, without a doubt, currently the only outsider who knew that Linley was in possession of the Coiling Dragon ring was Emanuel. If he killed Emanuel, then there was no longer any danger of outsiders finding out.

Kill!

"I admit defeat!" Emanuel's voice rang out throughout Death Valley.

"Eh?" Linley was stunned.

Emanuel was actually so shameless as to directly admit defeat in the midst of a life-and-death duel. "Can it be that this Emanuel doesn't know that there are only two possible outcomes of a life-and-death duel? One is fighting to the death, while the other is the victor sparing the life of the loser!"

Admitting defeat in a life-and-death duel was meaningless!

"He admitted defeat?" The many patrolling warriors and Elders were all astonished. As for Delia, Bebe, and the others, they grew excited.

"Linley, since Emanuel has admitted defeat, just spare him." An Elder said loudly. But even he couldn't break the rules of a life-and-death duel. Only Linley could make the decision to spare Emanuel.

"Right, Linley. He's admitted defeat. Just forget it." The other Elders spoke out as well.

At present, in their hearts, they had already begun to consider Linley as an expert on the same level as them.

Although Emanuel felt humiliated in his heart, he still knew very clearly:

"This Linley's body is so incredibly powerful, and he has a Sovereign artifact for soul defense. Although the Sovereign artifact is damaged, it still isn't something I can break through."

Emanuel couldn't see any hope of victory for himself.

He didn't want to die!

"Spare him?" Linley's dark golden eyes had a cold light flash through them. Suddenly, a terrifying howl rang out, and Linley's body slashed through the skies, charging towards the distant Emanuel. Showing no mercy at all!

"You forced me into a life-and-death duel, and now you want me to spare you? In your dreams!" Linley's furious roar echoed nonstop throughout Death Valley.

Emanuel immediately turned and fled, but Emanuel didn't leave the confines of Death Valley. If a person was to truly violate the laws of a life-and-death duel and flee out of Death Valley, the entire Azure Dragon clan would chase after him, and he would, without any question, die.

Thus, he could only dodge and evade within Death Valley.

Linley pursued at high speed.

"You won't be able to escape." Linley, seizing the opportunity, once again unleashed his Blackstone Space, directly capturing Emanuel within the pull of his gravitational sphere. Emanuel's speed immediately slowed dramatically, and Linley laughed coldly as he charged over.

But right at this moment...

"Swoosh!" Emanuel threw out a ray of white light from his hand.

"Crackle..." Where the white light passed by, space split apart.

Linley didn't dodge at all, directly sending a palm to smash towards that light. "BANG!" Linley just felt his right hand completely go numb. His draconic scales split apart, and fresh blood began to leak out. That white light, however, was completely destroyed as well.

Despite this, Linley didn't slow down.

"Linley, you can't kill me." Emanuel was growing frantic now, but within that Gravitational Space, his speed was far inferior to Linley's.

"Die, then." Linley came for him.

"STAY YOUR HAND!" A furious roar sounded out. Linley felt as though this roar bored directly through his mind, causing his head to grow slightly dizzy. Linley couldn't help but pay attention to the air above him. And in the air above...

A man dressed in an azure robe with many embroidered patterns was descending, his long azure hair fluttering in the wind.

His gaze was like thunder, and he was staring directly downwards.

"Patriarch!" Emanuel was overjoyed. He wouldn't have to die.

"Patriarch!" Those Elders, upon seeing this person, all immediately bowed respectfully.

"Patriarch!" Those thousands of patrolling warriors all immediately bowed in respect as well.

Linley's heart trembled. "Patriarch?" However, seeing that Emanuel was not too far away, and how he had already relaxed, the murderous intent emerged once more in Linley's heart. "This Emanuel cannot be spared!" With a 'swish', Linley charged over.

Emanuel's face changed dramatically. "Linley, you..." He never imagined that Linley would dare disobey the orders of the Patriarch.

What he didn't realize was...

Linley had joined the Azure Dragon clan less than a century ago, and so he didn't have a clear idea of what the Patriarch of the Azure Dragon clan represented, nor did he feel much fear towards the man. He wasn't like Elder Emanuel and the other Elders. In their eyes, the Patriarch was an invincible expert.

The commands of the Patriarch were not to be disobeyed.

Linley's right draconic claw landed mercilessly towards Emanuel, and within the range of that gravitational pull, Emanuel couldn't dodge at all.

"CLANG!" Suddenly, another draconic claw appeared, clashing directly with Linley's scale-covered right hand. Linley just felt his entire right arm tremble violently, and his fingers immediately lost all feeling. That draconic claw, with a flipping movement, trapped Linley's own right hand.

Linley raised his hand to look. It was the awe-inspiring Patriarch!

"Wasn't he over there just now? How could he be so fast?" Linley didn't dare believe that the Patriarch's speed could be so incredibly fast.

"I told you to stay your hand, and yet you still attack? What audacity!" The Patriarch's gaze was like ice as he stared at Linley. The Patriarch's draconic scale covered right hand grabbed Linley, and Linley actually had the feeling that wasn't able to resist at all.

This was the first time...

The first time Linley had encountered a person whose body and physical strength completely, utterly outclassed his own!

The number one expert of the Azure Dragon clan...the Patriarch, 'Gislason Redding'!

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 17, Prestige

Everyone in Death Valley was utterly silent. The prestige and aura emanating from the Patriarch, Gislason, caused everyone present to feel pressure.

“What tremendous strength.” Linley’s right hand was numb and trembling slightly. He was like a little chick who had been seized by a great eagle, completely unable to fight back. In fact, the arm which the Patriarch had seized was actually slightly throbbing with pain. The power of this Patriarch was tremendous!

“Patriarch, this Elder Emanuel challenged me to a life-and-death duel. The Assembly of Elders approved it.” Linley said in a neither hostile nor submissive manner.

“The Assembly of Elders approved it?” The Patriarch, Gislason, glanced sideways at the distant elders, none of whom dared to make a sound. In their hearts, they felt misery, especially those three who had approved this application. How could any of them have known that Linley was so strong?

“So what if they approved it? Didn’t you hear my order just now?” Gislason stared fiercely at Linley.

Linley was stunned.

Emanuel also said, “Linley, in our Azure Dragon clan, nobody can disobey the commands of the Patriarch. What the Assembly of Elders has approved, the Patriarch can, with a word, forbid. You actually dared to disobey!"

From the corner of his eyes, Linley noticed the look on the faces of those distant Elders, then glanced at the look on Emanuel's face. He couldn't help but sigh to himself. "It seems within the Azure Dragon clan, the power of this Patriarch is extremely high, vastly outstripping that of the Assembly of Elders."

When a person's power reached a certain level, an entire clan would easily become a place where his word alone was supreme!

In the Azure Dragon clan, the word of Gislason reigned supreme!

"Patriarch, I've arrived in the Azure Dragon clan less than a century ago. There are many things regarding the clan which I am not aware of," Linley said directly.

"Oh. Less than a century." The Patriarch, Gislason, frowned.

"Linley, you dared to disobey the orders of the Patriarch. This has nothing to do with how long you have been in the Azure Dragon clan. The commands of the Patriarch are not to be disobeyed...you ignored the order of the Patriarch, which means you have no respect for him." Emanuel angrily barked.

After saying these things, Emanuel didn't continue to speak. He knew that disrespecting the Patriarch was a tremendous, grave sin.

Linley, hearing this, couldn't help but feel his anger surge yet again.

"Whoosh!" A flickering blur.

"WHAP!" A palm slapped heavily against Emanuel's face, and Emanuel was hit so hard that his entire body was twisted. Blood flew everywhere as Emanuel fell to the ground, and then, terrified and confused, looked at the Patriarch, Gislason. He didn't understand why the Patriarch had struck him!

"Shut your mouth!"

Gislason stared at him coldly. "You, a venerable Elder, are actually still not aware of the mistake you have made? Today, even if he killed you, you would have no one to blame but yourself. I haven't even punished you yet, and yet you are here babbling. Do you really think I'm afraid to kill you?"

Emanuel shuddered, not daring to say another word.

Linley couldn't help but be surprised. "It seems as though this Patriarch isn't just one-sidedly supporting this Emanuel. Given this Patriarch's temper, it seems as though no matter who you are, you'd best not offend him." Linley wasn't a rash person either.

This was the only son of their ancestor, the Azure Dragon. The man who had been the Patriarch of the Azure Dragon clan for countless years! The person in the clan whose word was law, the leader of the entire Four Divine Beasts clan!

How could authority like his be violated?

Gislason glanced sideways at Linley and Emanuel, then at the distant group of Elders. He couldn't help but let out a cold snort. "The two of you, and you Elders. Follow me!" As he spoke, Gislason flew into the air.

"Kid, you are in for it." Emanuel glanced at Linley. "The Patriarch hates it when people challenge his authority." And then, he flew into the air as well.

Linley also glanced into the distance. Those Elders all followed behind, not one of them daring to make any sound.

"I wonder what type of person this Patriarch is." Linley had no choice but to fly along as well. In that short exchange he had just had, he was able to tell that the power of the Patriarch far outstripped his own. For the Patriarch to kill him definitely wouldn't be difficult.

Right now, he was here in the Skyrite Mountains along with all of his friends and family. It was best just to swallow his anger at present.

Linley turned to glance at Delia, Bebe, Tarosse, and the others, all of whom were back at Death Valley staring at him, their eyes filled with worry.

"Boss, be careful. Don't anger that Patriarch. I have the feeling he's not a good person to piss off." Bebe sent through their spiritual link worriedly. "That Patriarch's gaze caused even me to feel terror. Honestly."

"I know. Don't worry. You all go back for now." Linley sent back spiritually.

At the same time, Linley also followed Emanuel and the Patriarch together. Gislason himself flew up in front by himself, not saying a single word, while the Elders and Linley also followed without making a single sound, feeling quite pressured.

"Linley, in a while, when chatting with the Patriarch, be careful of what you say. Don't make the Patriarch angry." The handsome youth, 'Elder Garvey', drew near to Linley and sent through divine sense.

"Thank you." Linley sent back through divine sense.

"Don't think this is a small matter. Let me tell you this. The Patriarch hates it when clansmen kill each other. In addition, he will not accept anyone disobeying him. In the entire clan, only the Grand Elder is able to sway the Patriarch." Garvey said solemnly. "If you disobey his will just a single time further, even if the Grand Elder comes, she won't be able to rescue you."

Linley nodded gratefully.

"Elder Garvey, how do you think the Patriarch will deal with me?" Linley wasn't confident. After all, he had never met or spoken to this Patriarch. Although in this short period of time, he was able to tell that the Patriarch was extremely domineering, he didn't know anything else.

"Given that our clan is currently in a state of crisis, I expect that the Patriarch probably won't kill you. He'll just punish you." Garvey sent back.

Linley felt slightly more settled.

Moments later, the Patriarch Gislason as well as the various Elders reached the top of the Azure Dragon clan's 'Dragon Avenue', where a large castle stood. This ancient castle's doors were open, and the guards all bowed respectfully.

This group, with the Patriarch leading them, slipped into the castle.

The main hall of the castle. The Patriarch sat high up above them on the throne, while the Elders and Linley stood beneath the throne.

"He's like an emperor meeting with his subjects." Linley, seeing this, became all the more aware of the status the Patriarch had in the clan. In some clans, the elders of the clan would have tremendous power. But in the Azure Dragon clan, it was completely different.

"Hmph!" The Patriarch, Gislason, stared downwards. He couldn't help but let out a cold, icy snort. "I said long ago that given the crisis our clan is in, what we need to do is work to eradicate those eight great clans. Our clansmen should not be committing fratricide against each other. Even if you are to die, you should die in battle against the eight great clans!"

"For two of the clan's experts who are at the Seven Star Fiend level to battle each other requires the agreement of the entire Assembly of Elders, or my agreement, before the application can be approved. What?

Has the entire Assembly of Elders agreed to their life-and-death duel?" Gislason said furiously.

Immediately, a silver-haired elder who was standing in the front said clearly, "Father, this Linley had hid his power quite deeply. We had all previously viewed him as being just a God. Thus..."

To the clan, a God was nothing much.

But Seven Star Fiends were precious to the clan. Permitting two Seven Star Fiends to kill each other was something which the clan definitely would not do. If they wanted to engage in a life-and-death duel, they had to get permission from either the Patriarch or the entire Assembly of Elders.

This was also the primary reason why Gislason was so enraged when he saw Linley and Emanuel engaged in a life-and-death duel.

If one was to die, one had to die in a worthwhile manner, in battle against the eight great clans.

"Enough." Gislason said coldly.

The Elder immediately fell silent. Although he was an Elder, he was also Gislason's son. So what if a father rebuked his son! In the Azure Dragon clan, the two longest living members were Gislason and his sister. The others were all junior to them.

This was also one of the reasons why Gislason's word was law.

"This doesn't need to be discussed any further." Gislason said calmly. "In the past, you weren't aware of Linley's power. Since it is now obvious that Linley has the power of a Seven Star Fiend, then this life-and-death duel can no longer proceed."

"Linley. Emanuel. Do you have any objections?" Gislason swept the two with his gaze.

"No objections." Emanuel hurriedly said.

"No objections." Linley said as well.

"Very good." Gislason continued to stare at the two of them. "Emanuel, you previously believed Linley was just an ordinary God. I want to know, why would you, an Elder, engage in a life-and-death duel with a God? Tell me the reason!"

Linley glanced sideways at Emanuel. The reason Emanuel wanted to kill him was for his Sovereign artifact. Would Emanuel dare admit it now?

Emanuel began to sweat, large beads appearing on his forehead. "Patriarch, this Linley didn't show me any respect at all. He went too far. In my anger, I thus..."

"Hmph." An icy snort shook the entire palace.

Emanuel's body couldn't help but tremble.

"You dare to lie to my face?" Gislason chuckled. "I gave you a chance to tell the truth, but you didn't take it."

Emanuel's face instantly turned white.

"I won't kill you." Gislason stared coldly at him. "The Grand Elder is currently in need of assistances. Starting tomorrow, go to the Grand Elder's side. As for what the Grand Elder will arrange for you to do, that's for her to decide."

Emanuel's body trembled, his heart filled with terror.

"Yes, Patriarch." Emanuel still replied.

"Now, scram. Go stand over there." Gislason snapped with disgust. Emanuel immediately retreated to one side of the main hall. Gislason's gaze now turned to Linley. The corner of his lips curved upwards slightly. "Linley, right?"

"Yes, Patriarch." Linley replied.

"Over all these years, those people who dared to directly ignore my orders...do you know what happened to them?" Gislason said.

Linley trembled slightly. He couldn't help but have a bad feeling. Could it be that this Gislason was going to kill him? However, Linley still spoke out. "Patriarch, it was less than a century ago that I returned to the Azure Dragon clan. I still know very few things regarding our Azure Dragon clan."

Gislason's face instantly sank down. "You really know how to equivocate."

Linley suddenly found, to his amazement, that Gislason suddenly moved forward from the throne, walking directly in front of him. After inspecting Linley carefully, he immediately turned and walked to a side room by the side of the main hall. "Linley, follow me. Everyone else, wait here!"

"Yes, Patriarch." Linley immediately followed.

After the Patriarch and Linley left, the other Elders finally dared to let out sighs of relief.

"The Patriarch wants to speak privately with Linley. What do you think will happen? A private meeting with the Patriarch is definitely nothing good." Immediately, an Elder spoke out with concern. The members of the Azure Dragon clan all held the Patriarch in dread and awe.

"If this were the past, Father would kill Linley." The silver-haired Elder said. "However, at present, Father probably will not kill him. However, although he won't kill him, his punishment definitely won't be a light one. It won't be any lighter than the punishment he gave Emanuel."

Immediately, the other Elders looked towards Emanuel.

"Emanuel, by the side of the Grand Elder, you'll have a chance to truly serve the clan." Someone laughed.

"Hmph." Emanuel just let out a low snort.

"Emanuel, tell the truth. What's the real reason why you insisted on killing Linley?" The Elders began to ask. Nobody believed that just because of a simple offense, Emanuel would have gone so wild.

"Stop asking." Suddenly, a golden-haired Elder barked out.

"Father." Emanuel looked towards the golden-haired elder. This golden-haired elder was a third generation expert of the Azure Dragon clan, and a figure who commanded great respect amongst the Elders. After all, his mother was the 'Grand Elder'.

"Tell me, what's this about?" The golden-haired elder sent through divine sense.

Emanuel knew that his chance to gain the Coiling Dragon ring was most likely lost. If he couldn't gain it, he couldn't let an outsider gain it either. Thus, he sent back through divine sense, "Father, that Linley is carrying a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact, the 'Azure Dragon ring' of our ancestor."

The golden-haired Elder was instantly stunned.

"What did you say?" The golden-haired Elder didn't dare to believe it.

"It's true. It is the Azure Dragon ring. There's no mistaking it. That Linley truly is just a God. The reason he was able to withstand a Highgod soul attack was because of that Azure Dragon ring." Emanuel hurriedly sent through divine sense.

Many thoughts immediately flashed through the mind of the golden-haired elder.

Emanuel looked at his father. "The Azure Dragon ring won't end up in my hands. However, Father, as long as you strive to seize that Azure Dragon ring, it shouldn't be too hard for you."

"Kid, you should've told me sooner." The golden-haired elder glanced at him. "But telling me now isn't too late either."

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 18, 'Punishment'

In the quiet side room, Gislason was seated on a chair, while Linley was standing off to one side. Gislason just looked at Linley, looked at him quietly, not saying a word. The pressure that filled this side room caused Linley to unconsciously feel fear.

"The Patriarch summoned me here, but he isn't saying anything. What is he going to do?" Linley was panicking.

After standing in the side room for a long time, Linley finally couldn't resist from speaking out. "Patriarch..."

Gislason, startled out of his pondering, looked at Linley. He let out a low sigh, that icy, tyrannical aura that had been present in the main palace hall now gone from his face. The only thing left was grief. Gislason sighed, "Linley, where are you from?"

"From another plane." Linley said.

"The Yulan Plane, right?" Gislason said casually.

Linley was startled. How did this Gislason know? Could it be that he had already investigated Linley's background?

"Right." Linley nodded.

"The Yulan Plane. It really is." Gislason raised his head. Silently, a tear dripped down his face, landing on the ground. "Drip!" As it hit the ground, the teardrop broke apart.

"The Patriarch...is crying?" Linley was completely stunned.

The leader of the Azure Dragon clan, this ultimate expert, Gislason...was crying? Linley could even understand it if Gislason wanted to kill him, but why had Gislason just shed a tear?

"Let me take a look at your Azure Dragon ring. There's no need to remove the blood binding." Gislason let out a low sigh.

"Azure Dragon ring?" Linley stared in astonishment at Gislason. After the Emanuel affair, he had already changed the appearance of the Coiling Dragon ring. From outside appearances, there was no way anyone could tell that his ring was a Sovereign artifact.

Gislason's forehead furrowed. Raising his head up, he looked at Linley. "I told you to give me your Azure Dragon ring and let me take a look at it. Don't worry. I'm not being greedy for your Azure Dragon ring. I have my own!" As he spoke, Gislason stretched out his right hand.

Linley looked at it. Indeed, on his right hand, there was a ring that was completely identical to the Coiling Dragon ring. Only, the color was azure.

"Originally, Father refined two soul-protecting Sovereign artifacts, one for himself to use, and another which he gave me." Gislason said softly. Linley, astonished, stared at the ring on the Patriarch's hand.

That Azure Dragon ring was a complete, undamaged soul-protecting Sovereign artifact.

"Patriarch, go ahead and look." Linley immediately tossed over his Coiling Dragon ring.

Gislason's eyes lit up, and he immediately accepted the Coiling Dragon ring. Even the right hand which he used to hold this ring began to tremble slightly, and faint tears appeared in his eyes. "Father! Father!!!" Gislason stared at this Coiling Dragon ring as though it were an unsurpassingly holy object.

"This is the material it was made of. Right..." Gislason stroked it, his eyes closed.

Linley had never been certain as to what the Coiling Dragon ring was made of. In the Yulan Plane, Linley didn't know, and even now, he still didn't know.

"This Sovereign artifact is damaged, right?" Gislason opened his eyes, then tossed the Coiling Dragon ring back to Linley.

"Right." Linley nodded.

"What's the situation on the damage?" Gislason asked.

"The soul-protecting Sovereign artifact appears as a membrane. On the surface of it, there is a small hole. Just a single hole. The other parts of it are completely undamaged." Linley didn't lie.

"A single small hole?"

Gislason frowned. "Capable of killing my father and the rest of the four Sovereigns, and also break through a Sovereign artifact...just a small hole?" Gislason's mind raced through many possibilities. Just from the hole in the Sovereign artifact, Gislason had already come to a conclusion regarding the killer.

"It was definitely one of those people!"

As soon as Gislason thought of who the enemy was, he felt helpless. "The enemy definitely doesn't care at all about little people like us. Even the most powerful of Highgods is nothing in front of a Sovereign." Gislason already stood at the very precipice of Highgods.

Unfortunately...

Compared to a Sovereign, he didn't have any ability to fight back at all. The enemy was able to kill four great Sovereigns. What was a few Highgods?

"Patriarch, is the clan going to confiscate my ring?" Linley asked, worried.

Gislason glanced at him, then said, "Since Father chose you to be the inheritor of this Azure Dragon ring, then you being in possession of this Azure Dragon ring is Father's will. Father's will is something which nobody, no matter who they are, is qualified to change!"

Linley's heart calmed down.

As Gislason looked at Linley, he couldn't help but think of his father. In the past, their ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon', had been very caring towards his son and daughter. As for the grandsons and future generations of the clan, the Azure Dragon hadn't cared too much.

"Patriarch, I am puzzled about one thing." Linley couldn't help but ask.

Linley was extremely puzzled as to how this Gislason had recognized the 'Azure Dragon ring'. He had changed the appearance of his Coiling Dragon ring, and it didn't emit any aura at all. How could Gislason tell just by looking at it that this Coiling Dragon ring was special?

Could it be the material?

But from the outside, unless one looked at it closely, there was no way to discover anything unusual about the material.

"Puzzled? Speak." Gislason revealed a rare hint of a smile.

"Patriarch, how did you discover that my ring is the Azure Dragon ring? I don't understand." Linley said hurriedly.

"Haha..." Gislason began to laugh. "As a Sovereign artifact, once its aura is hidden, there's no way one can recognize it from the surface. You've also changed the appearance of the ring. How could I tell, just by looking at it?"

Linley was mystified. "Patriarch, then why did you say that I definitely had the Azure Dragon ring?"

"Because of your body." Gislason laughed.

"Body?" Linley was puzzled.

"Your body is extremely powerful. Even in our Azure Dragon clan, your body's power should rank as the fourth most powerful." Gislason said. "Even the third and fourth generation members cannot compare to you in terms of body strength."

If a person's body was powerful, that meant they had a Sovereign artifact?

Linley still didn't understand. However, he was indeed proud of how powerful his body was.

"Is the power of your body related to the absorption of a drop of water-type Sovereign's Might?" Gislason asked.

Linley, rather surprised, nodded. "It is."

"Linley, think about it. The ancestor of our Azure Dragon clan was a Sovereign. How could our clan possibly be lacking in water-type Sovereign's Might?" Gislason asked him.

Linley couldn't help but nod. Sovereign's Might, to Sovereign's, was like divine power to Deities. Naturally, it wouldn't be too precious. However, this drop of liquid Sovereign's Might still had to be formed through the compression of quite a bit of gaseous divine Sovereign power.

Gislason continued, "Every single Elder of the clan is in possession of a drop of water-type Sovereign's Might! But why is it that virtually none of them have bodies as strong as yours?"

Linley was immediately stumped.

Right.

These Elders were all descendants of the Azure Dragon clan as well, and they all had the lineage of the Azure Dragon. They also all had Sovereign's Might. Why hadn't their bodies become as powerful as Linley's?

Gislason sighed. "Using Sovereign's Might to strengthen and transform the body...this was the ultimate technique which Father developed only after he himself became a Sovereign."

"Father is a Sovereign, but he didn't create a Sovereign artifact level armor. This was because the draconic scales of his body, in defensive power, were already comparable to Sovereign artifacts." Gislason said with great pride.

Linley couldn't help but be stunned.

Sovereign artifacts, the most terrifyingly powerful artifacts of legends.

But their ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon', actually was so powerful that his body was like a Sovereign artifact.

"To strengthen one's body to the level of our ancestor, there was only one way. This way, however, had three preconditions!" Gislason said. "First, you have to be a member of the Azure Dragon clan. Second, you have to have the most precious 'blood essence' of our ancestor himself. Third, you have to have Sovereign's Might."

"Blood essence?" Linley was surprised.

"Right. And it must be 'blood essence' from after our ancestor became a Sovereign." Gislason sighed. "This 'blood essence' is the distilled essence of his blood. Only descendants of the Azure Dragon clan are capable of absorbing this distilled blood essence. Only after absorbing it can one become like the ancestor, to naturally absorb Sovereign's Might and strengthen one's body."

"The amount of 'blood essence' you absorb also determines how much Sovereign's Might you can absorb." Gislason said.

Linley thought back to that golden drop of blood. "I didn't realize that was actually the blood essence of my ancestor, the distilled essence of his blood!"

"Your body is so powerful, you definitely absorbed a drop of distilled blood essence. However, where did that drop you absorbed come from?" Gislason continued, "When our ancestor created those Sovereign artifacts, in order to make the Sovereign artifacts possess semi-sentience, he dripped a single drop of his blood essence into them."

"Thus, I was certain that you had acquired a Sovereign artifact. Aside from this, there was no other possible explanation." Gislason said.

Linley now understood.

"Our ancestor had two Sovereign artifacts. One was a weapon-type Sovereign artifact, while the other was a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. Because I already know where the weapon-type Sovereign artifact is, thus I was certain that the Sovereign artifact you were carrying could only possibly be that soul-protecting Sovereign artifact...the Azure Dragon ring."

Hearing these words, the many questions which had puzzled Linley over these years were finally answered.

"No wonder I was unable to absorb the other two drops of Sovereign's Might." Linley said to himself. He had absorbed a single drop of that blood essence, and so he was only able to withstand a single physical transformation from Sovereign's Might.

"Alright. Let's go out now." Gislason said.

"Yes, Patriarch." Linley, in his heart, didn't know whether to laugh or to cry.

So the reason Gislason had summoned him for a private meeting was because he wanted to look at the Coiling Dragon ring and ask about the damage it had sustained. As for punishment? Gislason hadn't said a single word. But what Linley himself didn't understand was...

When Gislason had seen him, he had thought of his father, the 'Azure Dragon'. Naturally, he wouldn't punish Linley much.

In the main hall.

"He's coming. The Patriarch is coming." These Elders all immediately stopped talking and rose to their feet with respect. Gislason's face returned to its usual icy expression, and he walked to the throne at the front of the palace and sat down. As for Linley, he stood alongside with the Elders.

Linley glanced sideways at Emanuel, who just sneered coldly at him.

"This Emanuel definitely has some bad ideas. If I find an opportunity, I have to kill him." Linley had encountered countless waves and storms in his life. Naturally, he could determine that between himself and Emanuel, the conflict was now at a level where it would only end with one party's death.

"I already know clearly what has happened." Patriarch Gislason swept his gaze across the people below.

Emanuel and the golden-haired Elder, hearing this, couldn't help but be shocked.

“Linley disobeyed my orders. This was a pardonable misunderstanding. However, it can be considered that I have already punished him.” Gislason continued. Linley was stunned. Punished? It seemed as though although they had chatted for quite a bit, he hadn’t been punished at all.

“However, everyone is now also aware of Linley’s power. According to the rules of the clan, once a clansman has reached the Seven Star Fiend level of power, he will be bestowed the position of Elder.” Gislason continued.

Emanuel’s eyes immediately turned red.

The many Elders in the hall couldn’t help but turn to look at Linley.

“Elder?” Linley had been pondering about Gislason lying about punishing him, but in the blink of an eye, the ‘punishment’ had indeed come.

The Patriarch, ‘Gislason’, waved his hand, and instantly, a neatly folded cape as well as a set of azure armor, along with quite a few scattered objections such as medallions, drifted towards Linley. Linley was stunned, but he immediately bowed respectfully. “Thank you, Patriarch.”

Linley immediately accepted those items.

“From today onwards, Linley is the thirty sixth Elder in the Assembly of Elders!” Gislason announced.

Quite a few Elders nodded in a friendly manner towards Linley.

Elder Garvey immediately sent through divine sense, "Linley, congratulations. However, you'd best immediately put on those clothes on immediately. Generally speaking, Elders are required to wear their uniform within the clan. But of course, your own residence is an exception."

Linley immediately bound it all with blood. Linley's body flashed, and that azure armor with the complicated golden embroidered suddenly appeared on Linley's body, while that gleaming, multicolored cape also appeared on his back.

After having put the uniform on, he now appeared identical in outfit to the other people in the main hall.

"Alright. Everyone can leave now." Gislason said.

"Yes, Patriarch."

The group of Elders all bowed, then left.

"Forhan [Fo'er'han], Emanuel, you two, father and son, stay behind!" Gislason suddenly said. Immediately, Emanuel and that golden-haired Elder looked at each other, halting their steps. As for Linley and the rest, they all flew out.

Linley bid farewell to each of the Elders, then immediately flew towards the gorge where he lived.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 19, Elder

Dragon Avenue. Linley was flying at high speed through the curving path.

“Previously, because of the life-and-death duel, I angered the Patriarch. As I left with him, I was worrying if I would face a dangerous situation. But who would have imagined that not only would I not be punished, in the blink of an eye, I would become an Elder of the clan!” Linley looked at the gold-patterned azure armor he was wearing, and couldn’t help but laugh.

“The changes in the world are quite marvelous indeed.” Linley sighed.

“Elder!” Many of the patrolling soldiers on Dragon Avenue, upon seeing Linley, immediately saluted respectfully.

Linley glanced at these patrolling soldiers and nodded slightly.

Linley flew past the many saluting patrolling warriors.

Watching Linley fly past, one patrolling warrior frowned. “This Elder... seems to be that Linley who took part in the life-and-death duel. Captain, you went as well. That was Linley, wasn’t it?”

“I didn’t see too clearly. It did seem to be Linley.” The captain of the squad said.

"It was Linley. I saw him clearly."

"What, that Linley, the one who took part in the life-and-death duel, became an Elder?" Quite a few patrolling warriors who hadn't watched the life-and-death duel were puzzled.

"Is it strange that he became an Elder? If it hadn't been that the Patriarch had hurried over in time, Elder Emanuel would have been killed. That Lord Linley definitely has the power of a Seven Star Fiend!"

After all, thousands of patrolling warriors had watched that duel. Thus, as Linley flew along Dragon Avenue, he was recognized by quite a few people. Soon, the news that Linley had become an Elder was spread quite quickly amongst those patrolling warriors.

"Here we are." Linley looked at the gorge in front of him. His body transformed into a streak, and he charged straight into it.

Linley flew directly towards the Yulan branch. In mid-air, Linley saw that at the door to his residence, a group of people were gathered. Baruch, Tarosse, Olivier, and tens of others were there.

"I hope Linley is fine." Hazard sighed softly. "It's so rare for our Yulan branch to produce an expert like him. If he is...ugh!" Unconsciously, everyone in the Yulan branch had considered Linley as the 'flagbearer' for their branch.

How could their flagbearer be allowed to fall?

"Who knows how the Patriarch will punish Linley." Cesar said with concern as well.

"From what I saw at Death Valley, the Patriarch is very severe." Olivier said with a frown.

"Don't worry. The Patriarch won't kill him, at least." Baruch said. He knew very well the danger which the Four Divine Beasts clan was currently in. At a time like this, the Patriarch wouldn't be willing to kill any of their experts.

Delia just continued to frown, quietly waiting.

"The Boss is coming." Bebe suddenly said while raising his head to look upwards.

"Linley is coming?" The group of people immediately followed Bebe's gaze, staring into the sky. From above that faint fog, a human figure was descending at high speed. Baruch and the others only saw a blurry, indistinct multicolored light.

The figure landed. It was Linley!

Baruch, Tarosse, and the others all stared at Linley, slack-jawed.

Linley's entire body was clad in azure armor, which in turn was covered with complicated golden embroidery patterns, giving off an ancient, noble aura. That cape which Linley wore over his shoulders, in peculiar, had unfathomably mysterious runes atop it and had all colors of light flowing atop it.

It was the uniform of an Elder!

"Lin...Linley?" Baruch, Ryan, Dylin, and the others all stared in astonishment at Linley.

"Clan leader." Linley laughed as he looked at everyone.

"Linley, you've become an Elder?" Hazard's eyes were bulging.

In the Azure Dragon clan, Elders were definitely the true, high level members of the clan. Every single Elder was a Seven Star Fiend, capable of making the countless members of their clan venerate and worship them. They all knew that Linley's power was formidable, but who would have imagined...

That Linley would become an Elder!

"Everyone, don't stand outside. Let's talk inside." Linley laughed as he spoke.

"Right. All into the living room." Baruch came to his senses and said hurriedly, "Linley, when you left with the Patriarch and the Elders, what exactly happened? You have to explain clearly to us. We've been puzzled for so long."

"Clan leader..." Linley was just about to speak.

"You can just address me as Baruch." Baruch looked at the Elder's uniform which Linley was wearing. "Linley, you are an Elder now. There's only one person whom you can now address as clan leader or Patriarch."

Linley understood what Baruch meant, and he laughed. "Within the gorge, I'll still address you as clan leader."

Baruch, seeing the look on Linley's face, knew that arguing would be pointless. All he could do was assent.

All the important members of the Yulan branch gathered around. They listened to Linley explain, and Linley naturally just gave a brief explanation, skipping over some secrets. While hearing what had happened, everyone celebrated on behalf of Linley, while at the same time feeling proud of him.

Linley, the thirty sixth Elder of the Assembly of Elders!

The Yulan branch's status in the Azure Dragon clan was very low. However, now that their branch had produced an Elder, the status of the Yulan branch had just completely changed. After all, the entire clan only had so many Elders.

For their branch to have an Elder meant that their clansmen of their branch would be more confident while in the Skyrise Mountains.

The next morning. Dawn. Linley's room.

"Delia, I had been planning to quietly train until I became a Highgod, but...I'm sorry. Now that I'm an Elder, most likely, our peaceful life won't last for much longer." Linley held Delia and said apologetically.

Delia laughed, then raised her head to look at Linley. "You don't have to say sorry."

"Linley!" A voice rang out in Linley's mind.

Linley was startled. He smiled apologetically towards Delia. "I didn't expect it would come so fast. I just became an Elder yesterday, but today, someone has already come looking for me."

"Go, then." Delia said.

Linley nodded slightly, then immediately transformed into a blur, flying out of the room and into the skies above the gorge. A handsome youth dressed in Elder's garb was standing there in mid-air. It was Elder Garvey.

"Linley." Garvey smiled as he spoke.

"Garvey, is there something you need?" Linley asked.

"Yesterday, you became an Elder. I imagine you don't know anything about the powers and responsibilities of Elders." Garvey laughed calmly. "The clan leader thus ordered me to come and give you a detailed explanation."

Linley's eyes lit up. "Thank you."

"Are you going to make me just stand here as I talk?" Garvey laughed.

Linley glanced around. At present, he and Garvey were standing in mid-air above the gorge. This was indeed a rather poor way to treat a guest. He immediately laughed. "Garvey, let's go. Come to my residence. We'll have a good chat." As he spoke, Linley and Garvey, the two Elders, flew directly downwards.

At this time, a human figure descended towards the gorge. It was the person whom Linley had met on his first day in the Skyrise Mountains, the person who wanted to embarrass the Yulan branch: Asru.

"These past few days have been so boring. Those eight great clans are always vigilantly watching our Four Divine Beasts clan, and when we patrolling warriors are off duty, we still can't leave. We have to stay in the mountains."

"Fortunately, in half a month, it'll be time for my next thousand-year assignment. It'll be my turn to go patrol. Patrolling is better than always being here in this gorge." Asru was in an excellent mood. But suddenly, Asru turned his head to stare into the distance. Two blurry figures had suddenly flickered and vanished.

"Eh? Elders?" Asru was shocked. "Two Elders. Why did they come to an out-of-the-way place like our gorge?"

This gorge was a fairly remote place within the Azure Dragon clan's territory. How could an Elder come here, normally?

“One of those two Elders seems so familiar from the back...” Asru frowned. Because half of the great valley was covered by fog, and given that the two Elders moved too quickly, Asru hadn’t seen them clearly. “That one...seems a bit similar to Linley!”

But then, Asru laughed. “How is that possible? Linley belongs to the Yulan branch. Although his power is excellent, how can he compare to an Elder, much less become one. That bit of ability he has is only enough to let him show off here in our gorge.”

Asru laughed disdainfully, then flew out of the gorge.

Within the living room. Linley and Garvey were chatting with each other.

As they chatted, Linley began to get a clearer and clearer picture of many of the clan’s affairs. He couldn’t help but sigh in his heart. “The power of the Assembly of Elders truly is enormous. In the entire Azure Dragon clan, virtually all affairs are managed by the Elders. Although the Patriarch is powerful, he normally never takes part in matters.”

“Garvey, I’ve heard you say so many things. In the clan, the Elders really are responsible for quite a few things.” Linley laughed. “I wonder what I will be assigned to manage?”

“Don’t be impatient. Right now, all tasks within the clan already have supervisors handling them. There’s no lack or opening right now. Thus, for now, there's nothing you have to do." Garvey laughed. "Right now, you can simply enjoy the perks and powers of being an Elder without having to take on any responsibilities."

"Your residence and some other things have already been arranged." Garvey said. "Also, you can also now apply for your Yulan branch to be moved to a nicer place."

"No need. I'm fine living here." Linley frowned. "Garvey, from what you are saying, it seems that right now, I have nothing I have to do?" The clan was currently in a period of crisis. How could he be allowed to be so leisurely?

"Of course you have things to do. Only, it isn't now. Wait for the Conclave of Elders!" Garvey said. "The Conclave of Elders is held once every thousand years, and during each Conclave, different assignments will be meted out to each Elder. As an Elder, by then, you'll be assigned some tasks as well."

Linley now understood.

"Thus, for now, continue enjoying your leisurely life. After the Conclave, you won't be able to, even if you want to." Garvey chuckled. "The sort of leisurely life you currently have is something which the other Elders all dream of but can't have."

Linley chuckled as well. "Oh, right. Garvey, how long will it be before the next Conclave of Elders?" Given that they met every thousand years, perhaps he would have centuries of leisurely time remaining.

"Fifteen days!" Garvey said.

"Fifteen days?" Linley was astonished.

A thousand years between Conclaves...but it just so happened that he was only fifteen days off from the next one?

"Right. That's why I told you to treasure these leisurely days." Garvey laughed as he stood up. "Alright, I need to go. When the Conclave of Elders begins, there will be someone who will come invite you to attend."

Linley stood up as well, escorting Garvey as he left.

Within the gorge.

"That Linley of the Yulan branch, he became an Elder? Impossible!"

"It's true. Those members of the Yulan branch said it so smugly. From the looks of it, it shouldn't be false. But to tell the truth, the smugness which those Yulan branch members have right now is really irritating."

"They're just blowing hot air, I wager."

The gorge was quickly filled with variations on this sort of conversation. The Yulan branch had hundreds of members. These clansmen, after knowing that Linley had become an Elder, immediately went to brag and show off in front of the other branches within the gorge.

All people care about face.

Deities were the same. Linley was able to become an Elder of the clan. The formerly perpetually-snubbed Yulan branch's clansmen naturally wanted to show off for a bit.

Asru was walking towards his own residence. He was preparing for his rotation.

"Lord Asru, I heard that Linley became an Elder. Is it true?" Several people came to ask Asru. Asru was a Highgod, a formidable figure within the gorge.

"Don't believe the braggadocio of those Yulan branch people. Linley, become an Elder? How could that be possible?" Asru snickered. "Also, just yesterday, I saw Linley. He was wearing ordinary clothes." What he didn't know was that in the gorge, Linley didn't want to be wearing his Elder's uniform all day long.

Suddenly, he stared. He suddenly remembered how some time ago, he had seen those two Elder's figures from afar. A suspicion began to arise within his heart.

"I told you it was impossible." Several people immediately began to speak out. "The Yulan branch, produce an Elder?"

"In a bit, I'll rotate and be on duty. I'll go ask the other warriors of the clan and I'll know then." Asru said. The gorge was simply too remote and its experts too few in number. It thus also took a long time for those of them within to learn news regarding the clan.

Those people all immediately and respectfully escorted Asru away.

But right at this moment...

"Elder Linley!" A bright voice suddenly echoed throughout the gorge. Immediately, within the gorge, every person, whether those in training or those chatting in pairs, or those who were flying in the air, was stunned.

Asru was stunned as well.

Immediately, a large number of figures flew towards the source of that voice. They all looked carefully...

Three black-robed figures were flying downwards respectfully, while Linley himself was flying out as well.

"Is the Conclave of Elders beginning?" Linley said.

"Yes, Elder." The three black-robed men bowed.

"Let's go, then." Linley immediately flew in the air, and those three black-robed figures followed behind respectfully.

The many people in the gorge all stared, slack-jawed, at this scene. After seeing Linley dressed in an Elder's uniform, with that flashing, gleaming cape, quite a few people were truly stunned.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 20, Conclave of Elders

As he strode into the large hall, Linley swept it with his gaze. "Only twelve Elders have arrived?" The Azure Dragon clan had thirty six Elders. The other Elders in the hall, upon seeing Linley, all laughed while greeting him.

"Linley, sit over here." Elder Garvey beckoned towards him.

Linley walked over and sat down by Garvey's side.

This Conclave of Elders was held in a large hall, where a very large, dark red circular table was placed in the center, with a ring of chairs around the table. Linley swept it with his gaze and discovered: "Eh? Just sixteen chairs?"

The round table was very large, and there was more than enough space for forty chairs. But they had only sixteen chairs prepared.

"Garvey, there's only sixteen chairs? Aren't there supposed to be thirty six Elders?" Linley said softly.

"The Elders of Bloodbath Gorge do not attend." Garvey explained.

Linley sighed to himself.

Bloodbath Gorge was the most central area of the entire Skyrite Mountains. It was also the place where the most powerful experts of the Azure Dragon clan, the Vermillion Bird clan, the White Tiger clan, and the Black Tortoise clan gathered. The Azure Dragon clan had twenty Elders stationed there.

“They won’t even attend the Conclave of Elders.” On the day that Linley had become an Elder, there had only been ten or so Elders present in the palace. Not a single one of the Elders who had been in the Bloodbath Gorge had come on that day either.

“The Elders at Bloodbath Gorge truly are risking their lives to battle for the clan.” Fifteen days ago, Linley had chatted with Garvey, and had discussed the responsibilities of Elders. At that time, Garvey had explained Bloodbath Gorge to him.

The eight great clans were always watching like rapacious tigers. The Four Divine Beasts clan were faced with great danger, and although they could hide in the Skyrise Mountains and live their lives there like turtles hiding in their shells...

Given the arrogance of the Four Divine Beasts clan, how could they possibly forever hide?

In addition, how could a large clan like theirs be perpetually cut off from the outside world? The Four Divine Beasts clan was connected to the outside world, but the people who connected them would be slaughtered and attacked by the eight great clans.

Would the Four Divine Beasts clan just quietly accept this?

Impossible!

The Four Divine Beasts clan would counter-attack, deliver vicious counter-blows to its enemies. Thus, the 'Bloodbath Gorge' was formed.

Bloodbath Gorge was where more than half of the experts of the Four Divine Beasts clan were gathered. The Azure Dragon clan had twenty-plus Elders, and of course, many Six Star Fiends were present as well. The requirement for one to enter Bloodbath Gorge was having the power of a Six Star Fiend.

Bloodbath Gorge. The gathering spot for the true elites of the Four Divine Beasts clan.

"The sixteen Elders are all present." A silver-haired Elder at the side of the round table said clearly. "This millennial Conclave of Elders, compared to the previous one, has an additional Elder present. This is something worthy of celebration."

Quite a few Elders grinned towards Linley.

Linley smiled back at each Elder in a show of friendliness, then glanced at the silver-haired Elder. Linley recognized this silver-haired Elder; he was the Second Elder of the Assembly of Elders, the son of Patriarch Gislason.

"With regards to everyone's assignments, let's set that aside for now." The Second Elder said solemnly. "Let me first explain to everyone the final battle results of our twenty-plus Elders of our Azure Dragon clan in Bloodbath Gorge, over the past millennium."

The faces of all the Elders turned solemn.

Bloodbath Gorge was a representation of the constant slaughter and warfare between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans.

“Our twenty-plus Elders of the Azure Dragon clan, in the past millennium, killed two enemy Seven Star Fiends and thirty six enemy Six Star Fiends! The number of other Highgods slain was not recorded.” The Second Elder said forcefully.

So many?

Linley was secretly shocked. A thousand years, to Deities, was a very short period of time. But in a thousand short years, the Azure Dragon clan alone had killed two of the enemy’s Seven Star Fiends, and thirty six of their Six Star Fiends.

How many enemies, then, had they killed in Bloodbath Gorge in total?

“The battle between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans truly is vicious.” Linley said to himself.

“However, amongst our twenty-plus Elders, two of our Elders had their power dramatically reduced. They were the twenty first elder, ‘Bangden’ [Bang’dun], and the ninth Elder, ‘Jeffs’ [Ji’fo’si]. Elder Bangden’s divine water clone was destroyed, and he no longer has the power of a Seven Star Fiend. He is currently in closed door training. As for Jeffs, his most powerful clone, the divine water clone, was destroyed as well. Luckily, however, his original body has never fused a divine spark. His original body thus once more fused with a divine water spark and his strength is thus returned...but from this day forward, he will most likely find it incredibly hard to advance a single step." The Second Elder said solemnly.

Immediately, the atmosphere in the hall became depressed.

"Two Elders. One no longer has the power of a Seven Star Fiend, while the other won't be able to advance at all in the future." Linley sighed to himself.

Linley knew what the rules of Bloodbath Gorge were. Those Elders who went out to do battle all left their weaker divine clones within Bloodbath Gorge. That way, even if they died in battle outside, they would still have a surviving divine clone.

Most likely, the enemies were doing the same.

Although they described the battle accomplishment as being the killing of two Seven Star Fiends, most likely, the divine clones of those two Seven Star Fiends had similarly been left back at their own bases.

"So for the original body not to fuse with a divine spark actually has a benefit like this."

The Elder named 'Jeffs' had his most powerful divine water clone destroyed, but his original body had never fused with a divine spark, just like Linley. Thus, the Elder could use his original body to constantly fuse with water-type divine spark, all the way to becoming a Highgod.

This was because he already had the necessary insights into how to fuse the Laws of Water.

Thus, even if he became a Highgod through fusing a divine spark this time, his power wouldn't be much different from in the past. Only...in the future, it would be very hard to advance further.

For example, if Linley's divine earth clone was destroyed, he would become unable to use the Blackstone Space. However, Linley absolutely could let his original body continue to fuse a Demigod divine earth spark, a God divine earth spark, and a Highgod divine earth spark.

When the time came, Linley would still be able to execute the 'Blackstone Space'. Only, he wouldn't be able to make any further improvements.

"This time, aside from the two aforementioned Elders retiring from Bloodbath Gorge, there are also six Elders who have fought in Bloodbath Gorge for three thousand years already who will be retiring from Bloodbath Gorge! Thus, of our group of sixteen, there needs to be three who will fill the positions."

Immediately, the Elders began to chat with each other through divine sense or ponder to themselves.

"Three Elders need to go to Bloodbath Gorge?" Linley also knew what going to Bloodbath Gorge represented.

"Because of the order of the Patriarch, punishing Emanuel to go serve with the Grand Elder, thus of the sixteen of us, Emanuel absolutely must go to Bloodbath Gorge. Two more must therefore be chosen out of the remaining fifteen."

Linley couldn't help but glance at the distant Emanuel out of the corner of his eyes. Emanuel remained silent, his face unchanging. Clearly, he already knew about this.

"Everyone, let's choose two Elders to participate." The Second Elder looked at everyone.

"Me!" A voice rang out from next to Linley. It was Elder Garvey. Elder Garvey laughed, "I wanted to go last time, but in terms of power, I was weaker than the others, so I was excluded. This time, it is my turn, right?"

"I nominate myself for a slot!" Immediately, another Elder spoke out. "The other Elders are battling for the clan outside, while I am remaining within the mountain. I feel miserable!"

"Garvey, it's not your turn yet." Yet another Elder spoke out. "I nominate myself."

There were differences in power amongst the Elders as well. Garvey was clearly a fairly weak one. As for Bloodbath Gorge...the more powerful one was, the better it was when they entered.

"I'll go as well." Of the sixteen Elders, one of the three females, a jade-haired woman, laughed. "I truly wish to emulate the Grand Elder and to serve with her fighting for the clan."

"For the sake of the clan, I'll go as well."

Linley, quite surprised, watched this scene. Originally, he thought that people would try to push it off onto others. However, Linley now discovered that eight of the sixteen were so valiant as to volunteer themselves, casting concerns regarding life and death to the side.

"Enough." The golden-haired Elder shouted with a frown.

Linley turned to look. The golden-haired Elder was the Third Elder of the clan, the son of the Grand Elder. His name was Forhan. Forhan had another status...he was the father of Emanuel.

The golden-haired Elder, Forhan, said in a low voice. "I understand that everyone wishes to do battle for the sake of the clan. But in battle, the more powerful a person is, the better! Thus, in my heart, I have made two choices. The first is..."

Forhan suddenly pointed at Linley. "Elder Linley!"

Linley was slightly startled.

"Forhan, the question of who goes is a decision each person individually. It isn't a matter for others to decide upon." The Second Elder said.

Forhan furrowed his forehead stubbornly, then said in a clear voice, "As members of the clan, and with the clan facing danger, how can any of us ignore this? Look at the twenty Elders in Bloodbath Gorge. The vast majority of them have been battling there for thousands of years. According to the rules, every thousand years, they can retire. But they have not!"

"It is all for the sake of the clan! For the sake of making it so that our Azure Dragon clan's prestige will not lower!"

Forhan looked at Linley. "The reason I choose Linley is because Linley's Gravitational Space is very unusual, with the power of the gravity being miraculously great. Even Seven Star Fiends will generally have their speed greatly reduced within his Gravitational Space. When experts do battle, if Linley were to coordinate with several Elders, his power can definitely be unleashed to an extremely great effect."

The Elders in the hall all immediately understood.

If Linley were to coordinate with several Elders while using his Gravitational Space, it would indeed be a tremendously effective supporting measure.

"Linley's own power has been made clear to everyone as well. He vastly surpasses Emanuel. As I see it, just based on the power of his body, in our clan, Linley should rank number four! Even I feel I am inferior." Forhan looked at Linley. "Linley, why don't you speak for yourself. Are you willing to go?"

Linley laughed as he looked at Forhan. "Third Elder, I want to ask, who is the other person you have chosen?"

Forhan said solemnly, "The two people I selected...one is Linley, while the other is myself! I believe that in terms of strength, nobody here dares to say that they have definitely surpassed me. Last time, I didn't go to Bloodbath Gorge...I've regretted it for a long time now. This time, I insist on going!"

Linley frowned.

The other person Forhan had chosen was actually Forhan himself?

"Linley?" The Second Elder looked at Linley. "What are your own thoughts?"

These Elders all admitted that in solo combat, some of them would dare say that they were not inferior to Linley. But in terms of group combat...none of them dared to say that they were superior to Linley. In group combat, the effect of Linley's Blackstone Space truly was too good.

Once his Blackstone Space appeared, his own power would not be impacted, but the opponent's speed would drastically drop. Even Seven Star Fiends, in a battle situation like this, would be defeated lopsidedly.

"I'll go!" Linley nodded.

"Linley, not bad." Forhan laughed as he spoke.

Linley just smiled back at him, while musing suspiciously to himself, "This Forhan seems to want to force me to go to Bloodbath Gorge. The way he acted just now...if I were to refuse to go, most likely the other Elders would look down upon me. Why does he want to force me to go? Can it have to do with his son, Emanuel?"

"Alright. The people have been chosen. Forhan, Emanuel, Linley, the three of you, after the conclusion of this Conclave, can go directly to Bloodbath Gorge." The Second Elder looked at Linley and the other two. "The three of you, take care of yourselves."

"Take care of yourselves." These four words caused Linley to feel relieved of a sense of pressure he hadn't realized he had been bearing.

"Bloodbath Gorge?" For some reason, Linley suddenly felt a hint of anticipation.

Ever since he had learned that the clan was in a crisis, Linley had known that one day, he too would battle on behalf of the clan. Only, he hadn't imagined that the day would come so quickly.

Linley and the other two selectees were going to Bloodbath Gorge. Naturally, they wouldn't be assigned any other activities. After the Conclave of Elders concluded, the other thirteen Elders all bade farewell to and sent off Linley, Forhan, and Emanuel.

"Linley, I truly want to go with you." Garvey laughed. "Remember. Help kill a few extra enemies for me."

Linley smiled and nodded.

Garvey's face suddenly turned solemn. "Remember, you need to be careful. Protecting yourself is most important. Killing enemies is secondary to that."

"Right." Linley nodded.

"Enough. The three of you, you can head off. After arriving in Bloodbath Gorge, obey the commands of the Grand Elder." The Second Elder said. Linley, Forhan, and Emanuel immediately made their farewells to each of the Elders, then immediately started to fly into the heart of the Skyrise Mountains.

The Skyrise Mountains were divided into four major areas, which each of the Four Divine Beasts clan were in control of.

In the core of the Skyrise Mountains, deep within a mountain valley, was Bloodbath Gorge. The place where the elites of the Four Divine Beasts clan gathered.

"The security here truly is tight." Linley looked at the air above the gorge. There was an enormous number of roving warriors on patrol. Not just the azure armored warriors of the Azure Dragon clan, but also the golden armored warriors of the Vermilion Bird clan...

There were patrolling warriors from all four of the Four Divine Beasts clans. When these people saw Linley's group of three fly over, they immediately saluted.

Linley, Emanuel, and Forhan flew directly into the depths of the gorge.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 21, The Grand Elder

Within the quiet, gloomy depths of Bloodbath Gorge.

Three human figures were descending at high speed landing on the ground.

Linley inspected his surroundings. Bloodbath Gorge was sparsely populated. As he stared straight forward, the only thing he could clearly see was an erect stone monument. As for the other buildings that could vaguely be seen through the mist, there was no way to see them clearly.

“There are so many soldiers of the Four Divine Beasts clan above the gorge, but so few people within Bloodbath Gorge itself. That makes sense. After all, everyone in here is at least a Six Star Fiend.” Linley continued to carefully inspect Bloodbath Gorge. As for Emanuel and Forhan, they strode forward with large steps.

Just as they walked away, Emanuel turned his head to look at Linley. “Linley, you’ve never been here before, right?”

“No, I’ve never been here before.” Linley didn’t have any goodwill towards Emanuel at all.

“Whooooosh.” Suddenly, a cold wind began to howl. Linley felt his body turn cold, and he couldn’t help but be startled. “The wind is actually so icy, here in Bloodbath Gorge.”

Forhan couldn't help but laugh. "Linley. Bloodbath Gorge is at the heart of the Skyfire Mountains, and is an extremely cold location. The cold wind within the gorge would cause any Demigods who came here to immediately be frozen. However, to you, Linley, this cold wind naturally doesn't have much impact."

"Elder Forhan, let's continue to move forward."

Linley couldn't be bothered to chat too much with this father-son pair in front of him. He immediately advanced deeper into the gorge. There were quite a few round stones located within Bloodbath Gorge, as well as some wild grass. However, the center of it was a neatly paved stone road.

In front of Bloodbath Gorge, on one side of the stone road, there was a tall, massive stone monument.

The stone monument was covered with two dark red words that were written in cursive, like flying dragons or dancing phoenixes. The two words were, 'Blood Bath'. Linley, upon seeing these two words, sensed a bloodthirsty, murderous aura emanate from it, and he couldn't help but feel his own murderous desires rise in response.

"Forhan, Emanuel, so it's actually the two of you this time. Haha..." A straightforward, clear laugh rang out. Linley turned to look, and saw an amiable, friendly-looking middle-aged man laugh as he walked over. This man had long sideburns, but they were very neatly trimmed, giving him quite a fresh, sharp appearance.

Linley looked at the newcomers.

"Arhaus [Er'hao'si]!" Forhan laughed and went to greet him, giving the man with the sideburns a big hug. "Long time no see."

"It really has been quite some time since we've met." This man named 'Arhaus' beamed towards Forhan as well, then looked at Linley. Rather puzzled, he said, "I knew that this time, three Elders were coming, but I've never met this one before...oh, I know!"

Arhaus had a look of sudden understanding on his face, and he laughed as he said to Linley, "In Bloodbath Valley, I've heard that our Azure Dragon clan has a new Elder."

"I am Arhaus. Elder Linley, right?" Arhaus laughed as he extended his hand.

"Right. Elder Arhaus, greetings." Linley laughed and extended his hand as well.

Linley had a good impression of Arhaus, but as for Forhan and Emanuel, Linley, from the bottom of his heart, disliked this father-son pair. Both Emanuel and Forhan made him feel as though they were sinister and vicious. Emanuel's actual actions, in turn, had confirmed Linley's judgment.

"We warmly welcome the three of you. Come, let's go meet the Grand Elder." Arhaus laughed.

"Mother?" Forhan's eyes couldn't help but light up.

Linley glanced sideways, seeing the looks on Forhan and Emanuel's faces. The two clearly were very eager to meet the Grand Elder. The Grand Elder and Patriarch 'Gislason' were actual siblings, brother and sister, and in the clan, her power was second only to that of the Patriarch's.

"Linley, it's been a long time since our clan has had a new Elder." Arhaus said warmly. "I've heard that you've previously sparred with Emanuel, and that you are incredibly strong. In the future, when you do battle for the clan, you definitely have to win some glory for our Azure Dragon clan."

"Definitely." Linley laughed and nodded.

Forhan, seeing how Arhaus was continuously chatting with Linley, couldn't help but interrupt. "Arhaus, what's the current situation in the struggle between our Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans?"

"How good can it be?" Arhaus shook his head and sighed. "The eight great clans are simply relying on superior numbers to win. All combined, their eight clans have more Seven Star Fiends than we do. If we continue fighting like this...most likely in just ten or twenty thousand years, our entire Four Divine Beasts clan will have less than ten Seven Star Fiends."

Hearing this, Linley was shocked.

"In ten or twenty thousand years, we'll lose that many?" Linley couldn't help but say. "Currently, our Four Divine Beasts clan should have nearly a hundred Seven Star Fiends."

The Azure Dragon clan alone had thirty six. The four clans, combined, should have more than a hundred Seven Star Fiends. How could it be possible that in as short a period of time as ten or twenty thousand years, only ten would be left?

“Linley, I hear that you just joined the clan recently.” Arhaus said resignedly. “You aren’t too familiar with the situation. However, I trust that at the Conclave of Elders, you should have learned of our losses in the past thousand years.”

Linley nodded.

In the past thousand years, they had killed two enemy Seven Star Fiends, while two of their own Seven Star Fiends had been weakened as well.

“Our Azure Dragon clan alone has lost two Seven Star Fiends in the past thousand years. Of course, Jeffs, when using his original body to fuse with a divine spark, will be able to recover his strength. But still, he’ll have lost any chance to gain in strength in the future.”

Arhaus said, “In a thousand years, our Four Divine Beasts clan, all combined, has lost five. In especially brutal periods, it’s normal to lose as many as ten Elders. You do the math. How many will we lose in ten thousand years?”

Linley did the math, and he was stunned.

In ten thousand years, at least seventy or eighty Elders would be doomed.

"That's why I said that if this continues, in ten or twenty thousand years, our clan will have lost almost all of our Seven Star Fiends." Arhaus said bitterly. "Nothing we can do. The eight great clans...even if we exhaust all of our Elders against them, they will most likely still have half of their Seven Star Fiends remaining!"

Linley nodded.

As soon as he had arrived in the Azure Dragon clan, Linley had heard that any one of those eight great clans were comparable to the Azure Dragon clan. The number of Seven Star Fiends in the eight great clans, all combined, definitely was far greater than the number the Four Divine Beasts clan had.

"Linley, do you know how many Elders we had before the ancestor died?" Arhaus said.

"How many?" Linley asked.

"More than sixty. And that was just our Azure Dragon tribe." Arhaus said, and Linley couldn't help but sigh in shock. "No wonder it was said that the Four Divine Beasts clansmen dominated each of the major planes. Not only did we have a strong supporter, we ourselves had tremendous power."

"Only, while we were regrouping, enemies attacked from every direction. Linley, you must understand that the clans which pursued us all the way to the Infernal Realm just represent the minority. We have many enemies in the other planes." Arhaus said resignedly.

The Four Divine Beasts clan truly had too many enemies.

As many as eight clans were still in pursuit of them. Most likely, when the Four Divine Beasts clan had been spread across each of the major planes, the number of enemies they had was far more than their current number.

"All we can do is go all out." Forhan said solemnly.

"Right. We can only go all out!" Arhaus said as well. "If we just hide in the Skyrite Mountains like turtles in a shell and don't even fight back, most likely we'll become the laughing stock of the major clans of the Infernal Realm. Our Four Divine Beasts clan cannot be humiliated like that!"

While they were chatting, Linley and the others were heading deeper into Bloodbath Gorge.

Within Bloodbath Gorge, there was an organized array of buildings that were arranged in rows like soldiers, divided into various areas. On the way over, Linley encountered small groups of experts as well, all of whom were at least of the Six Star Fiend level of power.

Linley couldn't help but sigh in amazement.

"This is the true foundation of a great clan. And a great clan which has fallen, at that." Linley was amazed, while at the same time, stunned by the savagery of the warfare between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans.

“We’ve arrived at the Azure Dragon Palace!” Arhaus said.

Linley lifted his head. In front was a building that was at least thirty meters tall, completely dark red in color. At the tip of the building, there was something that was dimly glowing with azure light. There were four buildings of this appearance within Bloodbath Gorge.

“The Grand Elder is on the fifth floor of the Azure Dragon Palace. This palace is the place where we normally gather together.” Arhaus said.

He led Linley, Emanuel, and Forhan directly to the fifth floor. The entire Azure Dragon Palace actually didn’t even have a single maid or servant within.

The main hall on the fifth floor appeared to be rather wide and empty.

“Where is the Grand Elder?” Linley stared around the main hall, puzzled.

Linley suddenly had a feeling, and he turned to look towards the side of the hall. He saw a tall, slender human figure fly over, her entire body enveloped in a long black robe. Her graceful, jade-green hair fell down past her waist, and her face was covered by a silver mask which had a strange light flowing atop it.

As this person entered the main hall, Arhaus and the others all fell silent.

"She is the Grand Elder?" Linley looked at this person carefully.

"Whoosh!" The mysterious woman's long robe rustled as she sat down on the head seat in the hall. She swept everyone present with her icy gaze, pausing momentarily on Linley, and then she said in a cold, clear voice, "You can all be seated."

"Yes, Grand Elder." The four replied respectfully.

Linley, puzzled, glanced at Forhan. Supposedly, Forhan was the son of the Grand Elder. But he, too, addressed her as 'Grand Elder'? In his heart, he was puzzled, but Linley still sat down alongside Forhan and the others.

"Linley." The Grand Elder suddenly said while looking at Linley.

"Grand Elder." Linley bowed fractionally.

"I heard that you defeated Emanuel, then became an Elder." The Grand Elder said coolly.

"Correct." Linley immediately responded, but in his heart, he was puzzled. "What does the Grand Elder mean by this? Is she warning me, or...? Emanuel is her grandson, after all." Although he didn't understand, Linley remained calm.

"I know that you and Emanuel have some misgivings about each other. However, I hope that the two of you will be unified and will be able to work with each other." The Grand Elder said.

Linley was startled. He couldn't help but turn to look at Emanuel, who was also currently looking towards Linley.

"Work together with him?" Linley felt that this was a huge joke.

The Grand Elder's voice was like clashing steel. "Ever since Father fell, our Four Divine Beasts clan has been in unprecedentedly dire straits. Although we are now all assembled in Indigo Prefecture, we still meet with constant challenges and provocations."

"However, we are the Four Divine Beasts clan! We, the members of the Four Divine Beasts clan, will not allow ourselves to be humiliated!"

"Although we can hide in the Skyrise Mountains like a turtle in its shell, our proud clansmen will not submit and be humiliated. One Elder after another, leading the elites of our clan, has gone out to do battle against the enemy. Any who challenges or provokes our clan will be punished!"

"The experts of our Four Divine Beasts clan are not as numerous as those of those eight great clans. Thus, we absolutely must be unified."

The Grand Elder swept her gaze across the people present. "Linley, I don't care what sort of problems you and Emanuel have had in the past. From today onward, you two are not permitted to battle against each other. If such a thing happens...I will be the first to kill both of you!"

"Yes, Grand Elder."

Linley and Emanuel replied in unison.

"Our Azure Dragon Palace has, in total, twenty squads. Currently, there are three squads that do not have a captain. They are Squad Thirteen, Squad Fifteen, and Squad Nineteen." The Grand Elder said calmly. "I will make the arrangements. Linley..."

Linley took a step forward.

"From today onward, you will be the captain of Squad Thirteen of the Azure Dragon clan in Bloodbath Gorge!"

"Yes." Linley acknowledged respectfully.

The Grand Elder's gaze turned to Forhan, her voice as cold as ever. "Forhan, from today onward, you will be the captain of Squad Fifteen of the Azure Dragon clan in Bloodbath Gorge!"

"Yes." Forhan took a step forward as well as he acknowledged respectfully.

"Emanuel, from today onward, you will be the captain of Squad Nineteen of the Azure Dragon clan in Bloodbath Gorge!"

Emanuel also strode forward and assented.

"Very good." The Grand Elder nodded slightly, then looked at Arhaus.

"Arhaus, you can now lead Linley to the location of Squad Thirteen. Afterwards, come back. I have an assignment for you."

"An assignment?" Arhaus' eyes lit up.

"First take Linley to his place." The Grand Elder ordered.

"Yes." Arhaus immediately turned and looked towards Linley, who nodded, then followed Arhaus away. As he left, Linley heard the Grand Elder's voice. "Forhan, Emanuel, you stay here. There's something I will discuss with you!"

And then, Linley and Arhaus left the Azure Dragon Palace.

“Why did this Grand Elder have Forhan and Emanuel stay behind?” Linley felt suspicious. “The Grand Elder, on the surface, said that we have to be unified, but in the end, Forhan is still her son and Emanuel is still her grandson. It’s unlikely that she’ll be completely impartial.”

“Whoosh!” A cold wind blew past, interrupting Linley’s pondering.

Linley and Arhaus walked together on the stone road. There were quite a few courtyards on each side of the stone road, all seeming quite plain. Linley and Arhaus were both thinking on their own matters, and so didn’t speak to each other.

“Ah, Linley.” Arhaus suddenly laughed. “I’m sorry. I was thinking about my assignment. I’ve been neglecting you.”

“It’s fine.” Linley said with amusement. “As long as you don’t lead me the wrong way.”

“Bloodbath Gorge is only so large. There’s less than a thousand people here, all combined. How could I get lost?” Arhaus laughed. “Your Squad Thirteen has a total of ten squad members, all experts of the clan. They are all at least at the Six Star Fiend level, and some of them are approaching the Seven Star Fiend level.”

Arhaus warned, “Linley, don’t underestimate them. After all, there isn’t a huge difference between Six Star Fiends and Seven Star Fiends.”

Linley nodded.

For example, that 'Learmonth' he had encountered in the Redbud Continent was a Six Star Fiend, but he was very nearly at the level of a Seven Star Fiend in power.

"Some are skilled in soul attacks, others specialize in material attacks, while still others specialize in escaping. Everyone has their own special techniques as well. Some rely on sound, others rely on venom...in short, Six Star Fiends aren't necessarily weaker than Seven Star Fiends. As long as you lead them well and give good guidance and seize the weaknesses of the enemies, it's not impossible to overcome a deficit in power." Arhaus said.

"Well spoken." Linley nodded in approval.

For example, before he himself had undergone the Ancestral Baptism, he was capable of defeating a Seven Star Fiend who specialized in material attacks, but was afraid of Six Star Fiends who specialized in soul attacks.

Power wasn't an absolute concept.

"Arhaus, look. The aura those warriors have is extraordinary." Linley saw that in the distance, there were three blood-robed warriors walking on the road. These three had callous, grim faces. Even when smiling, they made others feel great pressure.

This was because experts like them were brimming with killing intent.

"The warriors of Bloodbath Gorge have all encountered countless life-and-death battles. Naturally, they will carry the aura of those battles with them." Arhaus said in praise.

"We arrived at Squad Thirteen." Arhaus suddenly said.

Linley saw as well that up ahead, there was a stone pillar, atop which was carved the word, 'Thirteen'. At the sides of the stone pillar were carved names, quite a few of which were red.

"The names on top are those of the members of Squad Thirteen over the past ten thousand years." Arhaus said solemnly. "A single squad usually has ten squad members. Each time a squad member dies, they will be replaced. The deceased squad members will have their names turn red."

Linley looked carefully at each of the names.

"Squad Thirteen!" Arhaus suddenly roared.

Instantly, people came flying out from rooms nearby the stone pillar, each of them dressed in a blood-colored war-uniform. In the blink of an eye, the ten Six Star Fiend squad members had all arrived. Linley carefully looked at them.

Eight men, two women.

"These ten, just judging from their aura alone, are all extraordinary. They feel like ten Learmonths." Linley said to himself.

When he had just entered the Infernal Realm, how could Linley have imagined that today, he would be commanding ten Six Star Fiends?

"Elder Arhaus?" A woman with short jade hair said. "Who is this person by your side?" The other Six Star Fiends also looked at Linley in puzzlement. They clearly didn't recognize Linley.

"This is our Azure Dragon clan's newest Elder, 'Linley'." Arhaus said. "He is also the captain of your Squad Thirteen."

"Captain?" The ten Six Star Fiends looked at each other.

"He really is an Elder?" A man asked.

Laughing, Linley flipped his hand, revealing a medallion. This was the Elder's medallion he had received after becoming an Elder. Upon seeing this medallion, the ten squad members were no longer dubious. They all said respectfully, "Captain!"

Any of the battle squads within Bloodbath Gorge had an Elder as the captain.

Thus, when they saw that Linley was an Elder, they naturally recognized him as their captain.

"Captain, my name is Melina [Mei'li'na]." The jade-haired woman laughed. "I wonder, Captain, if you can demonstrate your ultimate technique to us?"

Linley was slightly startled, then glanced at the other Six Star Fiends. None of them said anything, but from their gazes, it was apparent that they wanted Linley to give a demonstration. Linley mused to himself, "It seems that soldiers in both the material planes as well as the higher planes are all the same; to be a good commander, you first have to be able to impress your subordinates."

How could Six Star Fiends not have their own pride?

If they didn't personally witness Linley's power, how could they possibly submit willingly?

"You guys..." Arhaus laughed.

"Then I'll let you experience it for yourself." Linley laughed calmly. Immediately, a blurry, earthen yellow light sprang up, instantly forming a large globe of light that covered all ten of the squad members within.

Blackstone Space!

The sudden appearance of the Blackstone Space caused the ten Six Star Fiends to be caught completely off guard. Three of them even swayed, nearly falling before hurriedly using their hands to push off the floor in order to stand back up. In the Blackstone Space, even Six Star Fiends would still sense that astonishing gravity.

"When you are under such tremendous pressure, tell me...would it be easy for me to kill you?" Linley laughed calmly.

The ten squad members, having experienced that terrifying gravity, looked at each other then laughed.

"Captain!" The ten simultaneously fell to one knee, paying their respects to him.

They completely submitted.

Linley laughed, then withdrew his Blackstone Space. "You can all rise."

"Captain, this is wonderful. With your Gravitational Space, when fighting against enemies, we will have a huge advantage." A muscular man said excitedly. "In the Gravitational Space, the enemy's movements will be restricted, but ours will not. Even if the enemy is a Seven Star Fiend, I'd still dare to give them a good fight."

That the personal strength of the captain was strong wouldn't cause these squad members to be too excited. After all, the strength of the captain was a personal matter.

What truly made them was when a captain was skilled at supportive techniques and able to assist all the squad members. Like Linley! As long as Linley didn't apply the Gravitational Space to them, they could easily battle against more powerful Seven Star Fiends.

"What is your name?" Linley laughed as he looked at the muscular man in front of him.

"My name is Shanda [Shan'ta]!" The muscular man immediately laughed.

"All of you, introduce yourselves to me." Linley laughed as he looked at his subordinates. From today onwards, as long as he wasn't dead, he would be the leader of this squad. They would battle together and share life and death together!

Linley deeply valued these subordinates of his.

These squad members were very excited as well, now that they had a captain whose ultimate technique was a supportive ability. They naturally were very exuberant in chatting with Linley.

"Linley." The nearby Arhaus finally spoke out.

"Oh. Apologies." Linley immediately said. "While chatting with them, I forgot that you, Elder Arhaus, were still here."

Arhaus shook his head and laughed. "It's fine. However, I can't stay here much longer. The Grand Elder has an assignment for me. I have to make a trip."

Arhaus parted with Linley, who moved into the residence for the captain of Squad Thirteen. From this day onward, Linley had to lead these ten Six Star Fiends into battle against the eight great clans.

Time passed quickly, and in the blink of an eye, more than a year had passed.

Within that gorge in the Skyrise Mountains.

Delia was resting against Linley's arm, leaning against him while the two took a stroll together. Linley looked at Delia by his side, and in his heart, a slow, gentle feeling emerged. Linley deeply enjoyed this sort of warm feeling.

"Linley, at first, I thought that when you became a captain at that Bloodbath Gorge, you would immediately go engage in battles and not have time to accompany me. So as it turns out, the battles are actually quite rare." Delia especially valued the time she and Linley had to spend together.

The clan was in a crisis. Delia knew this, and she wouldn't force Linley to do anything. It was enough for her to value what they had.

"I've been a captain for a year now, but I haven't engaged in a single battle." Linley laughed calmly. "Actually, the number of battles each squad in Bloodbath Gorge engages in is fairly low. Only, every single battle is against the top-tier experts of the enemy clans, and in each battle, life and death are separated by only a hair. We have Seven Star Fiends, but they do as well, and in fact, they have even more! We are in a position of weakness!"

Linley felt the pressure as well, while at the same time, he felt that he also wasn't doing right by Delia.

Whether it was in the Yulan Plane or here in the Infernal Realm, Delia had always quietly supported him. Even as they roamed in every direction and faced one crisis after another, Delia had never complained.

"As long as I don't have any missions, I'll always be by your side." Linley said gently into Delia's ear, while at the same time he kissed her by her earlobe.

Delia's face instantly turned slightly rosy.

"We're outdoors." Delia immediately looked around. She couldn't help but glare at Linley, her cheeks flushed.

Linley just laughed.

No matter what sort of battles or difficulties he encountered, when he was with Delia, Linley felt incredibly relaxed. With Delia here, his soul had a harbor to return to.

The second year Linley was serving as the captain of Squad Thirteen.

Bloodbath Gorge didn't have too many requirements of its captains, who normally were able to live in other places throughout the Skyrise Mountains. If there was an assignment, they naturally would be informed. As for those ordinary squad members, each year, they were permitted one month outside of the gorge.

"Elder.

"Elder."

As Linley walked on the stone road within Bloodbath Gorge, quite a few blood-robed warriors called out to him respectfully upon seeing him. This was true for not just the Azure Dragon clan, but also the White Tiger clan, or the other two clans. In Bloodbath Gorge, they were all the same.

After such a long period of time, they all recognized Linley.

"Arhaus." Linley saw, to his surprise, that in the distance, there was a familiar figure. Arhaus. Only, Arhaus had a terrible look on his face. Linley immediately walked over, and Arhaus saw Linley as well.

"Linley." Arhaus forced out a smile.

"Arhaus, it's been a year since I saw you. Your mission is complete?" Linley laughed.

"The mission is complete." Arhaus let out a low sigh.

"What is it?" Linley had a bad premonition.

Arhaus glanced at Linley, a bitter look in his eyes. "Linley, didn't you notice that this body is a divine wind clone?"

"Uh...right." Linley carefully scrutinized him, and Arhaus sighed. "The enemies for this mission were too powerful. Only four out of the ten members of my Squad Six are alive. The rest died. My most powerful clone, the divine water clone, was destroyed as well."

Linley was stunned.

The most powerful type of divine clone for the vast majority of the Azure Dragon clansmen was a divine water clone. If Linley had lived within the Four Divine Beasts clan ever since he was young, he too would have undergone the Ancestral Baptism at an early age, and most likely he too would primarily train in water, and not in the earth, as he currently did.

"Then you..." Linley didn't know what to say.

"My divine water clone is finished. What can I do?" Arhaus shook his head. "In the future, I won't be an Elder any longer. I don't have that level of power. The reason I came today was to report this to the Grand Elder."

When Elders went forth to do battle, they would leave their useless divine clones behind.

One reason was to be able to quickly provide intelligence reports to Bloodbath Gorge; the second was to preserve a life.

"Arhaus, don't be too dispirited." Linley didn't know what to say.

Arhaus took a deep breath. "What's there to be dispirited about? When I go back, I'll train hard. The day will come when my divine wind clone will become equally powerful. When that day comes, I'll go seek out that group of bastards once more!" A savage light appeared in Arhaus' eyes.

Linley, seeing the look on Arhaus' face, couldn't help but be astonished.

Linley suddenly realized that with this constant cycle of revenge, the hatred between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans was growing deeper and deeper. The experts of the Four Divine Beasts clan were dying, but so too were the experts of the enemies. If this continued...

The end result definitely would be a case where one side would be wiped out.

"Linley, in battle, you cannot show any mercy. These are not ordinary battles. Between our Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans, there will never be a day of reconciliation. As soon as they have a chance, they will mercilessly kill you." Arhaus warned.

"Don't worry."

Linley had come all the way from the Yulan Plane. He knew what was an appropriate time to show mercy, and what was an appropriate time to be ruthless! To be merciful to the members of the eight great clans was the same as being ruthless to his own clansmen.

"Elder Linley!" A blood-robed warrior came running from afar.

Linley turned to look. "What is it?" Linley didn't recognize this blood-robed warrior.

The blood-robed warrior bowed respectfully. "The Grand Elder is asking you to see her, Elder Linley."

Linley felt a surge of excitement. He had been the captain of this Squad Thirteen for almost a year now, but this was the first time the Grand Elder had summoned him.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 23, Receiving the Order

“Has a mission finally come?” Linley turned to look at Arhaus, saying apologetically, “Arhaus, I need to go speak with the Grand Elder.”

Arhaus, his face solemn, immediately said, “Linley, the Grand Elder won’t summon you without a reason. For her to be summoning you now, there’s a 90% chance it has to do with having you go do battle against the eight great clans. Linley, you must be careful. The eight great clans truly are formidable.”

They had been able to force the Four Divine Beasts clan into a situation like this. If it hadn’t been for the Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture, the Four Divine Beasts clan might even have been eradicated. How could the eight great clans not be powerful?

“I will be careful.”

Linley laughed, then immediately turned and moved at high speed towards the Azure Dragon Palace of the Grand Elder. The blood-robed warrior immediately followed as well.

Arhaus watched as Linley left, then softly said, “Brother Linley, you have to make it back alive!”

Every single clan of the Four Divine Beasts clans and the eight great clans could be ranked amongst the top twenty clans of the entire Infernal Realm. So many ancient clans had moved here from other planes, gathering here to engage in a wild battle.

This sort of large-scale battle between supreme clans was something which the Four Higher Planes might not see even once in countless years.

Experts against experts!

In this sort of war, the true battles were primarily carried out by Six Star Fiends and Seven Star Fiends. Battles at this level...generally speaking, how many experts on this level could a single clan have? After all, in the Infernal Realm, any clan that had a single Seven Star Fiend would be considered a formidable clan.

However, in the battles between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans...one Seven Star Fiend after another was killed, while Six Star Fiends were killed in batches!

This sort of vicious battle between supreme clans had stunned the countless clans of the Infernal Realm. They could do nothing but watch! Even a clan as powerful as the Bagshaw clan wouldn't dare to get involved. After all, the war was simply too brutal.

As for someone as powerful as Linley, in this sort of large-scale war with no retreat, he would be one of the Seven Star Fiends that would engage in blood-soaked battle for the Azure Dragon clan.

The Azure Dragon Palace. The fifth floor's main hall.

A long black robe. Loose azure hair. A silver mask. This was the Grand Elder of the Azure Dragon clan! The Grand Elder's body seemed quite tall and slender. She sat there quietly, not moving at all. There was no way to tell what she was thinking.

A long time later...

"It's time to let him gain some experience." The Grand Elder let out a slow sigh.

Suddenly, the Grand Elder turned her head to look at the door. Hearing footsteps ring out, she then saw Linley stride in. Upon seeing the Grand Elder, Linley immediately saluted respectfully. "Linley greets the Grand Elder."

"Linley. Sit!" The Grand Elder said calmly.

Linley immediately saluted, then sat down.

"Linley, you have been the captain of Squad Thirteen for more than a year now, right?" The Grand Elder said.

"Yes, Grand Elder." Linley replied.

The Grand Elder's voice turned gentle. "Do you know that after you defeated Emanuel and were promoted to the rank of Elder by the Patriarch, the Patriarch and I have been in earnest discussions regarding you."

Linley was stunned.

At this moment, the voice of the Grand Elder was very friendly. This couldn't help but cause Linley to feel puzzled. The Grand Elder was usually always quite cold and emotionless; why was she like this today? "Can it also be because of the Coiling Dragon ring?" Linley said to himself.

The Coiling Dragon ring was the soul-protecting Sovereign artifact of the Sovereign 'Azure Dragon'.

"Originally, the Patriarch wanted to let you continue to train. After all, given your current accomplishments, if you reach the Highgod level, you will definitely become yet another trump card our clan has!" The Grand Elder sighed. "Currently, you are only a Seven Star Fiend. You can't be considered a trump card yet."

"Trump card?" Linley looked at the Grand Elder.

If he were to train to the Highgod level, first of all, his soul would undergo a qualitative change. Not only would his soul defense strengthen yet again, even his 'Blackstone Space' and his 'Dragon Roar' would rise dramatically in power.

"When we say 'trump cards', we refer to experts who have surpassed ordinary Seven Star Fiends, and are comparable to the Asuras of the Infernal Realm or the Commanders of Purgatory." The Grand Elder said.

Linley nodded.

The Infernal Asuras and the Purgatory Commanders were indeed far mightier than most Seven Star Fiends.

For example, 'Reisgem'. Linley had just learned the 'Blackstone Space' from him, and had consequently become so powerful. But if Reisgem himself had used the technique? Also, the Purgatory Commander who was behind the Bagshaw clan, 'Mosi'. He was able to easily defeat 'Lomio', whose power had already approached the Asura level. The Infernal Realm's Asuras, the Commanders of Purgatory...each and every one of them was a terrifyingly powerful opponent.

They were all very close to being at the very peak of possible power for Highgods.

"In our Azure Dragon clan, only three people, throughout all these countless years, have been considered 'trump cards'." The Grand Elder said. "Aside from myself and the Patriarch, the only other one is that 'Genius Elder', Blue [Bu'lu]."

"Elder Blue?" Linley knew this person as well.

He himself had been publicly acknowledged by the many Elders as having the fourth most powerful body in the Azure Dragon clan. The first and the second most powerful bodies naturally belonged to the Patriarch and the Grand Elder. As for the third, that was their 'Genius Elder', Blue. Blue's might was utterly unquestionable.

"A true trump card cannot have any weaknesses, be it in material defense or spiritual defense! On this foundation of having no weaknesses, one then needs to have an ultimate technique that can allow one to dominate the Infernal Realm. This is what a trump card is!"

The Grand Elder shook her head. "You are currently just a God. Although by relying on the Azure Dragon ring, you are able to make up for the difference in soul strength, I imagine that the Azure Dragon ring should be a damaged one, and so you still have a flaw."

Linley nodded.

"Thus, your weakness is your soul defense. After all, in terms of quality, your soul strength is just at the God level." The Grand Elder shook her head as she spoke. "Only once you become a Highgod can you be considered as flawless."

"When the Patriarch saw you!" The Grand Elder's voice contained a hint of joy. "He knew that our clan would in the future have our fourth trump card!"

Linley couldn't help but laugh.

Naturally, he felt happy upon being hearing praise. Only, Linley also knew that he would only 'in the future' become the fourth trump card.

The Grand Elder glanced at Linley, then sighed softly. "Unfortunately, you aren't a Highgod."

Linley didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. He said to himself, "Grand Elder, do you know that if it hadn't been for your grandson Emanuel, I would only have gone out to do battle after training to the Highgod level." In addition, it had been Forhan who had used verbal traps to force him to go to Bloodbath Gorge.

Linley had no choices.

"Linley, how is your soul defense?" The Grand Elder asked.

"Even if I encounter Seven Star Fiends skilled in soul attacks, I would dare do battle against them." Linley said very proudly, but then he said with resignation, "But of course, if I were to encounter a super-expert who is extremely skilled in soul attacks, then I won't be able to fight."

For example, the Purgatory Commander 'Mosi'.

This person was able to control the souls of even Seven Star Fiends. Soul attacks as powerful as his definitely weren't manageable for the likes of Linley.

"If that's the case...that's good enough."

The Grand Elder's voice contained a hint of exuberance. "In order to make things safer, you can go ambush the forces of the Barbary clan. Actually, only against their forces will you have an above 90% chance of survival."

Above 90% chance of survival? And only against the Barbary clan?

Linley couldn't help but feel speechless.

His body was tough, and his soul wasn't weak either. There shouldn't be many capable of killing him.

"Linley!"

The Grand Elder's forehead furrowed, and she shouted, "You must be careful, careful! You can't be the slightest bit negligent or lax. Every single Seven Star Fiend which engages in battle in this war between our Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans can be considered one of the top experts of the entire Infernal Realm! We have our trump cards, but the eight great clans have their own as well!"

"The Patriarch and I are both confident in our ability to easily kill you." The Grand Elder said coldly. "The eight great clans also have supreme experts who are comparable to us in power!"

Linley's heart trembled.

This was a rude awakening! Ever since his Ancestral Baptism, he did seem to have been a bit excessively overconfident.

He forgot the old saying; no matter how tall a mountain is, there is always a taller one somewhere!

Who were his foes?

They were supreme clans who had come in pursuit from other planes, and there were eight of them in total! Behind the Bagshaw clan was the Purgatory Commander, 'Mosi'. The Azure Dragon clan also had the Patriarch, the Grand Elder, and other such supreme experts.

Could it be the eight great clans didn't?

How powerful did their foes have to be, to be able to force the Four Divine Beasts clan to the point of needing the Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture to intervene?!

"Your potential is tremendous. Thus, I don't dare send you to carry out the most dangerous tasks. In the eight great clans, only the 'Barbary' clan that comes from the Divine Water Plane is unspecialized in soul attacks." The Grand Elder said. "The others, such as the Boleyn clan from the Celestial Realm, or the Chanel clan of the Divine Fire Plane, or the Ashcroft clan of the Netherworld...many of the experts of these clans are extremely proficient in soul attacks."

Linley's forehead began to be matted with sweat.

Most of the experts of the Boleyn clan trained in the 'Edicts of Fate'. When Linley had just arrived in Indigo Prefecture, he had personally watched those experts of the Boleyn clan easily kill a group of Highgods.

"Can't be overconfident. Can't be overconfident. The enemies are extremely strong, this time." Linley reminded himself.

Against ordinary clans or the ordinary experts of the Infernal Realm, he was indeed strong enough to be arrogant and proud.

A Seven Star Fiend? Yes, he was quite powerful.

But in this war between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans, this bit of power he had was only enough for him to participate! There were many who were more powerful than he was!

“The Barbary clan stems from the Divine Water Plane, and thus specializes in the Elemental Laws of Water. The Elemental Laws of Water are not very suited for soul attacks, but their soul defenses and physical defenses are all exceedingly powerful.” The Grand Elder said. “But as I see it, you have an advantage over them.”

Linley nodded.

As long as the opponents didn't specialize in soul attacks, he still had some degree of confidence.

“But you cannot be too overconfident. For example, our Azure Dragon clan also produced someone like you, who specializes in the Laws of the Earth. It is possible that perhaps this Barbary clan has also produced an expert who specializes in soul attacks.” The Grand Elder warned yet again.

“Understood.” How could Linley dare to continue to be overconfident?

With a flip of her hand, the Grand Elder retrieved a large map, and began to point out directions on the map...

As the Grand Elder continued to explain, Linley completely understood what this mission was about.

"Linley, leave behind a divine clone here at Bloodbath Gorge, just in case." The Grand Elder said.

"Right." Linley nodded. "Then Grand Elder, I'll go summon my forces."

"Go." The Grand Elder nodded.

Linley directly flew out from the fifth floor's window, leaving the Azure Dragon Palace and heading to the residences of Squad Thirteen. The Grand Elder watched as Linley flew away, and then she said softly, "The clan doesn't have enough time. We have to let Linley go participate in battle. Perhaps in the middle of the war, he will make breakthroughs faster."

.....

"All members of Squad Thirteen, assemble. We have a mission." Linley flew to a location directly above the residences of Squad Thirteen, then shouted.

Immediately, one figure after another shot out. Instantly, all ten of them were assembled. Those people who saw from afar that Squad Thirteen was assembling all silently prayed for them. Every single time a squad was sent out for a mission, they were dancing between life and death.

Currently, Squad Thirteen was fully manned, but after this mission was concluded, who knew how many would remain?

"Captain, we have a mission?" That jade-haired woman said in surprise.

"Right. Make your preparations. We're about to head out immediately." Linley said. At the same time, another 'Linley' flew out from his body, entering the captain's residence. It looked like just a single divine clone, but in reality, this divine clone had two other divine clones within it.

Linley was only taking a single divine clone on the mission.

"We're about to start again." The ten squad members all had solemn looks on their faces, and most of them also made their divine clones fly out from their bodies and return to their residences.

Linley looked at these ten, then said calmly, "Remember. On this assignment, you must completely obey my orders. I hope that just like how there were eleven of us when we set off, when we return, we will still number eleven."

"Yes, Captain." The ten replied in unison.

"Move out!"

Linley immediately took to the skies, flying directly south. The ten Six Star Fiends followed tightly behind him. The first mission for Squad Thirteen after Linley had become a captain was finally beginning!

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 24, Give Me a Ride

Linley was dressed in a sky-blue robe. As he moved through the skies, the long robe fluttered, ruffled by the wind. Behind him, those ten Six Star Fiends were also dressed in uniforms of various colors. While engaging in battle outside, if they were all dressed in the same uniform, it would be too obvious and would result in them being easily discovered by the enemy.

“Everyone, be careful. Our target this time is a squad of the Barbary clan. No matter what, don’t let them discover us. Just fly close to the ground.” Linley instructed, while at the same time, he himself flew downwards, moving close to the surface of the ground. The ten squadmates followed suit.

“Don’t worry, Captain. We won’t go out of our way to engage in battle. They won’t be able to find out.” Melina laughed.

Go out of their way to engage in battle?

Linley couldn’t help but think back to some information the Grand Elder had given him before battle had begun. Both the Four Divine Beasts clan as well as the eight great clans used ambushes, and also laid in wait for the enemy to draw near.

If, for example, the Four Divine Beasts clan didn’t want to fight, they would simply hide in the Skyrise Mountains, and there would be nothing the eight great clans could do about it.

If the eight great clans remained in their own territory and didn't come out, the Four Divine Beasts clan wouldn't go to them either.

However...

The eight great clans hated the Four Divine Beasts clan to the core, and the reverse was true as well! Thus, they intentionally challenged each other to battle, time and time again! Neither side would hide. Both sides knew that this was a war of attrition, but the eight great clans were willing to engage in this sort of war, while the Four Divine Beasts clan was too proud and unwilling to submit.

"The eight great clans is quite interesting. Each time, they'll take predefined routes. This is just a naked challenge." Linley said to himself.

Of the eight great clans, four of them were located at the eastern edges of Indigo Prefecture, while four were at the western edges of Indigo Prefecture. They were all very unified. They were worried that if they split up, the Four Divine Beasts clan would break them one by one.

But by dividing up in this manner, there was no way the Four Divine Beasts clan would be able to do so.

In addition...

The eight great clans on each side of Indigo Prefecture would often send squads of experts on round trip patrols. Each trip, they would take one of two predefined routes. Any members of the Four Divine Beasts clan they met on the way would be killed!

Sometimes, they would even engage in ambushes at the outer perimeter of the Skyrite Mountains.

“How could my Four Divine Beasts clan possibly swallow this sort of provocation? They are so arrogant as to take predetermined routes. If we just accept this, the Four Divine Beasts clan will become a laughingstock.” Linley understood that in their battles, the enemies were the proactive challengers. After all, their experts were simply too numerous.

After flying for roughly three days, Linley’s group reached their destination, an intelligence outpost located near the predetermined route. Linley glanced at a distant sand dune, which wasn’t very remarkable in this desolate, barren area.

“You can come out.” Linley said calmly.

This intelligence outpost had been provided by the Grand Elder.

The sand dune twisted, and then a figure emerged from within it. It was a very slender, yellow-robed youth. The yellow-robed youth, momentarily puzzled, glanced at Linley, who with a laugh, extended his hand, revealing the Elder’s medallion within.

“Greetings, Elder.” The youth said hurriedly.

“When will the forces of the Barbary clan arrive?” Linley asked.

This intelligence outpost relied on using some special methods, as well as two divine clones in separate locations, to be able to quickly provide intelligence reports. This allowed intelligence reports to be transmitted very quickly. Even over a distance of a hundred million kilometers, the receiver would have the information as soon as the sender sent it.

“To be precise, it is presumed forces of the Barbary clan.” The intelligence agent said. “The presumed forces of the Barbary clan are still millions of kilometers away. Based on their advancing speed, in one or two days, they will arrive here.”

Linley nodded.

“You said, presumed? Can it be that you are not yet completely certain that it is the forces of the Barbary clan?” Linley asked, rather concerned.

“There’s no way to be absolutely certain. That squad, according to our intelligence reports, is primarily made up of water-type experts, but there are two who are not. We are only able to provisionally identify them as members of the Barbary clan, but it is also possible that this is a joint squad formed from two clans.” The youth said.

Linley frowned.

A mixed squad? This was exceedingly rare.

This was because the Elders of the Four Divine Beasts clan generally carried a drop of Sovereign’s Might on them. Once they no longer cared about life and death and activated that drop of Sovereign’s Might and went all out, even a Seven Star Fiend opponent would be doomed.

Thus, the enemy preferred to fight one-on-one. Only in a special circumstance, for example when the target was a Patriarch or Grand Elder level figure, would they send out a joint squad.

"You can stand down for now." Linley instructed.

"The rest of you, follow me." Linley flew into the air, and the ten Six Star Fiends followed.

The intelligence agent raised his head, watching them fly away. In his heart, he murmured, "Clansmen, you must win." As an intelligence agent, he too walked that fine line between life and death. If he were to be discovered by the enemies, the enemies wouldn't hesitate at all to kill him.

In addition, most of these intelligence agents were very weak.

Their only hope was that experts like Linley would avenge them if they were killed!

A few thousand kilometers away from the intelligence outpost, Linley's group came to a halt, hiding themselves within a mountain forest. Everyone had very grave expressions on their faces. They all knew that once battle begin, they would very possibly die.

"Captain. When the enemies come, what is our plan?" The big fellow, 'Shanda', asked. The other squadmates looked at Linley as well.

"The first target is the enemy's Seven Star Fiend." Linley laughed calmly. "Ambushing is pointless. Given their divine sense, they'll be able to locate us. You just need to wait here. Once the enemies draw near, you can fly into my Blackstone Space and begin battle against them."

"Us, fly in?" Immediately, some squadmates grasped Linley's meaning. "Captain, you aren't going to attack alongside us?"

If they were to remain together, Linley would naturally include them within the Blackstone Space, and thus there was no need for them to 'fly in'.

"Right. I'll go ambush them." Linley laughed.

"What?" The ten people were shocked.

"Captain, you can't risk yourself like that. It's better if we stay together. How can you attack by yourself? It is too risky. Even if the ten of us die, you can't die, Captain." A skinny man said hurriedly.

Seven Star Fiends were extremely precious to the clan. They represented a mighty pillar supporting the clan.

"Don't worry. By attacking by myself, I have more than 90% confidence of success." Linley laughed.

"Huh?" The ten squadmates were stunned.

"As I will be hiding my aura, they'll only take me to be a God. They won't be on guard against me." Linley said. Indigo Prefecture was like other places; there were many tribes to be seen everywhere.

Gods were very common in the Infernal Realm.

Linley's group, while flying over, had encountered quite a few Gods and Demigods. Naturally, they didn't pay them any mind.

"They won't care about me, but when I draw near to them, I'll launch a sudden attack against them. This will definitely have an extraordinarily good effect." Linley said confidently.

"Captain." That Melina said worriedly. "Based on what we can see, you are indeed just a God. Your aura-hiding abilities are indeed formidable. But the enemies are Seven Star Fiends as well. There might be one of them who is capable of detecting your true power, that you are a Highgod."

The fact that Linley really was just a God was something which only a very, very small number of people in the entire Azure Dragon clan knew about.

For example, the Patriarch and the Grand Elder had discovered this on their own. As for others, even Emanuel believed Linley to be a Highgod who had previously been hiding his power.

"Discover my true power? Discover that I'm a Highgod?" Linley laughed.

He himself really was a God. Why would he need to hide his aura?

"Don't worry. The enemy won't find out." Linley said with supreme confidence.

Immediately, another squad member said worriedly, "Captain, you can't risk yourself like this. We should join forces and attack together. If we work together, we can still..."

"Enough." Linley frowned. "I've made up my mind. Stop talking."

The ten squadmates looked at each other, but they had no choice but to accept resignedly. Linley was the captain. At a time like this, they had to obey the orders of their captain. This was a basic requirement.

"You stay here. I'll be ten kilometers away." Linley instructed. "At such a short distance, once battle begins, you'll notice it right away. You can immediately hurry to my location. In addition, their divine sense won't be able to locate you."

Generally speaking, the divine sense of a Highgod only extended to a thousand meters or so.

Even a Seven Star Fiend was limited to just a few thousand meters. But normally, would they extend their divine sense to the maximum range? Even in a battle squad, the Seven Star Fiend leader would generally just extend his divine sense to a thousand meters, to guarantee a degree of safety.

"Remember. Once battle begins, immediately come. But before it begins, you are not to draw near." Linley snapped.

The ten were all worried for Linley.

"Do you understand?" Linley roared.

"Yes, Captain." The ten affirmed.

Linley then flew towards a section of the road in front of them. "Captain, be careful." A voice rang out from behind. Linley couldn't help but chuckle. He immediately flew over ten kilometers, where there was a small, squad mountain. Linley dug a cave into the side of the tunnel, then entered it.

Within the cave, he was able to stare at the skies outside through the cave entrance.

"I'll just pretend to be an ordinary God." Linley laughed.

Linley was completely confident in this ambush. It would be a strange thing if they were able to see through it. After all, he really was a God.

Time passed, and in the blink of an eye, a day had gone by.

"Swoosh!"

Linley discovered a human figure flying over at high speed. It was that intelligence agent. In the short span of a day, the intelligence agent had already made multiple reports regarding the location of the enemy.

"Elder, the enemies are about to arrive. They are currently less than ten thousand kilometers from here." The youth said hurriedly. "Elderly, remember clearly that the enemies are riding a metallic lifeform, which is shaped into a jade-green serpent.

"Less than ten thousand kilometers?" Linley was startled into full alert.

A metallic lifeform of a squad of the eight great clans advanced fairly quickly, capable of travelling four or five million kilometers in a day. Less than ten thousand kilometers would be traversed in a short period of time.

"Hurry up and inform the others." Linley immediately instructed.

"Yes, Elder." The intelligence agent, knowing that battle was coming, immediately flew away.

Linley immediately flew out of his cave. Walking in the mountain forests by one's self was a fairly dangerous thing in the Infernal Realm, because other Deities would often be encountered. But Linley wanted this to happen...because this made him all the more unremarkable in the Infernal Realm.

An enormous green serpent flew through the air. It was the metallic lifeform.

"Elder, do you think the Four Divine Beasts clan will dare ambush us this time?" The metallic lifeform had more than ten people.

"Ambush us?"

The Elder was a bald man, very tall and powerful, at least three meters in height. The other squad members were all very tall, the shortest being 2.5 meters. This was caused by the special lineage of the Barbary clan. The eyes of the Elder gleamed with green light, and he laughed, "This time, we have Mr. Mosley [Mau'si'li] accompanying us. I am specialized in material attacks, while he is specialized in soul attacks. No matter who comes, there is no way they will escape with their life."

"Cole [Ke'luo], I trust that your Barbary clan will be able to dispose of anyone without needing me to interfere." The speaker was a balding old man who was dressed in a plain gray robe. His ear had two little serpents coiled through them.

.....

"Kid, you, a mere God, dare to roam about in the Infernal Realm? Hurry up, hand over your interspatial ring." In front of Linley, more than ten bandits had appeared. There were simply too many bandits in the Infernal Realm. Even though Linley had worked hard to avoid them, in the end, he had still run into some.

"Interspatial ring?" Linley pretended to be terrified. "Okay, okay, I'll give it to you.”

“Haha, not bad.” Those bandits, seeing how obedient Linley was, were very happy. One of them laughed, “We are in a benevolent mood and will spare your life. However, you have to join us. If you do not...”

“I’ll join.” Linley hurriedly nodded.

Right at this moment, in the distant skies, an enormous green serpent was flying over at high speed. Linley was overjoyed. This was the metallic lifeform of the enemy.

“Eh...why haven’t you handed the interspatial ring over yet?” A bandit shouted.

“Swoosh!” Linley suddenly charged into the skies.

The bandits were astonished, but then, enraged, they chased into the skies as well.

The metallic lifeform flew past, and as Linley rose into the heavens, he just so happened to draw near as well. The Six Star Fiends and Seven Star Fiends within couldn’t help but be rather unhappy.

“Motherf*cker, a group of bandits are causing trouble. They actually charged all the way over to us.”

They had already discovered that the people below them consisted of Gods. They weren't worried at all.

"Milords, please, save me. Help give me a ride. These people want to kill me." Linley immediately flew to the side of that metallic lifeform, his face filled with terror and panic.

"F*ck off!" A Six Star Fiend immediately shouted.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 25, Blood Splattering the Skies

The experts within the metallic lifeform were all frowning. They felt annoyed at a God coming and begging them for help. How could they be bothered to pay attention to minor figures like this?

“Save me!” Linley said frantically, but his gaze pierced through the metallic lifeform, seeing the people within clearly.

“If you stay here, we’ll kill you.” One of the Six Star Fiends shouted angrily.

“Haha, punk, you won’t be able to escape.” The group of bandits flew over as well. Only, they didn’t dare to disturb the metallic lifeform, for fear that the experts within would vent their anger on them.

“Let’s go. Stop paying attention to them.” The bald captain said calmly.

“BANG!” Suddenly, the metallic lifeform blew apart violently! All of the experts within the metallic lifeform were immediately shocked into wakefulness, while at the same time an earthen yellow light spread out, encapsulating a spherical region with a diameter of five hundred meters...Blackstone Space!

A powerful gravity that was pulling towards Linley!

“Whoosh, whoooosh.” The shattered metal scraps of the metallic lifeform flew out wildly towards Linley as well. During the explosion, everything was in a state of chaos, and none of the experts within the metallic lifeform had any idea what was going on.

In particular, that bald captain. He saw, to his amazement, that a clawed hand covered with draconic scales had appeared in front of his eyes!

"Not good, the Azure Dragon clan!" The bald captain only had enough time to be shocked and know what was about to happen.

"Slash!"

Linley's sharp claws moved as fast as lightning, piercing directly into the bald captain's head. "Bang!" The skull exploded, sending fresh blood flying everywhere and colliding with the shattered remnants of the metallic lifeform. A single Highgod spark fell into Linley's palm.

In an instant, a Seven Star Fiend had died!

This Seven Star Fiend really had died an unfair death. When Linley had flown next to the metallic lifeform's window, the distance between him and the captain was less than five or six meters. Five or six meters, to experts on Linley's level...

In but an instant, like the striking of a flint, he had killed the opponent!

The only thing the Seven Star Fiend had done wrong was that he had been not been on guard at all. He didn't suspect that the God who had been begging for help was actually a Seven Star Fiend!

"One." Linley's dark golden eyes swept the people in front of him. Previously, he had seen everyone within the metallic lifeform, but was only able to tell that the bald person was apparently their leader. He couldn't tell what everyone else's position was.

Thus, Linley's first target had been that man.

"Whooooosh."

Within the powerful gravitational field of the Blackstone Space, the enemy experts frantically tried to resist the gravity, while at the same time, they discovered to their amazement that their captain had already been killed in an instant.

"Captain!" Quite a few of the Fiends called out in alarm.

"So he was their captain." Linley was overjoyed. His guess had been correct. By relying on a sneak attack, he had killed a Seven Star Fiend. Thus, he had accomplished more than half of this mission.

Only now did those Fiends understand!

"So he is an expert of the Four Divine Beasts clan." They now noticed Linley's Dragonformed body.

"Mr. Mosley." They hurriedly sent to the other Seven Star Fiend.

Mosley was from the Ashcroft clan, and was specialized in soul attacks. He was the other Seven Star Fiend in this squad. As the captain, 'Cole', had already died, he naturally became the commander of these people.

"His ability to hide his aura was actually at such an amazing level." Mosley was amazed as well. "Not even I was able to notice that he was actually a supreme expert."

Mosley had been trapped into the same erroneous line of thinking. As he wasn't able to sense Linley's Highgod aura, he thus took Linley for someone whose ability to hide his aura was tremendously strong, and therefore as an expert who specialized in soul attacks. "Given his ability to hide his aura, he must be an expert who specializes in soul attacks."

"Use material attacks to kill him." Mosley hurriedly ordered those Six Star Fiends.

"Yes!"

The Six Star Fiends immediately acknowledged.

.....

"Boom!" The terrifying energy wave spread out, and the ten Six Star Fiends located ten kilometers away from Linley instantly were shocked into wakefulness. Not long ago, they had just receive the report from the intelligence agent, and so they have been on high alert this entire time.

"Battle!" Their ten faces all changed.

"Captain." Melina was frantic.

"Quick, attack!" Shanda let out a low growl, and was the first to fly out, with the other nine Six Star Fiends immediately charging out at high speed as well.

Although they were more than ten kilometers away, to Six Star Fiends, that sort of distance could be traversed in a twinkling.

"Captain, you have to be able to hold."

The ten Six Star Fiends silently prayed as they moved. To traverse ten kilometers, Six Star Fiends only needed a second. However, a second, in a battle between supreme experts, was enough for many attacks to be exchanged.

When Six Star Fiends or Seven Star Fiends did battle, every thousandth or ten-thousandth of a second, a person could die.

"Material attacks!"

All of the Six Star Fiends, after receiving the order, trusted in Mosley's judgment. This was because they all knew that in the Four Divine Beasts clan, the clan with the most powerful physical defense was the Black Tortoise clan, while the Azure Dragon clan's physical defense wasn't too powerful; only those three famous figures amongst them had truly powerful bodies.

But Linley...

Clearly wasn't one of those three, nor was he on the list of high-danger individuals that their intelligence reports had provided him. His body shouldn't be too tough.

Not hesitating at all, the Six Star Fiends all forcibly attempted to resist that gravitational pull while simultaneously attempting to launch their most powerful material attacks. Shattered metallic scraps flew out at high speed from within that Blackstone Space, and a white fog was beginning to spread out.

It was like a phantom, a bizarre illusion...

"Swoosh!" A completely translucent icy awl tore through the air, shooting towards Linley.

"Haaargh!" His clothes exploding, a muscular expert of the Barbary clan brandished a giant icesword, the edge of the icesword gleaming with light. Clutching that giant icesword, he chopped down it with from mid-air in a dominating manner against Linley.

"Crackle!"

One slender icy needle after another shot out, translucent and thin, the size and shape of embroidery needles. If one wasn't paying special attention to them, one wouldn't even be able to see them clearly.

Seeing this response from the enemies, the corner of Linley's lips curved upwards.

"The second one!" Linley flew directly towards the man who was chopping down at him with that icesword, completely ignoring the icy needles shooting at him from behind. With a series of 'crunch' 'crunch' sounds, the icy needles struck Linley's draconic scales, then immediately disintegrated, leaving behind just some white residue on the scales.

"Not good." The Six Star Fiends who were surrounding and attacking Linley couldn't help but have their faces change in worry.

In particular, that man who was chopping downwards with his icesword. His heart trembled.

"You won't be able to flee." A voice rang out in his mind. The Six Star Fiend realized that a pair of dark golden eyes was staring at him. He could sense that astonishing gravitational pull, and knew that he wouldn't be able to escape. He let out a bellow. "Die!"

The muscular man's face was savage, and as he bellowed, he chopped downwards with full force with his blade.

Where the icesword passed, voids in space appeared. Clearly, those were made from torn rips in space.

"Whoosh!" A blur suddenly came chopping over. He only sensed that the air seemed to tremble, then explode. A draconic tail lashed viciously against his icesword, and the terrifying power of that draconic tail was actually completely focused on the sword.

The muscular man only felt his arms go numb, and the icesword was sent flying away. Immediately afterwards, tears in the palm of his hand appeared, created by the shock of the impact, and blood flowed out.

"You can follow your captain now." The voice rang out in his mind.

"No!" The muscular man roared angrily, his entire body instantly emitting streams of water that completely surrounded him.

"Whoosh!"

After whipping the icesword aside, Linley's draconic tail whistled through the air as it shot backwards, slashing directly against the muscular man's head. It must be said that Linley's body was simply too powerful, and that his strength was simply too terrifying.

"Bang!" A powerful tremor. The muscular man's head immediately exploded, and a divine spark fell out.

Yet another Six Star Fiend had died!

That group of bandits just stared, slack-jawed, at this scene. Linley's Blackstone Space was made in a way which specially focused his divine earth power against his opponents, and thus didn't have much of an impact on these bandits.

After all, if he drew the bandits over, they'd just get in his way.

The bandits all immediately flew out of the Blackstone Space's range, but the battle that was going on above them caused them to be utterly dazed.

The speed of this battle was too fast!

The power was too terrifying!

"Those are spatial tears. Spatial tears." One of the bandits, a God, called out numbly like an idiot. Only the material attacks of someone who was at least at the Six Star Fiend level of power was capable of creating spatial tears. These bandits normally would never have a chance to see such a thing.

To the likes of them, creating spatial tears in the Infernal Realm was something out of legends.

"When those icy needles that created spatial tears hit that God, they didn't do anything!" The bandits stared dumbly.

For a body to be able to withstand an attack that could create spatial tears was...too terrifying.

"He...he..." The bandits stared disbelievingly at the Dragonformed Linley.

"That God, we were actually..."

“What ‘God’? He’s an expert. A Six Star Fiend. No, a Seven Star Fiend! A true, supreme expert. He was just hiding his power just now.” The leader of the bandits immediately shouted. “Quick, let’s run farther away and watch from a distance. Let’s not get hit by any shockwaves. In battles like this, the slightest shockwaves can take our lives with ease.”

“Right, right.”

The bandits were completely stunned, and all of them hurriedly ran farther into the distance.

From Linley’s killing of the captain to the execution of the Six Star Fiend, barely any time had actually passed, perhaps just as long as it took for the sparks of a flint to emerge when struck. But that instant had caused the ten-plus enemies to be completely stunned.

“Lord Mosley, his body is very powerful.” The Six Star Fiends hurriedly sent through divine sense.

“We used our full force against him in material attacks, but weren’t able to hurt him at all.”

Just now, Linley had only dodged slightly. Even if a few attacks landed on him, he wasn’t too concerned. He didn’t even fear the material attacks of Seven Star Fiends. How could he fear the material attacks of Six Star Fiends?

“He’s a soul expert, and his material defense is so powerful as well.”

Mosley had a bad feeling, but then he made his decision. "Since material attacks are useless, I'll have to test a soul attack. I want to see if he'll be able to endure my soul attack."

Mosley had no other options.

"Soul attacks, en masse!" Mosley gave the order.

Mosley knew that no matter how tough one's soul was, if one was hit by a large number of soul attacks from many experts, one would still be doomed. This was because when a true expert was dealing with group attacks, the way to successfully deal with them wasn't to take them all head on, it was to make sure that each time, only a few attacks would actually land.

"The third!" Linley instantly stared at Mosley.

Based on quick reaction from the other side, Linley became certain that this devilish man with serpents hanging from his ears should be a tough opponent.

"Swoosh!" Linley immediately flew over.

Mosley was resisting the gravitational pull; there was no way he could escape Linley's attack. Mosley didn't try to escape either; his right palm stretched out, and his eyes shot out with a hazy black light as his lips began to move as he mumbled some strange words.

"Captain!" Right at this moment, Melina and the others flew over at high speed.

Linley felt a surge of jubilation in his heart. His right hand flipped out, and a devilish violet light flashed. Bloodviolet, carrying Linley's force, chopped directly towards Mosley.

His powerful physical strength, when matched with the Profound Truths of Velocity, caused Bloodviolet's speed to reach an extreme.

Where the sword passed by, space cracked apart.

Mosley's right palm struck out towards Linley, and instantly, a pitch-black, semi-translucent hand seal shot out towards Linley. Linley's face changed, and at just this moment, the other Six Star Fiends all launched their own soul attacks as well.

"Haaargh." Linley hurriedly changed the direction of his Gravitational Space.

He made gravity pull downwards!

Caught by surprise, those Six Star Fiends couldn't help but drop, and their soul attacks were impacted as well.

"Crunch." The translucent hand seal covered by that black light shot directly into Linley's body. There was no way to block it at all, and Linley himself hurriedly pulled away from the enemy while whole-heartedly focusing on defending against this soul attack.

The black hand burrowed its way into Linley's body, then dug towards Linley's mind.

"Not good." Linley's face changed dramatically.

He immediately flew into the sky, striving to put some distance between him and his opponents, for fear that another attack would come.

"BANG!" When that black hand seal entered his mind, it struck directly against that 'translucent membrane'. It trembled slightly, as though it was about to disperse, but then, strangely enough, the energy of the black hand seal actually spread out, covering Linley's entire consciousness, instantly discovering the weak spot.

Amazingly enough, the dispersed energy then reformed, actually transforming into a needle, piercing directly towards the flaw in the membrane...

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 26, Spiritual Chaos

The 'bandage' over the flaw in the membrane managed to resist for only a moment before being punctured straight through by that black needle. The black needle entered the most important part of Linley's mind...the area above his sea of consciousness.

"Rumble..."

The entire sea of consciousness began to swirl, and countless rays of spiritual energy danced about, merged together with that 'azure light' and swept towards that black needle, which had no place to hide.

"Crackle..." That spiritual energy which glowed with azure light surrounded the black needle and stalemated it, with the two slowly grinding each other down.

Mosley and the other fourteen Six Star Fiends raised their heads, staring at Linley.

"Lord Mosley, what should we do?" They looked at Mosley.

"Keep attacking. His soul defense isn't exceptionally strong. Otherwise, he wouldn't need to spend so much time to resist my attack." Mosley immediately ordered. "Remember. Use soul attacks against him."

"Yes!"

The experts immediately rushed into the sky.

Linley's ashen face returned to its normal appearance. At this moment, Melina, Shanda, and the other ten Six Star Fiends of the Azure Dragon clan had gathered here as well.

"Captain, are you alright?" Melina hurriedly asked.

"I'm fine." Linley shook his head, but in his heart, he still felt a surge of fear. "Luckily, I've undergone the Ancestral Baptism, and the primal energy of the Azure Dragon clan intensified and merged with my soul. In the end, I was able to endure it." The primal energy of the Azure Dragon clan, that azure light, was very unusual. It was capable of fusing with spiritual energy in order to execute their innate divine ability.

At the same time, it could also be used to protect the soul.

"They are attacking." A member of the squad suddenly said frantically.

Linley lowered his head to stare at the fifteen people flying towards them at high speed. He immediately ordered through divine sense, "That bald, gray-robed man is a Seven Star Fiend who specializes in soul attacks. In a little bit, Shanda, you and the other five who are specialized in material attacks should go deal with him. As for the other four, accompany me in killing the other Six Star Fiends."

"Captain, just Shanda and the other five? Are they enough?" Melina said with concern.

"Don't worry. I still have a card up my sleeve I have yet to play." Linley looked down at the fifteen people charging from below.

The reason he hadn't used his ultimate technique was because his forces hadn't arrived yet. Another reason was that he was afraid that the enemy would panic and immediately flee. This was why he hadn't used that technique...Spiritual Chaos! Spiritual Chaos was a technique which could only be used with the assistance of the 'black stone'.

At Miluo Island, Linley had relied on this technique to force a large number of Highgods to enter a dazed state.

Even Seven Star Fiends would be slightly affected. But when experts did battle, just a slight effect would be enough!

"Eleven of them?" Mosley narrowed his eyes.

"Ignore the others. Kill that leader!" Mosley shouted through divine sense. "When we kill that Seven Star Fiend, we can be considered as having avenged your captain."

"Kill!"

At this time, nobody was going to retreat. Nobody who dared to join their clan's war-squads would cower. Mosley led his fourteen Six Star Fiends in an upwards charge, directly into Linley's 'Blackstone Space'. These fifteen people were clustered together, for fear of being targeted and killed individually.

The fifteen flew together, as though they were one unified body, directly towards Linley.

The ten Six Star Fiends of the Azure Dragon clan were next to Linley as well, and Linley gave the order coolly. "Let's go!" According to their plan, Linley's group of eleven would also charge downwards. After all, the distance between them was less than a few hundred meters.

They would fight in close combat in just a moment!

"Kill!" Linley's side seemed to care not one whit for their own lives.

"Kill!" Mosley's side, as well, seemed to be utterly fearless towards death.

Linley's eyes suddenly flashed and turned cold.

In his sea of consciousness, his spiritual energy, centered around the 'black stone', began to turn, and strange rays of spiritual energy instantly spread out, surrounding the entire Gravitational Space. This 'Spiritual Chaos' effect was immediately applied against those fifteen people.

"Whooooosh."

Mosley's group of fifteen simultaneously heard a very strange, unique wind sound reverberate in their minds. This sort of wind sound caused their minds to uncontrollably feel dazed for a moment. But that moment of being dazed was also the most critical moment in this battle...

"Slash!" "Slash!" "Slash!"

Just like slicing watermelons, more than half of the Six Star Fiends of the Barbary clan who were affected by the 'Spiritual Chaos' were killed. Linley was like a tiger or like a pack of wolves, instantly killing three of the Six Star Fiends.

Shanda and the other five who were specialized in material attacks launched their assaults directly against Mosley.

Mosley just felt his head go slightly dizzy, but his mind was still clear. As a supreme expert who specialized in the soul, this sort of soul effect didn't impact him too much. But when he saw how many people on his side had been killed, he was instantly enraged.

Mosley let out an explosive howl.

A translucent, fan-shaped ripple burst out from Mosley, spreading out towards those six attackers coming from in front of him. Shanda and the other Six Star Fiends only had enough time to unleash a single fierce material attack before they themselves were hit.

The translucent ripple passed through the bodies of Shanda and the other five. Their bodies trembled, and then three of them collapsed from the skies.

The three had died!

"Shanda!" Melina called out frantically.

"Big Brother!" Another squad member, a female one, howled bitterly as well.

Shanda was one of the three who had died.

"Not good." Watching this from behind, Linley was deeply shocked. "This person was actually unaffected by my Spiritual Chaos technique." In Miluo Island, he had battled against Seven Star Fiends before, and that time, his opponent had been affected.

However...

Mosley clearly was highly specialized in the soul, and thus his endurance in taking these attacks was greater as well.

"Swish!" "Swish!" "Swish!"

The material attacks which Shanda's group of six had launched had transformed into the shapes of sabers, needles, awls, threads...and all of them shot out towards Mosley. Although Mosley's soul was strong, his material defense was average.

The gravity was too strong. Mosley didn't have enough time to dodge.

"Aaaaaaargh!" Mosley let out an angry roar, a deep, rumbling roar.

Immediately, the illusory image of an enormous long, black, coiling serpent appeared behind Mosley. This black serpent naturally emanated a heart-shaking aura. Its entire body was as black as tar. It only had a single eye, and this eye was vertical, as red as blood.

"Slash!" "Slash!"

The material attacks slashed down on Mosley's body. His armor shattered, and his body was cut into. Mosley, knowing that he didn't have enough time to dodge, had focused on allowing the energy attacks to strike non-lethal parts of his body, guaranteeing that his head was undamaged.

This was the problem with material attacks; they weren't like 'soul attacks', which could be aimed at a specific weakness, making it so that there was no real way to protect an 'important part' of the body. Material attacks were generally only effective in close combat.

"Die." Mosley stared at Linley.

That enormous coiling black serpent behind him also stared at Linley with its solitary, blood-red eye. "Not good." Linley hurriedly controlled his 'Blackstone Space', making the direction of the gravity orient downwards, wanting to impact his opponent.

"Rumble..." A translucent ray of light shot out from the center of Mosley's forehead, piercing directly towards Linley.

Innate divine ability: 'Soul Extinguisher'!

"Captain!" The other Six Star Fiends were greatly shocked.

"No time." The attack of this innate ability was simply too fast. He wasn't even able to dodge. Linley couldn't help but just grit his teeth, planning to take it head on.

"Swish!" An arm suddenly appeared in front of Linley, blocking for him just as that translucent ray of light was about to hit him. That translucent ray of light shot directly into the arm. Linley turned to look. Shocked, he said, "Scar [Si'ka'er]!"

Scar, one of the ten Six Star Fiends under Linley's command. Scar normally was a man of few words, but he had never hesitated with regards to Linley's orders. Who would have imagined at this moment, Scar would suddenly sacrifice himself to save Linley?

Scar fell directly the skies. "Kill!" At the same time, the other squad members transformed into rays of light, attacking directly towards Mosley's head.

"Roaaaaaaar!" Mosley once more emitted that furious roar.

But before he was able to launch that soul attack yet again, the sound of the air exploding could be heard, and his head transformed into a pile of mud-like flesh as a divine spark flew out.

Mosley, dead!

The world suddenly turned quiet. In mid-air, Linley and the others remained quiet for quite some time. In this battle, they had killed two enemy Seven Star Fiends and twelve Six Star Fiends, with three Six Star Fiends escaping.

"Three still managed to flee." Melina said unhappily.

"It's my fault. I didn't expect that Mosley would be completely unaffected." Linley said. Although they had killed the vast majority of the enemy's Six Star Fiends, when Linley and Mosley had been fighting, those remaining Six Star Fiends had known that there was no hope of victory, and so had immediately fled.

"Scar. Thank you." Linley turned to look at a Six Star Fiend. It was Scar, who had just saved him. Scar himself had a total of three bodies. During this battle, he had left only one divine clone back in Bloodbath Gorge, keeping another one in his body.

Just now, when Mosley had used his innate divine ability, 'Soul Extinguisher', Scar had immediately separated his two clones, allowing his divine clone to stretch his arm out and block that attack.

"Captain, it doesn't matter too much that I lost a divine clone. Seven Star Fiends are the true pillars of our clan. You can't die." Scar said.

"When we came, there were eleven of us. Now, three of us have lost our most powerful divine clones." Linley looked around, then sighed. The three had been killed by Mosley. "It was my miscalculation."

If Mosley had been affected by the Spiritual Chaos, then Shanda and the others would have been able to kill him.

"Captain, this is already a major victory."

"Right, a tremendous win!"

"Scar only lost a weak divine clone. It isn't a huge loss to him. Our only true losses are those three Six Star Fiends. However, today, we actually killed twelve Six Star Fiends, and even Seven Star Fiends."

"We killed Seven Star Fiends. Two of them! And Captain, you didn't die yourself. We didn't lose much."

"Using my divine clone to trade for the most powerful body of a Seven Star Fiend? Worth it."

Hearing the words of his squad members, Linley felt slightly calmer. According to the historical accomplishments of his clan in battle, it was indeed a grand victory for their side to only lose three Six Star Fiends while killing so many enemy experts, especially given that there were two Seven Star Fiends amongst them.

"In our battle against the eight great clans, our normal casualty ratio is close to one-to-one. It is quite rare for us to gain a complete victory like this." Melina hurriedly said.

"Let's go back." Linley took a deep sigh.

This was the first time he had engaged in this brutal clan war, and Linley himself felt that this battle was a very brutal one. But he looked at the other squad members. "None of them seem to care that three of our squad members lost their most powerful divine clones. Clearly, they've experienced too much."

Linley thought back to those red lettered names written on the stone pillar outside Squad Thirteen's residences.

Those names represented dead squad members.

"The war between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans is nothing more than a war of attrition. Many in our clan have died, but the same is true for theirs." Linley sighed to himself. At the same time, he flew into the air alongside the other seven squad members.

"Captain, your ambush was truly formidable. You immediately killed one of the Seven Star Fiends."

"Ambush? It was a one use-strategy. In the future, the enemy won't give us such a good opportunity." Linley understood that both Mosley as well as the Seven Star Fiend he had killed at the very start would most likely have divine clones back in their base.

By now, the enemy clan was definitely aware of his ambush.

From today onwards, the enemy squads would definitely be very vigilant against enemy Gods. They wouldn't be caught off-guard again.

In the distant mountain forests, a group of bandits watched as Linley's squad flew away. For a long, long moment, they remained speechless and terrified.

"Leader, what was that enormous black serpent just now? It was so terrifying."

"That was the innate divine ability of a divine beast. I've seen a divine beast use an innate divine ability before. However, compared to what we just saw...that great black serpent was thousands of times more terrifying. The aura of it alone made me feel as though I couldn't breathe."

The battle just now had utterly terrified these God-level bandits.

"And we actually had dared to try and rob that supreme expert..." The bandits were overcome with endless regret. After having witnessed this battle, they knew that for Linley, killing them was something that could be accomplished in the blink of an eye.

Most likely, this memory would remain with them for the rest of their lives.

They would never forget that they once tried to waylay a supreme expert.

Linley led his squad of seven, quietly sneaking back towards the Skyrise Mountains. They were very careful on the way back, afraid that the eight great clans might discover them. After flying for a long time, Linley's group finally arrived at the Skyrite Mountains.

They flew directly to the air above the Skyrite Mountains.

“Why are there so many people?” Linley stared in astonishment. There were quite a few people in the air above Bloodbath Gorge, with the leader of the group including the Patriarch, the Grand Elder, and some others. Patriarch Gislason currently had a hint of a smile on his face.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 27, Bestowal

Above Bloodbath Gorge, at the edges of the cliff. A large group of people was standing here, with the leader being the Patriarch and the Grand Elder.

“What are they doing here?” Linley was somewhat puzzled.

Linley immediately flew over, but before he even had the chance to salute, the Patriarch, ‘Gislason’, laughed and said, “Welcome back, Linley!” By the side of the Patriarch was the Grand Elder, dressed in a long black robe and wearing that silver mask.

“Well done, Linley.” The Grand Elder spoke as well.

“Linley, quite impressive. You killed two Seven Star Fiends. Admirable, admirable!” The nearby Elder Garvey laughed loudly as well.

“Elder Linley’s very first act is so impressive.” The golden-haired Elder, ‘Forhan’, laughed brightly as well.

Faced with the praise of the Patriarch and this group of Elders, Linley was rather stupefied. “My clones as well as clones of the other squad members left behind in Bloodbath Gorge haven’t gone to inform the Patriarch or the Grand Elder of this matter yet.”

Because the trip back wasn’t too long of a trip, Linley had been planning to make the report upon returning.

Who would have imagined that the Patriarch and the Grand Elder already knew about it?

What he didn't know...was that this sort of wonderful news pertaining to their clansmen would also be very quickly reported back to the Four Divine Beasts clan by their intelligence agents.

"Enough. Everyone, don't just stand here. Come. I've already ordered for a grand banquet to be prepared for celebration." Gislason laughed loudly, then looked at Linley. "Linley, come, walk with me."

Linley immediately flew over.

Gislason slapped Linley on the shoulders, his face wreathed in smiles. "Well done."

"Just luck." Linley immediately said. If he had fought them head on, those two Seven Star Fiends definitely would have been stronger than him. Thus, he succeeded only because he suddenly killed one, and then gathered his forces to join together to kill the other one.

"Why so humble?" Gislason laughed.

"This time, I really was quite worried about him. I didn't expect that the mission would be completed even more perfectly than I could have hoped for." The Grand Elder said.

Immediately, Gislason, the Grand Elder, and Linley flew together in front of that group of Elders, as well as the lucky survivors of Squad Thirteen, straight into the depths of the Skyrite Mountains. After a long time, Linley's group arrived at a lavishly, gray crystal palace.

Quite a few maidservants of the clan were carrying platters in a steady stream into the palace.

The palace was very wide, and it was tens of meters high as well. Within the palace, there were nine stone pillars that were holding the ceiling up. The Patriarch and the Grand Elder flew straight to the front of the palace, then sat down together. In the clan, the status of the Patriarch was just slightly higher than that of the Grand Elder.

However, in the clan, the Patriarch and the Grand Elder were considered the highest level figures, while the other Elders were subordinate to them.

"All of you, take your seats." Patriarch 'Gislason' waved his hand and laughed.

"Linley, you can take the seat of honor to the left." Gislason pointed to a seat, then laughed. "After all, today's celebratory banquet is held in your honor."

"Me?" Linley was stunned.

There were quite a few Elders more powerful than him, and his record of accomplishments was still quite low.

"Linley, since the Patriarch told you to sit, then sit!" A silver-haired, cold-faced youth walked over, a rare smile on his face.

"Elder Blue." Linley nodded, then sat.

As for this Elder Blue, he sat down directly next to Linley, in the secondary seat of honor on the left. Nobody dared say anything when he took this spot. After all, this Elder Blue was the clan's 'Genius Elder'!

According to legend, his power was only inferior to that of the Patriarch and the Grand Elder, and was vastly superior to that of the other Elders. One of the three 'trump cards' of the clan!

In addition, when their ancestor, the 'Azure Dragon' was still alive, he doted dearly on Blue, and had spent a large amount of effort to strengthen Blue's body, making Blue's body extremely powerful.

"Our Four Divine Beasts clan has battled with the eight great clans for ten thousand years, but such major victories have been very rare." Seated at the front of the palace, Gislason let out a sigh. Normally speaking, if one side felt they would be unable to win, they would immediately flee.

To kill a Seven Star Fiend who was trying to flee was very difficult. Killing two Seven Star Fiends in a row, with one's own side suffering only minimal losses, was extremely rare.

"It's rare to have such a magnificent victory. If we can kill two of their Seven Star Fiends every time, no matter how many experts the eight great clans have, they won't be able to last against us." Immediately, some Elders began to laugh.

The entire palace became filled with the sound of laughter.

"Linley, what is it?" Blue, seated next to Linley, realized that Linley wasn't laughing.

"I'm fine. I'm just thinking about Elder Arhaus, and the sacrifices of the many other Elders." Linley sighed softly.

Immediately, quite a few Elders in the hall fell silent.

Over the past ten thousand years of nonstop battle, when they had slaughtered the enemy Seven Star Fiends, their own side's experts had been steadily dwindling as well. Six Star Fiends died in entire batches. The foundation of power which the clan had built up over countless hundreds of millions of years was being steadily whittled away.

"What sort of attitude is this, all of you!" The Grand Elder barked.

Everyone couldn't help but look at the Grand Elder.

The Grand Elder said coldly, "Even if our entire Four Divine Beasts clan dies out, we won't permit those eight clowns to besmirch the reputation of our clan! When our ancestors were present, did those eight great clans dare to resist us? But now that the ancestor is dead, they'll come for revenge? Hmph. How can clowns like these possibly make our Four Divine Beasts clan submit?"

"For the sake of the clan, so what if we die?" Elder Blue said arrogantly as well.

"For the sake of the clan!"

Linley, too, could sense the arrogance and pride of the many Elders in the palace. That they would rather die than submit.

As they saying goes, better to be a shattered piece of jade than an undamaged tile of brick!

"For the sake of the clan?" Linley said quietly in his heart. When he was young, Linley had always wanted to retrieve the ancestral heirloom of the Baruch clan, the warblade 'Slaughterer'. Linley had a deep sense of belonging towards the Baruch clan.

Nowadays, although he had joined the Azure Dragon clan and met countless clansmen who had the same draconic lineage as he did, and thus had a sense of belonging...

...Linley still couldn't completely understand that sort of pride and arrogance.

If Linley was in control of the clan, he probably would have his clansmen all hide themselves within the Skyrite Mountains and wait for the day when they had a 90% chance of success in gaining revenge before going and battling with the enemy.

"Perhaps...it's because I never experienced the glory days of the Four Divine Beasts clan." Linley said to himself.

The arrogance of the Four Divine Beasts clan came from countless years of being mighty. Countless years of glory. The illustriousness of the clan had long ago been embedded in the hearts of every single Elder.

"Enough." Gislason laughed loudly. "Just look at those looks on your faces. Today is a day of celebration. Why are we all discussing those things? Come, let's have a toast. Enough of that topic. Today, let's just drink to our heart's content and have a good celebration, a celebration for Linley's victory!"

"Yes, let's celebrate!" All of the Elders raised their wine glasses while looking towards Linley.

Linley couldn't help but feel the blood boiling in his veins. He, too, raised his glass, and each and every single member of Squad Thirteen, seated at the margins of the palace, all raised their cups as well.

"Cheers!" Gislason said brightly.

"Cheers!"

Everyone in the palace replied, and they all downed their wine in one gulp.

During this banquet, nobody else raised any dispiriting matters. There had been far too many brutal, vicious happenings over the past few years. A good celebration was long past overdue. But this sort of happiness only made Linley feel all the more aware of the dreary sadness hidden behind this formerly unsurpassably powerful Four Divine Beasts clan!

The dreary desolateness of an ancient clan which had fallen.

But although they had fallen, the clan still had their pride! Even in the face of despair, they wouldn't compromise at all! Anybody who wanted to attack the clan in their moment of weakness would have to pay an enormous price as well!

The celebratory mood of the banquet finally came to an end, and each of the Elders left. Linley and the members of Squad Thirteen were about to leave as well.

"Linley. Stay." The voice of the Patriarch came from the front of the palace.

Linley couldn't help but feel puzzled, but he immediately instructed the members of Squad Thirteen, "You can go back first."

"Yes, Captain." Melina and the others all flew back.

Linley returned to the palace. The many platters within the palace were currently being taken away by the serving maids at high speed. Patriarch Gislason walked down from his position at the front of the palace, then instructed, "Linley, let's chat inside."

"Yes, Patriarch."

Linley followed Gislason into a side room next to the palace.

The side room wasn't very large. After Linley walked into it, he only heard a 'squeak' as the door actually closed automatically.

"Sit." A hint of a smile was on Gislason's face.

Linley sat down, then asked, "Patriarch, is there something you need?"

"I made you an Elder, but I didn't expect that during the Conclave of Elders, they would actually have you go to Bloodbath Gorge. By the time I found out about it, I couldn't order you to come back." Gislason sighed. "You are only a God. It isn't very appropriate to have you in Bloodbath Gorge."

Gislason valued Linley very highly. One reason was because of Linley's connection to his father, the 'Azure Dragon', while the other reason was because of the power which Linley had displayed.

"I originally thought that my younger sister wouldn't give you any assignments, but who would've thought that she did?" Gislason continued.

"The other Elders are all fight on behalf of the clan. How can I be an exception?" Linley said.

Gislason's eyes lit up. Laughing, he nodded. "Actually, my younger sister and I were both mistaken about each other. I had thought...that my younger sister wouldn't send you to do battle. But my younger sister thought...that I had already given you Sovereign's Might, and so you would be able to protect yourself. That's why she sent you off."

"Sovereign's Might?" Linley said, puzzled.

"Right."

Gislason nodded as he spoke. "Generally speaking, anyone who can become an Elder of our Four Divine Beasts clan would soon afterwards be bestowed a drop of Sovereign's Might. But there must be an explanation given for this bestowal of Sovereign's Might. You have to have accomplished some sort of meritorious deed, at least. That matter between you and Emanuel? That was just causing trouble. Although you became an Elder, it wasn't appropriate for me to bestow a Sovereign's Might upon you right away."

"But this time, you can be considered to have rendered great merits."

With a flip of his hand, Gislason revealed a drop of azure 'water'. Contained within that azure water drop was a power that made one's heart tremble.

"Today, I bestow upon you this drop of water-type Sovereign's Might." Gislason said. As he spoke, the drop of Sovereign's Might floated towards Linley. Linley, watching that drop of Sovereign's Might float towards him, was utterly stunned.

Bestowing Sovereign's Might to him?

He himself already had two drops. But of course, at a time like this, Linley couldn't refuse.

"Thank you, Patriarch." Linley hurriedly stretched his hand out, accepting this drop of Sovereign's Might.

Gislason laughed and nodded. "Now that you have a drop of Sovereign's Might, even if you run into some sort of critically dangerous situation, you'll be able to stay alive. But Linley, unless the situation is truly critical, you cannot waste this drop of Sovereign's Might. If you are forced to use it, you need to wipe out the enemy."

Linley lowered his head to look at the drop of Sovereign's Might.

This was a drop of the power of a Sovereign, but could it truly be used to save his life? Would it be able to defend against the soul attacks of others? Linley still clearly remembered that scene of how that Mosley executed his innate divine ability.

"Patriarch, can it be that Sovereign's Might can be used to defend against soul attacks?" Linley hurriedly asked.

As Linley saw it, a Sovereign's power should be to a Sovereign what divine power was to a Deity. It shouldn't have much to do with the soul.

"Of course it can." Gislason laughed.

"How?" Linley said, puzzled. "It shouldn't be possible for ordinary material force to block soul attacks, right?"

Gislason laughed even harder. "Linley, are you under the impression that a Sovereign's power is just the 'advanced' version of 'divine power'?"

"Isn't it?" Linley said, puzzled.

"Wrong." Gislason shook his head. "Sovereign's Might is very unique. For example...it can actually strengthen our bodies."

Gislason took a deep breath, then said seriously, "Linley, that year, my father explained to me that after he became a Sovereign...his body only contained a single type of energy. Sovereign power!"

"What do you mean?" Linley said, puzzled. "Of course a Sovereign would have Sovereign power."

"What I mean is...Sovereigns don't even have spiritual energy!" Gislason said.

"Wha?!" Linley was stupefied.

The soul was a person's foundation. Anyone who had a soul would naturally have spiritual energy.

"Or, to be more precise, Sovereign power is the same as spiritual energy!" Gislason laughed. "Thus, Sovereign's Might is capable of not just being a material energy source, it can also be used an energy source for the soul."

"Ah!?" Linley was shocked.

"You can rely on it to unleash material attacks, but you can also use it to unleash soul attacks. Naturally, you can also rely on it to block against soul attacks." Gislason said.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 28, Freedom

In the past, Linley had known very little regarding Sovereign's Might. Thus, he had taken it for an advanced form of 'divine power'. But now, it seemed, it was completely different. Sovereign's Might was actually capable of being used like spiritual energy.

"Sovereign's Might also has one other benefit." Gislason laughed. "When you use Sovereign's Might, for a short moment, both your body and your soul will be uplifted."

"Eh?" Linley was surprised.

"This is the truth." Gislason sighed. "However, the amount of uplifting isn't very great. If one was willing to be wasteful and consecutively use hundreds of drops of Sovereign's Might, both the soul and the body will be tremendously transformed."

"Hundreds of drops? Who has that many?" Linley laughed.

"Even if someone does have that many, they wouldn't be willing to waste it like that." Gislason said.

"Our Four Divine Beasts clan's one and only advantage over the eight great clans is that we have quite a bit of Sovereign's Might." Gislason sighed. "By relying on Sovereign's Might, we are able to be at the level where even when under group assault, we can still fight back. This is the only reason why we've been able to keep the death ratio at one-to-one."

Linley nodded. After this recent experience, Linley realized how powerful the enemy was.

For example, Mosley’s innate divine ability truly was terrifying.

“Now that our ancestors have died, the more Sovereign’s Might we use up, the less we have.” Gislason warned. “Linley, you cannot waste this Sovereign’s Might. Unless the situation is critical, using it simply isn’t worth it.”

“Yes, Patriarch.” Linley replied.

Even the Four Divine Beasts clan had a dwindling stockpile of Sovereign’s Might.

“Enough. You can go back for now. In the upcoming period of time, my younger sister shouldn’t assign you any more missions. After all, after this experience, the eight great clans will be very much on their guard against you. In the future, it won’t be so easy for you to kill two Seven Star Fiends.” Gislason laughed.

Linley nodded, then immediately left.

.....

Indigo Prefecture, the eastern borders. Four of the eight great clans were located here, amongst them the Barbary clan which had moved here from the Divine Water Plane.

Deep within a dark estate, a giant was standing within a flower garden.

He was 3.5 meters tall, and his face was covered with a green beard, each hair looking like a steel needle. He was dressed in a plain, unadorned set of armor, and on his shoulders, there was a black, serpent-patterned cloak attached. This person was staring directly at Cole, who was standing before him.

"Cole, you were killed without even being able to fight back?" The giant said, frowning.

"Patriarch, I, I didn't expect..." Cole's face was filled with rage. "He clearly was just a God, but who would have imagined that he was just hiding his aura? When he was very close to me, he suddenly ambushed me...I didn't have any chance to react at all."

Currently, Cole only had his divine wind clone remaining.

"Not just me. Even Mosley wasn't able to detect that this person was hiding his aura." Cole said hurriedly.

This Patriarch of the Barbary clan frowned even more deeply.

"Patriarch, based on what the clones of my subordinates told me, the person who killed me didn't have an extremely powerful soul defense." Cole said hurriedly.

"Eh?"

The Barbary clan's Patriarch couldn't help but grow puzzled. He swept his gaze towards the outside of the garden, and instantly, a black shadow flitted in from outside, standing there respectfully.

"Quickly go investigate if there is a new Elder within the Azure Dragon clan who is skilled at hiding his power." The Patriarch of the Barbary clan instructed.

"Yes, Elder."

The black shadow vanished once more.

.....

After having completed the last mission, the Grand Elder wouldn't possibly send Linley into battle once more in the near term. Thus, Linley rejoined Bebe, Delia, Cesar, and the others in the gorge, enjoying some rare, peaceful days.

More than two years had passed since the last assignment. In the past two years, not many things happened. On this day, Linley and Delia were currently eating some food together.

"Delia, she...seems to have something she wants to say." Linley laughed to himself. Today, Delia was very absent-minded as she ate, as though she wanted to say something but didn't.

"Linley." Delia hesitated a long time, then finally spoke.

Linley chuckled. He had been waiting a long time for her to speak.
"Delia, what is it?"

Delia paused a moment, then said, "Linley, we've been here in the Skyrite Mountains for quite some time. It's been eighty years now, right?"

"Right." Linley nodded. "What of it?"

"Linley, we rushed all the way here to Indigo Prefecture, then entered the Skyrite Mountains. Right, we've returned to your clan, but...are we just going to stay in the Skyrite Mountains forever?" Delia asked him instead.

Linley couldn't help but frown. "Delia, you want to leave? You want to depart from the Skyrite Mountains?" Linley felt this came out of nowhere.

"No, that's not what I mean." Delia said hurriedly. "Actually, I want to follow the forces of the clan to go on a trip to the cities."

"No." Linley refused decisively. "It's too dangerous. No."

"It's not dangerous." Delia said hurriedly. "In fact, it's not just me. Bebe, Dylin, and the others all want to go on a trip outside. Linley, we've been in this same place without going anywhere else this entire time. It's not as bad for you. You can train and you can go battle. But the rest of us are just here in this gorge every day. After a long period of time, we all feel rather stifled.”

Linley was stunned.

He understood what Delia meant. To be in a single place with no contact with the outside world...it wouldn't be so bad at first, but after more time passed, one would feel terribly depressed. If a very long period of time passed...one would be accustomed to being depressed and lonely, at which point one's very temperament would change.

Delia, in particular, had accompanied Linley on their long journey over here. Her heart, like his, was a free one, which couldn't endure this sort of restrictions.

“Delia, I understand your feelings.” Linley nodded.

In the past, when he had entered the Mountain Range of Magical Beasts for training for three years, he only had Bebe by his side for those three years. That sort of solitary, lonely life was indeed quite stifling. He himself had only been able to hold on and persevere because of his hatred, which had let him endure it all.

“Delia, I'm sorry.” Linley reached out to take Delia's hand.

At this moment, Linley came to a realization.

He had been too selfish!

He always thought of things from his own viewpoint. He wanted to return to his clan. He wanted to battle in Bloodbath Gorge for the clan. But he hadn't considered the situation from Delia and Bebe's viewpoints. He himself could live a very exciting life. But what about them?

Always in their little gorge, living a leisurely, dull life. Bebe was the lively sort, and Delia enjoyed her freedom as well. Linley himself liked an exciting, lively life. Nobody liked to live a flavorless, boring life. He had completely neglected Delia and Bebe.

Thinking of this, Linley couldn't refrain from saying, "Delia, I truly am sorry."

"Say no more." Delia laughed and shook her head. "It's fine. I just want to go for a slight change in atmosphere. Once I'm in a better mood, I'll be fine."

"I want you to go out and relax as well. Only, it really is very dangerous." Linley said nervously.

"Linley, it really isn't dangerous." Delia said hurriedly. "Actually, the Azure Dragon clan has quite a few clansmen who often go to the nearby cities to go sightseeing and shopping. It truly isn't dangerous."

"It isn't dangerous?" Linley didn't understand.

"Linley, if you don't believe me, you can ask the other Elders." Delia immediately said.

"Oh?" Linley nodded. "How about this. Delia, you wait here. I'll go ask the other Elders. If there really isn't much danger, I'll let you go." Linley didn't want his wife to be too stifled either.

Linley immediately flew up through Dragon Avenue, constantly pondering in his mind Delia's words. The more he thought of it, the more he felt that he had neglected Delia, Bebe, and the others. They had all accompanied him to the Skyrite Mountains.

But in the end?

They had to stay in that gorge and didn't dare to leave it at all. This sort of life, akin to living in a prison...was this what he had to offer for Delia and Bebe?

From afar, through the corner of his eyes, Linley saw a person flying in the air. It was the familiar figure of 'Elder Garvey'. He hurriedly shouted, "Elder Garvey."

Puzzled, Elder Garvey turned to look, then laughed and flew over. "Linley, what a coincidence." Linley laughed, "Elder Garvey, there's something important I want to ask you about. Come, let's chat over there."

Linley and Garvey flew together to a nearby location halfway up the mountain.

"Linley, what is it?" Garvey asked, puzzled.

"Our clan often has people who go to the cities?" Linley asked.

"Oh. Yes, we do, actually." Garvey laughed. "First of all, our clan needs to buy some things on occasion. Secondly, our clansmen are always trapped here within the Skyrite Mountains. Quite a few of them can't stand this type of restriction, and so they'll go out to improve their mood. However, each time, the number of people permitted to leave is limited."

"Is it dangerous?" Linley asked.

"There's not much danger." Garvey laughed. "In the past ten thousand years, there hasn't been a single incident."

"Aren't we in a state of war against the eight great clans? How can it be that our clansmen are in no danger when heading out?" Linley didn't understand.

"Linley, think about how vast the Infernal Realm is. Do you think running into someone is a simple matter? The battles which occur between us and the eight great clans occur because both of us are consciously seeking them out. It's only because they travel on predetermined routes and because we have intelligence agents constantly monitoring those routes that we are able to so easily run into them."

Linley nodded.

"As for our clan, when a group of us ride a single metallic lifeform and go to a city, there's no way we can be on a predetermined route." Garvey said. "This world is incomparably vast, and we can go anywhere we please. In addition, on our way over, even if the eight great clans see a metallic lifeform, there's no way they would know that it belongs to our Azure Dragon clan."

Linley began to understand.

"More important, they can't send Seven Star Fiends just running around randomly everywhere. Even if an intelligence agent of theirs discovers that we are aboard a metallic lifeform, the metallic lifeform will quickly fly off into the distance, and because the route is not predetermined, there's no way the enemy can possibly guess where the metallic lifeform has flown to." Garvey laughed.

Linley nodded to himself as well.

The chances of both being encountered as well as being recognized really was one in a hundred million.

"Most importantly of all...each time our clansmen go a group, an Elder will be the escort." Garvey laughed. "This to guard against any unforeseen circumstances. If we really are so unlucky as to encounter an enemy Seven Star Fiend within this vast area, then we'll just have to engage in battle."

Linley, hearing this, felt relieved.

The chances of being encountered really were too low. It was virtually impossible, in fact. And even if there was an encounter...his side had a Seven Star Fiend on guard.

"What, do you have family or friends who want to go out and relax?" Garvey asked.

"Right." Linley suddenly thought of the limitations Garvey had mentioned with respect to how many people could participate. "How many people can go each time?"

"Five hundred people per trip." Garvey nodded. "Don't worry. As an Elder, it will be very simple for you to arrange some family and friends to be included. In addition, if you really are worried, you can escort them yourself as well. If a problem occurred even when two Elders are escorting, that would truly be quite bizarre, wouldn't it?"

Linley's eyes lit up.

Linley himself was interested in accompanying Delia into the city for a nice stroll. "The Elders of Bloodbath Gorge are cyclically assigned to missions. I'm not doing anything right now anyhow." Linley immediately flew back towards Bloodbath Gorge and asked to meet with the Grand Elder.

In the Azure Dragon Palace, the Grand Elder stared at Linley through her mask.

"What? You want to go out?" The Grand Elder said coldly.

"Grand Elder, I just want to accompany our clansmen on a trip to the city." Linley said.

"I can't permit it right now." The Grand Elder shook her head. "Recently, the battle between us and the eight great clans has been fairly fierce. I might need to send you out on a mission at a moment's notice. Linley, the clan is more important. After your thousand years are up and you retire from Bloodbath Gorge, you can go where you please."

Linley was stunned.

He, too, knew that the battles had been very fierce, but he hadn't been sent on a mission in the past two years, after all. Going to a city was a trip of just a few months.

"For now, stay within the Skyrise Mountains. Based on how our intelligence reports develop, I might have a mission for you very soon." The Grand Elder said.

"Yes, Grand Elder."

Linley didn't particularly want to go visit the city himself anyways. The only reason he wanted to go was to protect Delia better.

"It's within an area of a trillion square kilometers...and why would a Seven Star Fiend be so bored as to just wander about randomly? And the chances of them recognizing that this was a group of our clansmen? And also being to defeat one of my clan's Elders?" Linley considered it, then set his mind at ease.

The chances of something going wrong were virtually zero!

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 29, Joining Forces

Deep within the Skyrise Mountains. An enormous metallic lifeform in the shape of a black phoenix was hovering there. The giant metallic lifeform was like a little mountain hovering in the skies. Currently, quite a few people were entering into this metallic lifeform.

In the cliffs beneath the metallic lifeform, there was a large group of people who were travelling together, sending off their family and friends.

Amongst them were Tarosse, Dylin, O'Brien, Bebe, Delia, and others, all of whom were standing next to Linley.

"Tarosse, Dylin, Olivier. Be careful in your travels. After you arrive at the city of Meer [Mi'er], whenever you have a chance, you have to come visit. I'll miss you all very much." Linley looked at these people and laughed. After he returned and told Delia that they could go to the cities, Linley came to understand...

That although Delia and Bebe were just going for a visit and would come back, Tarosse, Dylin, Cesar, and the others were preparing to immigrate to that city.

"Definitely!" Dylin said very apologetically. "Linley, actually, we originally wanted to stay here at your place, but the control and supervision within the Skyrise Mountains is very strict, and we also aren't members of your clan, so we normally aren't even allowed to leave the gorge and wander around. So..."

"I understand. Say no more." Linley laughed.

In his heart, he couldn't help but sigh.

Due to the struggle with the eight great clans, the Four Divine Beasts clan, to guard against the possibility of spies entering, was always very strict. Unless there was a special circumstance, the clansmen weren't permitted to wander about freely. As for Tarosse and Dylin, they weren't even members of the clan, so the patrolling warriors kept an even tighter watch on them.

Tarosse and the others had nothing to do, yet they couldn't wander about either. Naturally, it was like sitting in prison for them.

"It was my fault for being inconsiderate." Linley said apologetically.

"Linley, don't say that." Tarosse said hurriedly. In their hearts, Linley had saved their lives, and so they were filled with gratitude towards Linley. "Linley, in the future, when you have time, you need to come to Meer City to visit us."

"Definitely." Linley nodded.

"Then we'll head out for now."

Tarosse, Cesar, Olivier, Dylin and his children...these people bade farewell to Linley, then flew towards the distant metallic lifeform. As for Delia and Bebe, they remained by Linley's side.

"Linley." Delia looked towards Linley.

Linley smiled as he looked at Delia. He couldn't help but give her a hug, then said gently, "Safe journeys."

Delia couldn't help but feel a warm feeling surge in her heart. Nestling into Linley's arms, she acknowledged softly, and then lifted her head up to look at Linley. "Linley, don't worry about me. I won't be in any danger. It's you who I worry about. The battle between our clan and the eight great clans is so fierce. When you fight for your clan, you need to remember...that I'm waiting for you."

Linley stared at his Delia.

"Don't worry. Your husband is quite strong." Linley laughed.

"Narcissist." Delia laughed as well.

"Oh man, I refuse to watch this any longer. I'm leaving." Bebe suddenly called out.

Linley couldn't help but glance sideways at Bebe, who just grinned wickedly.

"Alright. Delia, Bebe, safe journeys. I've already had a chat with the Elder who is in charge of escorting you on this trip." Linley said. Delia and Bebe nodded, then bade Linley farewell as they too flew towards the metallic lifeform in the air.

Linley raised his head, staring at the enormous metallic lifeform begin to move. In but an instant, it turned into a blur, disappearing into the horizon.

He loved her, but he couldn't forcibly detain her. Everyone needed their own space.

Linley turned and headed back towards Bloodbath Gorge. Halfway there, however, Linley saw clearly those many roving patrol soldiers, all of whom had stern looks on their faces as they cautiously kept watch on every place.

"The atmosphere within the clan really is too tense. These soldiers are always on patrol, for fear that a spy might slip in." Linley sighed.

No wonder Tarosse and Dylin were unable to stay here, within this extremely tense atmosphere.

"It's not their fault. After all, the clan is currently in a state of crisis. Who knows if we'll be able to last another ten thousand years." Linley knew very well that although he was able to kill two of their Seven Star Fiends, the enemy was also capable of killing two of his side's Seven Star Fiends.

A constant, never-ending battle.

After ten thousand years, what would be the situation for the Four Divine Beasts clan?

Within that large quiet gorge in the Skyrise Mountains. Linley was currently in his study, flipping through some books that introduced various places of the Infernal Realm. Linley suddenly closed the book, looking through the window to the outside world. "Delia's group has been gone for over a month now. But I keep on having this restless feeling in my heart."

Linley shook his head. "I'm just thinking too much."

Based on the distance between Meer City and the Skyrise Mountains, a roundtrip would take three or four months. There was still quite some time before Delia would return. Even if they encountered any danger, the intelligence agents would definitely send the news back as well.

"This gorge is actually one of the most peaceful places in the entire Skyrise Mountains." Through the window, Linley looked towards the distant grass. The descendants of the Yulan branch were all gathered there, chatting and laughing, seeming very leisurely.

The reason they were blissful was because they were ignorant!

They didn't know what sort of crisis the clan was currently facing, and the clan wasn't planning to inform these Demigods and Gods of the real situation. As for the Highgods who knew what the clan's situation was, they were all worrying and training hard.

They all wanted to enter Bloodbath Gorge and battle for the sake of the clan!

"Elder Linley." Suddenly, a voice rang out from outside.

"Enter." Linley frowned. The person was dressed in a blood-red robe, the uniform of a Bloodbath Gorge warrior.

Someone had been sent from Bloodbath Gorge?

"What is it?" Linley asked.

"Elder Linley, the Grand Elder has ordered that you make haste to the Azure Dragon Palace." The blood-robed warrior said respectfully.

"The Grand Elder is summoning me?" Linley immediately stood up. Not saying another word, he immediately flew outside.

The blood-robed warrior followed close behind Linley as well. The two of them immediately flew into the skies, out of the gorge. Linley's departure, in turn, attracted the attention of quite a few people in the gorge.

"Whooooosh." The cold wind howled, slicing against them like knives of ice.

In Bloodbath Gorge, Six Star Fiend were clustered together in groups of three or five, while occasionally, a Seven Star Fiend could be seen. Linley's face was emotionless. He was hurrying towards the Azure Dragon Palace at high speed. Upon entering it, he immediately headed to the fifth floor.

Linley swept the fifth floor with his gaze. Within this hall of the Azure Dragon Palace, there was the Grand Elder, dressed in that long black robe and with her face covered with that silver mask, who was seated on her throne. But in the main hall, aside from the Grand Elder, there was one more person...

The balding Elder Emanuel.

Elder Emanuel was currently standing to one side respectfully. Upon seeing him, Linley couldn't help but feel puzzled. "He's here also?"

"Elder Linley." Emanuel smiled towards Linley.

"Elder Emanuel." Linley greeted him as well, then saluted respectfully. "Grand Elder!"

The Grand Elder, seated up above, said calmly, "Linley, in the war between our Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans, the eight great clans will occasionally send people out on predetermined routes, letting us attack them. Generally speaking, the attacking side has a slight advantage."

Linley nodded.

Attacking out of ambush could catch someone off-guard. Naturally, they had an advantage.

"How can our Four Divine Beasts clan always engage in this sort of sneak attack?" The Grand Elder said coldly. "Thus, our Four Divine Beasts clan will often send our own squads out on predetermined routes, to await the attacks from our enemies."

Linley sighed to himself.

He knew that the clan did this. Originally, Arhaus had led his squad out on a predetermined line to await the attacks of the enemy. That time... Arhaus had engaged in a fierce battle with the enemy, with the result being that Arhaus' most powerful divine clone had been killed.

"Once again, it is because of the 'glory' of the clan!" Linley sighed to himself.

The Four Divine Beasts clan, for the glory of the clan, wouldn't even deign to always engage in sneak attacks. One could imagine how arrogant they were!

"This time, I was planning to just send Emanuel to lead the squad out on the predetermined route." The Grand Elder said. "However, this is Emanuel's first assignment, and he himself isn't confident...so he recommended you to me."

Linley was startled.

What was this supposed to mean? The assignment tasked to Emanuel, Emanuel could shift to someone else?

"Grand Elder, he 'recommended me'? What does that mean?" Linley said, rather irritated. At the same time, he couldn't help but glance sideways at Emanuel.

Emanuel hurriedly laughed, "Linley, I know that you are very powerful, and so...I recommended that the Grand Elder allow you to accompany me on this assignment."

"Together?" Linley was stunned.

The Grand Elder nodded. "Right. Normally, when our squads are on assignment, we have one Elder leading each squad. Only occasionally will we send two. This time, I want you to accompany Emanuel."

Linley glanced at Emanuel. He couldn't help but feel a hint of dissatisfaction in his heart.

After all, this was supposed to be Emanuel's mission.

"Linley, it's been two years since you've been out on a mission. It's about time for you to have one anyhow." The Grand Elder said.

Linley felt a surge of resignation. Going out to fight wasn't the issue. It was that this mission had come in a very unfair manner.

"What, you aren't willing?" The Grand Elder asked.

Emanuel sighed emotionally, "Linley, if you aren't willing to accompany me, then I'll go by myself to do battle. Even if I'm alone, I won't let the forces of the eight great clans have an easy time of it. If push comes to shove, I'll just lose my divine water clone."

Linley glanced sideways at Emanuel.

At a time like this, how could he refuse?

"Grand Elder, I'm willing to go." Linley said.

Emanuel's eyes lit up, and a smile unconsciously crept onto his face.

"Grand Elder, there's one thing." Linley said.

"Speak." The Grand Elder said.

Linley said respectfully, "Grand Elder, when our clan normally has an assignment, we just send out a single squad, with just a single Seven Star Fiend. I was hoping...that on this mission, we can put on a façade."

"Façade?" The Grand Elder stared at Linley, puzzled. "Linley, after their last experience, I imagine the experts of the eight great clans won't be so incautious as to let a God draw near again."

Linley chuckled. That sort of trick was a one-use trick only.

"Grand Elder, what I mean to say is, Elder Emanuel and his squad should ride their metallic lifeform forward, while I will take just a single Highgod with me. The two of us, by ourselves, will ride on a metallic lifeform, pretending to be ordinary travelers."

Linley laughed. "A Highgod travelling with a God in the Infernal Realm is very common. It won't arouse the suspicion of the enemy intelligence agents."

"Oh?" The Grand Elder was beginning to understand.

"Elder Emanuel will be in the front, while I will be behind. We'll maintain some distance between the two of us. The enemies will believe that Elder Emanuel is there by himself, and so they'll send less people over. Once they attack Elder Emanuel, I'll be able to catch them off-guard." Linley laughed.

Elder Emanuel's face had become rather ugly to behold

Linley was treating him as 'fish bait'.

"Normally, a clan will just send out a single squad. The enemies won't suspect anything." Linley said.

"Fine. That's what we'll do." The Grand Elder said.

Emanuel didn't know how to dispute this.

"Make your preparations. You'll head out immediately." The Grand Elder said.

"Yes, Grand Elder." Linley and Emanuel both bowed, and then Linley and Emanuel both left.

"Linley." The Grand Elder suddenly said.

Linley, puzzled, turn to look at the Grand Elder. A voice entered his mind. "Linley, you are still just a God. You still have a lot of room for improvement. If you are to truly encounter any dangers on this mission, immediately use that drop of Sovereign's Might. Your life is far more valuable than a drop of Sovereign's Might."

Linley felt a warm feeling in his heart, but he was puzzled as well.

When the Grand Elder assigned this mission, it seemed as though she was showing partiality towards Emanuel. And yet, here she was, saying this to him.

"Yes, Grand Elder."

Linley didn't continue to ponder it, and just acknowledged. Emanuel and Linley thus immediately left the Azure Dragon Palace.

"Linley, this time, we'll be joining forces. I hope that when we do battle, we won't have any suspicions of each other." Emanuel sent to Linley through divine sense. Linley glanced at him sideways, then chuckled and sent back, "Naturally."

As he spoke, Linley flew directly towards the residences of Squad Thirteen.

Emanuel watched as Linley left. He let out a cold laugh, then he flew towards his own squad as well.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 30, Surrounded And Attacked

Within Indigo Prefecture's borders. Within the vast, empty skies, a serpentine, dragon-shaped metallic lifeform was flying through the air. Moments later, another metallic lifeform in the shape of a black panther followed from behind.

Within the dragon-shaped metallic lifeform, there were twelve people in total.

To be precise, there was Emanuel's group of eleven, along with a Deathgod Golem. Emanuel looked at the Deathgod Golem, and he couldn't help but feel rather uncomfortable in his heart. This Deathgod Golem belonged to Linley. By placing the Deathgod Golem here, Linley would be able to accurately determine the location of the metallic lifeform at all times.

"Elder Linley, your metallic lifeform had best not be too far away from mine. Otherwise, if battle begins and you were unable to make it over, that would be terrible." A yellow light flashed through Emanuel's eyes as he said in a low voice.

The Deathgod Golem's eyes opened, and it looked towards Emanuel.

"Elder Emanuel, don't worry. Although the location of the metallic lifeform that I am on is constantly changing, the distance between us won't become too great. Once battle starts, I'll immediately hurry over." Linley's voice came out of the Deathgod Golem.

"That would be good." Emanuel said.

By having the Deathgod Golem ride on Emanuel's metallic lifeform, Linley was able to easily locate Emanuel at all times, which naturally allowed him to more easily control the location of his own metallic lifeform. It might be more than ten kilometers away from Emanuel's, or it might be within ten kilometers, or it might even fly up ahead of Emanuel's.

In short...

He was trying not to arouse anyone's suspicions.

"Whoosh!"

The dragon-shaped metallic lifeform suddenly passed through a very wide river, and the waters of the river rolled about turbidly. Suddenly, a head suddenly appeared from within the waters, and this person stared up at the metallic lifeform as it flew past. "Hmph. The Azure Dragon clan's men truly are daring. They still dare to so arrogantly follow these predetermined paths...all of them are just looking for death!"

When clansmen of the Four Divine Beasts clan were intentionally challenging their enemies to a fight, they would change the shape of their metallic lifeforms into the shape of one of the four divine beasts. That way, the intelligence agents would immediately be able to recognize it. Adding a divine sense sweep...they would thus be certain.

"I need to immediately report this back to the clan." This person didn't even glance at the other metallic lifeform.

This was because the metallic lifeform Linley was on was more than seven or eight kilometers away, and it wasn't following in a direct line. After all, the line of sight for a Deity was limited, and so too was their divine sense. Given that he was seven or eight kilometers away, and that there were many mountain forests blocking the line of sight, how could anybody notice?

The intelligence network of the eight great clans was extremely efficient. That very day, the news made its way back. Although the eight great clans were separated into two different areas, the exchange of information between them was still very fast, and they immediately came to a conclusion.

This time, the assignment of assaulting the Azure Dragon clan's squad was assigned to the Ashcroft clan and the Barbary clan. This was because last time, each of the two clans had lost a Seven Star Fiend to the Azure Dragon clan. This time, it was their turn for revenge.

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

Twenty people were currently flying at a low altitude through the air.

"Last time, we lost two Seven Star Fiends, but they didn't lose a single one. This time, we definitely have to kill that Seven Star Fiend belonging to the Azure Dragon clan." The leader, a tall, green-eyebrowed man, said in a solemn voice.

“Elder Brother, this time, Elder Bulo [Bu’lo] will be with us. There definitely won’t be any problems.” Another person, a somewhat skinnier, green-eyebrowed man, laughed.

These two siblings were both three meters tall, a typical example of a Barbary clan member. The only thing remarkable about them was their green eyebrows. ‘The Green Eyebrow Brothers’ of the Barbary clan were a pair of very famous Seven Star Fiends, and were exceedingly strong.

As for Bulo...

His fame was widespread in the Netherworld, and he was one of the supreme experts of the Ashcroft clan. For three commanders to be sent on this mission was because this time, the clans were determined to avenge the previous humiliation.

It didn’t matter if their people died.

But two Seven Star Fiends of theirs died without killing a single Seven Star Fiend of the enemy? There was no way the eight great clans would accept this!

The tall, powerful green-eyebrowed man turned to look at the person next to them. He couldn’t help but feel his heart tremble. This person was just 1.7 meters tall, and in the eyes of the Barbary clan, such a person was just a ‘tiny little fellow’.

But...nobody dared to look down this person.

His entire body was covered in a long gray robe. He was bald, and his dry, wavy hair was slick against his head. His hair seemed yellow and dry, as though it had no life in it at all. His face was covered in frowns and wrinkles, giving him an ancient appearance, and in his ears hung a pair of green serpents.

"Hiss..." Those two green serpents were speaking in the serpentine language.

"I hope that this time, the Azure Dragon clan sent out that person named Linley!" Bulo opened his eyes, which were of a very muddy color, with some occasional yellow light flashing through them. He said in a hoarse voice, "Last time, it was he who killed my grandson."

"If Linley goes, then Elder Bulo, we will definitely let you personally deal with him." The skinny, green-eyebrowed man said hurriedly. Mosley had been Bulo's grandson.

"Right." Bulo nodded.

The green-eyebrowed siblings, although powerful members of the Barbary clan, in terms of status...were just middling amongst their Assembly of Elders. But this Bulo was different; Elder Bulo's status in the Ashcroft family was extremely high.

In terms of power, he was within the top three for his clan as well. For the Ashcroft clan to send him out meant that, clearly, this time they were determined to kill the Azure Dragon clan's forces.

"I wonder how this Linley compares with that Genius Elder, 'Blue', of the Azure Dragon clan." Elder Bulo chuckled.

"He's definitely inferior." The tall, green-eyebrowed man said. "Although that Linley has a tough body, it seems his soul defense isn't that great... far weaker than that Genius Elder. For you to kill him, Elder Bulo, he should feel honored."

Bulo, as a member of the Ashcroft clan, was a soul attack specialist to begin with. At the same time...his body was also extremely powerful.

Anyone capable of being in the top three of one of the great clans was a person of terrifying power.

That year, when Bulo had battled with the 'Genius Elder', Blue, neither had been able to kill the other.

If Linley and Emanuel had known that this time, the enemies had sent out this many experts, and especially that Bulo was amongst them, they probably would have retreated long ago. But Linley and Emanuel didn't know...so naturally, they continued to advance.

Within that black panther shaped metallic lifeform. Linley was currently drinking wine with a Highgod.

"It's been half a year. The eight great clans really are inefficient." Linley sighed.

"Captain, the eight great clans live at the borders of Indigo Prefecture.

They are hundreds of millions of kilometers away from us. Even if they are efficient and fast, they'll still need half a year before making their way to us. If they are slow, it might even take them one or two years." That squad member said.

Linley glanced at this squad member.

This squad member was named 'Isadore' [Yi'sa'duo]. During the last attack, some members of Linley's Squad Thirteen had been lost. Although Shanda and the others still had divine clones, the power of those divine clones was insufficient, and so they retired from Bloodbath Gorge.

Isadore was one of the replacements.

"Isadore, be careful during the battle." Linley laughed. When he had gone and informed Squad Thirteen that this time, he only needed to be one person, Isadore had very excitedly convinced the others to allow himself to be the one to accompany Linley.

"I know, Captain." Isadore's eyes were gleaming. "But Captain, although I have to protect myself, I need to kill our enemies as well. Over the past ten thousand years, I've been waiting for this day the entire time...the forces of the eight great clan were merciless in their pursuit of us that year. When our Four Divine Beasts clan was powerful, they all cowered before us, but now that our ancestors are dead, they begin attacking like wild dogs. Men, women, the elderly, the young...they'll wipe out any member of our Four Divine Beasts clan!"

Isadore's heart was filled with anger and hate.

Linley couldn't help but sigh. "This hatred and enmity truly has become a great one!" That year, each of the great clans had wildly pursued and attacked, all the way to Indigo Prefecture. This had been a very major event. When Linley had just arrived in Indigo Prefecture and been buying books, even that staff member had known that the Four Divine Beasts clan was engaging in a major battle.

Within the dragon-shaped metallic lifeform.

"Everyone, be careful. The enemy can appear at any moment." Emanuel said quietly. "Remember. Don't permit anyone to draw near our metallic lifeform. Anyone who draws near, be it Demigod or God, will be executed."

Last time, Linley had relied upon drawing close to the metallic lifeform before launching a sudden ambush, thus causing Emanuel to be wary as well.

"Haha..." Nearby, Linley's Deathgod Golem began to laugh. The Deathgod Golem had Linley's consciousness within, and it could thus be considered one of Linley's clones, in a way.

"There's nothing funny about it, Elder Linley. You were able to hide your strength. Perhaps others can do the same. It's best to be cautious." Emanuel said.

"Yes. It's best to be cautious." The Deathgod Golem spoke in Linley's voice.

Right at this moment...

"Not good! The enemy arrived!" Emanuel's face changed, and he instantly collected this metallic lifeform. Immediately, the eleven of them and the Deathgod Golem were now hovering in mid-air. Linley, through the Deathgod Golem, was able to see everything clearly. On the ground below them, twenty-plus figures were charging up at high speed.

"So many?" Emanuel's face changed dramatically.

"Elder Linley!" Emanuel immediately urged. "Hurry over."

"Don't worry." The Deathgod Golem said.

"Haha...child of the Azure Dragon clan, you can die now." Amidst the loud laughter, two tall, powerfully built green-eyebrowed men who looked similar charged up, wielding double-edged greatswords in their hands. Behind them, twenty five Six Star Fiends attacked as well.

Emanuel's face became ugly to behold.

The difference in power was too great.

"Roaaaaaar!!!"

Emanuel let out a fierce roar, and his entire body became covered in draconic scales. Instantly, he entered Dragonform, while at the same time, a white mist spread out from around his body, covering the entire area and making all sorts of illusions appear.

"We aren't weaker than you in the Elemental Laws of Water."

The Green Eyebrow Brothers laughed loudly as they surrounded and attacked Emanuel.

"Slash!" "Bang!"

The twenty five Six Star Fiends of the eight great clans attacked the ten Six Star Fiends of the Azure Dragon clan. The difference in numbers was simply too great...the Six Star Fiends wildly battled against each other, and exploding sounds thundered nonstop. The air trembled, blood splattered everywhere, and one figure after another fell from the skies.

"Bang!" Emanuel's right arm exploded, and he was knocked flying backwards.

"Die!" An indistinct, freezing light flashed towards him.

Right at this moment, Emanuel suddenly opened his mouth. The strange thing was, behind him appeared an enormous coiling illusion of an Azure Dragon. The enormous Azure Dragon Phantom was like the size of a mountain, and it stared at the two Seven Star Fiends with its illusory eyes.

"Not good."

The faces of the Green Eyebrow Twins changed.

“Retreat!” The two retreated towards different directions at the same time at high speed.

But at the same time, an indistinct azure light rippled outwards through space as though it were water, and the ripples instantly struck the two Green Eyebrow Brothers, and their bodies both trembled.

Innate divine ability – Dragon Roar!

“Captain!” The Six Star Fiends of the eight great clans saw that their captains were in danger.

“Raaaaaargh!” All of them hurriedly charged towards Emanuel. There was a difference between a Six Star Fiend and a Seven Star Fiend, but when several Six Star Fiends joined forces against a Seven Star Fiend, the Seven Star Fiend couldn’t be complacent either.

Emanuel had no choice but to retreat, while at the same time, he cursed mentally, “Why hasn’t Linley arrived yet?”

The Green Eyebrow Brothers had retreated towards different directions, trying to put some distance between each other, so as to force the scope of the innate divine ability, ‘Dragon Roar’, to be wider, and thus lessen the power of the attack. At this moment, that larger, taller green-eyebrowed man laughed angrily. “This innate divine ability really is powerful.”

And then, they charged over as well.

But right at this moment...

The green-eyebrowed man noticed one of his subordinates was frantically messaging him through divine sense, "Captain, careful!"

The green-eyebrowed man hurriedly turned to look. He saw a Dragonformed figure flying towards him at high speed, with a pair of dark golden eyes staring fixedly at him. What shocked this green-eyebrowed man was, the newcomer actually had fierce, sharp spikes on his back!

"He is Linley!" The green-eyebrowed man was immediately shocked to his senses.

Linley's unique Dragonform, after he had killed those two Seven Star Fiends, had been made known to the high level members of the eight great clans.

"Flee!" The green-eyebrowed man immediately turned to flee.

At this time, an earthen yellow light spread out, forming an enormous sphere of earthen yellow light. The green-eyebrowed Seven Star Fiend, just a hundred meters away from Linley, was naturally trapped within that area, and a terrifying gravity was applied to his body.

His speed slowed drastically!

"Aaaargh!" Knowing that he wouldn't be able to flee, the green-eyebrowed man turned and delivered a full force sword blow towards Linley.

An illusory, translucent sword shadow flew out of his greatsword, shooting straight towards Linley. Linley didn't have any time to dodge, and he didn't try to dodge! He still charged straight towards that green-eyebrowed man. As that translucent sword shadow pierced not Linley's body, Linley also delivered a vicious, smashing fist blow against the head of the green-eyebrowed man.

"BANG!"

The head was shattered, and the divine spark flew out.

"Big Brother!" The distant, skinnier green-eyebrowed man, upon seeing this, couldn't help but call out in agony.

On a distant mountaintop, Elder Bulu, who hadn't been planning to get involved, couldn't help but raise his head and stare, his eyes gleaming. "So he is Linley. Hmph. Those idiots from the Barbary clan. As soon as they meet someone with a tough body, they are useless."

Elder Bulu's lips trembled slightly.

Instantly...

An enormous phantom in the shape of a black serpent appeared behind Elder Bulu. This enormous black serpent covered the entire mountain. Its body was so enormous as to be astonishing. A terrifying aura suddenly filled the skies.

After having just killed a Seven Star Fiend, Linley, for some reason, felt a sense of fear in his heart.

Linley turned to stare below him, and he saw Elder Bulu staring at him coldly. The shadowy illusion of that enormous black serpent, in particular, caused Linley to unconsciously think about what he had seen last time.

"Not good. This is the innate divine ability, 'Soul Extinguisher'." Linley's face changed dramatically.

Last time, his subordinate had rescued him, but this time, there was nobody near him.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 31, A Battle of Sovereign's Might

The speed of this innate divine ability, 'Soul Extinguisher', was simply too fast. On the ground, that balding Elder Buló stared coldly as his lips moved slightly. Behind him hovered that enormous illusion of a black serpent, which only had a single, solitary red eye, and the eye was staring fixedly at Linley.

A crack appeared in Elder Buló's forehead, between his eyebrows, and a translucent light instantly slashed through the skies, piercing into the range of the 'Blackstone Space', shooting directly into Linley's body. The speed was so fast that Linley wasn't able to dodge at all.

The innate divine ability of the Ashcroft clan – Soul Extinguisher!

"Elder Linley!" The surviving Six Star Fiends of the Azure Dragon clan, upon seeing this, were all stunned.

"Bastard." The skinny, green-eyebrowed man ground his teeth as he stared at Linley, rage still burning in his heart. Just now, it had been Linley who had killed his older brother. "It's your luck that I wasn't able to kill you myself."

From afar, as Emanuel saw this, his eyes lit up. "The Azure Dragon ring!"

Emanuel immediately flew towards Linley at high speed.

Within the limitless space in Linley's mind, outside his sea of consciousness, there was that protective membrane of scales which was a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. This enormous membrane had a single tiny flaw, and that flaw was its weakness.

On the surface of the soul sea.

Beneath the seven-colored sword-shaped soul, a Linley dressed in a light green robe was standing. This was Linley's 'divine wind clone'. When battling, Linley only brought out a single one of his divine clones.

In the hands of his divine wind clone, there was a drop of azure water... water-type Sovereign's Might.

"Let's see if you can break through. If you can break through, then I'll be forced to use this Sovereign's Might." Linley had been prepared long ago, and he had his divine wind clone carry that drop of Sovereign's Might at all times. As for the divine wind clone, within the soul sea, it was standing right next to that sword-shaped soul.

Once danger came, his divine wind clone would immediately activate the drop of Sovereign's Might and use it to protect the soul, as well as counter-attack.

"Crunch!"

That translucent ray of light shot out at incomparable speed, as straight as an arrow, piercing forward, drilling down with vicious precision against that semi-translucent scaled membrane. It was so fast and so vicious...that it was definitely the most powerful attack that Linley had ever encountered.

Crack!

Like an egg striking a stone, the ray of light struck directly atop the scaled membrane, and then it completely shattered apart.

“Eh? This is the Soul Extinguisher?” Linley was stunned. “How come it didn’t hurt me at all. Even that simple soul attack which Mosley had used was more dangerous to me than this innate divine ability.”

“It seems as though this attack doesn’t have any sentience at all.”

Indeed. Innate divine abilities were very rigid, fixed types of attacks. For example, the ‘Godeater’ ability could only be used to devour divine sparks. If it succeeded, it succeeded. If it failed, it failed. The ‘Soul Extinguisher’ could only shoot forward, using raw, brute force to shatter anything that blocked in its path, then extinguished the enemy’s soul.

It was the same for Dylin and Tarosse’s innate divine abilities. The power was great, but the abilities were very rigid.

Once these innate divine abilities were activated, they would consume quite a bit of spiritual energy. You couldn’t use less spiritual energy if you wanted to. They were extremely rigid.

For soul attacks, sentience actually didn’t matter too much.

This was because generally speaking, if a Highgod had a 'soul-protecting divine artifact', it would protect all parts of the soul. For example, Bebe. His soul-protecting divine artifact protected every part of his soul. There were no 'weak spots'...and thus, sentience didn't matter.

One simply had to use raw power to break through. That was enough.

This was true for the 'Soul Extinguisher' as well. Unfortunately, what Linley possessed was a damaged soul-protecting Sovereign artifact. Aside from that flaw, the defensive strength of the other areas was exactly the same as a normal soul-protecting Sovereign artifact.

A Highgod, break through the defense of a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact with his attack?

In his dreams!

Thus...this technique by a supreme expert, 'Bulo', failed.

Linley stood there in the boundless skies, in the center of a sphere of earthen yellow light that was five hundred meters in diameter. On the ground, that balding, ancient Elder 'Bulo' raised his head to stare at Linley. That originally cold, sinister expression of his gradually changed into astonishment.

"Swoosh!" Emanuel flew towards Linley at high speed, laughing mockingly in his heart. "Those idiots. They killed Linley, but they didn't immediately go take the spoils of battle. But how could they know that Linley had a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact?"

Emanuel was exceedingly delighted with himself.

"Linley, now that you are dead, this belongs to me." Emanuel was very smug, but as he entered the region of the Blackstone Space, he couldn't help but be puzzled. "Why hasn't Linley's Blackstone Space collapsed?"

If a person died, his space should collapse.

"Emanuel." A cold, emotionless voice rang out.

"Uh?" Emanuel was stunned. He turned to look, and saw Linley's dark golden eyes staring at him.

"Why have you come over? To help me out?" Linley stared at Emanuel, who had a look of astonishment on his face. Linley couldn't help but laugh coldly in his heart, "This Emanuel has never given up on acquiring my Coiling Dragon ring."

Emanuel immediately recovered from his shock. He couldn't help but laugh awkwardly, "Elder Linley, you really are formidable. I...I saw that you were in a dangerous situation just now, Elder, and so I wanted to come help. But it seems, Elder, you don't need my assistance. I'll go deal with some other people. I'll hand that old fellow down below to you. I trust, Elder Linley, that you'll be able to easily deal with him."

Emanuel immediately flew away, retreating.

"Despicable fellow!"

"Hmph!" Linley felt contempt in his heart, then turned to look at the bald fellow who had attacked him. "Easily deal with him? It would seem that it won't be very easy to kill this old fellow." Linley could have had a sense of danger.

But Linley wasn't afraid either.

He currently had three drops of Sovereign's Might, and his divine wind clone was right there in his sea of consciousness, ready to activate it at any moment.

"Haha..."

Ancient-sounding laughter rang out from the mouth of the old, bald figure below him. The wrinkles on his face contorted like serpents. "Linley, it now seems that last time, when you killed Mosley and the other one, you were still hiding your power! Admirable, admirable!"

Linley stared at this old man, and as he did, one person's biographical data floated up to his mind.

When in Bloodbath Gorge, the Azure Dragon clan had provided him with a very clear explanation of some of the particularly dangerous individuals of the eight great clans. The danger these individuals posed was vastly greater than that of ordinary Seven Star Fiends. They were comparable to the clan's 'trump cards'!

The old man in front him was one of them!

What Linley didn't know was that his accomplishments in the previous battle had brought him to the attention of the various great clans, and they too had put his information into their list of 'dangerous figures'.

"If my guess is correct, you should be Elder Bulo of the Ashcroft clan." Linley said in a clear voice as he stood there, high up in the air in the middle of that enormous sphere, staring down at Bulo.

"Correct."

Bulo smiled, but because his face was covered in wrinkles, this smile made him look all the more savage. "You were able to resist my innate divine ability, which means your soul defense is truly quite formidable. But you intentionally pretended that it was your weak spot. Hmph. Hmph. Admirable."

That ancient voice echoed in the skies.

"However, today, I want to see how your physical defense is, in comparison to your 'Genius Elder', Blue!" The bald old man said, and then his entire body began to hiss as tiny, dense black scales appeared, covering his entire body. A fierce, slender serpentine tail emerged from behind him as well...

The Ashcroft clan descended from a supreme divine beast of the Netherworld, the 'Nether Serpent'.

Their strength was no less than that of the Azure Dragon clan's.

"Linley!" A furious bellow rang out, and a pale, ashen shadow tore through the skies, charging towards Linley.

Linley turned and saw that a seemingly blurry white figure was coming towards him. It was a savage-faced, green-eyebrowed man. The man immediately charged into the Blackstone Space, and as he did, Linley instantly changed the direction of the gravity.

Made it go downwards!

The skinny, green-eyebrowed man strove to resist that downwards pull, but his speed still slowed dramatically.

Right at this moment, he heard a furious shout. "Hales [Hei'er'si], leave Linley to me. You go kill the other one!"

The skinny, green-eyebrowed man turned to look at the already Serpentformed Buluo, then said in a hateful voice, "Fine, Elder Buluo, I'll hand this Linley to you. You absolutely must kill him and avenge my elder brother!"

"Don't worry." Buler was completely confident.

The skinny, green-eyebrowed man, 'Hales', glared hatefully at Linley, then with a cold snort turned and charged towards the distant Emanuel. Emanuel had been watching this entire time. When he saw that Hales went to attack Linley as well, his joy was indescribable.

Who would have imagined that with but a single word from that bald old man, Hales had come to attack him instead.

"Motherf*cker..." With a low curse, Emanuel had no choice but to charge towards Hales.

Linley stared up in front, at the 'freak' located outside his Blackstone Space. Elder Bulo's entire body was densely covered by the tiny black scales of the Nether Serpent. Only his chest still had a patch of large violet scales.

His slender serpentine tail quivered slightly, while in the center of Elder Bulo's forehead, a single red eye had appeared from a crack.

"So this is the transformation of the Nether Serpent clan?" Linley was secretly astonished.

In truth, Linley's Dragonform was just as bizarre as Bulo's. He had multiple fierce spikes radiating out from his spine, while his elbows and knees had sharp spikes jutting out as well. Linley's entire body looked akin to a human-shaped weapon.

Freak against freak!

"Linley, today, you absolutely will die." Elder Bulo said in his hoarse voice. "Only, I want to see how long you can hold out for!"

"Bulo, today, you too must die. I, too, want to see how long you can hold out!" Linley said coldly. Linley had already made his plans in advance. First, he'd rely on his body to battle. If he wasn't able to hold out...then even if he had to sacrifice a drop of Sovereign's Might, he had to kill this Bulo.

An expert of this level was worth sacrificing a drop of Sovereign's Might for.

"Bang!" Elder Bulo suddenly shot forward, charging directly into the Blackstone Space, and as he did, his speed couldn't help decline.

"In my Blackstone Space, you will be at a great disadvantage." Linley charged towards Elder Bulo.

But right at this moment...

Linley discovered, to his astonishment, that Elder Bulo's entire body wriggled forward like a serpent, easily and agilely gliding forward. Even within the Blackstone Space, although Elder Bulo's speed wasn't that fast, he was still incredibly agile.

"How...how is this possible?" Linley was shocked.

This was the first time a person within his Blackstone Space had been affected so weakly.

"Haha..." Elder Bulo laughed wildly, and suddenly, he transformed into a black shadow, piercing through the skies and charging directly towards Linley. Linley, astonished, released a backhand palm blow, carrying within it the 'Profound Truths of Velocity' as he smashed towards that black shadow!

Two terrifying surges of energy collided.

"WHAP!"

A sound that was so clear and sharp, it caused space itself crack apart. Spatial ripples spread out in every direction, while Linley himself was sent flying backwards from the vibrations of the clash. His already Dragonformed right hand was uncontrollably trembling, and the palm of his hand was filled with a heart-boring pain.

"Your body's strength really isn't bad." Elder Buluo snickered.

"Why the smugness?" Linley gritted his teeth. "In my Blackstone Space, although the effect on you isn't great, it isn't small either."

Linley flashed forward like a bolt of lightning, while Elder Buluo didn't show any weakness either, immediately moving forward to welcome him.

"Spiritual Chaos!" Linley instantly used his spiritual energy through the black stone to affect Elder Buluo, while at the same time, his twin fists struck out mercilessly...

Although Elder Buluo was able to resist the Spiritual Chaos technique, he still was slightly distracted.

"Whap!" "Bam!" "Bang!"

Linley's fists, legs, and even his draconic tail struck viciously in succession against Elder Buler.

"Eh?" Linley discovered, to his astonishment, that Elder Bulo's body was very slippery. It felt as though only half of the power of his blows had been applied. Elder Buler, with a somersault, flipped far away, then recovered in mid-air. He began to laugh from his rage. "Your soul really is quite formidable."

"However..."

Elder Bulo's body actually began to lengthen, as though he was transforming into a serpent, becoming soft and boneless as his serpentine tail extended as well. Elder Bulo, normally just the height of an ordinary person, had now transformed into a serpentine shape that was dozens of meters long.

"Haha..." Suddenly, from afar, a wild burst of laughter erupted, and a surge of terrifying power blasted out. Even Linley and Elder Bulo, in the midst of their battle, couldn't help but be distracted and turn to look...

"You want to kill me? In your dreams!"

Emanuel's entire body was encased in azure light, and every part of his body was emanating with that heart-shaking aura. As for that green-eyebrowed Hales, he was already dead, the shattered remnants of his corpse having already fallen to the ground.

"Emanuel used his Sovereign's Might?" Linley was shocked.

"Sovereign's Might?" Elder Bulo's face changed dramatically as well.

Because the person who had used the Sovereign's Might...belonged to the enemy!

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 32, Wanting to Steal a Chicken, Instead Losing the Bait “Wonderful.” Linley rejoiced. “Although Emanuel and I have some conflicts between us, we are of the same clan, after all.” Emanuel, upon having used his Sovereign’s Might, had gained tremendous power.

As for the enemy, the two Green Eyebrow Brothers had both died, leaving behind only Elder Bulo!

It was easy to see who held the advantage.

Elder Bulo suddenly let out a savage growl, and the eye in the center of his forehead turned so red, it seemed as though it was about to drip blood. Suddenly, he swiped out with his arm, and that soft, boneless arm actually elongated, slashing through the air and clawing towards Linley. The space which the arm danced through began to tremble.

“Swish!” A devilish violet light flashed.

Where the devilish sword light flashed past, space split apart, revealing tears. Bloodviolet chopped directly against that black scaled-covered arm.

“Hiss...” An ear-piercing sound suddenly came from long, slender arm. The scales split open, and Bloodviolet plunged into the flesh. However, it wasn’t able to cut any deeper, as the flesh was incomparably tough.

"Haaaargh!"

Linley, with a savage right fist, swung directly at that long arm, but with a 'bang' sound, the arm actually twisted, clawing towards Linley's elbow.

Linley wasn't able to dodge in time at all, Elder Buló managed to seize his right arm.

Elder Buló's fingernails suddenly turned black, and as sharp as daggers. At the same time, Elder Buló suddenly applied pressure through his left arm, using those sharp fingernails to try and pierce into Linley's right arm. Linley let out a low growl, and the muscles on his right arm instantly bulged.

"Ah!" Linley kicked out mightily, smashing directly towards that long arm.

"Bang!" When the tip of his foot connected with the flesh on that long arm, it was like having kicked a wad of cotton.

Elder Buló's arm trembled slightly, but he had actually managed to deflect Linley's attack. "Swoosh!" Elder Buló borrowed the counter-force to come charging closer, and as he did, this giant that was tens of meters long came hurtling towards Linley.

A bloody aura was throwing itself towards Linley at the same time as well.

"This Elder Buló's defense is not only powerful, it is also as slippery and soft as a serpent. How odd." Linley began to sense how hard to deal with this person was. This Nether Serpent clan, capable of stalemating the Azure Dragon clan, really did have its own unique abilities.

"Emanuel, hurry up and join up with me to kill him." Linley hurriedly sent through divine sense.

After having used a drop of Sovereign's Might, Emanuel was now extremely powerful.

But Linley discovered, to his amazement, that Emanuel was pretending to have heard nothing, and was instead chasing after and pursuing those fleeing enemy Six Star Fiends.

"Join forces with you?" Emanuel laughed coldly in his heart. "In your dreams. I'll first let that Buluo kill you, and then I'll take that Azure Dragon ring. Although you have clones, and I won't be able to bind it with blood right away, but...your remaining divine clones are so weak. How will you fight against me?"

It was only because Linley was powerful that he was able to maintain ownership of the Coiling Dragon ring.

As Emanuel saw it, if Linley's most powerful divine clone was destroyed, how could Linley continue to keep the Azure Dragon ring?

"Bastard!" Linley cursed in his heart. He was cursing both Emanuel as well as this Elder Buluo who was right in front of him. In a physical close-combat, Elder Buluo occasionally hit hard and occasionally was soft and slippery, causing Linley to be at complete disadvantage.

"Bang!"

The two separated once again.

"This Linley really is tough to deal with." Elder Buló felt a headache coming as well.

Just based on close-quarters combat, he was stronger than Linley. But... in that Blackstone Space, he was at a disadvantage to begin with. In addition, Linley would constantly, randomly change the direction of the gravity, sometimes upwards, sometimes downwards, sometimes towards Linley, sometimes away from Linley.

The bizarre changes of the gravity's direction caused Elder Buló a headache, causing him to be unable to have any advantage at all.

"Emanuel, come over and kill him together with me!" Linley called out loudly.

"Emanuel?" Elder Buló was shocked.

"Eh?" Emanuel couldn't help but turn over.

Just now, when Linley had used divine sense, Emanuel could pretend that he didn't hear. But now that Linley was shouting so loudly, even the surviving Six Star Fiends of the clan heard the call. Naturally, those distant, spectating intelligence agents probably heard the call as well.

If he still didn't act, then if Linley were to die, when the intelligence agents made their report, Emanuel would be in trouble!

"This Bulo is such an idiot." Emanuel cursed to himself.

Shouting was something that required time. During a furious battle such as this, Linley didn't have any chance to shout at all. If Bulo was able to seize an advantage and to hold Linley down while beating upon him or just kill Linley, then Emanuel's plot would have succeeded.

But now that Linley and Bulo were battling to a virtual standstill, Linley naturally had the chance to shout out loudly.

"Alright, Linley, let's kill him together." Emanuel intentionally shouted back loudly as well.

These words frightened Bulo so much, he immediately went to his last resort...using Sovereign's Might!

"You want to kill me? Haha..." The ancient-sounding laughter shook the heavens, and Elder Bulo's body once more returned to his normal size. At the same time, his entire body became covered with a layer of a black glow, which at the same time also emanating a terrifying aura, completely comparable to Emanuel.

"He also used Sovereign's Might?" Linley was shocked. "The Elder said that the advantage our Four Divine Beasts clan has is that we have some more Sovereign's Might. I didn't expect that this Bulo has Sovereign's Might as well. Terrible."

The ancestors of the Four Divine Beasts clan were Sovereigns. Naturally, they had an excess of Sovereign's Might, giving virtually every single one of their Elders a drop.

As for the ancestors of the eight great clans, they weren't that formidable. Sovereign's Might was extremely rare, and only the most supreme of Elders would be in possession of a drop. And thus, Bulo had one!

"Emanuel, hurry over." Linley sent through divine sense, shouting frantically. Emanuel just stood there in mid-air, not in a hurry to charge over at all. Linley instantly understood. "This Emanuel...actually has this sort of plot!"

Emanuel laughed coldly in his heart. "He used Sovereign's Might? Excellent. Then first kill Linley."

"Linley!"

A low growl, and Elder Bulo charged directly towards Linley.

Linley's face changed. "Rumble..." The direction of the gravity of the Blackstone Space suddenly changed, transforming into a repulsive force! The powerful repulsive energy forced Elder Bulo outwards.

However, the power of Sovereign's Might was simply too great.

Even when trapped within the 'Blackstone Space', Elder Buló was still able to forcibly resist that repulsive force, and his speed was still very fast. He wildly chased after Linley, who turned and ran directly towards Emanuel.

"If you won't come to me, I'll go to you!" Linley said to himself.

In an instant, Linley charged over to him.

"Hmph. I might as well kill you first, actually." Elder Buló, seeing the nearby Emanuel, could sense the aura of Sovereign's Might emanating from him, and thus he immediately turned to attack Emanuel instead.

After all...

Emanuel was more of a threat to him!

Linley couldn't be bothered to care about Emanuel. "This Buló is too powerful. When trapped in the Blackstone Space, he was still able to fight me to a draw. As for his soul attacks...it's only because he used his innate divine ability that he became deceived into thinking my soul defense is strong. Once he begins to use soul attacks, I definitely won't be a match for him."

This misunderstanding had caused Elder Buló to not use any soul attacks at all.

But Linley could tell that even if he used Sovereign's Might, he still probably wouldn't be able to overcome Bulo. After all, in a normal situation, he was weaker than Bulo. If the two of them were both to use Sovereign's Might, the ratio of power between the two of them wouldn't change.

"Flee!"

Linley directly fled towards the north.

"Bang!" A terrifying explosive sound rang out. The battle between two experts who had both used Sovereign's Might was fierce and terrifying.

"Whoosh!"

Linley flew at high speed, while at the same time, he could sense the terrifying explosive vibrations from behind.

"This is too high profile." Linley was secretly shocked.

If he was able to defeat the opponent by using Sovereign's Might, Linley definitely would use it. But since he knew he wouldn't be able to win, it was best to flee.

"Whoosh!" "Whoosh!"

Two figures, one after the other, actually suddenly appeared in the skies above him. At the same time, a voice entered Linley's mind. "Linley, hurry up and use your Sovereign's Might. The two of us can join forces and kill him together!"

Linley raised his head to look.

He saw, in mid-air, an azure ball of light fleeing for his life, with a black ball of life in pursuit.

"Linley!" The azure ball of light suddenly turned, flying over to Linley once more.

Linley was now in the same situation that Emanuel had been in. He didn't want to help Emanuel, but Emanuel was now running towards him...forcing him to intervene.

"Linley, if you still refuse to act, once my divine water clone dies, I will definitely go tell the Grand Elder of this. Definitely!!!" Emanuel sent to Linley frantically through his divine sense.

A drop of Sovereign's Might contained an astonishing amount of energy.

After all, it was liquefied Sovereign power.

Generally speaking, in a battle, it could only last for a while. But Emanuel had used his Sovereign's Might earlier on, and it was quite some time ago. Once the energy of the Sovereign's Might was used up...he would definitely die.

"Hurry up, Linley!" Emanuel called out frantically.

"BANG!"

The azure ball of light once more exchange blows viciously with that black ball of light, and the azure ball of light was actually sent smashing down towards the ground. Emanuel clearly was at a disadvantage.

"Hey, what an exciting battle, eh?" A carefree voice suddenly shook the skies, entering the ears of these three. Unconsciously, Emanuel, Elder Bulo, and Linley all turned to stare towards the source of that voice...

A muscular man, three meters tall, dressed in fiery red armor, with long, scarlet red hair fluttering freely in the breeze. His tiger-like eyes swept the area, and a smile was on his face.

"Oh, Linley!" The muscular man laughed as he looked towards Linley. "Long time no see. I heard that you became an Elder of the Four Divine Beasts clan? Haha, it seems as though it's been less than a thousand years since we parted, but you've become so strong."

Linley stared at this person. He was stunned for a long moment, then finally, Linley said, "Phusro!"

"Haha, you still remember me." Phusro began to laugh loudly.

This man in front of him, amazingly enough, was that Volcano Titan.

That person who had been subject to a master-servant bond, and so had been forced to transform into a small kitten and endure countless years of servitude and humiliation. That supreme expert, 'Phusro'. Even a Seven Star Fiend, in front of Phusro, could only choose to flee.

"Swoosh!" The azure ball of light scurried towards Linley's side. Linley turned to look towards 'Emanuel', only to see the azure light covering Emanuel's body grow weaker and weaker, then completely vanish.

"My Sovereign's Might is all used up." Emanuel stared at him. "It's up to you, now."

But Elder Bulo, his entire body still covered with that black aura, was hovering not too far away. "Used up your Sovereign's Might? Haha, the two of you can die now." As he spoke, he transformed into a ray of black light, shooting directly towards Linley.

"BANG!"

A ray of fiery light collided with the black light, and the black light was actually sent flying backwards.

Phusro stretched out his arm, retrieving that fiery, giant red awl. Elder Bulo stood there in mid-air, staring at Phusro in shock. "You...you..." Just now, Phusro's awl-blow had smashed him backwards.

Even an Asura couldn't so easily send him flying backwards after he, Bulo, had used Sovereign's Might.

"Hey, what's going on here?" Phusro frowned, staring at him.

"Who are you?" Elder Bulo growled softly.

"That's none of your business. This Linley is my friend. You want to kill him..." Phusro grinned. "After getting this weapon of mine, it hasn't really killed any supreme experts yet." The fiery red awl in Phusro's hand was more than two meters long.

Sharp at one end, blunt at the other. It was like a massive bull's horn.

Linley just watched all this happen in disbelief.

Phusro was powerful, true, but...Bulo had used Sovereign's Might. Currently, even if an Asura came, the Asura probably wouldn't be able to so effortlessly force him to retreat.

"Linley, he...who is he?" Emanuel was tongue-tied as well.

"A friend of mine." This was the only answer Linley could give. At the same time, Linley was puzzled. Phusro's weapon, in the past, had been a massive axe. Since when did it become this fiery red awl? This awl...

Seemed to be quite extraordinary!

"Then you are looking for death!" Elder Bulo bellowed furious. A long black whip appeared in his hand, and the long black whip, filled with Sovereign power, lashed out directly towards Phusro. Where the long whip passed, space itself split open.

But Phusro just grabbed his giant awl, then gave it a toss...

Like a dagger being thrown, the big, fiery red awl transformed into a ray of fiery light, soaring outwards. With a 'bang' sound, the black whip actually shattered. At the same time, a large hole appeared in Elder Buló's chest.

The fiery red awl flew back into Phusro's hand.

"Are you still refusing to f*ck off? I injured you this time, but next time, I'm going to kill you." Phusro said, holding that giant, fiery awl.

"That...that's..."

Elder Buló stared in disbelief at that red awl. "A Sovereign artifact?"

"Haha, not bad. Good eye." Phusro laughed smugly.

Sovereign's Might, to a Sovereign, was a commonplace thing. But a Sovereign artifact....that was something which a Sovereign had to spend countless amounts of time, effort, and Sovereign power to nurture and develop. The power of a Sovereign artifact vastly exceeded Sovereign's Might!

In particular, weapon-type Sovereign artifacts. Using them to kill Highgods would result in an utter massacre.

Given how the situation had developed, in his heart, Bulo was filled with unwillingness to accept this outcome. "Hales and his brother both died. On this assault, our side lost a pair of Seven Star Fiends, but not a single one of the Seven Star Fiends of the Four Divine Beasts clan perished. And I even used up a drop of Sovereign's Might!"

Humiliation!

Once the results of this battle became widely known, this would definitely result in the other members of the clan looking down at him, and the Patriarch would definitely be unhappy as well.

"But this person has a Sovereign artifact." Bulo looked towards Phusro. Although his heart was filled with rage, he could only choose to submit. After all, resisting meant death! There was no question about this.

"Based on your transformation, you should be from the Netherworld's Ashcroft clan." Phusro stared down from up above, then said casually, "When you go back, convey some words back to your Patriarch. Just say that this time, I'm giving your Patriarch face and so I'm not killing you. But if next time, you guys still dare to do anything to my friend 'Linley', then hehe...haha...well, you can go imagine what the repercussions will be. Just remember, the only thing that matters is that you don't do anything to Linley. As for the others, I don't give a damn."

Bulo's heart trembled.

As for Emanuel, his face turned ugly to behold. He glanced sideways at Phusro. "This big fellow seems to have some sort of friendship with Linley, rather than some sort of friendship with my clan." Phusro's words made it very clear...

He wouldn't get involved in the battle between the eight great clans and the Four Divine Beasts clan.

Linley's heart was filled with questions.

"Phusro and I...in actuality, the only time we met and chatted was that time when he escaped. In truth, the relationship between us isn't that deep. For my sake, he would be willing to set turn his face in opposition against the eight great clans?" Linley didn't understand.

Could it be that he was just that charismatic?

It was easy to understand why Phusro would save him, but threaten the enemy's Patriarch? This was very hard to understand.

"Right. I will definitely convey your words." Bulo's heart still held rage within it, but on the surface, he still lowered his head in submission. At present, Bulo had already completely reverted back to his human form, and even the two serpents hanging from his ears didn't dare to hiss.

"Well, f*ck off, then!" Phusro waved his hand.

Bulo immediately transformed into a ray of light, moving towards the depths of the mountain forests, then disappearing.

After flying twenty or thirty kilometers, Bulo landed to the ground. His wrinkle-covered face began to twist and contort with rage, and his pair of viperous eyes became filled with a sinister light.

"Am I supposed to go back? Say that I failed to kill a single Seven Star Fiend, but that two of ours died?" Bulo was livid.

It wasn't a major issue if any of the other Elders of the clan failed in a mission. But...he was Bulo! A 'trump card' level figure within the clan. For him to meet with a result such as this on a mission...the other members of the eight great clans would definitely discuss this behind his back.

He couldn't accept being embarrassed like this!

When one possessed unlimited lifespan such as these supreme experts, one would care deeply about their 'face'.

"No. That Phusro is very possibly going to leave. Once he leaves...I can absolutely intercept them and kill them enroute." Bulo's eyes lit up. Even though he didn't dare to kill Linley, he still dared to kill Emanuel.

"Whooooosh."

His Sovereign's Might turned transparent, and immediately spread out to a distance of tens of kilometers, encapsulating Phusro, Linley, and Emanuel, the three of whom were still engaging in conversation.

Sovereign's Might could be used for material attacks and could also be used for spiritual attacks.

Using divine sense to investigate, in turn, was in reality just spreading out one's spiritual energy.

This Sovereign's Might, since capable of being transforming into spiritual attacks and spiritual barriers, naturally was also capable of being used for 'divine sense scouting', and the effectiveness of it was very great. Even the distance and area at which it could be used was greatly expanded! But of course, how could an ordinary supreme expert possibly be willing to use up Sovereign's Might for divine sense scouting?

The effect of using Sovereign's Might to do scouting was akin to a Sovereign himself scouting. Naturally, Phusro, Linley, and Emanuel didn't notice it at all.

"Hey, little fella, you can go back now." Phusro gestured disdainfully towards Emanuel. "It's been a long time since Linley and I met, and there's some things we have to say to each other. Hurry on back. What, do you want to eavesdrop on our conversation, kid?"

Emanuel didn't dare to say anything.

"Linley, I'll head back for now, then." Emanuel smiled towards Linley while also making a respectful, fractional bow towards Phusro. But Phusro simply snorted, causing Emanuel to be rather embarrassed.

"Elder Emanuel, have a safe trip." Linley laughed calmly.

“Elder Linley, you’ll be going back by yourself. You need to be careful of the enemy as well.” Emanuel said, seemingly in a very friendly way. And then, Emanuel immediately flew away.

“Travelling by himself?” Bulo, who was using his Sovereign’s Might to watch this, couldn’t help but reveal a smile on his ancient, withered face. And then, his muddy yellow eyes narrowed. “I need to hurry. My Sovereign’s Might has almost been used up. I need to seize this bit of remaining time to kill that fellow named Emanuel.”

Bulo immediately transformed into a ray of light, flying in pursuit.

A drop of Sovereign’s Might in liquid form could be used for a fairly long period of time. Even if Bulo didn’t use the Sovereign’s Might, he would be able to easily kill Emanuel. Given that he had in fact used it...at present, Emanuel had no ability to fight back at all.

Emanuel travelled back by himself towards the direction of the Four Divine Beasts clan, his face extremely sinister and gloomy.

This time, he had wanted to let Linley’s strongest clone be killed. That goal had become a failure. But that was secondary. More importantly...he not only hadn’t had any gains, he had even used up a drop of Sovereign’s Might!

“A drop of Sovereign’s Might...I only had one drop!” Emanuel felt great unhappiness in his heart.

If one had to use up Sovereign's Might, one had to at least have some gains to show for it. But what had he gained?

"The ancestors are dead. The clan's stockpile of Sovereign's Might has continuously dwindled, and is in fact personally overseen by the Patriarch. The Patriarch has always been biased against me...how can he possibly give me another drop of Sovereign's Might?"

While flying back, Emanuel continued to consider what to do.

"It's all Linley's fault. He didn't use his Sovereign's Might to join forces with me in killing that Bulu. If we killed Bulu...the Patriarch definitely would have bestowed another Sovereign's Might upon me for rendering such a great merit." Emanuel's heart remained filled with discontent.

But right at this moment...

"Eh?" Emanuel suddenly felt his heart clench in fear. He couldn't help to turn and look, and as he did, a black bolt of lightning seemed to strike towards him. The terrifying aura which emanated from that black flash caused Emanuel's face to change, instantly turning white!

"Sovereign's Might!" Emanuel's eyes turned round and huge.

"Bang!"

Emanuel's entire body was blown apart, and his divine spark fell down.

At this moment, a figure appeared in mid-air. Bald. Ancient. The figure was Elder Bulo.

"Hmph. At least I've killed a Seven Star Fiend. When I go back, I'll be able to defend myself." Elder Bulo had been very unwilling to accept this outcome, but after killing Emanuel, he immediately felt much better. When he went back to make the report...

He could completely explain that the reason why Linley didn't die was because of that Phusro. He himself didn't have the ability to do anything about it. But at least he had killed the other Seven Star Fiend.

"Whooosh."

With a wave of his hand, Elder Bulo collected the interspatial ring, then let out a low snort. "So he really did have a divine clone staying in the Skyrise Mountains. This ring is pointless to me, then." Applying a bit of force to it, he made the interspatial ring shatter.

As for that divine spark hovering in front of him, Elder Bulo couldn't even be bothered to grab it. He didn't care about such a thing.

"Eh?"

Elder Bulo lowered his head to look at himself. The black aura surrounding him had almost vanished.

"Better leave." Elder Bulo seized the remaining moments to immediately fly towards the east, vanishing. And, just moments after Elder Bulo left, two figures pierced through the skies and appeared here. It was Linley and Phusro.

Linley lowered his head, looking down carefully at the ground.

He had been chatting idly with Phusro, but suddenly, he had sensed an astonishing energy ripple, and so he had immediately hurried over. The remnants of Emanuel's shattered corpse were still on the ground, and his divine spark and divine artifacts were hovering there as well.

"I still came late." Linley said. "Emanuel's already dead." With a flip of his hand, Linley collected the divine spark and the divine artifact.

"If he died, he died. What's the big deal." Phusro said disdainfully.

Linley couldn't help but laugh.

Died?

Linley didn't feel the slightest bit of grief for Emanuel's death. Earlier, at that dangerous moment, Emanuel had intentionally pretended that he didn't hear Linley's divine sense. He hadn't helped, hoping to use Bulu to kill Linley.

"However, with him dead, I'll have quite a few difficulties once I return." Linley frowned. Emanuel, in the clan, was connected to quite a few people. "Hmph. We'll wait and see. It was Bulu who killed him, after all."

Upon sensing the aura of Sovereign's Might from this place, Linley was able to guess that this was Bulo's doing.

"Hey, Phusro. You weren't finished speaking just now." Linley turned to look at Phusro and laughed as he spoke.

"Oh. Right. That year, when I arrived at the 'Muja Continent', I acquired my Sovereign artifact." As Phusro spoke, he began to laugh so happily that his eyes half-closed. Clearly, he felt quite delighted.

Muja Continent? Linley knew that this was one of the five continents of the Infernal Realm.

"Linley, have you ever seen a Sovereign?" Phusro said in an intentionally mysterious manner.

Linley shook his head. "No. I've only seen a scryer recording of a Sovereign. However, all I saw was an enormous blurry face formed from energy."

"That's just an illusion the Sovereign generated. It isn't the Sovereign's true body." Phusro said smugly. "Linley, there's something you don't know...when I arrived at the Muja Continent, I met a supreme expert and engaged in a competition with him!"

"Competition?" Linley was stunned.

"Whatever we competed in, I lost!"

Phusro said resignedly. "We competed in material attacks. I lost. We competed in spiritual attacks. I still lost. We competed in speed. I lost... even when we competed in the aspect I am proudest in, my physical strength, I still lost."

"You lost in everything?" Linley was shocked. At the same time, he couldn't help but guess what the truth was.

"Only later did I discover..."

Phusro laughed. "He was a Sovereign!"

Although Linley had guessed this, upon hearing this, he was still shocked. After a moment, he laughed loudly, "Haha, Phusro, you actually competed against a Sovereign? Haha..."

"How was I supposed to know that he was a Sovereign? He hid his true power. I only took him to be another Highgod." Phusro said resignedly. "He didn't reveal off any of his majestic Sovereign's presence...only at the end, when he asked if I was willing to be his Emissary or not, did he show off his majestic Sovereign's presence. Only then did I realize he was a Sovereign."

"A Sovereign of what element?" Linley asked.

"A fire-type Sovereign!"

Phusro laughed. "I am a fire-type expert. When I competed with him in attacks, we both competed in using fire-type attacks. Linley...I have the feeling that ever since I met you, my luck has been excellent!"

"The first time I met you, I escaped from my countless years of bondage."

"And then, just a few centuries later, I became a Sovereign's Emissary."

Phusro was quite delighted with himself. "This is the Sovereign artifact the Sovereign bestowed upon me. My power was comparable to the Infernal Asuras to begin with. Now that I have a Sovereign artifact...haha, in the entire Infernal Realm, there are very few people capable of surpassing me."

"Very few who can surpass you? You mean to say, there's still some people stronger than you?" Linley laughed.

"A few, I suppose."

Phusro said. "After all, in the Infernal Realm, there's a number of Sovereign's Emissaries. There's also a few extremely rare divine beasts who have extremely powerful innate divine abilities...but actually, the most powerful of all are those Highgods who have become Paragons.

Linley nodded as well.

Paragons had completely mastered and completely fused all of the profound mysteries of one of the Elemental Laws. Fusing five profound mysteries and fusing all six profound mysteries to mastery...although it was only a difference of one profound mystery, the difference in power was tremendously great.

"I've been in the Infernal Realm for so long, but I haven't seen a single Paragon yet." Linley laughed.

"Neither have I." Phusro shook his head helplessly. "Based on what the Sovereign said, these Paragon-level Highgods, although in terms of power are of course inferior to Sovereigns, are actually even fewer in number than Sovereigns..."

Linley agreed with this as well.

"I wonder...if one were to fuse all profound mysteries into one and become a Paragon, the most invincible of Highgods...what sort of power one would have." Linley sighed to himself.

"Linley, I have some things to attend to. I'll leave for now." Phusro laughed. "As for your Four Divine Beasts clan, don't just stupidly go battle for them nonstop. Protect yourself and improve your own power first." After speaking, Phusro flew away.

Linley chuckled, watching Phusro leave.

"Time to go back." Linley lowered his head, glancing at Emanuel's corpse on the ground, then flew towards the Skyrite Mountains.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 34, The Eight Great Patriarchs

Bloodbath Gorge.

“Whoosh!” Emanuel was currently flying at high speed through Bloodbath Gorge. The other warriors within Bloodbath Gorge couldn’t help but stare, puzzled, as Emanuel flew past at high speed.

“Isn’t this that Elder Emanuel of the Azure Dragon clan? Why is he in such a rush?”

“No idea. Must be something urgent.”

The warriors within Bloodbath Gorge all couldn’t help but comment to themselves.

Currently, Emanuel couldn’t be bothered with the idle chatter of others. A ball of fire was blazing in his heart, and fury had filled his mind. He charged directly to the residence of his father, ‘Forhan’.

“Smash!” The door was pushed open.

Forhan had been seated in his room, quietly drinking tea. He couldn’t help but raise his head in amazement. “Emanuel, what are you doing here?”

Emanuel didn’t say anything. Turning, with a ‘creaaaak’ sound, he slammed the door shut.

"Bang!" Emanuel fell to his knees, his kneecaps smashing hard against the ground. Even the tough ground cracked apart from the force of it.

"Emanuel, what are you..." Forhan immediately stood up.

"Father!" Emanuel called out with grief and fury.

"What on earth has happened?" Forhan had a bad feeling...

"My...my divine water clone died! It was because of that Linley! Because of him!!!" Emanuel said, his entire body trembling. "It was all because of him! First, he intentionally refused to participate, and then, he parted ways with me!"

"Your divine water clone died?"

Forhan's mind went momentarily blank. His son only had two bodies in total, one a divine water clone, the other a divine wind clone. The power of his divine wind clone was ordinary, and he hadn't been able to fuse any of the profound mysteries.

His son wouldn't even have the chance to refine a water-type divine spark and recover his former level of power.

"What exactly happened? Explain clearly." Forhan said hurriedly.

"Yes, Father."

Emanuel's face was covered in rage. Now that he had found someone to complain to, he immediately began to speak in detail. Only, once the words came out from Emanuel's mouth, the story had changed. It seemed as though everything Linley had done, he had done to try and harm Emanuel.

The Azure Dragon Palace. The fifth floor. A side room.

The Grand Elder was seated in the meditative position on a prayer mat, quietly training. Suddenly, the Grand Elder's forehead furrowed, and she opened her eyes. "Why are the two of them here?" The Grand Elder immediately stood up and walked towards the main hall.

"Grand Elder!" Forhan's voice rang out.

And then, Forhan and Emanuel entered the main hall on the fifth floor.

"What are you doing, rushing in here like this!" The Grand Elder shouted in a cold, unhappy voice.

"Grand Elder, Emanuel's divine water clone died." Forhan said frantically.

"Eh?" The Grand Elder was shocked. She couldn't help but look at Emanuel. "Emanuel, didn't you and Linley go together to carry out this mission? Also, you and Linley both had a drop of Sovereign's Might."

"Bang!" Emanuel knelt down heavily.

"Grand Elder, Linley and I encountered three Seven Star Fiends, all of whom were extremely strong. One of them was Elder Bulo of the Ashcroft clan." Emanuel said hurriedly.

The Grand Elder's face changed. "It was actually him? Given his status, he should have had a drop of Sovereign's Might."

"However, if you and Linley had both used your Sovereign's Might and joined forces, even if Bulo used Sovereign's Might, the two of you, when joining forces, should've been able to escape with your lives." The Grand Elder said.

"That Linley just watched me die without helping!"

Emanuel said hurriedly. "When I was in danger, he didn't help out at all. Afterwards, an expert suddenly appeared and ordered that Bulo to temporarily halt his attacks. That expert ordered Bulo to leave, and so I thought that I was safe. Linley then said that he had something to discuss with that expert, and so I was to leave by myself first."

"I didn't suspect anything, and thus left by myself. But who would have imagined..." Emanuel was filled with both rage and grief. "Grand Elder, just as I left, I was ambushed by that Bulo again and killed by him. Grand Elder...it must have been arranged by Linley. He definitely must have secretly used his divine sense to speak with that Bulo and told that Bulo to ambush me. Otherwise...how could Bulo have left, then returned to attack me?"

The Grand Elder, hearing this, frowned.

“For Linley to not assist earlier does show that he had the intention of harming you. However, as for Bulo’s later attack...there’s no way to be certain as to whether or not Linley used his divine sense to collude with Bulo.” The Grand Elder said in a low voice. “Although Linley didn’t assist you, you didn’t die, after all. Your death was caused by Bulo’s attack. It can’t be counted as being caused by Linley.”

“Grand Elder!” Emanuel was frantic.

Although the Grand Elder was his paternal grandmother, she was too obstinate and unfeeling. Even her son, ‘Forhan’, had to address her as ‘Grand Elder’.

“Grand Elder, think about it. If Linley didn’t have the intention of killing Emanuel, how could Emanuel’s divine water clone have died?” Forhan said frantically. “Why wouldn’t he return alongside Emanuel? Why would he insist on them taking separate paths? Even if he wanted to speak in private, couldn’t he just have Emanuel wait off to one side?”

“Also. That Bulo, having been ordered off by that mysterious expert... why would he dare return and attack? He definitely colluded with Linley.” Forhan said frantically.

But they all forgot about something...

Bulo, after having used Sovereign’s Might, was able to use a Sovereign’s power for scouting.

"Grand Elder." Forhan said frantically.

The Grand Elder couldn't help but look towards Emanuel.

"Bang!" Forhan suddenly knelt down as well. Frantically, he said, "Mother!!!"

The Grand Elder's body trembled. Ever since she ordered Forhan to address her as 'Grand Elder', it had been many years since her son had addressed her as 'Mother' again.

"Mother, Emanuel is my only son. His divine water clone is now dead. For his divine wind clone to grow in power will be difficult, even after the passage of countless years! Mother, the future of your grandson has been shattered by that Linley. How can you...not even a little..."

As he spoke, Forhan began to shed tears.

The Grand Elder felt her heart clench.

If she wanted to penalize Linley, just by being slightly partial, she could indeed penalize him.

"Mother!!!" Forhan said frantically.

The Grand Elder looked at the two men kneeling in front of her. One was her son, and the other was her grandson. The Grand Elder took a deep breath, then said softly, "Child, rise."

The Grand Elder rarely displayed her emotions, and within the clan, she always gave the impression of being callous and emotionless.

However...

She was still a mother. Deep within her soul, there was still a very soft place. She wasn't completely stone-hearted and unfeeling.

Forhan and Emanuel, hearing this, were overjoyed.

"Mother. Linley's divine clone is at the Skyrite Mountains right now. We can interrogate him right away." Forhan said hurriedly. "Our Azure Dragon clan should be unified and work together, but Linley actually dares to act in such a way. Even if we don't execute him, we have to punish him heavily."

"Right. Punish him heavily."

Emanuel said hurriedly. "In addition, by what right does he, a junior, hold the Azure Dragon ring of the ancestor? The Azure Dragon ring should be in your possession, grandmother. Even if you don't need it, it should be given to Father."

The Grand Elder was silent.

"Mother, shall we send someone to summon Linley over?" Forhan said hurriedly.

Linley's original body and divine wind clone were currently in the battlegrounds outside, while his fire, water, and earth clones remained in the Skyrise Mountains. They could be interrogated immediately.

"What's the rush?"

The Grand Elder glanced sideways at each of them. "Even if I am to punish him, can it be that I am supposed to punish those clones? Linley's original body isn't even back yet."

Forhan and Emanuel both came to their senses.

"Right. We shouldn't interrogate him now. Otherwise, if we interrogate his clones, he might be so frightened that his original body flees. That won't be worth it." Emanuel said hurriedly. As Emanuel and Forhan saw it, the value of Linley's clones was far inferior to the value of his original body.

After all...

Generally speaking, there were differences in power between the clones of an expert. The most important one was the one which mattered the most.

Within the borders of Indigo Prefecture. A place where four of the eight great clans were stationed.

The leader of the Ashcroft clan, which had moved here from the Netherworld, was currently chatting with Bulo's divine water clone. After all, Bulo's divine Death clone was still on the way back.

"Bulo, did you say he has a Sovereign artifact?" This Patriarch's eyes were scarlet red, and his eyebrows appeared very devilish. His long black hair which glowed with a green light extended to his knees, and the two green serpents hanging from his ears were currently staring at Bulo.

This person...

Was the leader of the Ashcroft clan, and the ancestor of the Nether Serpent clan! The most powerful expert of the Nether Serpent clan.

"Yes, Father. That fire-type Sovereign artifact is very formidable." Bulo said respectfully. "He also asked me to deliver a message to you. He said that he didn't kill me because he was giving you face, but if in the future, we dare touch Linley, then the repercussions...we can imagine them for ourselves."

"Hmph. Impudence."

This Patriarch let out a cold snort.

"His Sovereign artifact is fire-type. He should thus be the Emissary of a Sovereign of Fire." The Patriarch of the Nether Serpent clan considered this, then he couldn't help but bark, "Pay a visit to the Boleyn clan with me."

"Yes, Father."

Immediately, the Patriarch of the Nether Serpents led Bulo directly towards the nearby Boleyn clan.

The Four Divine Beasts clan was led by the 'Azure Dragon clan', while the eight great clans was a temporary alliance. Currently, the most powerful of the clans, the 'Boleyn clan' of the Celestial Realm was their leader.

The Boleyn clan. The Radiant Palace.

The Radiant Palace was over a hundred meters tall, with multiple pillars that were emanating a soft white light supporting it. Currently, outside this palace, Bulo was there, standing alone in a respectful manner. As for within the palace, there were eight figures seated.

These eight were the eight Patriarchs of the eight great clans!

To be more precise, four of them were the true bodies of the Patriarchs, while the other four were the 'golem clones' of the Patriarchs of the other four clans, who were far away on the opposite end of the Indigo Prefecture. These 'golem clones' were 'Deathgod Golems', and held a hint of consciousness within them.

The reason they had Deathgod Golems here was so that they could discuss things in a group.

Bulo was respectfully narrating what had occurred in this battle. After he finished speaking, he said formally, "That's all!"

The voices of the eight great Patriarchs could be heard from within, engaging in conversation.

"Reinales, your clan has always been in the Infernal Realm. You should be familiar with its experts. Have you heard of this 'Phusro'?"

"Phusro? I've never heard of a person in the Infernal Realm who went by this name."

"No matter what, if he has a weapon-type Sovereign artifact, he is definitely a Sovereign's Emissary!"

"So what if he is a Sovereign's Emissary? If he dares act wildly against our eight great clans and really forces us, we can just kill him...as long as we aren't the first to attack, the Sovereign behind him won't blame us!"

Bulo, hearing this, couldn't help but be secretly startled.

However, Bulo also knew that of the eight Patriarchs of their eight great clans, seven of them were Sovereign's Emissaries, with the eighth not being a Sovereign's Emissary but still being in possession of a Sovereign artifact. In fact, the eighth was actually the most powerful of them all.

After all...

The Patriarchs of the Four Divine Beasts clan also had Sovereign's artifacts.

Given that the eight great clans to dare act against the Four Divine Beasts clan, how could they not have sufficient power of their own?

"How long will it be before I, too, have a Sovereign artifact?" Bulo thought to himself. However, he understood that even if the eight Patriarchs didn't have Sovereign artifacts, they were still incredibly strong. It was precisely because they were so strong...

That they were noticed and valued, and received Sovereign artifacts.

In Bulo's mind...

The eight Patriarchs were high and lofty figures. Indeed, it was only natural for a Sovereign's Emissary to be far above other people.

"Don't rashly make new enemies!" A somewhat hoarse voice rang out in a rebuke from within the palace. "There's no need for us to fear that Phusro anyhow. Right now, I'm more suspicious about another person."

"Bulo." The voice came from within.

Bulo immediately bowed.

"Let me ask you this. When you saw that Linley, you, too, believed him to be a God? You didn't sense any hint of a Highgod aura?" The hoarse voice in the palace said.

"Yes. I couldn't sense a thing. I sent out my divine sense, but could only sense that he was a God." Bulo said.

That hoarse voice rang out again. "Right. I am very familiar with Bulo's power. Your Ashcroft clan specializes in the soul to begin with, while Bulo is one of the supreme members of your clan, and has reached a very high level of accomplishment with regards to the soul. The number of people in the entire Infernal Realm who could hide their strength and prevent Bulo from realizing it can be counted on one hand. Someone with this level of power...shouldn't be weaker than me. If Linley really was this formidable, it would be simple for him to kill Bulo."

"But he didn't! And in fact, it was that Phusro who saved him."

"I have a suspicion! I suspect that this Linley really is just a God! The reason why his soul is so tough is that he has a soul-protecting Sovereign artifact!" The hoarse voice said.

"He really is just a God? Patriarch Boleyn, don't jest like that." Someone immediately said.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 35, A Tremendous Threat!

“That he really is a God?” Bulo, hearing this from outside the hall, also felt that this was unbelievable.

The voices of the eight Patriarch’s continued to ring out from within the hall.

“I’m not joking. Think about it closely. Over the course of all these years, since when has anyone in the Four Divine Beasts clan been capable of using this technique of aura hiding for launching sneak attacks? It has never happened! It wasn’t that they didn’t want to do it; it was that they weren’t capable of it!”

That hoarse voice continued, “My Boleyn clan, the Ashcroft clan, and the Edric clan are all famous for our extremely high level of ability pertaining to the soul. To hide one’s aura to a level where even we can’t discover it...hmpf, how many experts in the entire Infernal Realm can be capable of it?”

“If Linley was at such a level, there is no way Bulo could’ve returned to us alive!”

The hoarse voice continued, “Thus, there’s only a single explanation. Linley himself really is a God. Naturally, there’s no way anyone would discover a ‘Highgod’ aura coming from him.”

The other clan leaders weren’t fools either. They had all been stunned by the astonishing strength Linley had displayed, so none of them had dared to pursue this line of thought. But now that Patriarch Boleyn was pointing it out, as they carefully considered this line of reasoning, they felt they suddenly understood as well!

All of the clan leaders were stunned.

"Linley is most likely a God. However, how can his attacks be so powerful? I hear that his Gravitational Space ability is so strong that most Highgods are completely unable to resist it. Even Six Star Fiends will have their souls affected, resulting in them being easily slaughtered!"

"Right. In battle, Linley is not weaker than a Seven Star Fiend."

An ancient voice rang out, "Then the only explanation is that this Linley's level of comprehension with regards to the profound mysteries of the Laws is too powerful. I predict...that he has already mastered and fused five of the profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth! Otherwise, there's no way a God could have this level of power."

The amount of power Linley had displayed was, indeed, at this level.

But what they didn't know was that Linley had actually only fused three types. However, through the assistance of the 'black stone' as well as the unique method of utilizing the Law possessed by the violet amethyst beast, allowing his gravitational pull to become more than a hundred times stronger...Linley's power naturally was comparable to someone who had fused five types of profound mysteries.

"A God who has fused five profound mysteries?"

All of the clan leaders in the hall were completely stunned.

"I expect that the reason this Linley hasn't become a Highgod is because he wants to fuse the mysteries, one step at a time. I imagine that he is currently slowly fusing the sixth profound mysteries. The day he becomes a Highgod will also be the very same day that he finishes completely fusing all six profound mysteries!" The hoarse voice rang out. "This Linley, I must admit...has tremendous willpower and tremendous ambition!"

The result of their discussion was...the eight Patriarchs were all stunned.

After all, generally speaking, when experts trained, fusing the profound mysteries of a Law was simply too hard. Thus, they all decided to become Highgods as soon as possible, then slowly fuse the profound mysteries.

A sharp voice rang out, "He is only a God, and yet already possesses such astonishing power. If he reaches the Highgod level, and reaches the level of perfection in the Laws....then he will be at the peak of his power! If one of the Patriarchs of the Four Divine Beasts clan is courageous enough to bestow a Sovereign artifact upon him, then this person, with his Sovereign artifact, could dominate us all!"

When a person reached perfect and became a Paragon of a Law, that person would have terrifying power!

When matched with a Sovereign artifact...that person could be said to be undefeatable by all aside from Sovereigns.

"This Linley...is actually this formidable." Bulo, still listening from outside the hall, was terrified as well. "But it makes sense. If he, theoretically, is just a God, and yet is still capable of using such a terrifying Gravitational Space, he has to have fused at least five profound mysteries. He definitely is currently gaining insights on the sixth. Once he fuses them and becomes a Paragon..."

The number of Highgod Paragons was even lower than the number of Sovereigns.

Every single one of them was a glorious person of their generation, supreme amongst supreme experts!

"This Linley cannot be allowed to live!" A low, rumbling voice shouted angrily. "As we can now see, this Linley might break through at any moment and fuse six profound mysteries. By then...it would be perfectly normal for the Patriarchs of the Four Divine Beasts clan to be willing to give up one of their Sovereign artifacts to him. By then, we will be doomed!"

"If that really happens, even the Sovereigns wouldn't be willing to help us!"

The eight Patriarchs were immediately filled with shock and rage.

Sovereigns were lofty beings. The Emissaries of the Sovereigns were nothing more than their 'subjects', and Sovereigns usually didn't care too much about the affairs of their Emmisaries. As long as an Emissary was capable of carrying out the duties assigned, that was enough.

But there was one type of person who was different!

A Highgod Paragon. Even Sovereigns would be willing to lower themselves to solemnly ask a Paragon to be an Emissary.

The Patriarchs of the eight great clans all felt their hearts clench slightly. Good heavens. They had never imagined that the Four Divine Beasts clan, silently and soundlessly, would actually produce such an incredibly talented figure. If this was permitted to continue, the repercussions would be unthinkable!

"This Linley must be killed!" A furious shout came from within the hall.

"The war between us and the Four Divine Beasts clan cannot be permitted to continue like this. We must accelerate it!"

"There's no need to pay any attention to that other Sovereign's Emissary. Our greatest threat right now is Linley. We have to seize the opportunity to execute him. No matter what the cost, no matter what sacrifices we must make, we must execute him!"

Originally, the eight great clans hadn't truly spent much time thinking about Linley. Now that they did, they realized that he was a tremendous threat to them, a threat so great as to cause them to panic. After all, even throughout all four of the Higher Planes, the birth of every single supreme Paragon was an event that would shake all the planes.

The Skyrise Mountains. Bloodbath Gorge.

Emanuel and Forhan were waiting at the Azure Dragon Palace. Right at this moment, a figure streaked past the skies, flying directly into the Bloodbath Gorge and landing in front of the Azure Dragon Palace. This man with long, unbound azure hair was the Patriarch of the Azure Dragon clan, 'Gislason'.

"Eh?" The Grand Elder looked outside the window, puzzled. Emanuel and Forhan immediately turned to look as well.

Gislason strode in with a smile. "Little Sister."

"Patriarch." Emanuel and Forhan immediately saluted.

"You are here as well? Good. Then there's no need to send someone to find you." Gislason chortled as he walked to the throne, seating himself. He grinned towards the Grand Elder, "Little sister, do you know that in the battle Linley and Emanuel engaged in, two Seven Star Fiends of the other side died."

Gislason chortled as he looked at Emanuel. "Emanuel, I heard that afterwards, yet another Seven Star Fiends attacked you and Linley. Tell me about the results."

The news Gislason had received had come from their intelligence agents.

Because both sides had used Sovereign's Might in that battle, the three Six Star Fiend survivors of the Azure Dragon clan had immediately scattered and fled. Bulo had pursued Emanuel and had also chased towards Linley...

Naturally, the Six Star Fiends had fled in the opposite direction.

And thus, only Linley, Emanuel, Bulo, and that Phusro knew what had happened between them afterwards.

"Patriarch." Emanuel immediately knelt down, sobbing, "My divine water clone was destroyed. Our enemy was Bulo...I used a drop of Sovereign's Might, but Linley didn't use his, nor did he help me."

"What's this all about?" Gislason couldn't help but frown.

"Patriarch, back then, Linley and I..." Emanuel immediately began to retell the story in detail anew. However, he naturally changed some of the details in the words, making it sound as though Linley wanted to harm him.

"What did you just say? A Sovereign artifact!" Gislason said, shocked.

"Emanuel, did you say a Sovereign artifact?" The Grand Elder was shocked as well.

"Ye...yes?" Emanuel was stunned.

"Why didn't you tell me earlier?" The Grand Elder said angrily.

Prior to this, when Emanuel had been telling this tale to the Grand Elder, he had only said that an expert had stopped Bulo. He didn't mention the Sovereign artifact.

"Is...is that very important?" Emanuel didn't understand.

"What was his name?" Gislason asked hurriedly.

Emanuel still clearly remembered the conversation between Linley and Phusro. He immediately said, "That person was named Phusro."

"Phusro?" The Grand Elder was somewhat puzzled.

Gislason was momentarily stunned as well, but then he began to laugh. He immediately said, "Little sister, come, make a trip with me."

"Yes, Elder Brother." The Grand Elder immediately followed him. Patriarch Gislason and the Grand Elder immediately left the Azure Dragon palace, leaving Emanuel and Forhan behind in the palace, completely confused.

"Father, what's this all about?" Emanuel said.

"Could it be that the Patriarch knows that person?" Forhan didn't fully understand either.

The Skyrise Mountains. Within the gorge.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were currently together. Linley's original body was still on the way back, and so this was naturally just a clone Linley. As for Delia and Bebe, they had already gone and come back from the city of Meer.

"Bebe, how did it feel, to go out on an excursion? From the looks of it, it seems as though you had quite a bit of fun." Linley laughed.

"Of course I feel great after going out for a trip." Bebe rubbed his nose and laughed. "However, the reason I look so happy isn't because I went on a trip. Rather...Boss, I've already mastered the fifth profound mystery of the Laws of Darkness."

Linley was startled.

"Boss, you and I were competing, y'know. How about you?" Bebe asked smugly.

"Uh..." Linley couldn't help but shake his head and laugh. "I fell behind. I'm still trapped at the bottleneck for the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength', and have yet to break through."

"Hmph. Hmph." Bebe laughed smugly.

"Look at the two of you." Delia cover her mouth, starting to laugh as well. "You are even going to compete in this. You are like a pair of children."

"Well, we have nothing better to do." Bebe smirked in response.

Linley laughed, "Delia, Bebe, the two of you viewed Emanuel with disfavor, yes?" As Linley spoke, he set up his Godrealm, completely sealing off sound from the outside."

"Right. I hate that guy." Bebe said hurriedly. "Last time, he wanted to steal your Coiling Dragon ring."

"And he wants to kill you." Delia couldn't help but turn grave. "Also, didn't you say that for this mission, he forced you into accompanying him?"

Linley began to laugh. "You don't need to worry any longer. Even if he wants to kill me, he doesn't have the ability to do so. Delia, Bebe, it'd be hard for him to even kill the two of you."

"What's this?" Bebe and Delia were both shocked.

"This time, on our mission, the one he wanted me to go on...the result was that he died." Linley laughed. "His most powerful divine water clone was finished. The body that he has left is very weak."

"He's really dead? Woohoo!" Bebe shouted out excitedly.

"You encountered a powerful foe? How about your clone? Are you alright?" Delia asked hurriedly. Delia was worried each time Linley went out on a mission. After all, the war between the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans meant that during every single mission, the squads were dancing between the edges of life and death.

"Of course I'm fine." Linley laughed.

Linley suddenly frowned, then turned and looked towards the skies. He saw that in mid-air, there were four figures flying over at high speed. Linley released his Godrealm, and the four landed directly in front of Linley.

"Elder Linley." The four bowed as they spoke.

"What is it?" Linley asked.

The leader said respectfully, "Elder Linley, we have come on the orders of the four clan leaders to summon you to the Grand Palace of the Four Divine Beasts."

"The four clan leaders?" Linley was stunned.

He had been in the Infernal Realm for so long, but he had only met Patriarch Gislason of his own Azure Dragon clan. As for the other three clan leaders, he had never seen them before. Now, the four Patriarchs were summoning him? Why?

"Elder Linley, please hurry. The four clan leaders are all waiting for you at the Grand Palace." The leader urged.

"Right." Linley nodded.

Linley immediately turned towards Delia and Bebe, laughing as he nodded towards them. "I need to make a trip." And then, he immediately flew into the air. Those four warriors followed directly behind Linley, as the five of them flew in a line towards Bloodbath Gorge.

Moments later.

Linley arrived at Bloodbath Gorge. He immediately saw the distant Azure Dragon Palace. "It's actually the Grand Palace. I've never been to the Grand Palace before." Bloodbath Gorge had five palaces in total. The Grand Palace of the Four Divine Beasts was the place where the clan leaders of the Four Divine Beasts clan went to discuss major matters with each other.

But today...

The Grand Palace of the Four Divine Beasts had especially opened its doors for Linley.

The Grand Palace of the Four Divine Beasts was more than a hundred meters tall, and its four walls were filled with carvings of four different divine beasts. The entire Grand Palace was an extremely stately, solemn place. At the gate to the Grand Palace, there were warriors of Bloodbath Gorge standing guard.

"Elder Linley." The guards saluted respectfully.

Linley laughed and nodded, then strode into the Grand Palace. "Rumble..." Behind Linley, the gates to the Grand Palace shut themselves.

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 36, Decision

Linley looked about carefully, but there wasn't a single person present in this main hall of the first floor of the Grand Palace of the Four Divine Beasts.

"Linley, come to the second floor." A voice rang out in Linley's ears.

"Patriarch." Linley recognized this voice as being Gislason's, and he immediately entered a side room to the main hall, which had a staircase that led upwards into the second floor. Climbing up the staircase, Linley arrived at the second floor of the Grand Palace.

The second floor was clearly much smaller than the main hall on the first floor.

There was an enormous round table placed in the center of the hall, and there were a total of six figures seated around the table. Linley recognized only two of the six figures; one was the Patriarch, while the other was the Grand Elder.

"Judging from their clothes and their aura, the other woman seated around the table should be the Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan." Linley inspected them one by one.

Azure Dragon clan. Vermillion Bird clan. White Tiger clan. Black Tortoise clan. All four clans, without question, had their own unique, bizarre auras and appearances. He could recognize them at a single glance. At the round table, the Azure Dragon clan had two representatives, the Black Tortoise clan had two representatives, and the White Tiger and Vermillion Bird clans also had one each.

"Linley, sit." Suddenly, the beautiful woman from the Vermillion Bird clan laughed calmly.

The others all revealed smiles towards Linley as well, and Gislason laughed, "Linley, no need to stand on ceremony. When meeting with you here, we can be a bit more casual. Go ahead and sit."

"Yes." Linley couldn't help but feel a warm feeling in his heart.

Linley knew that these people were the highest level figures of the Four Divine Beasts clan, the sons and daughters of those four Sovereigns.

"Linley, the reason we asked you to come was to ask you regarding that Phusro." Gislason said.

"Phusro?" Linley was startled.

So the clan had found out about the relationship between himself and Phusro so quickly!

One of the men present wore a white robe, and on the white robe, there were some unusual patterns that made it look as though it was made from the fur of a tiger. This man had a grim, callous face, but he currently had a hint of a smile as well. "Phusro has a Sovereign artifact, but we've never heard of him..."

Linley laughed to himself.

Up until a few centuries ago, Phusro had been just a pitiable little kitten in Elquin's arms. Who would have known him?

"Linley, this Phusro is a Sovereign's Emissary. There should be no mistaking this, right?" A large man said in a low, rumbling voice. This man's body was even taller than the members of the Barbary clan. Linley knew that this person had to be one of the two leaders of the Black Tortoise clan.

"He is indeed a Sovereign's Emissary. He should have only become one a few centuries ago." Linley replied.

Around the circular table, the leaders of the Four Divine Beasts clan all stared at each other, excitement in their eyes.

"Which Sovereign?" Gislason asked hurriedly.

"I'm not certain. However, it is a Sovereign of Fire." Linley said.

The Grand Elder, by Gislason's side, also asked hurriedly, "Linley, do you know why this Phusro saved you? Was it because the two of you have a relationship with each other, or because he was acting on the orders of the Sovereign?"

"Actually...I'm puzzled about this as well." Linley said.

"Oh?"

The six looked at Linley, listening attentively.

Although Linley didn't understand what the six were interested in with regards to this conversation, there were some things which didn't need to be kept secret and which he could reveal. "In truth, this Phusro and I have only met a single time. Although we can be considered friends, our relationship isn't that deep."

"I can understand why he saved me when he happened to be there, but he actually threatened Bulo and threatened Bulo's clan, saying that they were not permitted to act against me." Linley laughed.

The six people around the table all frowned.

"He has a pre-existing friendship with you?" Gislason was somewhat frustrated. "It seems he wasn't acting on the orders of a Sovereign to protect Linley. There isn't much of a connection between the Sovereign and Linley."

"Hard to say." The Patriarch of the White Tiger clan rebutted. "Phusro threatened them. Perhaps..."

"Enough. Don't have any extravagant hopes." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan let out a long sigh. "If the Sovereign had the intention of protecting Linley, he would have sent someone directly to the eight great clans and convey his Decree. With a Sovereign's Decree...the eight great clans definitely wouldn't dare to touch Linley. There's no need for him to go to as much trouble as this Phusro has. Clearly, Phusro's rescue of Linley didn't have much to do with the Sovereign."

"Alas..." Gislason couldn't help but lower his head and sigh.

The looks on the faces of the others turned unhappy as well.

Linley, seeing this, couldn't help but feel astonished. However, listening to their words, Linley began to understand. "So they were actually hoping that I had some sort of a relationship with a Sovereign." When Linley thought of the situation of his clan, he fully understood.

Ever since those four ancestors of theirs had died, the Four Divine Beasts clan had lacked a Sovereign to rely on. Thus, even those eight great clans dared to abuse them.

They knew that a Sovereign's Emissary had rescued Linley, and so they had hoped...that this Sovereign's Emissary had come on the Sovereign's orders to rescue Linley.

If that were the case, then it would also be possible that in the future, the Sovereign might, for Linley's sake, help out the Four Divine Beasts clan.

"Their hopes were just extinguished." Linley said to himself.

"Forget it. Everyone, don't be discouraged. At least we have a Sovereign's Emissary as our ally now." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan laughed calmly. "In addition, it isn't completely impossible that the Sovereign's Emissary came on the orders of his Sovereign."

Linley looked at those six people around the round table, and he couldn't help but feel a surge of grief in his heart.

How could the Four Divine Beasts clan have fallen to such dire straits?

These clan leaders were all pining for a Sovereign to stand behind them! However, the four ancestors were all dead now. As for the other Sovereigns, why would they be so bored as to go help the Four Divine Beasts clan for no reason?

"Linley, I'd like to ask you something. Are you a God, or are you a Highgod?" The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan laughed as she looked at Linley. "To be honest, I can't detect any hint of a Highgod aura coming from you."

Linley couldn't help but look at his Patriarch.

Quite a few people had already asked this question.

"Linley is a God." Gislason said hurriedly. "This is a secret. It's enough that we know this secret. Do not spread it out." The people present were all the highest level members of the Four Divine Beasts clan, so it didn't matter if they knew.

"Still just a God? Haha, how is it that you, a God, are able to kill Seven Star Fiends?"

The atmosphere of the room grew lively again as everyone began to discuss Linley.

Linley, faced with the questions from these clan leaders, was only able to give some general answers.

"Gravitational Space?" The Patriarch of the White Tiger clan said in amazement, his sword-shaped eyebrows rising. "With a simple Gravitational Space, you are actually able to make it so that most Highgods are unable to fly?" A Gravitational Space was normally a very ordinary technique.

Linley had only developed his own version, thanks to the intentional guidance provided by the juvenile amethyst beast.

"Gravitational Space?"

Suddenly, the Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan let out a cry of shock, then stared at Linley, asking hurriedly, "Linley, are you capable of changing the direction of gravity within your Gravitational Space?" The astonishment of the Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan caused the other people present to be mystified.

"Quick, tell me." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird urged.

Linley felt completely puzzled. This was a very simple thing. Why had the Matriarch lost her cool like this?

"Right." Linley nodded and admitted it.

"Haha..."

The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan began to laugh, laugh with exceeding happiness. She looked at Linley. "Linley, you should have learned your Gravitational Space technique from the Amethyst Mountains, right?"

Linley was shocked.

How did she know?

Seeing the look of shock on Linley's face, the Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan began to laugh smugly again.

"Elder Sister, hurry up and tell us what is making you so happy." The Patriarch of the White Tiger clan urged, and the others looked towards her as well.

The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird was all smiles as she responded. "Everyone, there is no way that this unique Gravitational Space which Linley knows can be developed simply through training. When my mother was alive, she had once mentioned a Sovereign of Destruction to me!"

"Sovereign of Destruction?" Everyone's eyes lit up.

Linley stared at her as well.

"Right." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan nodded. "This Sovereign of Destruction had the innate ability to control and change the direction of gravity, and also exert control over a person's soul. This Sovereign is extremely powerful...and my mother said that this Sovereign of Destruction was the Sovereign of the Redbud Continent!"

Everyone was stunned.

Linley stared, slack-jawed.

"Aside from this Sovereign of Destruction, there shouldn't be anyone else capable of utilizing Linley's type of Gravitational Space." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan said confidently. "Oh, right. I also heard that this Sovereign of Destruction has a son. Aside from him and his son, no one else knows it."

Linley was completely stupefied.

"Sovereign? Son?"

Many things flashed through Linley's mind, and many things he didn't understand were suddenly made clear. "That juvenile amethyst beast... could he be the son of the Sovereign?"

Immediately, the clan leaders of the Four Divine Beasts clan stared towards Linley.

They were like people who were drowning that had seen a stalk of straw they could clutch onto for survival!

They were incomparably arrogant, and felt themselves to be the favored ones of the heavens. However, after their four Sovereigns had fallen, they discovered...that the Four Divine Beasts clan had instantly fallen into dire straits, and could be wiped out at any moment.

They were hoping that a Sovereign would be willing to step forward and help them! But none ever had!

"Linley!" Gislason's face was covered with smiles. "You know the Redbud Sovereign?"

"No...I don't know him." Linley shook his head.

"How could you not?" The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan began to laugh. "You learned your Gravitational Space technique from the Amethyst Mountains, right?"

"Right." Linley nodded.

"That's right. The Amethyst Mountains is the place where the Redbud Sovereign was born. That's his home!" The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan sighed in amazement. "The power of that Sovereign is exceedingly strong. If he is willing to stand out and say but a single word, those eight great clans will immediately be so terrified that they would flee."

Linley still felt completely stunned. So the Amethyst Mountains was the resting place of a Sovereign.

"My Gravitational Space was taught to me by a juvenile amethyst beast named 'Reisgem'." Linley said hurriedly.

"Reisgem?"

The clan leaders all shook their head, indicating they hadn't heard the name before.

"I haven't heard of him either." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan laughed. "But from the sound of it, he's most likely that son of the Sovereign."

"This Reisgem is a Commander of Purgatory. You don't recognize him?" Linley was puzzled.

"A Purgatory Commander?" The six people around the table were all startled.

"A person who becomes a Purgatory Commander does so to participate in the Planar Wars." Gislason said. "Our Four Divine Beasts clan doesn't get involved in the Planar Wars, so we don't pay too much attention to it. In addition, Purgatory Commanders often change. No one knows who is currently a Commander."

Linley nodded.

"Linley, you can go back for now." Gislason laughed.

"Right. You can go back. From today onwards, you don't need to get involved in the matters of Bloodbath Gorge. Go back and train hard, and then, after you reach the Highgod level, we'll see." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan laughed as well.

Although Linley was still rather puzzled, he still bowed. "Yes." And then, he left by himself."

After Linley left.

"Haha..." Gislason began to laugh.

"Haha..." Immediately, everyone else began to laugh as well, their faces covered in smiles.

The Patriarch of the White Tiger clan sighed emotionally, "It's been so many years. Our Four Divine Beasts clan finally sees a ray of hope!"

"Right! We finally have a ray of hope!" Gislason sighed as well.

Given the glorious former days of the Four Divine Beasts clan, how could they be willing to forever hide within the Skyrise Mountains? Although the Lord Prefect of Indigo Prefecture had entered into an agreement with the eight great clans, causing them to be forbidden from attacking within the Skyrise Mountains...all this meant was that the roots and foundation of their clan was protected.

As for returning to their former glory...

They had to have the support of either an invincible Highgod Paragon, or that of a Sovereign.

"The Redbud Sovereign." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan laughed. "Over the past ten thousand years, we haven't seen any signs of hope at all. But today, we finally do...given that the Redbud Sovereign was willing to pass his ultimate technique to Linley, the relationship between him and Linley has to be a deep one."

"Elder Brother." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan laughed as she looked at Gislason. "You have to protect this Linley and take care of him. We need to rely on him to connect with the Redbud Sovereign."

"Don't worry."

Gislason began to laugh as well. "I guarantee that nothing will happen to Linley."

Book 17, Indigo Prefecture – Chapter 37, Calmness and Savagery

Bloodbath Gorge.

Emanuel and Forhan were together.

"I have a bad feeling..." Forhan said with a frown.

"Father, what is it?" Emanuel said hurriedly.

Forhan said, "Look at how much the Patriarch cared about that Sovereign's Emissary. Most likely, he wants to draw that Sovereign's Emissary closer to us. After all, our Four Divine Beasts clan is currently in dire straits. If that's the case...Linley most likely won't be punished."

"Won't be punished?" Emanuel was frantic.

He had wanted to deal with Linley this entire time. This time, he 'wanted to steal a chicken, but instead just lost the bait'. Even his most powerful divine water clone had been destroyed. The sort of rage this engendered had all immediately and naturally been transferred onto Linley.

He wasn't strong enough to deal with Linley, so he wanted to find some other methods.

"How can Linley not be punished?" Emanuel said hurriedly. "The Grand Elder already agreed."

"Shut your mouth." Forhan frowned and shouted.

Emanuel immediately didn't dare to make a sound. Forhan took a deep breath. After being quiet for a moment, allowing the room to fall into silence, Forhan finally said in a soft voice, "As I see it, it's not too likely that the clan will punish Linley. It'll be up to us."

"What method do we have?" Emanuel said hurriedly.

"There are many methods." Forhan couldn't help but narrow his eyes, and he laughed coldly. "This time, someone rescued Linley. I refuse to believe that in the future, he'll be so lucky as to be rescued again."

"Father, are you saying..." Emanuel laughed.

"I know each and every one of the Elders of the clan. It won't be too hard to set up a trap for him to fall into. There will be plenty of opportunities!" Forhan said confidently. "During a battle, if we play a few tricks...hmph! When experts are battling each other, even the slightest distraction can be enough to take his life!"

"In particular, if our side loses all of our Six Star Fiends in a battle and there are no eyewitnesses remaining, we can kill him directly." Forhan laughed coldly. "Even if he cries out at the injustice of it all, who will believe him?"

Emanuel's face immediately broke out into a smile.

"How can a junior descendant like him be worthy of the Azure Dragon ring of our ancestor?" Forhan snickered. "Even with the Azure Dragon ring, he's only an ordinary Seven Star Fiend. If I were to hold the Azure Dragon ring...I would be much more useful to the clan than he is!"

Indeed. If Forhan were to fly out with Linley, Linley wouldn't suspect that Forhan would suddenly attack him. When flying normally, Linley would be in his human form...once Forhan truly attacked, the results would be easily imagined.

Linley could cry out at the injustice, but without any witnesses, so what if he did?

Forhan could simply maintain that it was an enemy who had done it. There was nothing Linley could do at all.

"Forhan. Emanuel." A voice rang out.

"Mother's here." Forhan hurriedly rose to his feet, and Emanuel rose, standing to the side respectfully.

"Creaaak." The hall door swung open. The Grand Elder, wearing that silver mask, directly walked in. She looked calmly at the two of them. "Forhan, Emanuel. The matter of punishing Linley comes to an end, here and now."

Emanuel felt shock in his heart. "It really as Father predicted it. However...although it might not be possible now, in the future, we'll still have our chance."

Carrying out missions involved walking a fine line between life and death.

If one's partners were to secret caused trouble, the chance of survival would be very low.

"From today onwards, Linley will depart from Bloodbath Gorge. He will not take on any assignments from Bloodbath Gorge." The Grand Elder said calmly.

Forhan and Emanuel were stunned.

They were utterly stupefied!

"Mother, how can that be?" Forhan said hurriedly. "The rules of our clan state that each person can only retire after a thousand years. Linley hasn't been in Bloodbath Gorge for very long. He's far from reaching the thousand year mark."

"Right. The rules of the clan can't be broken." Emanuel said frantically as well.

If Linley weren't to take on assignments in Bloodbath Gorge, and instead remained in the Skyrite Mountains, there was no way at all for them to make Linley die...after all, no private battles were permitted within the Skyrite Mountains.

"This is the decision of the four clan leaders!" The Grand Elder said coldly.

Forhan and Emanuel, hearing these words, couldn't help but be stunned. The Patriarch was the leader of their clan. The joint orders of the four clan leaders were completely unchangeable!

From that day onwards, Linley no longer needed to go to Bloodbath Gorge. He was able to calmly leave a peaceful life. Delia and Bebe, upon hearing this news, were extremely happy...and so, in such a peaceful manner, their life proceeded.

In the eyes of the Four Divine Beasts clan, Linley was their hope of a connection to the Redbud Sovereign!

But what Linley didn't know was...to the eight great clans, he was their greatest threat!

The Skyrise Mountains. Within the gorge.

There was a grassy yard in front of Linley's room, which had a stone table placed in the middle of it. The stone table had a bottle of wine atop it, and Linley was currently holding a book in his hands. Linley's four clones were all training, while his original body was enjoying the peace.

Delia walked out from her room, holding two plates of food in her hands. Seeing Linley reading, she couldn't help but chuckle. She walked over, gently placing the plates down on the stone table.

"Eh?"

Linley suddenly smelled a fragrant odor, and he turned to look at the platter. His eyes couldn't help but to light up. "Delia, haha, it smells so delicious. Your culinary skills have improved greatly." As he spoke, he flipped the book shut.

He immediately went to go for a taste, and ate while praising, "Not bad, not bad. The taste is comparable to that of the restaurants in the cities."

"Far from it." Delia laughed, her face blushing. "This is based off of one of several cooking recipes I bought on my last trip to the city. The ingredients for these dishes, I acquired by asking those who went to the cities to buy for me."

Delia sat down across from him, resting her chin on her hands as she watched Linley eat.

As Linley ate, he suddenly began to chuckle.

"Why are you laughing like an idiot?" Delia couldn't help but smile as well.

"I'm just thinking!" Linley let out a sigh. "Training in the Laws, adventuring in the boundless Infernal Realm...then, when free, reading some books, drinking some fine wine, then eating the delicious food prepared by my wife. This sort of life is simply...haha, perfect!" Linley laughed, absolutely delighted.

Delia laughed as well.

"Linley, if you always want to live such a comfortable life, you can, you know." Delia said. "As long as in the future, you don't go to Bloodbath Gorge, that'll be enough. I keep on having the feeling that the Four Divine Beasts clan care too much about their face...if it was me, I would've ordered the Four Divine Beasts clan to remain locked in the mountain. The members of the clan would all live quiet lives. Why go battle against those eight great clans?"

Linley put down his chopsticks.

"Enough, Delia." Linley laughed. "Life, especially for those who possess unending life, is all about face. The glory of the clan is particularly valued. Unless it is absolutely necessary...the clan won't choose to retreat into the mountains and completely turtle up."

Delia laughed. "It doesn't matter to me, as long as you don't have to go to Bloodbath Gorge." In Delia's heart, she didn't feel too much of a sense of belonging to the Four Divine Beasts clan. All she cared about was...that Linley had to be safe.

"Hehe..." Linley chuckled.

"Come, you have a taste as well. This flavor really is excellent." Linley laughed as he spoke.

In the blink of an eye, a hundred years of this sort of life passed. With Linley by her side, Delia naturally didn't feel bored at all. Every day, her face was wreathed in smiles, and she also learned how to cook one delicacy after another, to Linley's great delight, as he could now often taste new food.

As for Bebe...

He occasionally would be with Linley, or joke around with the members of the Yulan branch, but when bored, Bebe would still join the clan's squadrons and head out to the city for a stroll.

Bloodbath Gorge. The Grand Palace of the Four Divine Beasts. The four clan leaders were assembled there.

"It's only been a century!" Gislason's face was gloomy.

"In the past century, it seems as though those eight great clans have gone mad! They don't care about casualties at all, nor about wasting Sovereign's Might. They insist on killing our people!" The Patriarch of the White Tiger clan said furiously.

"In the past century, our Vermillion Bird clan has lost three Elders. The rest of you?" The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan said, a long, gloomy look on her face.

"Our White Tiger clan has lost four Elders!" The Patriarch of the White Tiger clan's words held boundless rage. "Third Brother, how about your Black Tortoise clan?"

The Patriarch of the Black Tortoise clan let out a low sigh as well. "Our Black Tortoise clan's losses have been severe as well. We lost two Elders. It has only been a century!"

"Elder Brother." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan looked towards Gislason.

"Our Azure Dragon clan has lost three Elders." Gislason sighed. "By my calculations, in a short century, our Four Divine Beasts clan has lost a total of twelve Elders!"

Based on how things had previously progressed in their war of attrition, the loss of twelve Elders was something which would happen in a thousand years.

But now, they reached that number in a mere century.

"Those eight great clans have gone mad." The Matriarch of the Vermillion Bird clan said angrily. "In the past century, each time, they'll send out three or four Seven Star Fiends. And each time, one of them will be holding a Sovereign's Might! They don't begrudge using the Sovereign's Might at all, if it means they can kill all our people."

"They've lost quite a bit in their madness as well." Gislason said. "Our Azure Dragon clan alone has killed four of their Elders."

"Our Vermillion Bird clan has killed three."

The four clan leaders all reported their results.

"In the past thousand years, the losses of the eight great clans have been even greater than ours. They lost fifteen of their Elders." Gislason said.

"But the eight great clans have the advantage of numbers." The Patriarch of the Black Tortoise clan said in a low voice. "Ever since our four ancestors died, our Four Divine Beasts clan has lost, in total, nearly a hundred and twenty Seven Star Fiends...now, our entire Four Divine Beasts clan has, all combined, roughly around a hundred surviving Seven Star Fiends. But the enemy? They have more than three hundred Seven Star Fiends in total!"

Any of the eight great clans could compare with the Azure Dragon clan in terms of experts.

Early on, the Azure Dragon clan had over sixty Seven Star Fiends as well.

The eight great clans originally had nearly five hundred Seven Star Fiends as well. After so many years of warfare, they had killed nearly a hundred and twenty Seven Star Fiends of the Four Divine Beasts clan, while they themselves had lost more than a hundred.

But despite that, the combined forces of the eight great clans still numbered more than three hundred Seven Star Fiends?

If this sort of attrition continued...

Even after all of the experts of the Four Divine Beasts clan were dead, the enemy would probably still have two hundred or more Elders. In addition, the enemy also had many supreme experts. The Patriarchs of the eight great clans were all extremely powerful figures!

“Madness. Madness! They ignore the cost in Sovereign’s Might and in deaths of Seven Star Fiends. They’ve all gone mad!” The Patriarch of the Black Tortoise clan said unhappily.

“What’s going on? In the past ten thousand years, they’ve never been as wild as this. Why have they gone so mad in the past century?” Gislason simply couldn’t understand it.

But how could the leaders of the Four Divine Beasts clan have imagined...that the reason these eight great clans had gone mad and sent out three or four Elders to join forces each time was, first of all, in the hopes that when they ran into Linley, they would be able to kill him.

And the second reason was, they wanted to speed up the pace! They didn’t dare to waste more time, for fear that as time went on, Linley might suddenly break through and become that which they feared the most; a ‘Highgod Paragon’.

Although the Four Divine Beasts clan and the eight great clans had entered a wild state, the Skyrise Mountains were still very quiet and calm. Linley lived this sort of calm life with no struggles, while his four clones constantly improved as well.

After his retirement from Bloodbath Gorge, two hundred years had passed.

In the past two hundred years, Linley had made the greatest improvements in his divine water clone, which could in fact be described as having made 'monstrous gains'. The speed at which he gained new insights into the profound mysteries was absolutely 'astonishing'. It was on a full level faster than even his divine earth clone and his divine wind clone.

Naturally, it was countless times faster than his divine fire clone.

By now, his divine water clone had already reached the God level long ago, and had mastered three profound mysteries and was currently working on the fourth...but actually, if one closely considered it, this wasn't too astonishing. After all, after the Ancestral Baptism, Linley had naturally understood one of the profound mysteries.

His divine wind clone had gained mastery into a sixth profound mystery, but since the Laws of the Wind had nine profound mysteries in total, it was harder to advance in.

As for his divine fire clone, it was still working on the third profound mystery, advancing at a slow pace.

"Linley, your life is quite comfortable." A loud laugh rang out.

Linley, Delia, and Bebe were seated around a table, eating while chatting.

Linley turned to look. The person who had walked in was Elder Garvey.

"Garvey seems to have a rather unhappy look on his face. He's worrying about something." Linley could tell this at a single glance. For an expert such as Elder Garvey to so easily reveal his thoughts meant that something major had definitely occurred."

"Elder Garvey." Bebe was the first to welcome him happily. "Hurry on over. This is the first time my Boss cooked. Have a taste...it is so delicious, you could die!"

"Bebe." Linley couldn't help but feel his face heat up.

He clearly had done exactly as the cookbook described, but the difference in flavor between what he had cooked and what Delia cooked was...simply too vast. However, it wasn't so bad as to cause someone to 'die'.

“Haha...” Elder Garvey couldn’t help but laugh. He immediately pointed at Linley and said, “Elder Linley, I didn’t imagine that you are able to cook. I have to taste your dishes.” Garvey walked over as he spoke.

Elder Garvey was going to eat?

If Elder Garvey was to eat, the terribleness of the food would definitely be spread throughout the clan.

“Elder Garvey.” Linley hurriedly stood up, blocking in front of Elder Garvey. Laughing, he said, “Elder Garvey, this is my first time cooking. There’s no need to taste it. Right. Judging from your face, it seems as though you are worrying about something?”

Linley hurriedly changed the topic. And indeed, as Linley did, Elder Garvey couldn’t help but let out a long sigh, then sit down to one side.

“What’s happened?” Linley asked.

Elder Garvey laughed bitterly. “Elder Linley, in the past two centuries, you haven’t gone to Bloodbath Gorge, have you?”

“Right.” Ever since he had been summoned by the four clan leaders and then instructed not to participate in Bloodbath Gorge, he hadn’t gone there a single time.”

"It's only been two hundred years!" Elder Garvey seemed to have a belly full of resentment and pain. "Linley, do you know? In these two short centuries, our Azure Dragon clan has lost five Elders!"

"Five?!" Linley was shocked by this number.

The Azure Dragon clan usually lost two or three Elders in a thousand years. To lose five in two centuries...this was too significant.

"Factoring in what happened to Emanuel and Arhaus...our Azure Dragon clan only has twenty or so Elders who truly have the power of a Seven Star Fiend!" Elder Garvey said, his eyes turning moist. "My teacher lost his most powerful clone just yesterday on a mission. He no longer has a Seven Star Fiend level of power either."

Linley couldn't help but fall silent.

As for Delia and Bebe, it wasn't appropriate for them to interject right now either.

"It's only been ten thousand years. Ten thousand years ago, the Elders of the clan numbered more than sixty. In ten thousand short years, we've lost more than half!" Elder Garvey sighed. "Based on this sort of speed, the number of Elders in Bloodbath Gorge definitely won't be enough. We'll probably be recruited earlier this time."

Normally, the Elders of Bloodbath Gorge were swapped out every thousand years.

However...

They were losing them at too fast a pace. As this continued, the number of Elders available in Bloodbath Gorge would be insufficient. Those idle Elders such as Garvey would have to go make up the numbers.

"What is going on? How could there be so many casualties?" Linley couldn't understand it. "Defeating a Seven Star Fiend is easy, but killing a Seven Star Fiend is very hard."

"The eight great clans have gone mad!"

Elder Garvey snorted angrily. "In the past two centuries, they've gone completely mad. Each battle, they'll send out three or four Seven Star Fiends, and one of them will definitely be holding a Sovereign's Might! Our Elders have barely any chance to survive each battle.

As Linley heard this, the look on his face couldn't help but change.

"Why are the eight great clans acting like this?" Linley felt rather puzzled.

The eight great clans had never gone so mad before, but ever since that last battle of his, the eight great clans had gone mad.

"Could it be that it has something to do with me or Phusro? Or was this the original plan for the eight great clans all along?" Linley couldn't help but speculate.

"Alright, Linley. I won't disturb you any further. You need to train hard... originally, I thought that this battle between ourselves and the eight great clans would keep on dragging out. But now, it seems, the final battle between us will come soon!"

Elder Garvey finished his words, then immediately flew into the air and left, departing.

"The final battle?" Linley couldn't help but mumble.

"Boss, what 'final battle'?" Bebe's eyes were shining.

"Don't ask. Based on your current power, you aren't qualified to participate. When one day you become a Highgod, then we'll talk." Linley laughed.

Once Bebe became a Highgod, given his innate divine ability, 'Godeater'...he would be an absolutely monster.

"Uhhhh...." Bebe couldn't help but pout. "I've only mastered five profound mysteries. I haven't even gained a basic understanding of the sixth profound mystery. Grandpa Beirut is really...ugh. Why didn't he give me that sixth soul slice fragment to me early on? Wouldn't that be much easier?"

Both Linley and Delia laughed.

Bebe had currently mastered five profound mysteries. The first one was one which he had naturally understood upon becoming an adult. As for the other four, he had gained them from soul slice fragments that contained understandings of profound mysteries that was at the bottleneck level.

He had succeeded in taking this shortcut. To have Bebe gain insights on his own? Unlikely!

"Bebe, if you can't gain any insights, you can go try fusing other mysteries." Delia chortled as well. "Once you successfully fuse something, your power will improve greatly."

"That's not a bad idea. Although it's a bit harder, I might just succeed." Bebe grew animated. He immediately flew towards his own residence, and Linley and Delia both laughed.

"I wager that Bebe will be able to hold on for one year at most." Linley laughed.

"A year? He might not even be able to hold on for half a year." Delia laughed.

"I will definitely persevere for two years!" Bebe's voice rang out from above. Linley and Delia glanced at each other, then both began to laugh. Linley then said solemnly, "Delia, just now, from what Garvey said, I feel some pressure...I plan to have my original body begin training again, starting today."

"Alright." Delia's eyes became filled with worry as well. "I feel rather worried as well. The situation is growing worse and worse. Train hard. I won't disturb you."

Linley nodded and chuckled.

The eight great clans continued to act with wild abandon. One Elder after another of the eight great clans and the Four Divine Beasts clan fell, while rows on rows of Six Star Fiends died as well...the situation was unbearably grim. As for Linley's four clones and his original body, they were all quietly training.

As he trained, time flowed on like water...

Ever since acquiring the 'black stone', Linley had treated his divine earth clone as his primary divine clone, whole-heartedly focusing on the Laws of the Earth.

When fusing profound mysteries, the further one advanced, the harder it became.

With regards to the Laws of the Earth, Linley had fused three types. He had attempted to fuse a fourth, but was completely unable to fuse the 'Worldwalking' technique with the other three profound mysteries. At the same time, Linley had also attempted to fuse the not-yet-mastered 'Profound Mysteries of Strength' with the other three as well.

Within the gorge. Linley was currently together with Delia. Linley looked into the distance, clearly able to see quite a few clansmen. It had been three centuries since Linley had left Bloodbath Gorge.

"I've finally made a breakthrough." Linley's face was all smiles.

"Look at how pleased you are." Delia laughed.

The greatest breakthrough he had made on this training session was that he had begun to link together and fuse the Profound Mysteries of Strength with the Throbbing Pulse of the World. However, to fuse the Profound Mysteries of Strength with the other three required that they had to all become as one.

"Of course I'm happy. Delia, this Profound Mysteries of Strength is something that can allow me to unleash my power more effectively." Linley said hurriedly. "The Throbbing Pulse of the World can allow me to unleash material attacks as well. Once I fuse them...I can unleash the strength I have in Dragonform in a much more effective manner."

His greatest advantage was his body!

The power of his body in Dragonform was such that with a single fist, he could block the most powerful sword attack of a Six Star Fiend. And that was just by relying on a simple punch. Once he included the might of the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength', the power would greatly increase.

But if he were to then fuse the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World', the power would increase still further!

"Different profound mysteries are suited to different types of attacks.

Thus, generally speaking, after fusing certain profound mysteries, one will develop an attack that allows one to best unleash one's power."

Linley sighed. "Seven Star Fiends have generally fused four types of profound mysteries, but some are specialized in fleeing, some are specialized in soul attacks, and some are specialized in material attacks. This is because...their fusion of profound mysteries is different!"

Delia nodded.

Prior to this, Linley had fused the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World', the 'Essence of the Earth', and 'Gravitational Space', these three types of profound mysteries. These three profound mysteries, when combined with the 'black stone', created the 'Blackstone Prison', his most powerful technique.

But as for material attacks?

The profound mysteries of the Laws of the Earth most suited for material attacks were the 'Profound Mysteries of Strength' and the 'Throbbing Pulse of the World'.

The most suitable were the best.
